Every year since the inception of the fair in 1954, the IRC has awarded a trophy to the best entertainer in the show. Last year the winner was Saiko Suzuki from Japan.

Special 2-Year Engineering Course Available To Qualified Students

A special two-year curriculum in engineering is being offered here this semester for the first time, according to William K. Mayo, dean of instruction.

The course is planned primarily for those who, because of a financial situation or a time problem, must complete their regular college training of four years in two.

Students completing this two-year course, Mayo said, receive an Associate in Arts degree and will be prepared and eligible to take the first examination required for their registration as professional engineers in the State of California.

Usually this examination is taken after a student has completed four years of engineering training.

If the first examination is passed, Mayo explained, a student receives credit for four years of engineering experience toward his registration as a professional engineer.

After two years of employment, the same student is eligible to take the second and final part of the registration examination. During these two years, Mayo added, a student is expected to increase and add to his preparation by enrolling in specialized evening courses.

Although the course offered is considered by experts to be excellent, Mayo stressed that students who are able to complete four years of college work are advised to do so. Also, because it is the equivalent of a four-year course, only those students who maintain a B average in mathematics and physics will be accepted.

AWS Plans Annual Tea, Fashion Show

In honor of the college's 25th anniversary celebration, this semester's annual fashion show has Silver Belles as its theme. The Associated Women Student function will take place in Smith Hall from 3 to 5 p.m. Thursday, November 5, according to Dawnita Campbell, AWS president.

The latest fashions, imported from Austria and donated by Lanz, will be modeled by women students, Miss Campbell said.

During intermission, refreshments will be served and the guests entertained by a vocal group featuring students here.

Heading arrangements for the show are chairmen Mary Luci, clothes coordinator and models; Carol Coggin, programs; Bev Ginsberg, publicity; Marge Hill, decorations; Carol Vakasin, posters; Diane Deeson, food; June White, serving; Margaret Lindstrom, registration; Martha Bradley, cleanup; Judy Cordy, set-up; Joan Michelletti, coat check; Maria Radillio, invitations; Anita Carcione, hospitality, and Dyanne Kotta, entertainment.

Soph Dance Switches To Downtown Hotel; Class To Sponsor Scholarship

Presentation of the Sophomore Ball and sponsorship of a scholarship fund are projects which the Sophomore Class, under the leadership of President Anthony Lopez, will undertake this semester.

There has been some controversy as to the location for the Sophomore Ball, which is scheduled for Saturday, January 12, from 9 p.m. to midnight.

Originally it was scheduled for Cloud Hall, but after a conference with Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities, it has been decided that the ball will be held at one of the downtown hotels, "possibly the Sheraton-Palace," Lopez said.

A theme for the ball is still sought, and Lopez has invited fraternities, sororities and other organizations to submit suggestions for a theme. The organization that submits the winning theme will receive a prize, he said, and the deadline for submitting suggestions is Friday, October 30.

Engineering Society To Tour Local Industries

Intensive tours of local industrial enterprises highlight the Engineering Society's activities this semester, according to John I. Hallock, faculty adviser to the society.

The group's most recent field trip was a two-hour inspection of the Western Gear Corporation, where it was shown some of the elaborate processes of manufacturing.

Along with these trips the society will be shown a number of films on the different aspects of engineering, and will be addressed by guest speakers.

Oct. 26 Last Day For Filing Club Petitions

Deadline for filing petitions of acceptance as official campus organization is next Monday, October 26, Ben Northrup, Club Activities Board president, stated yesterday.

Organizations, with the exception of fraternities and sororities, must comply with this warning or be declared off-campus. This will mean the forfeiting of College Hour meetings, Northrup warned.

Northrup stated that the purpose of the CAB is to act as a governing board and co-ordinator of all campus clubs.

Alpha Gamma Sigma Coaching Program Open To Non-Members

Students who are not members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, are eligible to take part in the coaching program if proficient in certain subjects, sponsor William G. Richardson stated recently.

Persons are needed to coach in beginning algebra, geometry, high school chemistry, English grammar and arithmetic as well as in other subjects, and jobs are also open to those qualified to coach high school students, Richardson added.

A great many students, he declared, are eligible to join the honor society.

Eligibility for membership is determined by the relationship of grade points to units and calls for completion of 12 units with at least 42 grade points, 15 units with a least 45 grade points, 16 with 48 and 17 with 51, and no grade below C.

Those who carry fewer than 12 units are not eligible to join even though a B grade is maintained, Richardson warned.

Anyone wishing more information about coaching or the honor society can consult Richardson in S-143G or attend the College Hour meetings in C-232 on November 13 or January 8.

'Big Sacrifice' No Basis For New GI Bill

By Don Seratti

ANOTHER GI Bill for peacetime servicemen?

A proposed extension of the Korean GI Bill has been receiving widespread national attention during recent months, has been passed in the Senate, and is now being debated in the House of Representatives.

The arguments offered by its proponents seem to have captured the fancy of so many citizens that this bill can almost be said to have popular support.

The outstanding point in favor of an extension is that it will facilitate a college education for thousands of discharged GI's whose financial status makes such advanced education a luxury. It can be further argued that this application of mass education would raise the nation's academic standards, exposing more and more people to "the light."

However valid these points may be, citizens would do well to look more deeply into this matter before lending their approval to an immediate extension of the GI Bill.

They might ask these extremely pertinent questions: (1) What is the reasoning behind the passage of a peacetime bill? (2) Is such a bill actually the most practical device for aiding America's educational problems?

The reasoning behind a peacetime bill is that it provides a form of compensation to men who have made "The Big Sacrifice," men who have "lost" two years of their lives while in uniform. This could be construed as an official government apology.

The compensatory aspect of any peacetime bill seems almost ludicrous in comparison with the bills formerly passed for World War II and Korean veterans, which gave these men a free education in appreciation of their risking their lives in wartime.

Serving during a hot war is one thing; cooling one's heels during a cold war is another.

Even if we could find merit in the passage of a peacetime bill, such as in the event of overwhelming national prosperity, there still remains the necessity of examining America's educational needs to find if such a bill would go the farthest toward meeting those needs.

A peacetime GI Bill would admittedly offer educational opportunities to thousands of former servicemen and would no doubt be instrumental in converting many of them into diligent scholars.

But it would be rewarding these servicemen strictly because they were servicemen, almost as if academic qualifications were being ignored. It would say, in effect, "You were in uniform, and this automatically entitles you to four years of government-financed education."

A person must be more than just a former GI to merit educational benefits from his country.

Individual merit alone should be the criterion for giving rewards. Toward this end, scholarships purport to assist outstanding but financially unprepared students, on the premise that aid given by a society to such exceptional young people will be more than amply repaid by the contributions to the general good many of those students will be likely to make.

With many potential scholars in civilian life capable of meeting academic but not financial requirements, it follows that they should be the recipients of federal aid rather than those whose sole qualifications, in many instances, is a certificate stating that they sacrificed two precious years of their lives.

It isn't every day that a materialistic society such as ours thinks of aid to education, and now that it is doing just that, we hope it uses this aid in a manner that will benefit the most deserving.

Any appropriations proposed for a new GI Bill should instead be applied to aiding state or local education, perhaps in the form of scholarships or improvement of school facilities.

If some of the aforementioned misguided conceptions concerning the GI Bill can be clarified, no negative arguments will be necessary.

We can then throw our weight toward the more positive points in favor of rewarding those most likely to contribute to our society.

Student-Faculty Coffee Hour This Friday

Event Scheduled For Center Court As 10-Member Committee Hints Possibility Of Skits On Program

By Don Rainman

Attempting to develop closer social ties between students and faculty, the Student-Faculty Relations Committee, under the chairmanship of Clem S. Skrabak, chemistry instructor, is presenting a Student-Faculty coffee hour this Friday during College Hour.

Skits by the faculty, the hit of last semester's coffee hour, may be on the program, committee members said, and if so announcement will be made by the KSCF Broadcasters over the campus carrier.

Coffee, punch and cookies, prepared by the hotel and restaurant department, will be served by sorority members as part of the program.

In a recent interview Skrabak pointed out the social limitations between students and faculty in a large college, such as this one, with no on-campus living facilities. Smaller "live in" colleges, however, offer ample opportunities, in dormitories or faculty cottages, for students and faculty to meet informally.

This coffee hour, which will be held in the open court between the Science building and Cloud Hall, will give students the same opportunity to meet informally with the faculty that other student bodies are offered.

In a determined effort to make this event a success, regardless of the elements, plans may be made to shift the scene of the informal affair to departmental offices in case of rain, sleet, or other inclement weather.

Margaret Alvaro and Dan Durst, student co-chairmen, assisted by Stevis Tissicre and Sergey Cherney, all four Student Council members, will supervise the sorority servers and also direct the placement of tables in the court.

Faculty members assisting Skrabak are Mary Golding, dean of women; Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities; Ruth Inskip, dental assisting; Joseph E. Chapman and Gene Slavoy, engineering, and Ronald J. Hochede, chemistry.

IFC Promises Compliance With State Law Hazing Ban

By Ray Hackett

Complete compliance with state laws banning hazing in colleges was promised this week by Joe Welsh, Inter-Fraternity Council president here.

"There will be no campus hazing," Welsh declared, adding that there "never has been any hazing" at the college.

At the request of State Attorney General Stanley Mosk, copies of the text of the law which bans hazing were distributed to the fraternities here, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities at the college. Welsh stated each sponsor received a copy of the law, read it to members of the fraternity and each individual indicated by signature his familiarity with the law.

"Complete co-operation is expected from the fraternities, Welsh said, "and any infraction of the law will be severely dealt with."

Initiations will be held for the pledges but in no way can be considered hazing, Welsh emphasized. Pledge Week, sometimes referred to as "Hell Week," will include the pledges' games during College Hour.

"These games," Welsh stated, "include a pie-eating contest, a balloon-blowing contest, an egg-throwing contest and other good clean fun, but these in no way are affected by the law."

Asked if Pledge Week might include having the pledges help around the campus making it a Help Week, Welsh replied, "It sounds like a good idea to me and I am all for it if I receive support from the fraternities.

"People are quick to forget the good work the fraternities do around campus," Welsh said, citing the fraternity-sponsored blood drive last semester which received a citation from the mayor's office.

Replying to the question, "What will happen if a pledge complains about his initiation?" Welsh emphasized, "Any legitimate complaint will be investigated."

State Code Hazing Ban Text Provides Severe Penalties

Article 8 of the State of California Education Code bans hazing.

It contains a broad definition of hazing and provides for severe penalties, both against the individual participating in the acts and the institution permitting the acts.

Text of the article follows:

"10851. As used in this article, 'hazing' includes any method of initiation into a student organization or any pastime or amusement engaged in with respect to such an organization which causes, or is likely to cause, bodily danger or physical harm to any student or other person attending any school, college, university or other educational institution in this State; but the term 'hazing' does not include customary athletic events or other similar contests or competitions.

"10852. No student, or other person in attendance at any public, private, parochial, or military school, college, or other educational institution, shall conspire to engage in hazing, participate in hazing, or commit any act that injures, degrades, or tends to injure, degrade, or disgrace any fellow student or person attending the institution.

"The violation of this section is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than fifty dollars ($50), nor more than five hundred dollars ($500), or imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months, or both.

"10853. Any person who participates in the hazing of another, or any corporation or association which knowingly permits hazing to be conducted by its members or by others subject to its direction or control, shall forfeit any entitlement to public funds, scholarships or awards which are enjoyed by him or by it and shall be deprived of any sanction or approval granted by any public educational institution or agency.

"The governing board of any public school, public college, public university or other public educational institution or agency may adopt rules and regulations to implement this section."

AWS Tea Presents TV Star, Fashion, Vocal Group Nov. 5

Styles ranging from evening formal to daytime casual wear will be shown at the Associated Women Student fashion show-tea scheduled for Thursday, November 5, in Smith Hall. Bob Douglas, KPIX celebrity, will act as commentator of the fashions to be modeled by 15 women students selected from the AWS.

This semester's event, themed Silver Belles in accordance with the college's 25th anniversary, will be decorated by a glistening silver ball hanging from the ceiling of Smith Hall. Other decorations will carry out the theme in red and white.

In addition, intermission entertainment will feature a student vocal quartet with Ron Benveniste, Marty Goldrod, John Rosenberg and Tony De Felippo.

"This promises to be a memorable occasion," Dawnita Campbell, AWS president, said. "I wish to extend to every woman student at the college an invitation to attend."

All women students interested in assisting with decorations, serving or other committees can sign up in Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150, Miss Campbell said.

Board Sets College Scholarship Rules

Minimum scholarship standards for two-year colleges must be met by students who plan to pursue their education at such institutions and to graduate, according to a resolution recently adopted by the State Board of Education.

As a result of the amendment to the California Administrative Code, relating to two-year college standards, a student who has failed to achieve a 1.5 grade point average in units attempted shall be placed on probation.

Any student on probation who in the next semester of attendance fails to achieve the minimum grade point average in units attempted during that semester is subject to dismissal.

Symphony Forum Offers 19 Concerts At Bargain Rates

Presented through the efforts of this year's Symphony Forum, special bargain rate student season tickets for 19 San Francisco Symphony concerts will go on sale today, according to William Forshay, chairman of this college's Forum committee.

Season tickets may be purchased by students at the college for $12.50, $21 and $27.50. The 50 per cent discount lowers the cost of these tickets to more than half the scale price.

Distinguished artists and members of the Forum will have the opportunity to meet and exchange musical concepts during the Forum meetings, which are held prior to the performances.

Special guests will visit a different campus for each meeting and attend these informal discussions.

Two of the major works to be presented are Verdi's Requiem and Beethoven's Ninth, known as the Choral Symphony.

Guest conductor Sir Thomas Beecham will appear with the symphony for one week.

Appearing for two weeks will be the famous conductor, Pierre Monteux, who formerly conducted the San Francisco Symphony. Other distinguished artists scheduled to appear are Isaac Stern, who attended a Forum meeting at the college over a year ago, and Elizabeth Schwarzkopf.

Members of the Symphony Forum include delegates from 38 Bay Area colleges and hospitals. Several new members are expected to join this year.

Forshay, who was the first student from the college to hold an executive office (recording secretary in 1958), added that "The primary aim is to provide students with good music at reasonable prices."

Don Seratti, Guardsman staff writer, and Bob Pacini, reporter, are two new members of the Forum assisting Forshay.

At the first meeting of the organization last Saturday, the members were given tickets, posters, programs and additional information.

Major Flaw Mars Otherwise Successful CJCSGA Conference

WE HATE to admit it but sometimes members of our college have been known to make mistakes.

This, in itself is human and not to be condemned, but it is much more serious when these mistakes are made in public, could be avoided, and arise from lack of preparation, as in the recent California Junior College Student Government Association Conference held here two weeks ago.

The importance is compounded when the error arises from a lack of information, poor delivery of information, and subsequent failure of a vital resolution because of these factors.

We are well aware of the admirable and workmanlike task achieved by the dedicated and prepared students who represented this college as delegates. It is a pity, however, that some of their efforts had to come to naught because of the human factor. We question the choice of delegates who make such mistakes in public. As one of the other delegates commented, "People should not try to speak on subjects of which they know little or nothing."

We refer of course to the Finance resolution fiasco wherein ill-informed and misinformed delegates tried to promote a resolution in the form of a recommendation, then made it a resolution; and found to their consternation in the meeting of the general assembly that the measure they were promoting had already been thoroughly discussed in a letter from Pasadena and that most of those arguing against the bill were more aware of the circumstances than they.

Fortunately, this was the only major flaw in a conference filled with intelligent and purposeful activity. We are sure that such human error will not enter into the state meeting.

Also, we wonder if anyone has adequately thanked the two persons responsible for the fine quality of the entertainment that highlighted the afternoon?

Local Theater Offers Intriguing Clientele

ON THE north side of Stockton street, just off Broadway on the edge of Chinatown, is situated a movie theater of unique proportions.

Underscored in the program notes of the local newspapers, it nevertheless does a steady business on the basis of a continuous performance of two features per day for the standard price of 50 cents.

In a neighborhood composed of individuals from all parts of the world, the audience of this theater at any one given moment during the day can be as intriguing as the film is dull.

Within the dimly lit interior, shadowy figures wander around in search of a seat or a friend or their children or the soft drink machine; and it is only the serious movie-goer who can concentrate with any intensity on the events being portrayed on the screen.

Fury Of The Congo, starring Johnny Weismuller who plays the part of Jungle Jim, a human, and Cheetah who plays the part of Tamba, a chimpanzee and erstwhile buddy of the lead, played at the Times theater last week.

Produced by "Jungle" Sam Katzman on location in Chatsworth, an early Los Angeles suburb, the plot centers around the machinations of a gang of hoodlums in Africa, presumably the Congo, who are exploiting an animal sacred to one of the native tribes.

It seems that when this animal eats a certain plant, its digestive juices produce a narcotic which can be extracted from a gland by a professor. The animal is called an ogamba and resembles a half-striped zebra.

The story opens with Jim in swimming attire poised on a large rock contemplating the temperature of the water. A seaplane flying overhead suddenly crashes into the lake a few feet in front of the expressionless (one might say blase) countenance of the jungle king.

The plot thickens into a shapeless glue when, having decided to dive into the water for an heroic rescue, Jim revives the unconscious newcomer and dresses him in a freshly laundered safari suit, sitting back on his haunches to listen respectfully to the pilot's tale.

It develops that the pilot is looking for the professor who is being held incommunicado and forced to extract the extract against his will.

It will not do but that Jim helps the pilot find the professor somewhere in the wastes of the jungle. A knife suddenly thumps into the tree directly behind them and a young native girl is perceived fleeing through the underbrush.

During the pursuit, this reviewer went out for a sandwich, returning in time for the outcome when Jim and the puffing pilot catch up to the heavily breathing native girl in a cavern filled with other native girls with the same problem: Men no here, forced go help bad man catch sacred ogamba. Who you?

Jungle Jim answers simply, "Jim."

The girl's eyes widen and her mouth flutters for just an instant as she exclaims, "JUNGLE Jim?"

The rest of the film is devoted to chase scenes with a brilliant performance by the up and coming chimpanzee who empathized completely into the role of Tamba.

A man in shirtsleeves and vest and smoking a cigar peered anxiously up and down the rows of seats, nervously fingering the brim of his pork pie hat. The distinctive but overpowering odor of garlic forced this reviewer into the night air of Chinatown and reflection on the jungle of the Congo.

Thoughtless people contradict as readily the statement of perceptions as of opinions, or rather much more readily; for they do not distinguish between perception and notion.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Rambunctious Ram In Exile

IN THE DAYS WHEN "Sammy" was a real live ram—this picture recalls two hectic days in 1953 when the college was stirred by a rambling ram in its midst. A Student Council decision to elevate student morale with a live mascot become a reality as a horned creature was ram-naped and given the royal treatment at the college. Above, the mascot poses, his horns decorated, with student leaders during the height of his one-semester reign.

Kidnaping Prank Highlights Live Mascot's Career

Many members of the faculty still remember the kidnaping of Sam, the real live Ram, on December 13, 1953. For two exciting days many of the city's policemen were kept busy wheeling the beats until the final showdown with the Ramnapers.

Sam was not a student or a member of the faculty. In fact, Sam wasn't even a person. He was a year-old Merino ram.

As few students don't know, the Ram is the official mascot of the college. Most are aware of the Redwood Ram which sits near Smith Hall, and Sammie the Ram who attends many campus functions and helps the athletic teams which have captured championships in many sports events.

What most veteran and newcomers here do not know is that in 1953 several "cowpokes" and an enterprising and adventurous Student Council decided that a real, live ram as a mascot would elevate student morale and loyalty.

Five "cowpokes," who here shall remain anonymous, traveled 180 miles to obtain the ram from a herd at Pope Valley near Napa.

Upon his arrival on October 20, Sam (which was only to be a temporary name) found that he was being sponsored by Block SF, the United Student Association, Beta Phi Beta and Alpha Sigma Delta. Chuck White, then Block SF president, was Sam's official chauffeur.

Following a bath, Sammy was given a tour around the campus where he met several people, including some Guardsman reporters. His determined nature soon became a morale booster to the ball team, which won the first game Sam attended. It was rumored that the only time opposing teams scored was when Sam left the field.

Soon after this soaring success, a contest was conducted to give Sam a permanent name, but various outside influences squelched student interest and the idea was dropped.

But, by this time, most of the campus denizens insisted on calling him Sam as he wandered about at will and executed his duty as general protector of college grounds.

As he made his rounds, he got into many scrapes and a few accidents. Besides the aforementioned ram-naping, Sam once wandered into the archery range where a volley of arrows plagued him. Though unhurt, he was afterward wary of those with shooting gleams in their eyes.

Unfortunately, the nervous behavior of students during midterms got to be too much for Sam and he became a trifle unpleasant. Probably feeling that no one understood him, he began to nudge people gently and later, the nudge built up into an out-and-out butt.

He became unmanageable and quite a nuisance, much to the chagrin of Dean Louis Batmale, the faculty, and many boo-boo students. It was decided best that Sam be removed from the premises before any serious trouble could result from his presence.

Sam is gone now but his memory lingers on. His absence left a sad spot in the hearts of the thousands who had cherished him. Now the 25th Anniversary brings back a small part of the Ram tradition.

Student Dons Tunic, Armor In Opera Roles

Ancient Egyptian robes, medieval German tunics and 15th century Venetian armor were the costumes donned by Joe Minocchi, a student here who appeared in the recently concluded San Francisco Opera season.

He didn't sing the title role of Othello, or even one of the leading parts in Wagner's Die Meistersinger, for Minocchi is part of what makes grand opera scenes really grand.

He is a super.

Explaining what supers are, Minocchi said that they can be compared with extras in movies. They have non-speaking—or in this case—non-singing parts and are used to augment the chorus when the score of an opera calls for a large number of people to be present on stage.

With props being moved and whole sections of scenery being swung up, down or forward, it's pretty risky to be on stage during changes of scene, Minocchi remarked, and everyone usually keeps to the wings or his dressing room.

In addition to Minocchi, other students here who have appeared as supers in opera productions include Charles Graziani, David Terry, John Colasurdo, Gerry Running, all in drama, and Andre Brehaut.

Sightless Student Leads Active College Life In Pursuit Of Career

Amateur photographer, baseball and basketball enthusiast, trombonist and ambitious journalist are some of the many attributes of Harry Cordellos, one of the few sightless men ever to walk the college's campus as a student.

Early students visiting the campus before registration might have noticed Cordellos' indoctrination as he was led from classrooms to corridors to buildings, in order to memorize the arrangement of the grounds.

Cordellos decided to attend the college, after spending nearly a year at the Oakland Orientational Center for the Adult Blind. It was at the Orientational Center that the idea of continuing his education developed, for there Cordellos was taught braille, typing, home economics, wood shop, and, most important, travel training.

"In no time at all, I changed my mind from not believing in anything to believing in everything," Cordellos, who was born with congenital glaucoma, realized that here he could not only fulfill his ambition to be a journalist but meet the challenges of new fields as well.

Enrolled in 12 units—Spanish, chemistry, English and algebra, Cordellos takes all his lecture notes in braille, using a braille slate.

Cordellos, who takes all his exams orally, studies with volunteer students who read the texts to him.

Once he has settled down to scholastic work, Cordellos hopes to participate in student activities here.

His first plunge into activities was at the Orientational Center where he became president of the student body.

Cordellos' first impression of the college was that it is big and friendly. "It's so big that I hardly meet the same person twice."

Shots At Ramdom

By Vicky Aumann

THE ART of origami, or paper folding, doubtless had its origin since the fold in paper was first created. However, the idea of presenting a program on the art of paper folding on television can be credited to a former student of the college.

Kei Hori, sports and managing editor of The Guardsman in 1940-41, was working in his office on the Pacific Festival project several months ago, when he noticed a friend's youngster of 5 amusing himself with origami.

Hori's idea of presenting a formal program on paper folding was accepted by the National Educational Television, and as a result a pilot series of shows was produced and appears Fridays at 7:30 p.m. on KQED.

The art of origami requires considerable skill and self-discipline to make the more complicated models, since the objects are made by folding only, and usually without the use of scissors.

Not only can origami creations be used for decorative purposes, (they make excellent Christmas tree ornaments), but some items can be used functionally as well.

The name origami is made up of two Japanese words, ori, meaning fold, and gami (kami) meaning paper.

Clubs have already been formed here, whose members meet to make new creations and teach the art to groups of adults and to children. With these established clubs creating new items, various uses are being explored as each new model is created.

The television program is geared for the family and brings out self-discipline as well as rewarding the child with the luxurious feeling of accomplishment.

LAST WEEK the college played host to the California Junior College Student Government Association Conference. Many problems and suggestions were brought forward and discussed.

One representative from a nearby campus had a bitter tale to relate.

Seems that one of his first jobs as advertising manager was to obtain ads for his school paper. He got on without much trouble and felt quite proud of himself. He even chose the right spot for it. The top left corner of the sports page.

Unfortunately, today he no longer holds this position.

Seems that a Paul Masson winery ad is not quite acceptable for a school paper, let alone the sports page.

Mustangs Obliterate Ram Charges

Flock, McKinzie Tear Local Defensive Unit To Ribbons; Red And Blue Roll On, 26-12

By Frank Dunne

A valiant but vanquished Ram eleven bowed to a determined Stockton team in Friday's tilt at Kezar, 26-12.

The two teams were both undefeated in league play going into the game. Stockton now holds the edge in the drive for the league crown. The Rams looked like world beaters as they took the opening kick-off and marched 55 yards to the first score of the game. The drive to the goal only took them four plays as they surprised the Mustangs with a powerful ground attack.

Wayne Stribling packed the mail the last 27 yards for the score.

Later in the first quarter the valley boys struck back on a pass from quarterback Mike Flock to end Buck De Nero for 15 yards and the score. The p.a.t. failed.

Flock was a thorn in the side of the Rams all evening as he completed 10 of the 19 passes he attempted.

The first quarter ended in a 6-6 deadlock, with the Mustangs on the Ram 25-yard line.

Four plays into the second period the Red and Blue scored again. The counter came on a one-yard plunge by Mike Flock. This gave the Mustangs a 12-6 advantage as the p.a.t. again failed.

Later in the second quarter the Rams tried a field goal from the 37. Wayne Stribling's boot missed the mark and the gun sounded with the Mustangs holding a 6-point edge.

In the third period the Rams kicked off. The Mustangs took the ball and marched 70 yards for their third counter. Halfback Jerry McKinzie raced the last seven yards for the score, with Flock passing to McKinzie for the extra points and 20-6.

The Rams started a drive toward paydirt but a Mike Flock interception squelched the drive, and the Mustangs took over on their own 30-yard line.

The third period ended with the score 20-6 in favor of Stockton.

The fourth period saw the Rams' second score. Quarterback Johnny Donham passed to end Bill Lambert for 52 yards. This gave the Rams the ball on Stockton's 24-yard line. It took the locals eight plays to cross the goal. Charlie Smith banged across from the one to give the Rams six more points. The p.a.t. failed.

Stockton then bounced right back with a ten-yard goal line scamper by Jerry McKinzie. This gave the Mustangs a 26-12 lead and the ball game.

Ram quarterback Donham was one of the bright lights on the team as he attempted 16 passes and completed half of them. Charlie Smith rolled up the most yardage for the Rams as he got 52 of the Rams' 85 ground yardage.

Stockton just would not be denied as they handled the Rams throughout the game, never letting the hometown boys get off ground.

Mustang mentor Larry Kentera expressed a post game statement which might be a word of well-taken admonishment toward other units in the Big Eight circuit.

"Grove's (Klemmer) boys showed one of the stiffest lines I've seen in many a year. They're a tough bunch. Had it not been for the sharp passing of Flock and the speed of McKinzie around the outside, I think you guys just might have beat us."

Ram Grid Coach Former College, Prep Stand-Out

A gridster who turned down a pro offer by the Cleveland Browns and one who will long be remembered as one of San Francisco's all-time prep athletic stars, all add up to one of the college's most popular instructors, Coach Grover Klemmer.

Since he took over the Ram coaching reins in 1946, he has given the college more than its share of winning teams. His current one is now 2-1 in league play.

Klemmer, a native of San Francisco, started to make headlines at Galilee High School in the mid 1930's where he starred in all of the so-called major sports.

After graduating from the North Beach school, he enrolled in the University of California where his fame continued to grow.

During his hitch in the service, Klemmer played football for the Great Lakes Naval Training Center under the heralded Paul Brown.

Upon their discharge from the Navy in 1945, Brown, who had been named Cleveland coach and later bought the club, attempted to sign Klemmer to a pro contract.

Klemmer declined the offer, explaining that he wanted to resume his studies at the University of California to receive his degree in physical education and then go into teaching.

Shortly after he earned his teaching credential in 1946, he joined the physical education staff here and was appointed head coach of the Ram grid forces, which he hopes to continue coaching for years to come.

Sign-Up For Basketball Scheduled This Friday

Head cage coach Sid Phelan rolls out the red carpet for all prospective basketball competitors interested in representing the Ram cage forces during the coming season.

Sign-up is slated for this Friday at the men's gymnasium in College Hour.

The court mentor has expressed his extreme interest in talking to all interested performers, regardless of their experience.

Phelan states that on every team he has fielded here there has always been at least one mainstay with little experience, and cites Mel Wilson, All-Conference from last year, as an example.

Mural Cage Loops Set To Bow For Fall Play; IFC, CAB List 18 Clubs

Just as January marks the beginning of a new year, last Monday marked the start of intramural basketball play this year in the men's gymnasium.

Since the first announcements and arrangements were made, there have been some major changes. Following the usual procedure the forming of three separate leagues was anticipated this year. They are the Inter-Fraternity Council, the Club Activities Board and the Independent loops.

However, great difficulties arose when it was discovered that only three teams had signed up for the Independent league. One of the three, of course, was the Block SF, who normally holds a slot in the loop. Two other teams were also signed up for the Independents, but because they had no names, Jack Gaddy, athletic director, dubbed them nameless teams, the Giants and the Dodgers.

Since it would not be logical to have only three teams in one league, as a solution to the problem Gaddy placed these three lone teams in the CAB league.

Earlier, it was anticipated that there would be 20 or more teams participating in the intramural loop as a whole. At present, however, that speculative estimate has dwindled to 18 teams that have been entered in the loop.

Of this 18, the two leagues involved have approximately the same number of members.

AND THEN THERE WERE NONE—"Choo Choo" Charlie Smith scurries to paydirt far beyond the reach of Bud Freeborn, the last Santa Rosa defender with a chance to get a hand on him, in Big Eight actions two weeks ago at Kezar. Guardsman photographer Gene Gayner took the shot from the press box, over 75 yards away, with a 15-inch lens mounted on a 4x5 speed graphic camera. The clarity of the results, including Scooter Lemp (19) toting out a Bear Cub defender and Al Volentine (80) leaping in joy, are truly amazing.

Pigskin Scurry Slated Against Oakland's T-Bird Unit Friday

What's the word? Thunderbird! This deadly mixture is slated to meet the Ram gridders this Friday. Just as a man has to watch himself when sampling this anti-espresso mixture, the local squad will have to give it their all when they meet the Oakland T-Birds in Oakland at 2 p.m.

Last year the Birds were edged out by City College by the slim margin of two points, the score being 24-22. This year the Thunderbirds would like to have a little greater margin—with them on the winning end.

The T-Birds, sporting their big gun in the steel arms and legs of QB Ray Johnson, have a 2-2 record this season, having lost a heartbreaker to Stockton in the last two minutes of that affair.

Last year the Oaklanders were plagued with gaps in the team because of injuries and ineligibilities that led them through a very poor season with a record of one lone win pitted against six big losses. This year, however, the Birds have had a little more luck in this field with not one major or important injury so far.

When City College arrives at the roost with the T-Bird Friday they will find one, to say the least, unusual rooster tending his home grounds. He is Joe Quecnan, 31 years old and with the ability parallel to his age. He is 5 feet 11 inches of cannon with a 191 lb. load of shot to back up his size.

Changes in the lineup, Coach Gil Callies hopes, will add to the threat and wrath of the Birds. These changes include the placing of Gary Lovette at right tackle and giving the left end position to Bob Wurzbach.

On the basis of mascots, it's a 400 lb. Ram, armed with powerful horns, versus a Thunderbird that weighs about 20.

Soccer Contingent Runs Wild In 4th Stanza, Wins 6-2

Roy Diederichsen's red-hot soccer express roared through another whistle stop in its quest for the conference orchids, chewing up the Cal Aggie Farm hands by a 6-2 margin last Saturday morning at Balboa Stadium.

With this one under their belts, the locals must now prepare themselves for what should turn out to be the last train to Natchez when they tangle with the University of California forces, this Saturday at Berkeley.

The Bears, who routed cellar-dwelling Santa Clara 10-0, as expected, but who have yet to tangle with USF, share the loop lead with the Ram delegation on equal 3-0 records.

In spite of the one-sided outcome indicated by the final score of the Red and White fray, it was not until well into the final period that the Rams were in a position to relax a little and let nature take its course.

The Aggie crew jumped off to a 1-0 advantage eight minutes into the affair as Jose Uricoechea belted a line shot into the netting to set the local gang on their heels.

It was six minutes into the second stanza before the Rams were able to square the count on a 25-foot marker from the toe of the high-scoring Jimmy Lynch. John Fouladi pushed the count to 2-1 on a power play with but 20 seconds remaining in the first half.

With four minutes to play in the third period the entire Red and White offensive unit charged the Cowhands' goal, with Emilio Dergan pushing through the marker that set the count at 3-1.

In spite of a beautiful, 70-foot blast by Uricoechea, which brought the score to 3-2, it seemed well apparent that the Aggies had run out of gas. When Fouladi followed Vince Lieu's free kick with a whopping belt into the mesh from 35 feet to set it at 5-2, it was no longer a matter of gasoline—the Davis herd had dropped everything but the glove compartment.

Fouladi, who now had seen his hottest day of the season, capped the show via a 50-footer with :30 remaining.

The national sport in Korea is marathon running.

Volleyball Meeting Set For November 3

The first meeting for the organization of a coed volleyball league will be at 4 p.m. next Tuesday, November 3, when schedules for the games will be drawn up.

All the clubs and members who are interested are expected to be there. If clubs have not signed up as yet, the list of teams is still on the bulletin board in the women's gymnasium.

The Associated Students are willing to help promote the league, and Laurine Bergin, women's physical education director, and Dean Ralph Hillsman have also expressed interest and offered to give as much of their time as possible.

Sponsors for clubs are necessary, Dean Hillsman said, and if a team is entering as an independent, it will need a faculty member as sponsor.

RAMBLINGS

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

ALL GREAT THINGS must somehow come to an end.

The glory that was Greeee, the splendor that was Rome and even the mighty Yankee baseball machine all saw their hours of exodus. But on the foggy morning of September 2 the boys began to rip the walls from a structure that was the heart and soul of everything sportswise San Francsico has ever stood for—Seals Stadium was a thing of the past.

FOOLISH TEARS

Things like this often produce an array of nostalgic nonsense from the typewriters of sentimental scribes who have no business at all in the hard-hitting world of sports reporting. At any rate, that's what the boys in the know will tell you. Who are they, anyway?

Others will rant and rave on such trivial matters as the immortal diamond personnel who performed in that wonderful bull ring that is now doomed forever to a life of complete oblivion, but how little also do these people know?

GOLDEN "ERROR"

Progressing still further there are a few more who will glorify the "good old days" in the 16th Street plant—the days when half a dozen beers and a mickey or two characterized what they would like to call the "golden era" of Coast League ball.

Most of us are too young, stupid or sentimental to repudiate the above analogies as bush league. Even if we weren't, somebody would certainly find some other element to readily disqualify us, so why bother exploiting our worthiness. But, then again, why not?

How many of the thousands of passers-by, who have at one time or another since then seen some segment of the dismemberment take place, paused for a moment or two, looked beyond the O'Dula, Di Maggios and Fains, and murmured to themselves, "How could we ever have made it without old Charlie Graham?"

Charlie was the man who had built this immortal mecca which produced so many great champions throughout the years, and it seems indeed a shame that he wasn't around to say at least a few words when they began to embowel his home.

His audience would have been incalculable. The only enemies he'd ever had were fast buck operators who had no more use for the game of baseball than the money they could take out of it—every honest man who ever parted with a sou to watch the Sea Lions perform their majesty was his friend.

The kids were his greatest pals. He loved them and they loved him.

He always said that this game belonged to them more than to anyone else in the world, and the unestimable number of youngsters who got a free ride into the park on "Uncle Charlie" bore this out.

SAY ONE FOR ME

Then one day Charlie had to leave us to accept a commissionership in a place where they must certainly play his type of ball 12 months every year —a place where each contest is a thriller right down to the wire; where each team is the winner and the word loser is not to be found in the dictionary.

San Francisco owes a lot to "The Old Man and the Seals."

Word has it that they're going to turn Charlie's place into an overhaul shack for Greyhound buses. That's all out of our hands. It seems a shame, though, that they couldn't have tossed up a playground on the site. That would have done well by Charlie.

WORDS OF SILENCE

Yes, it does seem a pity that the beloved old man of San Francisco baseball couldn't be around to say something in the form of an eulogy on behalf of his Bryant Street Barnyard.

Then again, Charlie was not the type of guy to toss around euphuistic words on any, occasion—he lived his eulogies and left the talking to fools like us.

The longest World Series game on record was won by Boston's Babe Ruth, as he defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers 2 to 1 in 14 innings.

Pledge Activities Start Monday As Rush Period Ends

By Pat Perkins

AS PLEDGE WEEK is rapidly approaching, campus sororities and fraternities are busy planning a number of activities for prospective pledges. Monday the "fun" will begin with most of the "action" taking place in the cafeteria.

Delta Psi sorority held its second rushing affair, a buffet supper, at the House of Lawton on October 22. The Smothers Brothers, the Beanpickers and the Hicks entertained to help make the evening a successful one.

The Delts' new officers are Diane Christofferson, president; Nancy Cosella, vice-president; Bobbie Smith, second vice-president; Carolyne Nunan, corresponding secretary; Ginny Hyde, recording secretary; Cathy Sanborn, treasurer; Stevie Tisaler, pledge mistress; Alberta Giannini, historian, and Joni Greenberg, publicity chairman.

The Hiking Club will have a meeting October 30 during College Hour in C-257 to discuss the next hike. All interested students are welcome to attend.

On October 23 the Newman Club presented Swingin' Affair, which turned out to be a very successful dance. The "swingin' " music was provided by The Fore. The Newman Club meets during College Hour.

Another organization meeting during College Hour in C-268, 269 is the California Student Teacher Association. This club encourages students to consider teaching careers by having guest speakers talk at the meetings. The officers of the CSTA for this semester are Le Roy Robinson, president; Mildred Borden, vice-president; Jim Pruit, secretary, and Susie Wade, treasurer.

Zeta Chi sorority recently held its rushing dinner at the home of Irene Palmini, vice-president of the sorority.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity held its second rushing activity, a dance, at the Hoffman House.

The newly elected officers of Beta Tau fraternity are Pelly Falk, president; Dick Zingmark, vice-president; Dan Durst, treasurer; Mike Lazzari, recording secretary; Jim Arlin, corresponding secretary; Frank Harrison, custodian; Herb Leberz, historian, and Gerry Kucserka, morale booster. The fraternity is working on its annual dance, Mistle Toe Mingle, coming up in December.

Newly elected Hotel and Restaurant Association officers are Gary Stanton, president; Jack Hanson, vice-president; Doreen Cauldwell, secretary; Richard Smith, treasurer, and James Neil, historian.

A Guy With TWO Much Trouble

PHIL OSBORNE, CENTER, DOWNS A BRACER in an attempt to face up to reality, or rather, unreality, in Blithe Spirit, the current Little Theater offering. Osborne plays Charles, a man in a quandary, finding himself caught between the ghost of his first wife, Elvira, portrayed by Leah Pashaian, left, and Carla Voorhees, who plays Ruth, his second wife, who's apparently taking a dim view of Elvira's antics.

The group has been playing to packed houses and the SRO signs may force the final curtain of the Noel Comedy comedy to be extended past November 7, the play's original closing date, according to Michael Griffin, Little Theater director. Jim Robinson and Maureen Rogers will alternate with Osborne and Miss Pashaian, respectively. —Guardsman photo by Bill Kluver.

Council Approves 5 Budgets, Slashes RA's Request By $10

By Bob Pacini

Money may be the root of all evil, but dollars and cents dominated Student Council last week as six budgets were passed by council in one of the more quiet sessions of this semester.

First brought to council's attention by Finance Chairman Judy Day were two minor budgets, $175 for Student-Faculty Relations Committee, and the Social Committee's budget for $10. Both were passed.

A $25 budget for advertising display was voted down when Publicity Chairman Bill Ideker reported to council that his organization would take over this expense.

This semester's budget for the KCSF Broadcasters, $169, was also passed after State Information Service Chairman Bud Andreas reminded council of the "valuable service" given to the college by KCSF and called each item in the budget self-explanatory.

Two other budgets, the Associated Student executive budget, $1060, and the Associated Women Student budget, $650, were also given an okay by council.

Questions arose when the budget for the Recreation Association, originally set at $693, was presented to council. One item in RA's request was listed as "Feminine Fling, $10." It was asked why RA had to contribute $10 to the Feminine Fling when council had just passed the AWS budget which included $95 for the Feminine Fling.

Gladys Grassini, RA chairman, told council that it was practically a tradition for the RA to make some little contribution to the AWS Feminine Fling. Council, however, voted to strike $10 from RA budget and passed the new budget for $683.

Just before council adjourned Thursday, AS Card Sales Chairman Deanna Gutierrez proposed admitting only AS card holders to college dances, and also suggested that anyone who lends his AS card to another person be held responsible for any damage the borrower might do. No action was taken, however, because time called for adjournment.

Record Set As Course Changes Soar To 4476

Soaring to an all-time high, a total of 4476 course changes via the added and/or dropped route, was recorded this semester, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, said today.

Courses added numbered 2301, while those dropped totaled 2175.

These statistics indicated that both the adds and drops surpassed last semester by more than 200.

"It is much too many," Miss Learnard sighed. "Students should think before they sign."

Singers Needed For Yule Concert

A performance of the Song of Christmas will be one of the highlights of this semester's Christmas concert, according to Robert Morton, music instructor and A Cappella Choir director.

Morton expressed a desire to see more students sign up for music courses, as more singers can be used in both the Men's Glee Club and the Choir. Those interested can consult Morton in B-6 at 1 p.m. daily.

The concert will be presented for the general public Thursday night, December 10, in Smith Hall.

President of the club is Tony Vanee, with Meredith Withers as secretary-treasurer; Ron Benveniste, librarian, and David Vargo, custodian.

Choir officers include Andre Brehaut, president; Barbara Keane, vice-president; Barbara Washington, secretary - treasurer; Margaret Baxter and Vance, librarians.

Lavender Cottons, Ice Plant Display Form CCSF Letters

Despite two major difficulties, the on-campus plant arrangement spelling out the college initials CCSF is progressing well, according to Harry E. Nelson, horticulture instructor here.

At the end of the spring semester the arrangement was prepared with extremely small plants, several of which have since died and been replaced by Ray Milani, superintendent of school grounds.

Adequate maintenance is difficult because the area has no sprinkling system or water outlets, thus requiring Milani to stretch several lengths of hose in order to reach it, Nelson added.

Forming letters 12 inches wide and 12 to 14 inches high are Santolina Chamecyparius plants, more commonly known as Lavender Cotton. These are trimmed like boxwood and must be tended constantly to retain their shape.

Filling the ground between and around the letters are Mesembryanthemum Roseum variety Ruby Queen, which are Ice Plants with ruby colored flowers.

An assortment of shrubs behind the flowers acts as a foil to set off the entire spectacle and forms good contrast, which by spring should create a very attractive picture, Nelson stated.

First suggested by Milani, the display was prepared by the spring semester horticulture classes.

IRC Fair Features Exotic Fare November 6

Classical dances of India, the Mambo of South America, and the Ehigasa dance of Japan are being prepared, practiced and polished by native students, as the International Relations Club's fair draws near.

The sixth annual fair will be held at the Marina Auditorium, Fillmore and Bay Streets, on Friday, November 6, at 8 p.m., according to Sarwan Gill, president of IRC.

Persian, Finnish, Chinese and Greek dishes are among the many foreign foods which will season the fair's flavorful food show, and the students from each country displaying these dishes will prepare the meals themselves.

Guests at the fair will be escorted to their seats by usherettes dressed in their native costumes, and the foreign costumes will be climaxed by a Philippine fashion show.

Preparing for the details and technicalities of the entertainment portion of the fair are the special committee chairmen.

The chairmen are Jose Bran, exhibits; Maria Rodello, food; Geneva Warner and Francis Chiu, publicity; Alex Bogdis, light and sound; Delfina Aldrete, wardrobe and make-up; Nelly Sosa, usherettes; Charles Flannigan, stage director; Bran, stage manager, and the announcer is Mario Guitierrez.

Each year it has been estimated that more than 75,000 people are committed to insane asylums in America.

Two Campus Police Divide $500 In Scholarship Money; Seventeen New Members Sworn Into Force

Martin Novitski and John Murphy, Campus Police officers here, are each the recipients of $250 scholarships, awarded by the International Footprint Association October 9.

Novitski, chief of the Campus Police, and Murphy, newly sworn in campus policeman, were presented with the cash awards by Matt Carberry, sheriff of the City and County of San Francisco and second vice-president of the organization, and James Quigley, chairman of the scholarship committee.

College President Louis G. Conlan, Dean Louis Batmale and Fitzgerald all expressed appreciation to the association, stating that these awards have been the stimulus needed by the young men in the criminology department.

Fitzgerald stated that 16 criminology students were sworn in to the force yesterday by Thomas Cahill, chief of the San Francisco police department, at the Hall of Justice.

Fitzgerald captured a gold medal in the expert class at the recent Oakland pistol matches October 4, shooting 272 points out of a possible 300.

The Marksman class team, pitted against the Vallejo Police Department, took the first place trophy, shooting 980 points out of a possible 1000. The four-man team included William Donovan, Frank Mateo, Jim Olson and Richard Wernecke.

Two new positions of sergeant have been added to the force. Mateo is now in supervision over all the office personnel, while Warren Mitchell is in charge of the policemen on patrol.

Fitzgerald added that the office will be open Monday, 8 a.m. to 12 noon, and Tuesday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., in order to handle complaints, issue parking permits and solve immediate problems that confront the organization.

Haskell Calls For Homecoming Queen Aspirants

Plans for the selection of a Homecoming Queen and her four attendants for Homecoming Week, November 8-13, are already in progress, according to Mike Haskell, president of the Associated Men Students, sponsoring the activities.

Any woman student of the college who has completed a minimum of 12 units, and is the possessor of an Associated Student card, is eligible to enter.

Participants are judged on the basis of their personality, intelligence and appearance; entry blanks are available in the AS office, Haskell said. He added that this year's judging panel will be composed of three judges, but that they have not yet been selected.

Homecoming Day, Friday, November 13, will start with a rally featuring the Smothers' Brothers, popular young trio who have recently completed an engagement at San Francisco's Purple Onion. The rally will be held during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., near the Redwood Ram.

The afternoon events will include a car parade, which will proceed to Kezar Stadium for the Ram-Modesto Pirate football encounter, which is scheduled to get underway at 8 p.m. on the "lucky" night, Friday, November 13.

Halftime activities will include the crowning of the Homecoming Queen by Douglas Smith, president of the Alumni Association, after which trophies will be awarded to students having the most decorative cars. The Alumni Association will also be well represented in the stands by way of their own private rooting section.

Homecoming Week will be concluded with a party at the El Portal Cafe, which will be sponsored by the Alumni Association.

Sigma Tau Sigma Operating Under Dual Membership

After a few years of dormancy, Sigma Tau Sigma, a national social science honor society, was reactivated this semester under a new and unique plan of dual membership, according to Robert C. Johnson, faculty adviser for the society.

The society, which gives national recognition to honor students in the social science field, will function as a discussion group for all students interested in political, social or economic problems of local, national or international interest.

Under the new program of dual membership, students having grades of B or better in all social sciences and C plus or better in other subjects may become members of the national honor society. Other interested students, however, may join the group without any grade requirements and become active members participating in all discussions and plans.

The society, which had its first meeting last Friday to discuss objectives and elect temporary officers, had been active on campus for several years by itself. This semester Sigma Tau Sigma is being run in conjunction with a political discussion group that was active last semester.

All politically-minded students are cordially invited to attend and participate in the meetings, which are held every Friday during College Hour, in Room C-219.

Movies Deal With Plant, Animal Life

Two films, Between The Tides and World Of Little Things, will be shown during College Hour this Friday in S-136. Both films deal with minute plant and animal life.

Between The Tides concerns itself with forms of life on the seashore and in the shallows bordering the beaches.

The name was changed to Veterans Day in 1954 when Congress decreed that Armistice Day, set up to celebrate the end of the fighting in World War I, should be given broader significance.

The World Of Little Things is about microscopic forms of life in general.

Both films are in color and contain a great deal of micro-photography. These films are new and should prove to be very interesting, according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor.

AGS Sounds Alarm For More Coaches

Students are still needed as coaches to satisfy the demands of San Francisco families, according to William G. Richardson, Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society sponsor.

The biggest demands are for students proficient in English, mathematics, physics and chemistry. Richardson added that students are not required to be members of the honor society.

Calls for tutoring have been received from parents of teen-agers in high school. Richardson said that they asked for coaching in Latin, algebra, geometry, trigonometry, chemistry, physics, Spanish and German.

Parents have also approached Richardson about coaching in reading for their grammar school children. For students planning to become teachers this would be a good opportunity for practice, Richardson emphasized. The rate for any tutoring done outside of the college is $1.50 an hour.

Cultural Tours Key To Future US-USSR Peace

By Don Seratti

WE MUST NOT let our superstitions or fears keep us apart."

This statement, made by Leonard Bernstein in Moscow during his recent tour behind the Iron Curtain, is the key to peaceful relations between the peoples he was addressing —Americans and Russians.

In an era when our thumb-twiddling State Department is moving at a snail's pace in promoting Russian-American understanding, the initiative in this vital field appears to have been taken by musicians like Bernstein and Van Cliburn.

In fact, the Russian tour of Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic probably establishes the talented young conductor as our outstanding ambassador of good will at the moment.

And if Bernstein's locally televised Moscow appearance is at all indicative of his complete tour, we feel sure the venture was an immense success in bringing Americans and Russians closer together.

Russians love music. In the country that produced Tchaikowsky, Mousorgsky, Prokofiev, and hundreds of folk songs and dances, Bernstein and his orchestra spoke a language that was understood by all who listened.

Pursuing the theme of Russian-American similarities, Bernstein drew numerous parallels between two contemporary compositions — the Billy the Kid ballet of Aaron Copland, and the 7th Symphony of Dmitri Shostakovich.

With orchestral examples, Bernstein showed his Muscovite audience how each work contains passages which demonstrate the influences of extrinsic sources on the USA and the USSR—African drums in Copland's ballet and Oriental music in Shostakovich's symphony.

He also showed how each composition is an embodiment of intense national spirit.

The big moment came when Bernstein led the Philharmonic in a performance of the dramatic first movement of the Shostakovich 7th Symphony. Hundreds of Russians sat spellbound by this American conductor's interpretation of the master-

College Observes Vets Day Next Wednesday

Classes will not be held next Wednesday, November 11, because of the Veterans Day holiday.

Because of the holiday, The Guardsman will not be published. Next issue is scheduled for Wednesday, November 18.

Veterans Day, formerly known as Armistice Day, is set aside to honor the service men and women who participated in American wars.

New Officers—New Styles

Vandals Deface Science Hall, Break Flagpole In Campus Raid

By Bob Lane

Students returning to classes Monday, October 26, were greeted by a splintered, naked flagpole which stood as mute evidence of willful vandalism. Sometime over the weekend, "juvenile" lumberjacks invaded the campus with saw and rope and carried out their destructive endeavors.

Additional damage was reported on the new building sites with pipes and equipment being thrown into trenches and strewn about. The vandals returned Monday night and continued their devastation by defacing the walls of Science Hall.

Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management, termed the incident "unfortunate" in view of the fact that the money to repair the damage will have to come from college funds.

He added that replacement of the flagpole alone will cost an estimated $600, which would have gone into some worthwhile college improvement.

Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction, and acting president of the college, pointed out that the vandalism might have been retaliatory, coming as an aftermath to a recent incident in which several non-students were ejected from a college function.

Dean Ralph O. Hillsman stated that in the future the campus will be patrolled and checked regularly. He added that the police department had made a complete investigation into the matter.

Dance Features Cinderella Coed

Selection of a Cinderella-type girl who most deserves the slipper-shaped trophy will highlight the festivities at Beta Phi Beta's annual Golden Slipper dance to be presented this Friday.

This year's affair will be held at Forest Hill Lodge, 266 Laguna Honda Avenue, from 9 p.m. to midnight.

Peter Witcowski, president of Beta Phi Beta, told of the fraternity's annual quest for a girl and her Prince Charming who qualify for Beta Phi Beta's golden slipper award.

Music for the dance, which will be semi-formal, will be supplied by Steve Paul and his orchestra. Witcowski said. Cokes will be provided for refreshment.

Tickets, two dollars a couple with Associated Student or registration card, can be obtained from Beta Phi Beta members or pledges, the student bank, and at the door of Forest Hill Lodge.

Rally, Crowning Top Homecoming

Festivities for Homecoming Week, November 8-13, will include a rally featuring the Smothers Brothers, the coronation of the Homecoming Queen, a car parade, and an alumni-student informal party for the most activity-filled week of the college year.

Mike Haskell, president of the Associated Men Students, announced that the Smothers Brothers, popular singing group, will appear at the Homecoming Rally during College Hour on Friday, November 13, between 10 and 10:40 a.m.

The rally will be held near the Redwood Ram. Members of the trio are Dick Smothers, bass; Tom Smothers, guitar, and Bob Blackmore, banjo.

Haskell said that the program will feature both folk and popular music. He added that the trio recently appeared at the Purple Onion in San Francisco and has made special appearances at the University of California, Santa Clara University and San Jose State College.

Entry blanks for this year's Homecoming Queen contest are available in the Associated Student office. Any woman student of the college who has completed a minimum of 12 units, has maintained a C average, and is the possessor of an AS card is eligible to enter, Haskell emphasized.

Participants are judged on the basis of their personality, intelligence and appearance.

This year's judging panel will include Dean Ralph O. Hillsman, Dean Mary Golding, Donald C. Marcus and Thomas D. Wilson, faculty members, AMS President Haskell and two judges who have not yet been selected.

A representative of the Associated Women Students and an instructor from the women's physical education department will be chosen this week, Haskell indicated, with the judging slated for next Monday.

Friday afternoon, at a time to be announced, a car parade will proceed from the college to Kezar Stadium for the Ram-Modesto Pirate football encounter at 8 p.m. Trophies will be awarded to students having the most decorative cars.

During halftime, Alumni Association President Douglas Smith will crown the new Homecoming Queen and present her with a trophy donated by the Alumni Association.

Homecoming Week will be climaxed by an informal party at the El Portal Cafe, Fulton and Eighth Avenue, which will be sponsored by the Alumni Association.

Approximately 500 formal invitations were mailed last week to members of the Alumni Association and to all students here over 21, Smith said.

The party is primarily a reunion for the alumni members, he added, and it has been traditional during Homecoming Week for the Alumni Association to give a party or dinner to the returning alumni and friends.

Friday's College Hour Switches To 8 O'Clock

Planned for this Friday, November 6, an official faculty meeting has resulted in the shifting of regular College Hour activities from the usual time of 10 to 10:40 a.m. to 7:45 to 9 a.m., according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities.

Eight o'clock classes will meet from 9:10 to 9:50 a.m.; 9 o'clock classes from 10 to 10:40 a.m.; 10 o'clock classes from 10:50 to 11:30 a.m.; 11 o'clock classes from 11:40 to 12:20 p.m.; 12 o'clock classes, 12:30 to 1:10 p.m., and 1 o'clock classes, 1:20 to 2 p.m.

The movie, City Of Gold, scheduled for the regular College Hour film series, will not be shown, Madison Devlin, audio-visual instructor, said.

The regular schedule will be resumed Friday, November 13.

AWS Tea Tomorrow Honors Eleven Women Instructors, Features Lanz Coed Fashions

Silver Belles, the theme chosen for this semester's Associated Women Student fashion show and tea, will be presented tomorrow in Smith Hall, according to Dawnita Campbell, AWS president.

This semi-annual event, scheduled to be held from 3 to 5 p.m., will honor the 11 women instructors who were faculty members from the college's inception in 1935.

They are Flossita Badger, music; Laurine Bergin, physical education; Annamarie Delfs, language; Miriam Escher, English; Margaret Flournoy, business; Mary Jane Learnard, registrar; Gladys Luhman, science; Dorothy Mercer, English; Joan Nourse, journalism; Mary Perry, counselor, and Verrel Weber, health education.

Invitations have been extended to senior women students in the public, private and parochial schools in San Francisco. All women students and faculty members from this college have also been invited.

The purpose of the fashion show and tea is to enable the graduating high school seniors to become acquainted with the college, its faculty and its students, Miss Campbell said.

The modeling group includes one coed from each of the eight sororities and seven women selected from the campus at large.

Models for the event, who will present fashions ranging from evening formals to daytime casuals, are Donna deFount, Marjorie Erhart, Faye Fountain, Nancy Hom, Jane Johnson, Lynne Johnson, Sorelle Lowe, Margaret Lyons, Diana Robinson, Lorraine Ryan, Juanita Schaeffer, Rose Thomas, Margaret Tynes, Pauline Williams and Diane Wilson.

The fashions are provided by Lanz, women's specialty shop, for which Janet Landfear is clothes consultant. According to Miss Campbell, the styles are "unique and original."

Setting the scene for the theme will be a huge silver and gold ball with small silver bells attached, which will hang from the ceiling of Smith Hall. Tables will be decorated with red and white flower sprays, and the punch table will have a fountain as a centerpiece.

Refreshments, consisting of cookies, tea and punch, will be served by pledges who will be excused from their 3 p.m. class, Dean Mary Golding, AWS sponsor, said.

Bob Douglas, KPIX Closeup star, will comment on the fashions presented.

Heading arrangements for the event are Diane Beeson, food; Margaret Bradley, coat check; Anita Carclone, hospitality; Carol Coggin, programs; Judy Cordy, set-up; Bev Ginsberg, publicity; Margaret Hill, decorations; Margaret Lindstrom, registration; Mary Ann Luchi, clothes co-ordinator and models; Joan Micheletti, clean-up; Maria Radillo, invitations, and June White, serving.

Symphony Forum Offers Discount Rate To Students

Special season discount tickets, offered through the Symphony Forum, to 19 concerts by the San Francisco Symphony are still on sale at the student bank, and students desiring tickets should get them now, according to William Forshay, chairman of the college's delegation to the forum.

The Symphony Forum is an organization of Bay Area colleges and hospitals that enables students to purchase season tickets to the symphony at bargain rates.

Tickets can still be purchased here at the student bank in Smith Hall. Balcony and lower orchestra seats are priced at $12.50. Grande tier and dress circle seats are $21.00 and other orchestra seats are $27.50.

The bank is open here from 8:45 to 11 a.m., and from 12:01 to 2 p.m.

Music lovers will be offered a wide variety of concerts, and a long list of guest artists is scheduled to perform with the symphony, the longest in the history of the San Francisco Symphony, Forshay emphasized.

One of the big efforts for the coming season will be Verdi's major non-operatic achievement, the Messa Da Requiem. Another featured work will be the mammoth last symphonic composition of Beethoven, the Choral Symphony.

In addition, the orchestra will perform such familiar works as the Brahms First Symphony, the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto, and standard reperioire pieces by Liszt, Richard Strauss and Beethoven.

Returning for a two week appearance as guest conductor will be the eminent maestro Pierre Monteux.

Of special interest will be the appearance of Mastisiav Rostropovich, world-renowned cellist, who is coming to San Francisco through the cultural exchange program between the United States and the Soviet Union.

"There is a strong possibility that Rostropovich will be the guest of the college for the first Forum of the season," Forshay stated.

Other guest artists include Isaac Stern, violinist; Andres Segovia, famed guitarist; Elizabeth Schwarzkopf, noted concert and operatic star, and a host of other personalities in the concert world.

Four AGS Delegates Attend State Meet

Four student delegates and their sponsor will attend the Alpha Gamma Sigma annual northern conference to be held at American River College in Sacramento this Saturday.

Thomas Murphy, president; Mary Didenko, vice-president; Jean Toso, secretary-treasurer; Patricia Martin, assistant treasurer, and William G. Richardson, AGS sponsor, will take part in four workshops included in the conference entitled A Frontier Of Learning: Junior College.

The workshops as listed to carry out this theme are entitled Promotion Of Academic Values Of Junior College, Promotion Of Practical Values of Junior College; Promotion Of Better Public Relations Toward Junior College, and Promotion Of Better Student Attitude Toward Junior College, for which Richardson is to be student resource sponsor.

Students are still needed for the Alpha Gamma Sigma coaching service extended to college, high school and grammar school students, Richardson said.

Jerry Griffin Named Election Commissioner

Appointment of Jerry Griffin to the position of Election Commissioner by Tony Bartmann, president of the Associated Students, last week was the first step in the preparations for AS elections to be held early in January.

Students who wish to run for office must file petitions with the election commissioner. The deadline for filing has not yet been set and will be announced later.

Student Here Collects Egyptian Relics

Handling Antiques Just Routine For Salih Saba

By Alex Sokoloff

Handling priceless relics of an era dating back to the first Egyptian Pharaohs is simple routine to Salih Saba, student here hailing from Cairo, Egypt.

Saba, who is majoring in electrical engineering, came to the United States this June 24. His trip from Cairo included a flight to London, a sail to New York and finally a cross-country drive to San Francisco.

This voyage culminated a two-year period of wading through red tape in obtaining a visa and getting on a refugee quota. His first move occurred in 1946, when he left Jerusalem for Cairo.

In Cairo he worked with his father-in-law in the latter's antique dealer's establishment. According to Saba they didn't consider an object as being an antique unless it was at least 2000 years old.

The relics, brought from Egyptian excavations, consist mostly of figurines and vases of bronze and porcelain, some of which are a good 10,000 years old, and are the first traces of civilized man's handiwork.

Saba has brought with him a few of these objects from the past. He also brought with him a perfect command of the English language, which he picked up at St. George's College, an English high school in Jerusalem.

Aside from his interest in antiques, one of his hobbies is that of photography. Once while still in Egypt, he was contacted for pictures of the Middle East by an associate editor of Presbyterian Life magazine. The pictures appeared in the February issue of that magazine.

While in the Middle East, Saba has visited such countries as Syria, Jordan and Lebanon. In Egypt he traveled up the Nile as far as Aswan, where one of the world's largest dams is under construction.

Having seen a little of this world he arrives at the conclusion that people are the same everywhere.

Saba is married and has two daughters. He has a brother who is studying and teaching at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His father is a physician, working for the United Nations in Beirut, Lebanon.

The only big surprise America had in store for Saba was the complete lack of its much publicized cowboys. In his trip across the States he saw only one that looked like the real thing—and he was probably a Madison Avenue executive on vacation.

Vandals' Behind-The-Back Night Attacks Reflect Immaturity

VANDALISM is a dirty word. It intimates cowardice, revenge, pettiness, destruction of beauty and a great ignorance of values.

When acts of vandalism can be attributed to college students or former college students, the intimation becomes even deeper since it indicates a lack of respect, loyalty, maturity, and most of all self-respect. It becomes a symptomatic juvenile delinquency which betrays the perpetrator(s) of such action as incapable of reasoning, and capable only of behind-the-back night attacks.

Vandalism is historically reminiscent of the action of the stupid against that which is beautiful or that which is not understood. In the recent cases on campus, both of these points were displayed by "children" who can neither understand nor appreciate.

The damage monetarily is not the point of greatest significance nor is the legal fact that vandalism is a misdemeanor which can mean a jail term the major factor.

The most important two parts of such reprehensible activities are

1. The total lack of respect for a college which has given trust as well as education only to find such trust sadly misplaced, and
2. The damage to the reputation of a college which has such cowardly hoodlums on campus to spoil the overall effects of so many other law-abiding, capable students.

We do not suggest that any justification exists for such actions for no such justification could exist regardless of how immature, warped or twisted the reasons behind the action.

We do suggest that the Student Council take this matter under advisement and initiate immediate measures which will protect the campus against further activity of this sort.

While making suggestions, it is also to be hoped that the Inter-Fraternity Council will follow the lead of Tau Chi Sigma and devote their initiation of new members to some worthwhile project. Tau Chi hopes to collect $2000 for the United Crusade during Pledge Week. It would be beneficial if other fraternity and sororities would attempt similar worthwhile goals/

We further urge the Inter-Fraternity Council to give serious consideration to the establishment of "Help" Week since such a plan has already proved successful, here in 1954, and at other colleges, and benefited the groups participating.

Mosaics Depict Mechanics, Science Interactions

Science Hall Sits Between Book Ends

Standing like two giant book ends at the north and south ends of Science Hall are two mammoth mosaics which were added to the exterior of the building in 1941, a year after its completion and dedication.

Executed by artist Herman Volz and measuring an impressive 40 by 50 feet, each mosaic has a particular theme. The north mural represents the interaction of science, and the south mural, the interaction of mechanics.

Figures which appear in the mosiacs were not intended to represent any specific person prominent in science or mechanics, Volz said at the time of their completion.

They deal chiefly with the influence of education and youth upon those fields.

Each day hundreds of students pass the Volz mosaics, but few of them stop to contemplate the enormous challenge involved in the planning and execution of them.

Specially imported marble, brought from various localities around the world, were cut into thousands of tiny, pebble-like pieces, were sandpapered and highly polished before they could be fitted into their place in the mosaic, to form a recognizable shape.

Shortly before the installation of the mosaics, other artistic embeilishments were added to Science Hall. Sculptor and painter Fred Olmsted created two imposing busts of Da Vinci and Edison, which stand, silent and profound, back of Science Hall.

In addition, Olmsted also painted two vivid, brightly-colored and imaginative murals. The murals are located on each side of the main entrance to Science Hall, the many figures incorporated into them greeting anyone who chances to pass that way.

Foresight

By Pete Burr

EACH generation has its rebels, and the late 1950's are no exception, the only handicap being an ignorance by the neophyte rebels on the brink of the 1960's of the new rules and regulations pertaining to the rebellion.

To clear up the matter once and for all, a more or less complete outline has been compiled for the guidance of those mutinous who shall inherit the next decade.

THE ECONOMY. Never carry credit cards. They are bulky and inconvenient.

In place of the credit card, slips of green scrip-like paper, called "money," should be obtained at the nearest bank by simply walking up to the closest window and handing a terse note to the occupant asking him politely but firmly to put everything within reach into the paper sack which you will have thoughtfully provided.

These tickets are exchangeable anywhere in the United States and their use will eliminate the troublesome chore of having always to produce the right card at the right time. Also, there will be no bills at the end of the month.

THE WARDROBE. Both formal and informal attire should be purchased from used clothing dealers.

This does away with having to go along with everything buttoning down or buckling up and will provide the astute and tasteful rebel with such accessories as spats, opera capes, monocles, riding boots and bizarre cravats as well as such distinctive "musts" as double-breasted tuxedos and hair shirts.

The modern rebel is careful to maintain the tradition of conservatism.

CUISINE. A taste for duck a l'orange and pheasant under glass with the appropriate wines should be cultivated.

Dine only in the best establishments and call the chef and the headwaiter by their first names whether you know them or not. Always invite someone who is able to pay.

In the event that it is impossible to use restaurant facilities, never shop at a supermarket. Obscure foreign grocery stores should be sought out and the most exotic foods chosen. When leaving the store it is customary to say "chao."

THE TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM. Always use taxis. Upon arriving at your destination and gaining the advantage of the sidewalk, ask cavalierly for a meter receipt. This will give ample time in which to effect an escape. The public transportation system and private automobiles, unless they are driven by somebody else, are to be avoided.

TIPPING. Tip often and lavishly, using the aforementioned green notes which should be readily accessible. This accessibility can be achieved by keeping a few notes in every pocket.

DEMEANOR. Smile and laugh often. However, caution is advised because of an innate suspicion of good will which arises from a popular misconception of psychosis. Be kind to animals and small children but if either manifests any aggressive tendencies, it is suggested that they be ignored altogether. Use intuition and be guided accordingly.

With the above outline clearly in focus, it is hoped that the initiate will be able to avoid the pitfalls of the preceding period which regrettably deteriorated in its final stages because of a lack of tenacity on the part of adherents to the ideals and principals of non-conformity.

Welcome then, future denizens of subterranea, to 1960 with the best of luck.

Shots At Ramdom

By Vicky Aumann

SO GLAD to see the new buildings under construction progressing at such a rapid rate.

At this speed, it looks as though the new arts building will be ready next year, as well as the two additions to Smith Hall and the women's and men's gymnasia.

However, we were especially happy to see the enormous progress in the new stadium. Anyone passing the bungalows may note that one section of the stadium — the press-box — is practically complete.

Who can doubt the power of the press now?

ALWAYS WONDERED what would happen to those students, who seem to sit around the flagpole all day, if something happened to their favorite meeting place.

Well, it did last week and it was a sight to see.

Looks of amazement and disbelief crossed the faces of these students, most of whom are majoring in social graces. They just stood around and looked and looked again, and just shook their heads in bewilderment at their newly-decapitated rendezvous.

UNITED STATES CONSUL Borrie Hyman, Guardsman Editor-in-Chief in 1941, is on short leave in San Francisco and visited "his" one-time office last week. Just back from a three-year assignment with the Foreign Service in Iran (previously two years in Geneva, before that in Canada), he went shopping a few weeks ago and one of his first purchases was a TV set.

Now it shouldn't be hard to predict his inclinations toward TV programs. A graduate in political science from the University of California, plus 10 years of training and experience in the Foreign Service, and, while in Iran, in the economics and statistical departments, his background suggests a few of the more solid programs.

Seems we were far (?) off the mark.

Ram Deadeyes

Pistol Team On Way To Third Marksman Title

By Jim Clifford

Winston Churchill once said, "Nothing in life is so exhilarating as to be shot at without result." Bay Area law-breakers will never experience that happy feeling if future peace officers Frank Mateo, Rich Gamble, Jim Olsen or Bill Donovan are doing the shooting.

This quartet of criminology majors has paced the college's entrance in the Oakland Pistol Club's ten-month tourney so well that Ramdom is in line for its third straight marksmenclass title in the annual event.

The contest, which features members of the Western Revolver Club Association, finds the collegians pitted against such squads as the Richmond Police, Travis Air Force Base, McClellan Air Force Base, and the US Coast Guards The strong competition doesn't scare the Ram deadeyes in the least—just check the record.

The college won the title in '57, '58 and it looks as if they'll bring home another crown. The tournament will close on the first Sunday of December, and the college already holds a substantial lead.

In the August 1 match the team totaled 976 points in taking first place. In the August 30 match, the marksmen not only came in first but the college's sharpshooter team wound up on top in its division, also.

The October 4 meet found the squad shooting 980 out of a possible 1000 to earn another trophy. Richard Wernecke replaced Gamble in that match. The team often shifts personnel in an effort to bolster the sharpshooter squad, which is also competing in the Oakland contest.

Fred Fitzgerald, instructor of criminology here, player-coaches the squad, stepping in only when the Rams find themselves short of men. Fitzgerald, captain of the 1933 University of San Francisco track team, was in charge of the San Francisco Police Academy for six years. He recruited his gun-slingers from the criminology course's gunnery class here, which practices at the Coima Police range.

In June the contingent won fourth place in the National Rifle Association's meet that matched top teams from the 11 Western states. In that affair Olsen became the Center Fire Marksman Class Champion with 288 points out of a possible 322.

Fitzgerald's office is starting to look like a trophy case. If he doesn't find a place to display them soon, he'll have to use the awards as hat-racks. His problem isn't over yet by any means, for if. looks as if he'll have another in there soon.

What I must do is all that concerns me, not what the people think.— Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Ram-Cal Soccer Go 0-0 Deadlock

Ramblings

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

OVER the period of the past few days many local sports enthusiasts have been pounding on the door with just about the same query in mind: What happened to the Rams in the Stockton fray?

Who knows? From here it seems that there's only one plausible reason for the disastrous outcome.

Grover Kiemmer's stallions stepped up to the Big Eight crap table in search of their third straight pass, but strolled solemnly from the Kezar casino after running into a potent pair of snake eyes in the form of the Red and Blue clad Mustangs.

The local unit played its heart out but simply and plainly ran into a fleet of talent that showed itself the better club.

Let's just let sleeping dogs lie, and say no more.

National League coin-flipper Jocko Conlon relays the classic yarn concerning an altercation between him and Milwaukee catcher Del Crandall, a few months back, at County Stadium.

It seems that an inside delivery from chucker Bob Rush, which could have gone either way, was ruled out of the strike pocket, and sent Charlie Neal down the line to first on a free pass.

"Crandall hit the moon," says Jocko, "and came out with one of the biggest buckets of lip I've heard in a long time.

"What the hell," he went on, "it was a rough call, so I didn't give him the heave-ho. The boys take the game seriously and 95 per cent of 'em are walking powder kegs anyway."

The man in blue granted the Brave backstop a stay of execution, with the warning that the next time he so much as turned around he could prepare himself for the long hike to the shack.

Two innings later the flashy Rush delivered one to John Pignatano that was easily a foot wide of the mark. Conlon called the expected ball, whereupon the festivities began.

Gazing out toward the flagpole in center field, the burly catcher disgustedly asked the arbiter, "How do you spell your name, Mr. Conlon—l-a-n, or —l-i-n?"

"Well," says Jock, "if the lad wants to file some sort of sandlot protest, let him. 'C-o-n-l-o-n,' I told him. 'No l's.'"

"That's what I figured," said Mr. Crandall, as he casually returned the ball to the mound.

As for Jocko—"What are you gonna do? The guy didn't turn around, did he?"

Block SF Society To Show Notre Dame Films November 13

Films of the Notre Dame eleven, which will be shown at the Block SF Society meeting in College Hour, Friday, November 13, will portray a team whose backfield coach, Joe Scudero, was trained while in high school by Alex Schwarz, club moderator and line coach of the Ram football team.

At present there is a discussion over choice of a date for the semi-annual banquet, with selection expected at the November 13 meeting.

Schwarz stated that the very successful soccer team, which has defeated such units as USF, Stanford and the Cal Aggies, has no representation in the club, and he is extremely disappointed by the fact that the boosters, who appear to have the best opportunity of all the fall athletic units for a league championship, are not enrolled in the society at all.

Membership in Block SF is obtainable with an Associated Student card and 50 cents.

Schwarz added that, in his opinion, students should take the lead in the activities of the club, pointing out that Block SF has been a traditional representative of sports at the college since its inception.

Awards are presented by the club to individuals who have made the most outstanding contribution to the team as well as the Block SF.

Thunderbirds Squash Rams 42-20 As Oakland's Johnson, Williams Romp For 6 TD's

By Frank Dunne

Oakland's Thunderbirds soared to victory over the Rams in Friday's tilt in Oakland, 42-20, with the T-Birds dominating the game from the kick-off to the final gun.

Using their single wing offense to perfection, they made the Rams give ground on every play. Tailback Roy Johnson, former Oklahoma frosh grid star, and halfback Overton Williams were the big guns for the East Bay men. Williams ran for three touchdowns and Johnson ran for one and passed for three.

The Thunderbirds took the opening kickoff and marched 65 yards for the first score, with Williams diving the final yard for the counter.

The Rams took possession of the ball but could not move it and were forced to punt. The boot went straight up in the air and fell dead on the Ram 39-yard line.

Johnson ran the ball on the first play 38 yards into the promised land, then passed for the conversion to make the score 16-0.

Gamely the Rams fought back in the second quarter, pounding their way to the goal with Scooter Lempe driving the final six yards for the score.

The locals held the Birds after the kickoff and forced them to punt, giving the Rams the ball on their own 28-yard line. But a fumble by the locals, one of five they gave the Birds, gave Oakland the ball at that point.

The Johnson machine ignited again. He ran for 16 yards, and the Rams were penalized half the distance to the goal, and Tom Malinowski caught a Johnson flip for the score, making the margin at half time at 22-8 for the T-Birds.

The third period saw Johnson pass to Overton Williams for another score, with the play covering 32 yards.

Then the Rams came alive, scoring two quick touchdowns, which marked the bright spot of the game for the San Francisco boys. The Rams drove to the Bird one-foot line only to lose the ball on a fumble. The Oaklanders took over but were forced to punt.

Bill Lambert crammed his way through the line to block the Bird boot, and Lionel Vaughn danced his way for 16 yards to make the score 30-14.

After a short Oakland drive the Rams took over and marched down toward the scoring area. Vaughn again broke loose for the score, this time rambling 32 yards. It looked like the chance for the Rams with the score 29-30, although still in Oakland's favor, but then the roof fell in.

Johnson passed on the first play of the series. He hit Palimore for a 53-yard toss, which put the ball on the ten, from where Johnson hit Bob Wurzbach in the end zone with a perfect pass.

In the fourth quarter Williams capped the scoring with a five-yard run around end.

Cage Pilot Names Bob Tealer Best In Coaching Career

Cage coach Sid Phelan was asked recently to answer the question as to who was the best basketball player he ever coached. Giving himself a momept to think, he answered: "That's a tough one."

After a short pause, during which time the popular mentor stopped to think for a moment, he said:

"All things considered, I guess I'd have to go with Bob Tealer.

"The only thing that was 'bad' about him was the fact that he was here for only one year, 1956. During that season he showed me an awful lot.

"Tealer had everything that I look for in a player."

Asked what that included, he replied, by the numbers:

1. First of all, Tealer was a natural athlete with a good eye.

2. Secondly, he was a team man—the kind who passed to set up a pattern even though he might have been in good shooting position himself.

3. He had good size (6-3) and made the most of it on the boards. He was, to put it mildly, a terrific rebounder.

Playing out of Mission High School in 1954, Tealer enrolled at the University of California the following year, and joined the Ram cagers in his sophomore year.

It was here that he gained statewide recognition, for while with the Rams, he was selected on the All-Big Eight Conference first five.

During the State Junior College Basketball Tournament he established a record in junior collegiate ranks. Against San Diego he scored the most points in any two-year college tournament game, 46. In the first half, he was held to 12 points, but came storming back in the second half to dunk 34 more, also establishing a record for the most points scored in one half.

Contrary to popular belief, neither Andy Varripapa nor the heralded Ned Day can truly be considered as the all-time "king" of bowling. Maxie Stein, who holds the all-time ABC record with 2176, and the highest seasonal average (232) is the number one boy.

Circuit 'Run For Roses' Closes With Both Clubs Tied For Lead

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Soccer had its own version of the heralded 1946 Army-Notre Dame grid classic as the Ram kickers battled the University of California forces to a 0-0 stalemate last Saturday morning at Edwards Field.

The experts had tabbed this scrape for the circuit lead as a toss-up, and for once they were right. No two clubs could have been more evenly matched.

It was not without Emil Ruiz' paying a heavy tariff, however, that the Red and White forces were able to keep their heads above water.

With less than :30 remaining in the opening period, Ram goalie Art Fisher was pulled out of position on a Bear scrambie, and it was at this point that Ruiz moved in to give his all for the local cause.

As Blue and Gold inside marksman George Coveny tore into the shot that would have provided the Berkeley crew with the margin of victory, little Emil scurried from his halfback post and, tossing care to the wind, threw his leg high in the air, deflecting the leather off to the right of the netting.

Although the ball wound up wide of the goal, the scrappy Ram defensive artist was not quite as fortunate. His right arm was thrown against the side of the post by way of the force of his own momentum, and the entire right side of his body sustained serious injury as he caromed to the ground.

Ruiz is a doubtful starter for next week's outing against San Francisco State.

The second stanza was a matter of defensive prowess all the way, as Ram backs Yacob Dudum, Flavio Valiente and Dave Kingsley cut the Campanile offensive charge to ribbons. Neither unit was able to manage a shot at the opposition's meshing during this period.

It was during the third quarter of play that the Blue and Gold machine put together another offensive charge that appeared to have set up a cinch tally for the Berkeley boys.

This time it was Fisher who slammed the door in the face of the angry Bear by way of an unbelievable save as he came up with a shot from the toe of Bob Barreda that would have done credit to any goaltender in the game.

The final stanza saw the Ram offensive unit finally come into its own, amassing a quartet of scoring efforts at the Cal goal, but Bear goalie Fred Becker proved himself a force of relentless skill as he upended each attempt with all the polish of a Bolshoi ballerina.

Although the ten minute overtime session was not lacking in the usual defensive thrills, it was during this outing that the Rams blew their big chance for a banquet of roast bear.

With six minutes left, the locals caught Jim Lynch all alone behind John Fouladi for what should have been the winning marker. Lynch's boot went over the top of the Berkeley meshing, however, and the two clubs remained in a deadlock for the circuit lead.

Panther Big Guns Off Injury List, Ready For Rams

Horns sharpened and loaded with last ditch determination, the Ram gridders will charge into the lair of the Sacramento Panthers Saturday at 8 p.m. Since both clubs are hot on the heels of Stockton, the game will be a crucial.

Sacramento, no longer plagued by injuries of its big guns, will probably be stronger Saturday than it has been all season.

One of the factors contributing to the losses of the Panthers this season has been fullback Lou Blakely's pulled muscle. In this tilt, however, this big gun will probably be back in play.

Hoping to open some holes in the Ram line will be Sacramento center Tom McKarras. Praying for that open slot in the line will be fullback Dale Clifton.

Ray Clemons, Panther coach, puts a great deal of hope in the ability of these three Panther gridders.

The game should be a close go with both teams outwardly about equal in ability. One of the Panthers' losses was just a matter of one point, but that point was the difference in the loss of the Panthers to Stockton.

When asked how he thinks this season's Panthers stack up against last year's championship squad, Clemons replied that he believes the team is about the same, but he added that the loss column this trip doesn't bear out this statement at the present ime.

Silver Homecoming Festivities Set For November 13 Modesto Contest

The Rams face the Pirates from Modesto Friday, November 13, at Kezar, in the 25th anniversary homecoming contest, at 8 p.m.

The contest will be another crucial for the home town men if they expect to keep their league halo hopes alive. Currently the Rams are still in the first division. A win will move them into a position to take the honors.

Modesto is a very strong team this year, capable of hurting the Rams in their pennant drive. Although they have been in hibernation for the first two league games, if they find themselves they will be tough.

In league play the Pirates have tied with San Mateo 8-8, and lost to Contra Costa's Comets 12-8. In each of these games they showed that they had the guns but just couldn't fire them.

The Rams are up for this one because the season is near the three-quarter mark, and they feel that it's now or never. They also have an ulterior motive for a good showing in this game. Ram grid history goes back 25 years and the homecoming game is always the high point of the season.

This will be the last time the Rams will play at home this season, for the final game will be played at San Mateo.

Since this will be a banner homecoming because of the importance of the 25th year of Ram grid play, there will be added color with the addition of a special Silver Anniversary program.

A Homecoming Queen and her court will reign over the festivities, and plans are in the hopper for a special half-time show.

The locals are out to scuttle the Pirate sloop in the tilt. Since feelings run high in a game of this type, the Rams will be fighting for the game to add their tribute to the culmination of a quarter century of grid activity at the college.

Hall Of Fame To Undergo Possible Balloting Change

Owing to admitted bias on the part of the Ram coaching staff, which currently composes the selection committee for the college's athletic Hall of Fame, plans are now in progress to change the system of balloting so that all nominees will receive fair judgment in the selection of candidates.

Under the present system, adopted when Guardsman Sports Editor Lou Lucia started the Hall of Fame here in 1957, the element of impartiality has been increasingly absent through no fault of the committee.

Observers agree that it is entirely natural that the members of the local coaching staff should favor the men who have performed under their tutelage in the casting of their respective ballots.

A basketball coach does not work with football, baseball, or track performers, and, though he may see them in actual competition, is not as thoroughly aware of how well the men are working as he is with his own charges. The same is true of all coaches.

Consequently it all boils down to the fact that the mentors have a tendency to go along with their own charges, come voting time.

In order to remove this hazardous element, plans are now being drawn to alter the format of selection and place it in the hands of a committee which, although somewhat lacking in the knowledge possessed by the coaches, will still provide a fair shake for the nominees.

Should the alteration prove acceptable, the new method of selection will be placed in the hands of five committeemen, including and presided over by the athletic director of the college.

The Guardsman sports editor, Men's Athletic and Awards commissioners, and one male student would complete the selection board.

Peculiar Antics Invade College During Pledging

By Pat Perkins

CHAOS AND CONFUSION are surely enveloping the campus as the antics of bewildered and helpless fraternity and sorority pledges bring Pledge Week to its half-way mark.

"You can't tell the players without a program," someone once said. The various sorority pledges are all clothed in distinctive outfits.

Delta Pal's colors are green and white; Delta Sigma Tau, white and turquoise; Gamma Kappa Beta, orchid and white; Kappa Phi, red and white; Phi Beta Rho, red and yellow; Theta Tau, red and white, and Zeta Chi, yellow and white.

Really, the pledge captains of these various organizations still have their sanity. The dolls, animals, and so on, that they carry are mascots and are traditionally carried every Pledge Week.

Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority's October service project was a visit to Letterman Hospital. Each member brought cookies and worked with the Red Cross members. In November the sisters will visit Laguna Honda Home. By working with the Hotel and Restaurant Society, they plan to deliver over 1000 cookies to the home.

Instruction of Gamma Kappa Beta pledges was held at the home of Carolyn Vukasin, pledge mistress, last Sunday. After dismissing the pledges, the sisters had a pot luck dinner at the home of Margie Erhart.

The Christian Science Organization will have a meeting on November 5 at 7:45 p.m. at the home of Mrs. L. Prendergast, 124 Eastwood Drive. All interested students are invited to attend. Anyone desiring further information may consult Nina Tucker in the Hotel and Restaurant department.

Gamma Phi Epsilon fraternity held a costume party for its new pledges on Halloween.

This year's International Relations Club show is going to be the best ever, says Jose Bran, stage manager.

Phi Beta Rho sorority's fall semester officers are as follows: Anita Cardone, president; Diana Robinson, vice-president; Joanne Costello, recording secretary; Pat Whitman, corresponding secretary; Pam Gardella, treasurer; Judi Jacobsen, historian; Gayle Barnett, pledge mistress, and Vicki Vivas, editor and sergeant-at-arms.

Occupying positions as officers of the Merchandising Club this semester are Silvia Shield, president; Gerald Mates, vice-president; Juanita Shaeffer, secretary-treasurer; Phyllis Vauman, historian; and Thomas Tom, Club Activities Board representative. A dinner is scheduled for November 15 at Treasure Island for club members.

Everyone is looking forward to the State convention for future retailers to be held February 22 and 23 at the Whitcomb Hotel. The purpose of this meeting is to discuss retailing problems and to exhibit displays to show abilities in salesmanship and retail business.

Anyone interested in folkdancing is urged to join the Folkdancing Group being formed this semester. This group, sponsored by Melia Furgis, meets Fridays at 11:30 a.m. in the women's gymnasium.

Soph Ball Theme Idea Deadline This Friday

Fraternities, sororities and other college organizations have until this Friday to submit themes for the Sophomore Ball, according to Tony Lopez, Sophomore Class president.

The original deadline had been set for October 30, but, Lopez said, it had been extended because no suggestions had been submitted, although college organizations had been notified.

Entertainment for the ball, scheduled for Saturday, January 12, will "probably" be provided by Ruddy Salvini and his band, Lopez said, but added that this is not definite.

A major event of the Soph Ball will be the traditional crowning of a king and queen, who will be presented with trophies symbolic of their victory. Candidates for the crown will be chosen from various campus organizations.

IRC International Fair Slated For Marina Auditorium This Friday Night

Entertainment From Around The World To Highlight Event

By Paul Plansky

Through the medium of entertainment, the International Relations Club will take its audience on an imaginary trip around the world, when it presents the Sixth Annual International Fair at the Marina Auditorium, Fillmore and Bay Streets, starting at 8 p.m. this Friday.

Songs, dances and costumes are combined to represent each native land besides the foods, arts and crafts to be exhibited by students currently attending the college.

"A packed house is expected for the show, which should surpass last year's successful fair held at Riordan High's auditorium," Joseph M. Jacobsen, IRC sponsor, stated.

Emceeing the entertainment will be "Danton Stelaplane of The San Francisco Crucible," played by Mario Gutierrez, and his teen-age daughter Diana, portrayed by Marilyn Santos. They will introduce the acts from each country, which will run from 10 to 15 minutes each, and hope to add a comical twist to the solid two-hour production.

Slated on the agenda of dances are a Hawaiian Hula, the Flame and Flower Dances of the Philippines, the Tango, Cha-Cha and Mexican Hat Dance from south of the border, the Finnish Spinning Dance and Danish Cobbler Dance from Scandinavia, and a Sinkiang Folk Dance from China, according to Sarwan Gill, IRC president.

Helping to select and organize the exhibits and entertainment of each country represented are the various chairmen heading their native lands.

Italian pizza, the Feast of Omar Khayyam from Persia, pastries of India, and fortune cookies and tea from China are some of the "delicious dishes" to be exhibited by each country, Gill stated. The students will prepare these meals themselves.

Guests attending the fair will be escorted to their seats by usherettes dressed in their native costume. A fashion show from the Philippines will climax the foreign fashions that evening.

Consular representatives from Finland, India and several South American countries have confirmed that they plan to attend the fair. Other consuls have not been heard from, but are expected to accept their invitations, Jacobsen said.

Special committee chairmen are responsible for details of the final performance. These chairmen are Jose Bran; exhibits; Maria Rodello, food; Geneva Warner and Francis Chiu, publicity; Alex Bogdis, light and sound; Delfina Aldrete, wardrobe and makeup; Nelly Sosa, usherettes; Charles Flannigan, stage director; Bran, stage manager, and Guitierrez is the announcer.

Wood carvings from Europe, mugs from Germany, dolls from Japan and Korea, brass from India, and serapes from Mexico are among the international items to be on display for the arts and crafts exhibits.

Proceeds from the fair will go to the IRC's funds for international scholarships. Tickets cost 75 cents with Associated Student card, and general admission is $1.

Since the fair's inception in 1954, the IRC has awarded a trophy for the best performance of the show.

The sixth annual event has received notice on television, radio, and through releases sent to all foreign clubs in the city.

Hazing Brings Fraternities Under Fire Of Legislators

Unless anti-hazing laws are enforced, abolition of fraternities in California may take place by 1961, a state legislator indicated Thursday at a special meeting called by Attorney General Stanley Mosk with representatives of Northern California colleges.

Speakers at the meeting were Mosk, Senator Edwin J. Regan, originator of the hazing law, and Assemblyman John O'Connell.

Regan stated he had a bill prepared in 1955 which would ban fraternities but was persuaded to modify it. He further stated, "If these incidents (USC and UC hazing) do not cease, I am prepared to present my bill to the senate in 1961.

"One death, one serious injury as a result of hazing would justify the banning of fraternities," he warned.

Hegan also stated that hazing laws will be enforced and that it is the obligation of the universities and colleges to keep the activities of their members in check.

The universities and colleges must define what can and cannot be done in hazing, Regan emphasized.

"The administration of the college should be the liaison between the law and fraternity," he adedd.

Mosk explained that it is the duty of the college or university to report any incident of hazing to the local district attorney or his office.

When asked, in reference to hazing, to define that which degrades, Mosk replied, "Use the reasonable man theory, that is, would the reasonable man consider this degrading? Let this be your standard in hazing," he stated repeatedly. When the question persisted, Regan answered, "When in doubt, don't."

Representing the college were Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities at the college, and the presidents of the fraternities.

Other colleges represented at the meeting were Sacramento State, Chico State, Sacramento City College, Stanford University, Contra Costa College, San Francisco State College, College of Marin, Oakland City College, College of Pacific, Stockton City College, University of California and University of California at Davis.

Tau Chi Sets Goal In Crusade Drive

Attempting to reach a $2000 goal, pledges and members of Tau Chi Sigma fraternity are soliciting contributions for the United Crusade as their major Pledge Week activity, according the Dick Fontaine, chairman of the drive.

The goal is set above the amount contributed by the University of California last year, which gave $1778 to the Crusade. While there is no limit to the amount one may donate, an average of 35 cents per student will reach the $2000 mark, Fontaine said.

Last year Tau Chi sponsored a college-wide blood drive, which netted 340 pints of blood, a donation exceeding that of any other college in the state.

Other Tau Chi Sigma members heading the drive are Mike Haskell, treasurer, and Ted Keller, president.

Robinson To Represent CSTA At LA Conference

Le Roy Robinson, president of the local chapter of the California Student Teachers Association, will be a delegate to the CSTA state conference to be held in Los Angeles December 3, 4, 5.

The CSTA is an organization which encourages students to consider teaching careers. It is currently featuring a program by guest speakers every College Hour in C-268.

Bartmann Names Seven Delegates To CJCSGA Meet

Associated Student President Tony Bartmann and six other student leaders will comprise the college's delegation to the semi-annual California Junior College Student Government Association Conference at Berkeley, November 19-21.

Student government leaders from two-year colleges all over the state will attend the three-day event, which provides an opportunity for delegates to meet, exchange ideas, compare difficulties and attempt to solve various problems of their respective campuses.

The college's delegation, as named by the AS president, will consist of Bartmann, Arlene Crabb, AS vice-president; Bud Andress, AS state information service chairman; Fred Muller, state conference vice-president; Judy Day, AS finance committee chairman; Mike Haskell, Associated Men Student president; and William Forshay, publications board chairman.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities here, will accompany the group.

At the meeting, the problems and ideas discussed at the Northern and Southern California sectional conferences will be considered and possible legislation will be proposed, Bartmann said.

One problem to be discussed is an issue which would prevent delegates from leaving the conference before the designated time, the AS president stated.

Some of the resolutions that are approved at the state conference will be sent to the California Legislature for enactment, he added.

Requests Exceed Budget By $4508 With 10 To Go

By Bob Pacini

Only $7355 remains of this semester's $27,000 Associated Student budget to satisfy 10 so-far unapproved requests totaling $11,863, Judy Day, finance chairman, reported to Student Council last week.

Miss Day said that 20 budgets have already been passed for a total of $19,644.74.

Subtracted from the $27,000 allotment this leaves only $7355.26 for the budgets that have not yet been brought up for consideration by council.

Last week Miss Day told council that there were still 10 budgets to be acted upon, and that their total was $11,863.96. Thus, Miss Day added, AS funds are $4508.70 short.

This was unfair, he said, to those budgets that have not yet been passed for they will suffer more than budgets acted upon earlier in the semester. Haskell stated that council should take steps to prevent such occurrences from happening again.

Haskell's budget for the AMS was again brought before council's attention after having been tabled at the previous meeting and again aroused differences of opinion and questions among council members.

Of particular controversy was a request in the AMS budget for $100 for entertainment at the AMS smoker. Rally Committee Chairman Susan Shawl told Haskell that her committee could provide free entertainment if wanted, and said that the $100 in question could be stricken from the AMS budget.

Haskell countered by telling council that out of the $100 must also come funds for refreshments and promotion for Homecoming Week.

State Information Chairman Bud Andress proposed tabling the budget again, and expressed indignation at council members for passing budgets without really investigating them and being fully aware of what they contained.

Haskell's budget was then tabled for the second consecutive time.

Bernstein's Tour Brings Good Will

piece of a man who proudly considers himself a Soviet composer.

The audience greeted this performance with a standing ovation and shouts of "bravo!" Shostakovich walked briskly to the podium and gave Bernstein a warm handshake.

The mutual respect these two artists showed on and a striking parallel in the attitudes of the average citizens of each country.

Neither Russian nor American people want war.

To them, "war" is a word that could be relegated to history books if it were not for the forces of economic and political ambition motivating those who govern each country's policy.

The surest way to ease existing cold war tension is to obliterate all barriers and promote free contact between the "common people" who constitute about 90 per cent of each country's population. Good will and friendship, like music, are universally understood.

If Americans and Russians are one day allowed to travel to each other's countries and eat, work, walk and talk together, they will find they have as much in common as Bernstein and Shostakovich. Political barriers, in addition to "our superstitions and fears" referred to by Bernstein, will be exposed in all their artificiality.

Personal contact between Russians and Americans may come soon, if the governments of both nations are sincere in their desire for peace. Until it does, it is gratifying to know that the surface is being scratched by men like Leonard Bernstein.

When cultural contact of this kind paves the way for further mingling on all social levels, the ice of hostility produced by statesmen cannot help but melt under pressure of the warmth of friendship.

Extended Council Silence On Vandalism Inexcusable

THREE major acts of vandalism indicating a total lack of respect for property and for the college have recently occurred on this campus. In two cases, the perpetrators of the action have not been caught and in the third, only a minimal punishment has been inflicted.

In addition, the "punishment" seems to be taken lightly by those guilty and the judge who passed sentence stated that after restoration of the destruction, the court records of the participants will be erased. He termed the destruction "an exuberant prank" which seems a careless way to describe the damage done to an irreplaceable symbol of the college.

MORE IMPORTANT AND LESS UNDERSTANDABLE TO US IS THE EXTENDED AND INEXCUSABLE SILENCE ON THE PART OF THE STUDENT COUNCIL.

Why has there been so much delay before discussion of these matters?

Was a "hush-up" imposed?

Does the council feel that it cannot, should not, or is not capable of taking action on this problem?

Who is covering up and why?

These questions we feel the student body has a right to ask and deserves a full answer for all of them:

There is no doubt that discussion unsupported by action is futile. However, the Student Council has been delegated a certain amount of authority and it is incumbent upon the council that such authority be used or eventually it will wither and fade away. The time for action is now and there are at least three things the council can do.

1. Pool and discuss all information now in the hands of private individuals and pass the results on to the police department and the college authorities. (Much is known that is not being said.)

2. Stop shielding those guilty and arrange for some punitive device that will stick. The council cannot punish but it can recommend to the college and to the faculty its ideas on equitable punishment. Immediate and permanent expulsion is a possible step in this direction.

3. Identify and warn members of the "hard core" of malefactors in each organization who participates in such activity and unhesitatingly act when warnings of such activities are rumored—perhaps even let the warned organization police the campus in order to protect its own reputation.

The major point we are trying to make is that in three weeks of inactivity on the part of the council, such actions have continued when it is entirely possible that judicious forethought, debate and action could have prevented them.

There can be no reason for any group devoted to the best interests of the college as the council and its members must be, as shown by their serving, to sit silently and fail to pass any kind of judgment on these "pranks" while supposedly representing college opinion.

Council Discusses Destruction On Campus After Settling Vital Flower-Versus-Matches Issue

By Bob Pacini

After a three-week silence on the wave of vandalism that has plagued the college, Student Council finally turned its attention to the pranks after devoting previous meetings to questions of flowers, matches and more budgets.

Acting as chairman in the absence of Associated Student President Tony Bartmann, Wally Hayes, referring to the chopping down of the flagpole, the attempted cremation of the Redwood Ram and other destructive pranks, asked the group to offer suggestions to prevent such incidents from occurring again.

It was suggested by frosh councilman Hasko Hoffmeister that gates be erected at each entrance to the campus. Campus Police Chief Martin Novitsky took a negative attitude toward this plan and said that gates would be of little value in deterring further vandalism.

Siding with Novitsky, Ben Northrup, Club Activities Board president, agreed with a plan to have a guard patrol the campus at night. It was also suggested that trouble spots about the campus be illuminated to discourage further destructive acts.

No final decision was reached on the matter.

In a previous meeting, council took a divided stand on a proposal by State Information Service Chairman Bud Andress to present delegates to the California Junior College Student Government Association convention in Berkeley with corsages and boutonnieres.

Andress told council that the usual memento for delegates to the three-day meeting has been book matches, and suggesting a break with tradition, Andress said red and white flowers should be considered instead.

Flowers, however, a council member brought out, would not be as good as matches for they would last only a single day and then wilt, but matches

'Bad Guys' Don't Give; Tau Chi's Fund Drive Fails

Confronted with a stone wall of student unwillingness to contribute, lack of interest and even hostility, discouraged Pledge Week solicitors for Tau Chi Sigma's United Crusade drive netted only $131.26, according to Dick Fontaine, chairman of the drive.

The total, less than seven per cent of the antiepated $2000 goal, was a "shocking disappointment," Fontaine said, and represented an "altogether poor response" by students of the college.

An average of 35 cents per person would have been necessary to reach the $2000 mark.

"We just overestimated the generosity of students," Fontaine said. "Most of them had excuses, ranging from a simple 'I gave already' to a curt and sometimes hostile refusal to donate."

He added, however, that the fraternity wants to sponsor the drive next year, as it has become "a challenge."

The Pledge Week effort remains in contrast to Tau Chi's wholly successful blood drive of last year, which netted more contributions than any other college in the state.

Vandals Scorch Mascot

Three Guilty Students Caught, Expelled For Malicious Mischief As Continued Abuses Compel New 'Get Tough' Policy

By Bob Lane

Destructive campus vandalism brought appropriate police action and immediate expulsion to three sophomore students two weeks ago, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities.

Frequent spot checks by the police department and the security patrol resulted in the capture and arrest of the vandals while attempting to burn the 12-foot, carved Redwood Ram near Smith Hall.

Dean Hillsman announced that all possible legal and college action would be used in accordance with the college's new "get tough" policy which was put into effect following a wave of vandalism on the campus three weeks ago.

The students pleaded guilty to charges of malicious mischief in Municipal Court the following day after spending the night in jail. Judge Francis McCarty delivered a stern lecture and ordered them to restore the college symbol within three months.

The youths were arrested while pouring gasoline on the statue and assertedly told police that they were just cleaning the Ram off so that they could repaint it in the college colors.

For many years, various rival colleges and individuals have persisted in painting the statue, but this was the first time anyone had attempted complete annihilation.

The Ram (shown at left being repainted) made its debut in 1939 at the California Handicraft Exhibit of the San Francisco World's Fair on Treasure Island. It was carved during the fair by muralist and sculptor Dudley C. Carter.

Following the fair, the Ram was formally presented to the college in 1940 by the late architect Timothy Pflueger as a gift from Carter to the expanding institution.

Grades Improve During First Midterm Period

Marked improvement in scholastic achievement was shown during the first midterm period compared with the first six weeks of last semester, according to John Brady, co-ordinator of student welfare.

After the first midterm, the evaluation of grades resulted in the mailing of 868 letters, warning students of their scholastic deficiencies.

This number is 42 less than last semester's first midterm total of 910, Brady stated.

IFC Reinstates Two Suspended Fraternities

Two fraternities, Alpha Kappa Rho and Gamme Phi Ypsilon, were placed on suspension two weeks ago for technical violations, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of men.

They were reinstated last week when their cases were presented and reviewed before the Inter-Fraternity Council.

Alpha Kappa Rho was placed on probation for the remainder of the semester for abandoning their pledges at Muir Woods.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon was reinstated after reporting that three of their members who had vandalized the college symbol had been suspended from the fraternity.

Dean Hillsman pointed out that the college will act in strict accordance with the new state laws forbidding hazing of pledges, and that any violation will result in immediate suspension.

Legerdemain Highlights CAB Benefit Show Dec. 4

Sleight-of-hand mysteries will be featured at the Club Activities Board annual Christmas benefit show during a double College Hour Friday, December 4, Ben Northrup, CAB president, stated today.

The show, sponsored jointly by CAB and the fraternity and sorority councils, will launch a week of campaigning for contributions from the student body to be given to needy families of the Bay Area.

Statewide Student Leader Conference Starts Tomorrow

By Elmer Milligan

Representatives of 65 two-year colleges will meet tomorrow at the Claremont Hotel in Berkeley to begin the 28th semi-annual California Junior College Student Government Association Conference.

The conference, a three-day affair, will bring together student government leaders from all parts of the state in search of new and advanced ideas to improve their student administrations.

Six key members of the Associated Students, headed by AS President Tony Bartmann, will comprise the college's delegation to the event.

The delegates are Bartmann, Arlene Crabb, AS vice-president; Fred Muller, state conference vice-president; Bud Andress, AS state information service chairman; Judy Day, AS finance chairman; William Forshay, Publications Board chairman, and Mike Haskell, Associated Men Student president.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities here, will accompany the group.

The purpose of the conference is to provide a means for discussing problems pertaining to student government, to further better relations among the two-year colleges of the state and to promote the better interests of the students.

A great deal of consideration will be afforded the two resolutions that were passed at the Northern Region Conference held here last month, Bartmann asserted.

The first resolution states that a college which leaves a regional conference before the designated time will have only its voting privileges revoked for the State meeting of the current semester, unless an excuse is presented to the hosting college one week in advance of the conference.

The second resolution, which resulted from discussions in the athletic workshop, states that the Northern California Student Government Association favors a North-South football playoff to determine the team to represent California in the Junior Rose Bowl.

(Virtually this same resolution was passed by a vote of 27-18-4 at the State Conference in Long Beach last May.)

Some of the resolutions that are approved at the State conference will be sent to the California Legislature for enactment, the AS president said.

Counseling Staff Promises Changes In Pre-Reg Plans

Promises of effective solutions to problems that confronted students here on pre-registration day October 9 were voiced last week by Walter E. McCloud of the counseling department.

The major solution, he declared, concerns the inconveniences caused students who had to wait longer than necessary in line because of inconsiderate students who forced their way in front of others.

These solutions will remain undisclosed for greater effectiveness in future use, McCloud said.

In the future, the complete process will be scheduled to last only one hour and will not interfere with classes as happened in some previous cases.

Students again will receive forms to fill out prior to pre-registration, McCloud explained, but the self-addressed postcards will be issued on that day to guard against students forgetting or losing them.

Although a large number have already gone through the process of pre-registering, there are still many who have not done so, and McCloud strongly urged them to do so as soon as possible.

All students have not as yet received their postcard telling about the counseling appointments. Under the new policy, the postcards are sent out one week in advance of the appointment.

On March 17, pre-registration will be held for the fall semester. This procedure will again replace College Hour and will be from 8 to 9 a.m.

• GI Bill Controversy

Editor, The Guardsman:

Two questions were posed in the October 18 issue of the Counterpoint column. The article concerned a proposed extension of the Korean "GI Bill" to all veterans.

Q. "What is the reasoning behind the passage of this bill?"

A. America is constantly losing ground in the Cold War and immediate steps must be taken to try to overcome Russia's increasing rate of progress in education. The machinery for GI Bill benefits is already here.

It would take years for bills to be drawn up, proposed, sent to committee, amended, ad nauseum. We can't afford to wait. Action is needed now!

Q. "Is such a bill actually the most practical device for aiding America's educational problems?"

A. Probably not, but it is a device. American lawmakers are notoriously impractical (on the whole) in passing or attempting to pass laws concerning subjects which are not thoroughly understood by them.

There is probably a more perfect way to achieve the best kind of education for the most deserving people, but I can't conceive of two-thirds of either House of Congress agreeing on (or even drawing up) such a plan without much time-consuming bickering and politicking.

Mr. Seratti's views are undoubtedly based on sound reasoning and fine ideals. It's too bad that our politicians were not of the same character so that such a plan as his would be possible with the minimum of bureaucracy and the maximum of efficiency.

But, realizing our leaders' shortcomings, we must face the fact that we have to act expediently, though wastefully.

Freshman Follows Family Line

Fencing Champ Latches On To H&R Cooking Class

By Jo Ann Griffin

Seven hundred years ago, somewhere in Spain, a sport now favored the world over was created. Eighteen years ago in Budapest, Hungary, June 16, 1941, to be exact, a young man, who would someday meet the challenge set by this sport, conquer it and become a champion, was born.

That sport was fencing and the young man is Peter A. Karpaty, born of a courageous family which was suddenly to escape the clutches of the iron curtain and come to live and work in the United States during and after the Hungarian revolt in 1956.

When Karpaty was only six or eight years of age, his mother, who is an avid fencer, enrolled him in a private school of gymnastics and fencing, so that he might become proficient in the art.

Four championships he has held since that decision include the Hungarian championship held in Budapest in 1955 preceding the winning of the United States Championships of Philadelphia in January of 1957 and New Jersey in May, 1957. Finally in 1958, he took the Northern California Junior Championship.

(These championships were won by the foil which comes from France. Manipulation of this instrument requires complete control with the fingers and belongs to the finer fencing art used today as contrasted with the rougher Italian types that were once used.)

A Hotel & Restaurant major, Karpaty is enrolled in his first semester here. Upon completion of courses he plans to enter Cornell University in New York.

Sparking his interest in hotel and restaurant work is the fact that his father owns a restaurant in San Francisco and his grandfather owned a hotel in Budapest. Karpaty wants to continue in this family line of work.

"His other interests include soccer, tennis, bowling, swimming and music. Graduated from Polytechnic High School as a music major, he plays the drums and is at present forming his own band, a combo for which he already has a singer and piano player.

About fencing, it has been said that "75 per cent brain and 25 per cent physical proficiency is required."

As well as brain, time is the main ingredient of the best fencers. Five years of practice are required to make a good fencer; 10 years to judge and 13 years to be a good teacher. There are only about 50 recognized masters in the U.S.

One of these is George J. Piliar, also from Hungary, who taught Karpaty and is fencing coach at the University of California.

Battle Of The City's College Dailies

Pulp War Maneuver Confounds Gators

By Jim Clifford

San Francisco is rapidly becoming the battlefield for a war between the dailies—but it's strictly an amateur donnesybrook, with Hearst, Scripps-Howard et al staying quietly behind the firing line. The battle shapes up with the University of San Francisco Foghorn in one corner and the San Francisco State Gater in the other.

The first major bomb of the pulp war was dropped on October 26 when the Foghorn pulled off the neatest surprise attack since Pearl Harbor.

The Dons infiltrated the State campus, absconded with the day's copies of the legitimate Gater, and substituted phony Halloween copies that turned the usually sedate college into a bedlam.

Coeds who merely read the headlines ran to cry on their counselor's shoulder when they saw "State To Require Coed Wac Training in Fall."

Other stories had the Garter, the State humor magazine, destroyed by the House Un-American Activities Committee; the basketball players shaving their legs because Ludwig A. Selby of the Sadlers-Wells Ballet was taking over as coach, and announced that the Gators would drop football and join USF's bearded Pop Warner league because so far this season State is undefeated and head coach Joe Verducci "... wants to quit while he's ahead."

The intellectuals who read past the headlines weren't fooled, for in the staff-box was the statement: "In case you were wondering, this isn't the regular issue of the Golden Gater. It's the Halloween edition of the San Francisco Daily Foghorn. Boo!"

After State pulled its dignity together, the Gater editors came up with a laugh of their own—in the form of a $100,000 law suit. They probably won't collect, but a $100,000 blow to the solar plexus, even when it doesn't connect, makes one a little cautious.

The fuse of the battle was ignited recently when both campuses decided to publish daily (or almost daily) editions. USF came out four times a week in a five-column size with the motto "San Francisco's Fourth Daily" displayed proudly in the logotype.

State began daily publication in four-column size with "San Francisco's Leading College Daily" as its motto. In the Halloween edition the Dons changed the Gater motto to "San Francisco's Smallest College Daily."

Now, with the field of entry in the college weekly race narrowed down considerably, the only college paper in the city with an honest motto is The Guardsman. It, at least, in all honesty, without fear of contradiction can say it's "San Francisco's Largest Weekly College Paper"—no other San Francisco paper can make that statement.

Road To Knowledge

Library Offers Countless Ways To Understanding; 50,000 Books Available Via Open Stack System

Roads to knowledge, whether they be narrow trails of vague comprehension or broad boulevards of complete mastery of a subject, are varied, and evidence of this is offered in the library in Cloud Hall where 50,000 pathways to understanding, in the form of books, fill the seemingly endless rows of shelves.

From Machiavelli's ruthlessness to the soaring, ethereal words of the Bible, from Aristotle to Zola, from practically anything you want, the thoughts of the great men of history and of our own times are available in the library.

The doors of the library are open to all students of the college from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Seating capacity in the library is about 700.

Worthy of attention is the fact that the library is run on the "open stack" system. This means that any student may enter the stacks, located directly behind the check-out counter, whenever the library is open.

A student may, under the open stack system, look up a book in the card catalogue by author, subject or title and then seek the desired book in the open stacks. Books numbered 000-600 are on the first floor of the stacks, and volumes numbered 700-900 on the second level.

In addition to the thousands of books available to students here, unbound magazines, shelved alphabetically, are located in the periodical room, and may be borrowed for overnight use.

Volumes of bound magazines, however, intended for use in the library only, are in the reserve reading room.

Across from the reserve reading room is the reference reading area. Here a student can find standard references material, such as encyclopedias, atlases and dictionaries.

Besides these valuable helpers, there are also periodical indexes such as the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature and the Book Review Digest.

Volunteer workers in the library are members of either Delta Psi or Gamma Sigma Sigma sororities.

HEAD OF THE CLASS. A philosophy major enrolled here has, in his own words, "mastered the art of studying while standing on his head." When not studying in this manner, he studies at least with feet higher than his head, for example: feet on sofa, head on floor.

He concludes there is some good in this method of studying, producing as evidence his solid "B" average last semester.

However, the student says he's "considering joining the cult of Yoga, and quitting studying altogether."

TABLES WERE TURNED during Pledge Week, two weeks ago when the usually unfortunate pledges had their revenge.

Seems that one of the more important personages of a fraternity was shanghaied aboard a clipper, arriving a Los Angeles with only a few pennies in his pockets.

Last we heard he was making his way home with several ideas and suggestions from the University of Southern California.

MISS-INFORMATION. One cute coed was making out her program for next semester when her counselor suggested she take a few social science courses.

Uncertain as to what they involved she asked for a clarification. The counselor got no further than his explanation that anthropology was the study of man before the excited coed interrupted him with her decision:

"I just love men," she sighed; "I'll take that course."

DRY NOTE. After viewing one of the larger colleges where no beer is sold, students of the Institute Pedagogico of the University of Chile went back home with some reform ideas.

Result: Despite much objection from professors who liked a bit of cognac in their early morning coffee, student leaders managed to have liquor removed from the student canteen. Beer and wine are still sold.

Foresight

IN TOWN over the weekend, en route to the Orient for a brief study of Far Eastern culinary customs before returning to his home in Chihuahua, Mexico, for the coming holidays, was one Gregorious Fictitius . . . Turkey.

Renowned in academic circles for his brilliant papers on the sociological evolution of the turkey and the resulting adjustment to the particular problems pertinent to the environment in which his contemporaries find themselves, especially festive occasions, Fictitius (rhymes with malicious), in a closed press conference aired his views and opinions on a number of current issues.

A charter member and militant participant in the growing SPFEC i.e., Society for the Persuasion of People to Eat Chicken), Fictitious, who Latinized his name while studying in Florence, Italy, on a Fulbright scholarship, expressed deep concern over the coming Thanksgiving holiday in which an expected million or so of his brethren will be exterminated, in the prime of life as it were, only to wind up bereft of dignity and publicly displayed in the nation's frozen food lockers.

"Since that disgraceful episode perpetrated by the Pilgrim Fathers over 300 years ago," Fictitius stated, "the turkey has come to be regarded chiefly for the tenderness of his flesh rather than for the agility of his intellect. It is becoming increasingly tiresome to attend dinner after dinner, banquet after banquet, in the sole capacity of main entree."

Maintaining a relaxed and informal attitude during the interview, "Fic," (as the assembled reporters and photographers began to call him at his own suggestion), commented on the peculiar attachment that he and his followers have for Thanksgiving time in the U.S.

"The custom has been invariable since 1621. Those of us who survive the holocaust meet on the day after Thanksgiving for a simple repast of berries and yogurt. It is a solemn occasion in which candles are lit, hymns are sung and epic poetry recited both before and after the meal. I need hardly add what it is that we are giving thanks for."

Questioned as to his recent research while on the Italian Peninsula, which resulted in the widely acclaimed but highly controversial thesis entitled, Modern Art And The Mafia, the elegantly attired bird replied that this work, accomplished independently from his political activities, culminated a life-long ambition to see the world and to combine two art forms into a contrapuntal study of human expression from their two extremes into an harmonious one.

Regaling the crowd at the after-conference tea with anecdotes of his European adventures, "Fic" loshed about the time his passport expired on a Thanksgiving day while he was touring a remote outpost of the State Department. "Those boys had never seen a turkey with an expired passport before and they all had that lean, hungry look.

Little did the master scholar know it at the time, but the man who directed the strategy behind this cage unit was destined to go on to the greatest coaching job that the college had to offer:

On Sepember 9, 1949, Dr. Louis G. Conlan began calling the signals for the entire Ocean and Phelan Factory, as he stepped into Mr. C.'s vacated shoes in the role of President of City College.

Pappa Cloud dropped in fairly regularly to dump a little hey ninety-nine's to various departments of the campus after his retirement. It was at the athletic events, though, that the wise, old owl could nearly always be found, giving his all to push the Rams on to victory.

It was obvious that there was something missing from the Rams' conference opener of 1957, however, and a glance at that empty seat in the left hand corner of the Kezar press box showed that City College of San Francisco had returned its greatest tool to The Fellow who had lent him to it.

A. J. Cloud had died on the afternoon of June 22 of that year.

A lot of people still refuse to believe that he's really gone. They could be right. Take a quick peep up at the press box, or down behind the Ram bench next time you take in a Red and White grid outing.

Don't let the old fellow in the tweed overcoat throw you. Of course A.J. is still with us; would he have it any other way?

From Far Places

Magnetic H&R Staff Draws Foreign Tyros

Language difficulties, passport problems and a complete love of the college and San Francisco are several things that 11 foreign students enrolled in hotel and restaurant courses here have in common.

The brave 11 have traveled from such far-away places as Germany, the Philippines, Japan, France, Switzerland and Hungary in order to increase their knowledge in chosen fields.

Among these 11 are Erwin Stender and his wife Herta, who came from Bad Reichenhall, Germany, to Chicago and finally to San Francisco (March 1959) in their search for a college specialized enough to train them in hotel management.

The Stenders think that San Francisco is a very cosmopolitan and charming city. They especially enjoy the pleasant climate which lacks the dirty smoke and dust so often found in Chicago.

They are of the opinion that the college has excellent instructors and friendly students. The couple assert that the hotel department offers a great deal in the way of educational values and both have improved their command of English tremendously since their arrival.

A high school teacher from Manila, capital of the Philippines, is Betty Ylagan Sison. She is enrolled in a specialized course here in order to be better prepared to teach home economics at Torres High School, where she has previously been instructing third and fourth year high school boys in the arts of food service.

Miss Sison finds that San Francisco's weather is rather cold compared with Manila's, but that the college is very nice, the faculty understanding and the students friendly. She arrived in San Francisco last September just in time to begin her first semester here.

Akihiko Shibatta, who hails from Tokyo, Japan, is attending his second semester here. Before enrolling in the H&R courses he had to overcome language difficulties during his first semester.

Hoping to return to the United States at a later date, he will work in a Tokyo hotel during the 1964 Olympics to be held in that city.

ARCHIBALD J. CLOUD (left), the late first president of the college, appointed Louis G. "Dutch" Conlan as first basketball coach. Conlan later succeeded him as president.

RAMBLINGS

'A Winning Team Regardless Of Score'

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

THE LATE A. J. Cloud was one hustling keg of dynamite when it came to getting behind his clubs and booting the Ram athletes home to victory.

This gentleman, who made use of everything from Charlie Harney's cement mixers to Phil Wrigley's chewing gum in pasting together the original edition of what now is City College of San Francisco, was something beyond a finely polished educator par excellence.

The old boy could go out to the games and whoop it up right along with the best of 'em. Nobody in this fish market was around back in "them days of '35" when the Red and White factory fielded its first football squad, but you can bet your hula hoop Mr. C. was there.

He had to be. This was his show.

Russ Sweet, Lee Elsan, Jack Gaddy and Louis "Dutch" Conlan, who guided the various Ram athletic units through their first year of endeavor, were no run-of-the-mill skippers in any sense of the word.

Pappa Cloud didn't play around when it came to fingering the men who would lead his warriors into battle. These tutors were hand-picked by Cloud himself, and he was never a man to settle for anything less than the best.

The schoolmaster had his own ideas as to how collegiate athletic competition should be handled, and, although there have been others who thought along the same lines, most of us could do a lot worse than perk up our ears at his words of wisdom:

"Give me a group of men who play together for the simple reason that they love the game, and I'll show you a winning team, regardless of the score of the game."

It was at the culmination of the 1935 basketball season, however, that the theory of Archibald J. Cloud showed its might to the eyes of the entire Bay Area. Contrary to popular opinion, "nice guys" can be winners, and "Dutch" Conlan's hoopsters bore this out.

The Ram court forces planted the Red and White banner in its rightful pinnacle of athletic renown, humbling the San Mateo Bulldogs, 42-33, for the Northern California Junior College championship.

Little did the master scholar know it at the time, but the man who directed the strategy behind this cage unit was destined to go on to the greatest coaching job that the college had to offer:

On Sepember 9, 1949, Dr. Louis G. Conlan began calling the signals for the entire Ocean and Phelan Factory, as he stepped into Mr. C.'s vacated shoes in the role of President of City College.

Pappa Cloud dropped in fairly regularly to dump a little hey ninety-nine's to various departments of the campus after his retirement. It was at the athletic events, though, that the wise, old owl could nearly always be found, giving his all to push the Rams on to victory.

It was obvious that there was something missing from the Rams' conference opener of 1957, however, and a glance at that empty seat in the left hand corner of the Kezar press box showed that City College of San Francisco had returned its greatest tool to The Fellow who had lent him to it.

A. J. Cloud had died on the afternoon of June 22 of that year.

A lot of people still refuse to believe that he's really gone. They could be right. Take a quick peep up at the press box, or down behind the Ram bench next time you take in a Red and White grid outing.

Don't let the old fellow in the tweed overcoat throw you. Of course A.J. is still with us; would he have it any other way?

Soccer Forces Near First League Title; Shell Broncs, 9-0

After 17 years of famine it looks as though the Ram soccer contingent will finally feast on an NCCSC championship turkey.

By way of an unsurprising 9-0 clouting of Santa Clara at the losers' field last Saturday and a 2-0 win on the part of USF over the UC forces, Roy Diederichsen's boys now hold undisputed possession of the loop crown with but one week remaining to play.

The conquest of Santa Clara was far and away the easiest "tussle" the locals have had to contend with throughout the current campaign.

The Bronco have been the doormat of the circuit all year, and this one proved nothing away from the norm. From the time Jimmy Lynch belted through the first marker, midway through the initial period, until he closed it with another, late in the fourth, it was City College all the way.

Intent upon holding the score as low as possible, the Santa Clara lads opened the affair with an unorthodox eight-man defensive unit, but by the time John Fouladi pumped through a 25-footer to set the count at 3-0, early in the second quarter, the Bronco tossed care to the wind, and let nature take its course.

Dave Kingsley was true on 15-footers to up it to 4-0 at the midway mark.

Throughout the final two periods the contest was turned into another Ringling Brothers' circus as the Rams chalked up five more markers to salt away their easiest outing of the campaign.

The Ram delegation has never won a soccer title since entering into major competition in 1942, but, by virtue of the Santa Clara fray, its fifth win of the current slate, appears to be in an enviable position as far as carrying the orchids away this year is concerned.

Having battled the University of California charges to a scoreless tie a pair of weeks back, the Rams went into the Bronco farce sharing the loop lead with the Bears on equal 4-0-1 marks.

Augie Donahue's USF Dons, who had received their first set-back after 38 straight wins at the hands of the Rams in the 1959 curtain-raiser, were not about to taste defeat for a second time, however, and the Green and Gold win over the Berkeley boys was manna from heaven to the local cause.

In next week's final clash of the current season Diederichsen's horses take on a tough San Jose State eleven, while Cal lines up against Stanford.

Grid Forces 'Win At Last' In Waning Moments Of Silver Homecoming Go

Rams Hand 8-7 Win To Sac'to; Title Hopes Dead

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 7.—Grover Klemmer's Ram grid forces lost another one here tonight, bowing out to Sacramento, 8-7, at Hughes Stadium.

This was the third straight set-back for the locals in conference play, and it virtually eliminates them from further contention for the loop crown.

Although the affair was highlighted by an abundance of hard-fought competition on both sides of the fence, it was not so much a matter of the Panthers winning the scrape as one of the Rams handing it to them on a platinum tray.

A pair of offside penalties against the Red and White crew nullified two unsuccessful p.a.t. attempts on the part of the Capital City boys, with Lou Blakely finally banging up the middle from half a yard out for the two-pointer that spelled out the margin of victory.

The Rams drew first blood four minutes and 35 seconds into the second quarter, moving 29 yards in seven plays, with Tim Moffett scooting in from the one. Wayne Stribling kicked the extra point for 7-0.

Ray Clemmons' Panthers took the ensuing kick-off and scurried 54 yards in two trips to the line, Dick Mooney darting 49 yards off tackle for the score.

One of the brighter spots of what was otherwise a dismal Ram evening was Stribling's phenomenal punting exhibition, a potent 48.2 average.

Gardere Leaves Ram Cagers For Pro Play

Little Joe Gardere, 5'10" stalwart from St. Mary's basketball wonders of last season, offered his phenomenal talents to stage coach Sid Phelan and worked out with the Rams for three weeks, before signing with the Harlem Globetrotters early last month.

"Jumpin' Joe" was a real stalwart in the Gaels' WCAC title drive of '58-'59, and would have been a terrific addition to Phelan's already potent squad, highlighted by Cleo Cofield and Vern Coleman.

A lucrative offer from the checkbook of Trotter boss Abe Saperstein was too much for the Boomerang Bay Clemmonds High to turn down, however, and "Little Joe" is now a "Big Pro."

Locals Toss Slim Ray Of Light On Dismal '59 Output; Simi Hauls In 'Do Or Die' Aerial For 20-14 Win

By Frank Dunne

In a heart stopping thriller Friday night at Kezar Stadium the City College Rams averted a tie and grabbed the victory in their 25th Homecoming game against the Modesto Pirates, 20-14.

With 1:45 remaining to play in the final period, Ram Quarterback John Donham arched a perfect pass to end Bob Simi from the Modesto 30. Simi gathered it in on the 12 and raced the rest of the way to the winning counter.

In the first quarter after an exchange of punts by the two clubs, the Valley boys registered the first score. It took the Pirates three plays to cover the 38 yards for the score, with Ed Burton going the final yard. This gave the Pirates a 6-0 edge at the end of the first quarter.

In the second stanza, Modesto moved the ball down to the Ram 18. There the Ram defense dug in and held them. On fourth down Modesto elected to try a field goal, but Tom Romey's boot fell short of the mark.

The Rams struck back as they marched 67 yards in 14 plays with Johnny Donham diving the final yard for the score. Wayne Stribling booted the extra point and the locals enjoyed a 7-6 halftime advantage.

In the third period the Rams got a go-ahead touchdown, Donham again surprised the Pirates as he heaved a strike to Mel Oliver for a 48-yard scoring play. Stribling again converted and the Rams went into the last quarter with a 14-6 edge.

Modesto began to march goalward in the fourth period. The Rams tried desperately to avert a possible Pirate score. But the determined Sea Dogs pushed the ball into the end zone. Bob Richardson drove the final 5 yards for the score, but as luck would have it the p.a.t. falled and the Rams had a 14-12 edge.

Then Lady Luck smiled on the Pirate forces. From the 20 Modesto attempted a field goal, trying to take the lead. The boot failed.

Scooter Lemp grabbed the ball in the end zone and tried to run it out. On the one-yard line he fumbled. He picked up the ball but was chased back into the end zone for a safety. This tied the game at 14-14.

With time running out and the Rams again in possession of the ball things were looking very dark for the local cause, but the Donham to Simi combo clicked and the locals romped home.

In recognition of his versatile performance up front, guard Carl Mitchell, an unexpected CCSF starter, was awarded outstanding player trophy.

Rams Covet Trophy In Tom-Tom Fray, End Season Grind

Rivalry reigns supreme as the Tom-Tom Trophy goes up for grabs this Saturday afternoon when the Rams invade San Mateo for the final tilt of the season. Kick-off is 1:30 p.m.

The game is one of traditional rivalry between the two colleges, dating back to the inception of the Red and White squad.

'In 1946 Bulldog yell leader, Sonny Lewis, donated the drum as an inter-college symbol of rivalry.

The big drum was originally made in Hawaii and brought to the mainland where it was used by various marching bands.

Today the "bongo" is in the San Mateo trophy case by virtue of the Bulldog win last year over the Rams, 20-12.

The trophy is painted Red and White, representing the Rams, on one side and Blue and White on the other, representing the Bulldogs. Each campus has its own idea about how the drum should be decorated. One year it may carry a Ram's head, another a Bulldog may grace its face.

Boasting a 3-1-1 record the Bulldogs are in second place in the Big Eight Conference.

Head Coach Doug Scovil, former mentor of Sacred Heart, brought the Big Eight co-championship to San Mateo last season in his first year with the college.

The Bulldogs feature a powerful offense—led by Quarterback Neal Dahlen. Fullback Bill Holmgren and halfbacks Jay Johnson and John McGregor add the extra punch that makes the Bulldog attack so deadly.

The Rams go into the game with a less impressive record but lack nothing in the drive it will take to win the game. With Johnny Donham's quick arm and the runs of Wayne Stribling and Charlie "Choo-Choo" Smith the Kiemenmen will give the Bulldogs a run for their money.

The Ram line this year has been plagued with injuries. Starting guards Carl Mitchel and Al Kent were sidelined for the last two games of the season, however, they should be healthy for the San Mateo game.

In the backfield Bob Taylor was lost to the squad for a couple of key games. This hurt the locals' chances because of Taylor's breakaway power.

But, with a healthy team for the San Mateo meeting, the Rams could come home beating a drum.

Spot For Trojans In Rose Bowl Go? 'Maybe Next Time Around'—Wilson

As far as officials of the West Coast Conference are concerned, the picture of the University of Southern California participating in the 1960 edition of the Rose Bowl continues to show a black haze.

Tom Wilson, physical education instructor here, and an official of the conference, was asked recently what the latest reports were on the banning of the Trojan school from the annual post-season classic.

"It is very unlikely that USC will get into the 1960 Rose Bowl because the decision of the officials is not yet fully settled," Wilson said, adding that as a result the ineligibility of the school still stands until January 7, 1960.

"As much as I'd like to comment on this situation," he continued, "there isn't much speculation, mainly because of the fact that my colleagues have not discussed the issue lately."

Asked if he thought the so-called "dirty football" tactics of Trojan guard Mike McKeever on University of California halfback Steve Bates in the recent USC-Cal game had any effect on the Los Angeles school's chances of ever escaping the gloomy restrictions on them, Wilson replied.

"No. As far as individual players and games are concerned, they have nothing to do with the banning. The decision still stands in any event."

Wilson said that although USC's chances are very good (record wise) this year to play in Pasadena on New Year's Day, it is his estimation that they will not be eligible by that date.

As unofficial as Wilson's opinion is, it should still add a smile to the faces of an apparently Rose Bowl-bound University of Washington team.

Block SF Banquet To Host SJ Coach

An address by Bob Tichenal, head football coach at San Jose State College, will spotlight the annual fall banquet of the Block SF Society in Smith Hall on Wednesday night, December 9.

Louis G. Conlan, president of this college, who coached the first Ram basketball team in 1935, will also address the athletes, as will other notable members of the administrative staff here.

Also present at the affair, which begins at 7 p.m., will be the head football coaches of all the San Francisco high schools.

According to Bob Ross, president of the Block SF Society, the main purpose of the presence of the prep coaches is to "promote public relations between the college and the high schools."

During the ceremonies, participants in fall sports here (football, soccer and cross-country) who have earned their Block SF letters this year, will receive their awards.

Filipino Club Leads CAB Loop

The Filipino Club and Zeta Phi fraternity moved into the number one spots in the Club Activities and Inter-Fraternity divisions, respectively, as the second week of intramural basketball play drew to a close.

The Filipinos rose to the top of their heap by way of victories over The Guardsman (33-14) and Newman Club (default).

On the IFC side of the fence, the Zeta Phi quint holds the top rung on this ladder by way of wins over Beta Tau (37-27) and Alpha Phi Epsilon (24-23).

Dave Nigel of the Recreation Association leads the race for scoring honors in the CAB loop, with a total of 32 markers thus far.

Individual performances have not been as high in the IFC circuit, with Lou Cooper's two-game output of 19 points being high on the slate.

Counterpoint

'Uncle' Earl's Antics Repulse La. Voters

By Don Seratti

CAN THE GOVERNOR of a state virtually make a fool of himself in public on several occasions, and at the same time govern his state efficiently?

And if so, can he survive politically while engaging in unorthodox demonstrations that raise doubts as to his leadership ability?

LONG'S DECISION

Practical answers to these questions may have been furnished recently when Earl K. Long, temperamental governor of Louisiana, announced he will not seek re-election in the state's Democratic primary December 5.

The decision probably jolted the state like an earthquake, for when this reporter visited Louisiana in August, Long was actively campaigning for re-election and appeared to be holding his own. Only a few chinks showed in his armor, resulting from his spate of profanity before a state legislature session and subsequent "imprisonment" in a Galveston mental institution.

Intending to circumvent the state's constitution by violating a clause prohibiting two successive terms as governor, Long seemed confident of warding off the advances of his nearest competitor, Mayor Deiesseps Morrison of New Orleans, and serving another four years at Baton Rouge.

Then came his dramatic withdrawal from the race.

In the light of Long's withdrawal, it would be well to examine his recent public behavior to discover just how deleterious an effect it has had on his gubernatorial hopes.

REMARKS AT RALLY

In early August this reporter attended a political rally at Alexandria, La., at which Long was the featured speaker. Following are some of his remarks:

"Y'all came out here to see a crazy man, didn't you? Well, I'm not crazy. I'm just a little high strung, but who ain't?"

"Some people been saying my administration has been taking the people's money. Well, if any of you hear of corruption in my government, you come and tell your Uncle Earl all about it!"

Within a few months the governor has exploded verbally before the state legislature at Baton Rouge, been committed to and released from a mental institution, fired state employees who stood by indifferently during his "imprisonment," and taken an apparently meaningless trip through several Southwestern states.

Replying to medical opinions pronouncing him "definitely insane," Long has said, "Them psychiatrists are as cuckoo as a tree full of owls!"

He has, by his peculiar actions, brought much unfavorable publicity to the state of Louisiana.

LONG'S CONDUCT QUESTIONED

Is this conduct normally expected of a state governor? And are Long's colorful antics serving any useful purpose toward a successful administration of his state? The people of Louisiana are asking these same questions and coming up with a negative answer.

Long's speech at Alexandria was fiery and emotion-packed, in the manner that his late brother Huey used to captivate the masses of Louisiana, but it drew only scattered applause and many boos and catcalls. His appeal to the audience seemed negligible. Curious spectators outnumbered staunch Long backers.

Such cool receptions have greeted Long throughout the state and seem to indicate that the old campaigner is losing his hold on the people. He saw the handwriting on the wall and withdrew from a race he no longer felt he could win.

Long's lengthy tenure in Louisiana politics shows how far a democracy allows a sore to grow before cutting it out. Long was allowed to remain in public office as long as he could sway the electorate of Louisiana. When he withdrew from the race, it was because he realized the people were tiring of his antics and had their own ideas as to who should be governor.

Earl Long had tried to fool all of the people all of the time.

AMS Schedules Bowling League, Men's Smoker

With the completion of Homecoming Week, future plans of the Associated Men Students include continuation of the basketball league, start of a bowling league, and a smoker in January, according to Mike Haskell, AMS president.

To accomplish these aims the full cooperation of all men students, which means a wider participation in AMS activities, is necessary, Haskell added.

AMS meetings are held at 2 p.m. every Thursday in S-111, and Haskell emphasized that any man student interested is invited to attend.

Thespians Rehearse For French Drama Opening January 8

By Tom Wood

Another ghostly dramatic performance, this time in a serious vein, is due when Jean Giraudoux' Intermezzo opens at the Little Theater January 8.

Subtitled The Enchanted, the play concerns the spiritual nature of the unknown as manifested in the thoughts and emotions of a young girl on the threshold of womanhood.

Full of symbolism and allegory, the play delves into philosophy and imagination.

The central character, played by Erika Andre, is Isabel, a girl who represents a nearness and closeness to the spiritual rather than the worldly side of life.

She is pure in heart and is able to see beyond the mundane; her mind is not yet clouded with the material, realistic obsessions of human adulthood.

When she becomes a woman, her beliefs begin to differ and she ultimately passes through into the adult world.

The setting, a provincial French town, becomes the center of interest when things start happening that deviate from the stilted norms of society and government, and the Inspector, played by David Terry, representing government and science, arrives to find out the cause of the "trouble."

As the play progresses, Isabel, through her beliefs in the life of the spirit, evokes a meeting with a real ghost, who promises to reveal to her the mysteries of the unknown.

Meanwhile, as she makes the change to adulthood, she falls in love, and decides to forsake her supernatural experimentation for a more worthwhile life on earth.

As the play closes, one is aware that Giraudoux has woven a paradox into the story, a comparison between the beyond and the realistic world and our place in life, one which incites thought and reflection.

The production entails a cast of 19, much larger than that for Blithe Spirit, which closed recently.

Michael Griffin, drama director, noted that some of the leading roles in the play will be played by the relative newcomers to the Little Theater, while a few of the regulars will step aside into minor parts.

Planned at the outset to be publicized as The Enchanted, a literal adapted name, Griffin decided that the play's original title, Intermezzo, should be used.

Griffin also said that the play is of a timeless nature, transcending year and place, but that the college's production would stick to the old French costuming.

Education Major Patricia Murray Reigns As 1959 Homecoming Queen

Blonde Pati Murray, Homecoming Queen for 1959, began her reign last Friday when she received her crown and trophy during halftime ceremonies at the City College-Modesto football game.

The queen and her attendants, Lynn Egberts, Sandy Hayden, Mary Anne Luchi, Marie Moggia and Diana Robinson were guests of honor at the Homecoming Rally prior to the contest. A gaily decorated car parade escorted the Queen and her court to the game at Kezar Stadium. A 1960 Buick Electra convertible was furnished for the queen by Hal Wade of Spencer Buick Inc.

During halftime, Alumni Association President Douglas Smith crowned the new queen and presented her with a trophy. During her reign she will also have possession of the perpetual trophy which was recently donated by the Alumni Association. Her attendants were similarly honored with trophies.

Queen Pati, who was sponsored by the Block SF Society, is an education major who plans to teach high school. A graduate of Lowell High School, she is a third semester student and will continue her education at San Francisco State College.

Miss Egberts, a second semester science major, was sponsored by Tau Chi Sigma, and will enter the University of California upon graduation from City College. She plans to be a lab technician.

Miss Hayden, a physical education major, will enter the field of teaching and states that San Francisco State College is her choice when she is graduated here. She was sponsored by the Recreation Association.

Miss Luchi is majoring in merchandising during her second semester here. She is a member of Kappa Phi and plans to be a buyer for women's fashions. Her sponsor was Zeta Phi Sigma.

Miss Moggia will continue her education at San Francisco State College. She is majoring in education and will specialize at the elementary level.

Miss Robinson is a commercial art major who will attend San Francisco Academy of Art after graduation. She is affiliated with Phi Beta Rho and was sponsored by Alpha Sigma Delta.

Homecoming Week festivities were organized by Associated Men Students, according to AMS President Mike Haskell.

Activities included a rally featuring the Smothers Brothers, popular recording artists, the Homecoming Queen contest and crowning, and a student-alumni party at the El Portal Cafe.

Judges for the contest were Dean Mary Golding, Counselor Donald Marcus, AMS President Haskell, Associated Women Student President Dawnita Campbell, and Associated Student representative Ron Cook.

Deadeyes Take Sixth Trophy At Pistol Matches

Capturing a first place trophy for the sixth time in a row, the college's Marksman team, pitted against the Coast Guard team from Oakland, scored 996 points out of a possible 1200 at the recent Western Revolver Association pistol matches, held at the Oakland Pistol Club in Knowland Park, according to Martin Novitski, chief of the Campus Police force.

The four-man team was composed of Bill Donovan, Frank Mateo, Alfred Palmer and Richard Wernecke.

Missing the first place trophy by seven points, the Sharpshooter team took second place at the matches with a score of 1058. Competing against the Hamilton Air Force team, the four-man team was composed of Fred Fitzgerald, Richard Gamble, Frances Lorimor and Jim Olson.

In his position as chief of Campus Police, Novitsky asked that any incidents of theft that occur on-campus must have their petitions signed by 15 AS card holders, the student bank, their counselor, the registrar, the Dean of Student Activities or Dean of Women, and the Election Commissioner.

Candidates must also list their party affiliation or be marked on the ballot as non-partisan, regulations state. In addition, candidates must pay a $1 registration fee.

All petitions must be turned in to the dean of student activities office or to Griffin.

According to informed sources, this election is expected to be one of the most hotly contested in many years. "The more competition we have, the better officers we will get," Griffin commented.

Friday College Hour Band Concert Cancelled

A band concert, originally scheduled for this Friday during College Hour, has been cancelled, according to Meyer E. Cahn, director of the college band.

Films thus highlight the College Hour activity, With Dog And Gun and About Dogs And Hunting, to be shown in S-136, Madison Devlin, audio-visual instructor, said.

The pictures, distributed by the Gaines Dog Food Company, are in color and sound, both dealing with the use of dogs in the hunting of duck and quail, Devlin added.

College Hour will be from 10 to 10:40 a.m.

Placement Center Launches Drive For Qualified Workers In Holiday Jobs

An extensive drive for qualified workers was recently launched by the placement center in anticipation of the largest Christmas season in the history of San Francisco, according to Joseph Amori, college placement director.

Positions are still open for sales personnel, stock clerks, delivery men, drivers, cashiers, wrappers, general clerks, and a wide assortment of postal workers, Amori said.

With heavy mail anticipated, the post office has started a drive for thousands of mail carriers, truck drivers and clerks, he added, and requirements are that applicants be at least 18 years of age, be local residents and United States citizens. Veterans will be given preference.

The hourly rate for post office jobs is $1.86 for the day shift and 10 per cent more after 6 p.m. The college bureau hopes to place about 1500 students in San Francisco post offices, Amori said.

Stores are hiring part-time workers now to prepare for the rush, which usually starts around Thanksgiving. Shifts will be full time when the college closes for the Christmas holidays on December 11. The hourly rate for department store jobs is somewhat lower than the government scale: $1.25 to $1.75.

Airlines and railroads are also hiring men, but only to augment the regular group of workers during the holiday rush. The main positions are in the baggage and mail rooms.

Petitions For Twenty Student Offices Due On December 31

Deadline for submitting petitions of candidacy in January's student election is midnight, December 31, Jerry Griffin, Election Commissioner, stated recently.

All 20 Associated Student offices will be available in this semester's elections, which includes AS President, Vice-President, Associated Women Student President, Associated Men Student President and Sophomore and Freshman Class Presidents. Also to be elected are seven sophomore members of council and seven freshman council members.

Petitions of candidacy for these offices can be obtained in the offices of the Dean of Student Activities, S-148; Dean of Women, S-150, and the Associated Students, S-140, Griffin said.

All students with not less than a 2.0 grade average and an AS card are eligible. Candidates for AS President and Vice-President must have completed between 45 and 60 units before taking office for next semester.

Men students who have completed between 30 and 60 units are eligible for the AMS Presidency, and women students with similar qualifications can run for AWS President.

Candidates for Sophomore President must have completed between 30 and 60 units, while Freshman Presidential candidates need to complete a minimum of 15 units but no more than 30 units.

Sophomores wishing to run for Student Council must have completed between 30 and 60 units before taking office while freshman council candidates must have completed at least 12 units but no more than 30.

Candidates for the various offices must have their petitions signed by 15 AS card holders, the student bank, their counselor, the registrar, the Dean of Student Activities or Dean of Women, and the Election Commissioner.

Candidates must also list their party affiliation or be marked on the ballot as non-partisan, regulations state. In addition, candidates must pay a $1 registration fee.

All petitions must be turned in to the dean of student activities office or to Griffin.

According to informed sources, this election is expected to be one of the most hotly contested in many years. "The more competition we have, the better officers we will get," Griffin commented.

Vets, Freshmen Join Forces To Conduct 'Toys For Tots' Drive

Giving a hand to the Veterans Club this semester, members of the Freshman Class volunteered their services for the upcoming "Toys for Tots" drive which begins this Friday, November 20, according to Dick Alcala, Veterans Association president, and Bill Keane, Freshman Class president.

Toys, in repairable condition, will be collected each day at designated spots in the library, Science Hall, and the cafeteria.

Students are asked to contribute any unwanted toy they might have around the house, Alcala said.

Each year, the Marine Corps and Fire Department collect and repair toys, and, with the cooperation of the Veterans Association, have been able to conduct highly successful campaigns in the past, Alcala stated.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Campus Routine Back To Normal As Pledging Ends

By Pat Perkins

ANOTHER Pledge Week has come and gone and happy sorority and fraternity pledges are glad to get into their casual campus clothes once more and leave the memory of pledge outfits as well as Pledge Week in the past.

The sisters of Phi Beta Rho welcomed the following new pledges to their sorority: Sheila Sullivan, pledge captain; Marge Albrecht, Pat Camerond, Margie Costello, Janice Kirk, Madeline Magrini, Gail Schaadt, Judy Wagner and Dolores Welch.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority's pledge class for Fall '59 are Karen Ballard, pledge captain; Jean Giannini, Jean Giannini, Mary Ann Grandemange, Sandy Hays, Kathy Henderson, Barbara Lerman, Mary McElligott, Andi Thuesen and Kay Trent.

According to Dick Pool, pledge president of Alpha Phi Omega, the college's service fraternity, this semester's pledges are Max Moses, Willie Jackson, Sanford Salki, Stan Anderson, Dave Branson and Ernie Fillippo.

Zeta Chi sorority's new pledges include Sue Blue, pledge captain; Artys Colton, Rosemarie Haas, Phyliss Hutler and Pat Randuch.

Approximately 225 members of the Merchandising Club attended a dinner at the Chief Petty Officers' Mess at Treasure Island last Sunday.

More information will be given concerning the club's Christmas dinner at the meeting during College Hour this Friday.

Absence of students with outstanding dramatic ability and devotion to the job is the chief factor for inactivity of the college's now almost defunct drama fraternity, Delta Psi Omega, according to Michael Griffin, sponsor.

Students may become eligible for the fraternity, which is one of the few nationally recognized ones on campus, when they attain certain standards of performance, have appeared in at least two productions, and, Griffin stressed, show a willingness to take over behind-the-scene jobs such as wardrobe caretaker or technical director, and see the job through.

Tom Wilson, Jordy Cooney, Dave Terry, Leah Pashaion and Bill Forshay were named as the remaining members, but the organization has no officers, Griffin said.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S-304.

War Of Ideas Hints Changing Values In South

By Don Seratti

A REGION trying to adapt itself to a changing world and still retain its highly valued traditions, is a reasonably accurate description of the South today.

The South can also be termed an ideological battleground, on which conservative and liberal concepts clash almost every day.

Overshadowing all other issues in the South's turbulent daily affairs is the racial question—what is and what should be the relationship between whites and Negroes?

Right now there can be no single answer, no generalizations, since what applies to Virginia may have very little relevance to Mississippi.

The following points, therefore, cannot speak for the South in general. They are, however, impressions formed by the writer after spending the past summer in Arkansas, which in many ways reflects the attitude of other Southern states.

1. There exists among almost everyone the feeling that despite recent governmental interference, there is a peaceful and harmonious relationship—a sense of understanding—between whites and Negroes, dating back to pre-Civil War days.

2. This fond recollection rests on the premises that the "Negro has a place" in society, and that Negroes are racially inferior to whites.

3. People thus are inclined to make generalizations about Negroes, claiming, for example, that "all Negroes" are lazy, dishonest, or irresponsible.

4. While regarding Negroes in this light, white people feel a strong sense of responsibility toward them, virtually treating them as children and feeling an obligation to provide for them.

5. There is almost no hatred and very little friction between races, and not nearly as much race consciousness as Northerners are led to believe.

6. White citizens fight to maintain school segregation because they fear the lowering of educational standards that will come with a mass influx of comparatively uneducated Negroes.

7. Many people feel that forced integration "hurts the Negroes more than it helps them. It has set them back considerably."

8. Some steadfast segregationists are boasting enough to do things that would have been inconceivable in the "Old South." Many white parents now prefer limited integration in their children's schools to no schools at all.

9. The people want to be left to solve their own racial problems, free from the intervention of the Supreme Court and agitation by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, both of which are deeply disliked.

10. White defenders of "white supremacy," when their system is assailed, invariably point a recriminating finger at the North and its overwhelming amount of racial tension and discrimination.

11. The most rabid segregationists

Beta Tau's Annual Mistletoe Mingle Dec. 4 Features Sal Vance's Music

Keeping alive a 13-year-old tradition, Beta Tau fraternity will present its annual dance, Mistletoe Mingle, on Friday, December 4, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight at Beach Chalet, 1000 Great Highway.

Admission will be $2 per couple, according to Beta Tau officers, whether an Associated Student card is presented or not.

Tickets may be purchased at the dance, or more conveniently from Beta Tau representatives at the college, especially, at a table situated at the east exit of the cafeteria.

Sal Vance's orchestra will contribute musically to the Yule affair, and the dress is to be semi-formal.

The dance idea was started in 1946 by Beta Tau member Don Langendorf, Dick Zingmark, current vice-president, said. It was first held at the then Edgewater Beach ballroom, and has been given in essentially the same manner ever since, always semi-formal and always capturing the spirit of the holiday season.

Christmas decorations and refreshments will be available, and the usual abundant turnout is again expected, Zingmark said.

Santa Claus will also be on hand to help out with ticket sales, Zingmark said.

Another Beta Tau tradition, the Christmas tree at the Silver Pole, which the fraternity later donates to an orphanage, will be joined this year by another tree, prominently located in the square.

Zingmark added, "Publicity-wise, we have no real difficulty for the past (dance) results speak for themselves; however, we do have some unusual things planned to plug the affair."

Beta Tau officers for this semester are Pelley Falk, president; Dan Durst, treasurer; Mike Lazzari, recording secretary; Jim Arlin, corresponding secretary; Herb Lebherz, historian; Frank Harrison, custodian, and Jerry Kucserka, morale booster.

Thanksgiving . . . For The Things We Do NOT Have

By Bob Paolini

TOMORROW, on a holiday uniquely American as turkey and pumpkin pie, the people of this country will pause briefly from their daily routines in factories and offices, shops and classrooms, to utter traditional words of thanks for the blessings we seem to take so matter-of-factly the rest of the year.

It is all too human for each of us to give a half-hearted, half-felt thanks for the many freedoms we enjoy without stopping to consider what they really mean, and what struggles, internal and foreign, the nation has endured to preserve them.

In a time when even the basic human freedoms are mocked and distorted in many parts of the world, it would be well if, in a sincere attempt to realize how truly fortunate we are, we listed not the usual array of blessings bestowed upon America, but instead offered thanks for the things it doesn't have.

We have no military junta that can, if more desirable, reverse the outcome of an election the day after it has occurred.

We have no secret police who can snatch a man away from his home.

We have no firing squads to snuff out the life of anyone who might have voiced disapproval of the government.

We have no puppet leader running the country on orders issued from some distant capital.

We have no divided cities being ruled by a group of foreign powers.

We have no concentration or slave labor camps. We have no peoples' communes.

We have no fanatical leader hurling, with the ferocity of an animal, violent denunciation at other nations.

We have no one-man, unopposed, dictate-all government.

Certainly, however, there is no one fool enough to declare that America is a perfect country—without faults. This nation, as any other, has its problems. It has its racial tensions, its labor conflicts, its political scandals and its prejudices.

And yet America, though plagued by these problems, by civil strife, by disrespect for the law, by abuse of the very freedoms we so haughtily brag of to other nations, yet America still holds a unique place among the nations of the world.

Why?

The answer, and one that we might remember tomorrow and the tomorrows after it, may, perhaps, be found in Emerson who declared:

"America is but another name for opportunity."

Deadline For AS Officers Moved To December 30

Deadline for petitions of candidacy in January's student elections has been moved up to midnight, December 30, in order to conform with The Guardsman deadlines, Jerry Griffin, Election Commissioner, stated recently.

Six Associated Student offices and 14 seats on the council will be contested in the elections, scheduled for January 11 and 12.

Regulations dealing with political parties, which were passed last year, require that any group of three or more students who combine for mutual political support must be registered as a political party. Any individual candidates will be listed on the ballot as non-partisan.

In addition, political parties must file a statement of expenditures by midnight, January 15.

Candidates are reminded that petitions can be obtained in the offices of the Dean of Student Activities, S-148, Dean of Women, S-150, and the Associated Students, S-140, Griffin said.

After getting the required signatures of 15 AS card holders, the student bank, their counselor, the registrar, the Dean of Student Activities or Dean of Women, and the Election Commissioner, candidates must turn their petitions in to S-148 or to Griffin.

Applicants For Fall '59 State Scholarships Must File Now For December, January Tests

Students planning to apply for California State scholarships for Fall '59 must secure a form from Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150. Applications for the scholastic aptitude test, which is given December 5 and January 9, must be filed immediately so tickets of admission to the test will be in the student's hand before the above dates.

Qualifications for the scholarship are as follows: an applicant must be a high school graduate, less than 21 years of age, a resident of California and have financial need for the scholarship.

The applicant must have demonstrated high moral character, good citizenship and dedication to American ideals.

Each competitive scholarship is for an amount equal to necessary fees and tuition, to a maximum of $600, Dean Golding said.

Students who have completed one semester or more of college are not required to send a high school transcript to the commission in Sacramento. A college record shall be considered qualifying if the applicant has received a 2.5 grade average based on a 4.0 scale.

The tests will be given, Dean Golding said, at one of the following places: San Francisco State College, University of San Francisco, Washington High, and Lincoln High, and a fee of $6 is required to take the test.

Dean Golding added that the deadline for the letters of application for scholarships offered this semester at the college is this weekend. The Florence Louis Scholarship for Women, Chinese Students Club Scholarship, and the National Council of Jewish Women are the only three scholarships offered this semester.

The scholarship offered by the Chinese Club is for any man or woman student, not necessarily Chinese. It is for an amount of $50. The Florence Louis Scholarship is for women who have completed 15 units with at least a 2.0 average. The Jewish scholarship is for an amount of $300.

All the scholarships are awarded as a need and on a character and leadership basis.

All The Trimmings

H&R To Serve Turkey Dinners Here Today

A holiday treat will be awaiting students and faculty of the college today preceding Thanksgiving vacation, when turkey with "all the trimmings" will be served as the main luncheon in the cafeteria, according to Pierre Coste, executive chef of the college Hotel and Restaurant division.

Fifteen 25-pound turkeys prepared by the advanced members of the Hotel and Restaurant division will be served with candied yams, cranberry sauce and buttered peas. Served as an extra attraction are the favorite holiday pies, pumpkin mince and apple, Coste declared.

The executive chef pointed out, "There will be no change in the serving procedure of the cafeteria." Only one entree will be served in the cafeteria from 10:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m., which will cost the expected 600 student 65 cents each.

IRC Offers Two $50 Scholarships

Foreign students will be offered two $50 scholarships this semester from the proceeds of the International Relations Club's fair last November 6, according to Joseph M. Jacobsen, IRC sponsor.

On the basis of financial tabulations, the number of scholarships and their amount was determined by a committee composed of Sarwan Gill, IRC president; Mario Gutierrez, former IRC president, and Jacobsen.

Students applying for the two scholarships must meet the following requirements: have a temporary visa, possess scholastic ability, show financial need and be an active member of IRC.

After applications have been made, the final selection will be made by four judges. Applications are due in S-186 by Friday, December 4.

Card Sales Reach 2375, Still 125 Short Of Goal

Approximately 2375 Associated Student cards have been sold. The goal of 2500 AS cards has not been reached as yet, and, according to Deanna Gutierrez there is little possibility of reaching it at this time.

Miss Gutierrez also said that she and Bill Ideker are working together on an idea of posters to arouse student interest in AS cards and to remind them of the goal of 2500 cards.

A lost AS card may be reported to Frances Sullivan in the student bank in Smith Hall. She will strike the card number from the records so that it may not be used again, and with the payment of one dollar, a new card is issued.

Holiday Job No Excuse For Cutting

Regular attendance regulations will be enforced during the month of December, particularly before and after the Christmas holidays, according to John Brady, pictured at left, co-ordinator, division of student welfare.

Students with part-time jobs or who have obtained Christmas employment will not be excused for cutting classes during this period.

Every year prior to the Yule season, Brady said, many students sacrifice class attendance for employment interests and some leave the college for the holiday vacation before the designated time. Students who follow this practice will be doing so at their own risk.

CJCSGA Passes Eight Resolutions In State Meeting

Controversial issues such as a recommendation for action by the State Board of Education to initiate student activity assessment legislation marked the final General Assembly of the California Junior College Student Government Association State Conference at the Claremont Hotel, Berkeley, last Saturday.

With 65 colleges participating from all over the state, the three-day meeting passed eight out of ten resolutions, including the above mentioned recommendation which would indicate to the State Board of Education that the Junior College leaders are in favor of "enabling legislation" which would permit colleges to set their own student activities assessments and make them mandatory.

Other important issues included a recommendation to the State Athletic Committee that they should review athletic conferences with a view to reorganization on the basis of geographic location, size, and facilities. After acrimonious discussion, this measure was defeated, 37 being against 19 for and 7 abstaining.

One resolution commending Dr. Frank Martinez of Citrus Junior College for his efforts both journalistically and as an adviser on behalf of student government in California passed unanimously.

Straw votes passed responsibility for a committee on Public Relations to next semester's host college, San Diego Junior College.

The publicity resolution was moved by the college's delegation. However, budgetary considerations requiring authorization by the Finance workshop made it necessary to change the resolution to a suggestion to be acted upon by the host college.

A new precedent was set when the Publications workshop voted to abolish itself in favor of a Publicity workshop every semester in place of the present alternating routine.

The session was closed with an installation of officers luncheon with Deli Fox from San Diego Junior College as next semester's State Conference Chairman.

A speech by the noted educator, Dr. Tully Knoles, keynoted the three-day conference as the 84-year-old chancellor of College of the Pacific related the growth of student government against a background of history.

On the problem of hazing, now under fire in California colleges, Dr. Knoles commented that "No adult group would ever do a thing of that sort."

Stressing the point that the democratic ideal was the safeguard of the public school system, he added, "Thank God, we have no system of education." The doctor then quoted Napoleon's boast that all the schools in France taught the same thing at the same time on the same day. This could not occur here because of the democratic principles of education, he added.

Sparse Little Theater Turnouts Indicate Student Indifference

EXCELLENT ACTING coupled with dramatic staging was the consensus of the viewers who recently enjoyed the Little Theater's production of Blithe Spirit. The only jarring note was:

Where was the audience?

There are many reasons for students to fail to see performances but few of these have validity for four weekends. When only three or four hundred students come to see eight performances of a fine production then there is something wrong somewhere.

We cannot believe that it is the fault of the Little Theater since the actors there have regularly been commended for their fine work and imaginative direction.

It is, despite argument, not the fault of the publicity since there is constant coverage in various media ranging from The Guardsman to downtown papers to radio and television as well as ubiquitous signs and gimmicks.

Therefore, the fault must lie with the students themselves and their oft-proven apathy toward attending any college event.

This is not only indicative of a lack of spirit but of a lack of taste. The idea that a college production is not worth the time and effort to attend is fallacious and immature.

We hope, therefore, that close attention will be paid to the next production and that the student body will have the discrimination and judgment necessary to eliminate excuses and start showing their appreciation of the dramatic efforts of their own Little Theater.

'Brass Hat' Also Instructor, Dons AF Blue In Annual Rodeo

Doubling in brass, John P. Lippitt, instructor at the college and active Air Force reservist, shed his business suit and donned his flying suit last weekend to take part in the third annual Continental Air Command Troop Carrier Rodeo at Ellington Air Force Base, Texas.

Lippitt, business administration instructor by week and Air Force major by weekend, performed as a navigator with the 349th Troop Carrier Wing from Hamilton Air Force Base, California.

The rodeo, known as the "world series of Reserve Troop Carrier wing competitions," was conducted to increase the tactical proficiency and determine the efficiency of the current air reserve training program.

Fourteen troop carrier units from all over the continent participated in the competition. The units, with three aircraft in each, flew five missions, one of which was a navigation mission over the Gulf of Mexico.

The competition culminated with the precision parachuting of single 260-pound aerial re-supply bundles on a pre-designated drop zone 1200 feet below. Using the Computed Air Release Point system which does not allow the use of instruments, accuracy for the drop depended on the navigator's skill in computing winds.

Some 350 men, including five-man crews for each aircraft and a five-man ground crew for each three aircraft unit, participated in the event.

It is as easy for the strong man to be strong, as it is for the weak to be weak.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Beauty Reigns At Homecoming

HOMECOMING QUEEN—Pretty Pati Murray (center), an education major, reigned as the fairest of beauties when she was crowned the '59 Homecoming Queen during halftime ceremonies at the college-Modesto game.

Lynn Egberts (left) and Mary Ann Luchi, Pati's attendants, were runners-up for the title. Sandy Hayden, Marie Maggio and Diana Robinson were the remaining members of the court.

The Queen was selected on the basis of beauty, poise, intelligence and personality.

Miss Murray's first official duty was to present trophies to the three best decorated cars in the parade that preceded the game.

The Ram gridders paid her apt tribute by downing the Modesto eleven, 20-14.

At game's end, she kissed the game's outstanding player, Carl Mitchell.

Pati, sponsored by the Block Society, insisted the bit of bliss was a matter of poetic justice. "I owe the crown to Carl," she said; "he persuaded me to enter the contest."

Miss Murray, a third semester student here, plans to continue her education at San Francisco State.

After graduating from Lowell High, she worked for a year at the Telephone Company. She currently works at the United Shoppers Exclusive on Alemany Boulevard.

Call Of The Wild Blue Yonder

Doctor-Flyer Seeks 'New Blood' For Air Force Aviation Program; Aptitude Tests Slated For January

By Jim Clifford

Nothing is certain in life but death and taxes . . . and aptitude tests. Today, one may trace the major steps of his lifetime by the aptitude tests he's taken. He will be subjected to one upon entering high school, college, the armed forces, and, finally, when he embarks upon his chosen career . . . and there are probably many minor ones, too.

Actually, the aptitude test is relatively recent. It was perfected during World War II by the then "Army" Air Force, and one of the men responsible for giving birth to the test was here last week to announce he will be giving one on the afternoon of January 21.

Colonel W. "Doc" Bailey, officer-in-charge of Air Force recruiting in Northern California, will conduct the test, designed to select prospective members for the Air Force Aviation Cadet Program.

"The test has no obligatory stigma to it," Bailey stated; "anyone wishing to take it merely for the challenge may. It will consist mainly of math, current events and mechanics."

Those interested must register at Dean Ralph Hillsman's office; the time and room of the tests have not yet been designated. "It will be on the afternoon of January 21," the Colonel said; "that is the only thing certain thus far."

The tests are part of the Air Force scheme of procuring new blood for its pilot and navigator program. An Air Force career day will be held here on January 15 when Bailey and his men will hawk their wares.

This Guardsman staffer was the target of the military sales "pitch" administered by Bailey and his San Francisco recruiter salesman, Master Sergeant Stanley Allen. The retirement plan, travel, fringe benefits and the surprisingly high Air Force reenlistment rate of 60 per cent were all tossed his way.

After the airmen learned that this writer had been "sold" once and "did not need anymore" they got down to a more interesting subject—namely Bailey himself, a Steve Canyon type who has done wartime flying all over the world.

The Colonel is a former obstetrician who found flying planes more rewarding, and left his native Missouri for the wild blue yonder. The dynamic officer has been in almost every major country in the world, flown dozens of different aircraft, become a command pilot, and worked with the psychological research section in developing the aptitude test.

He, a véteran of 27 years, deplores the thought of his impending retirement; he claims he's having too much fun. He calls the Air Force one big "fraternity."

When asked what the most exciting experience he ever had in the "fraternity" was, he revealed one of the most interesting stories in the cold war.

In 1954 Bailey was used as a test case by the State Department. The US wanted to know how a military tourist would fare behind the Iron Curtain. The department could get

Shots At Random

By Vicky Aumann

NOVEMBER is the month of midterms, Thanksgiving, cold weather, cranberries and Homecoming. The Thanksgiving holiday will be here tomorrow and the time is now ripe for clearing up any misconceptions concerning the traditions of this holiday.

First, the Pilgrims did not have turkey or pumpkin pie at the first Thanksgiving feast.

Legend has it that on the first Thanksgiving Day, Governor Bradford dubbed "pie of the pumpkin" as Prince of Thanksgiving Day. However, a fellow in the crowd, an American, protested vigorously with the Governor the fact that His Excellency could not praise pumpkin pie because he and his fellow Americans would not realize for at least another 50 years that pumpkin can be made into pie.

This rebel was of course rushed right off to the stocks. But he was right. The Pilgrims did know that the Indians grew a squashlike fruit, similar to the European pumpkin, between the rows in their maize fields. But it was considered Injun food, hog fuel.

It took 50 years for the first white woman to try mashed pumpkin in a pie, and even then, there is reason to believe that she was really halfway expecting to poison her husband.

The older encyclopedia accounts of the first Thanksgiving say that Governor Bradford sent four men out to bring turkeys back for the feast and that turkeys were prominently featured. But scholars now find no mention of turkeys in contemporary accounts of the occasion.

The people who were there later recalled to acquaintances elsewhere in the colonies that they sat down to venison, small birds, eels, mussels, clams, leeks, watercress and wild plums. It would have been just as appropriate to make the eel the symbol of the Thanksgiving celebration.

Glad to say we're conformists and non-historians and still believe in legends.

• • •

ANOTHER old-time legend which has now been shaken by professional faith shakers concerns the father of American history.

George Washington didn't chop down that cherry tree. The whole story was made up by a moralist, years after Washington's death.

And another legend — Sitting Bull was not a great war chief. He was only a medicine man, a politician. He sat in his tent with his women and his children during the Custer fight on the Little Big Horn. The real war chief, Gall, later described Sitting Bull as an old woman.

And finally, Barbara Frietchie didn't shout out of the window at Stonewall Jackson, "Shoot if you must, this old grey head, but spare your country's flag." She wrote a sharp letter to the editor of the local paper, instead, but it was never published because no one could read her handwriting.

• • •

ONE MORE THING about pumpkins. The expression "pumpkin head" dates back to an early law requiring that a man's hair be cropped back to the edges of his cap or hat. Down New York way, where they always felt superior, they used to say that folks up in New England wore half a pumpkin shell when they had their hair trimmed.

It was probably the very first way of saying beatnik.

'If You Don't Understand It, Ban It' Rule Of Vigilant Citizen Newsstand Cleanup Drive

The rule of thumb which appears to guide the shaky hand of keepers of the public morals remains steadfastly the criterion of immorality: "If you don't understand it, ban it."

For some unexplained reason, sin has been irretrievably linked since its origin with biological phenomena to produce a refined sense of the immoral: the suggestion. When we wish to say something is dirty, we say it is "suggestive."

The normally curious child, not yet imbued with this fearful epithet, will ask naively, "Suggestive of what?" Upon being told what, he comes to a logical conclusion that his life is inextricably involved with suggestion, or more specifically, dirt.

This hypothetical kid, being precocious, doesn't stop there but goes on to an even more logical conclusion; that fact is distinct from fancy and that the attempt to fuse them is in the first place an unforgivable stupidity. He is then able to laugh and remain healthy, pitying his more unfortunate brethren.

demand for smut is far outstripping the supply.

Rather than penetrate the gaudy covers of these literary flesh pots (thus opening themselves up to an acute self-appraisal that may or may not bear them out) to the real social reasons behind their existence, the morally righteous, whose standards of judgment and taste are usually not far removed from those of the girlie magazine connoisseurs themselves, seek to purify so that everyone, especially children, will be able to "read clean."

The attitude persists, and continues to subvert great classic works dealing quite understandably with the powerful forces of erotica, that there is a large and definable line between black and white, good and evil, sin and its absence.

It would be obvious to the most casual observer that this line of demarcation is but a figment of the imagination, existing solely within the phantasies of insecure mentalities.

Foresight

By Pete Burr

ONCE again the age-old question of obscenity bathes in the limelight of the front page press with the recent and much publicized formation of a citizens' "vigilante" committee organized for the purpose of ridding magazine racks of "suggestive" literature.

Looking at the problem somewhat obliquely, as is the policy of this column, the general consensus is that the girlies are in for a rough time again at the hands of the morally indignant.

The immediate aim of the group is based on a well-meaning endeavor to clean up newsstands, thereby making them safe for children. They apparently have not reflected very thoroughly upon the implications of this nor have they delved very deeply into their own consciences for an answer to the unanswerable of just what, exactly, constitutes obscenity.

Banning and book burning are the first measures turned to when the situation arrives at a point where the

Letters to the Editor

Ram's Horn

•Soccer Champs

Editor, The Guardsman:

It has come to my attention that the City College soccer team has the best record in their league, yet they are not being allowed to play back east. Instead, the second best team, University of San Francisco, has this fine opportunity. How can this situation be changed, and if it can be changed, is some action going to be taken?

Susan Shawl

(Editor's Note: The Rams' winning soccer record stands at 6-0-1 and is as follows: University of San Francisco 3-0, Stanford 3-2, Santa Clara 9-0, San Francisco State 6-0, Cal Aggies 6-2, San Jose State 6-2 and a scoreless tie with the University of California. The Rams have not won a soccer title since entering into major competition in 1942. As to "how this situation can be changed," see Ramblings, Page 3.)

Rams Nail Down 1st Soccer Crown

Locals Belt Out San Jose, 6-2, For First Loop Title In 25 Years

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

BALBOA STADIUM, Nov. 21.—It may well have happened about a month too early, but Roy Diederichsen's red-hot soccer express hung a diamond star atop the Silver Anniversary Christmas tree here today, bringing home the first conference boot crown in the college's history.

A determined San Jose State eleven quickly had all visions of upsetting the Red and White applecart erased from their minds, and fell to the wayside by a 6-2 count after all was said and done.

Despite the experts' opinion that the Spartans would give the Rams a good run for their money, it was strictly "no contest" all the way.

Six minutes into the opening period San Jose fullback Bob Meyers was cited for hands in the box and although the high-scoring Jimmy Lynch was unable to kiss the meshing on his free kick he still set the stage for the first local tally.

Spartan goalie Gary Foss got a big chest in front of Jimmy's charity boot, but was unable to maintain control of the slippery leather and a host of white shirts stormed the State treasure chest, with Lynch belting through the counter to set the mark at 1-0.

Four minutes later it was Lynch all over again as the scrappy inside marksman showed true on a 25-foot blast, and 2-0.

San Jose may have been sick and tired of Mister Lynch and his antics by this time, but he had more in store for them. "Jumpin' Jim-ny" casually tore the leather from the spheroid two minutes later for a 35-foot tally, and 3-0.

As the opening period drew to a close it was completely apparent that the rugged Spartan had been stripped of his armor and was being led into the slaughter house like a timid lamb.

Six minutes into the second quarter John Fouladi hit on a 12-foot cross-fire for 4-0, and the butcher had buried his knife into the sheep's awaiting throat.

At this point it seemed likely that the Rams would run their final count into two columns, but the southerners buckled down their defensive unit and the score remained at 4-0 as the boys left the turf for the half-time intermission.

Six minutes and a half into the third stanza the Spartans finally managed to get themselves a spot on the scoreboard as Joe Batigli found the mark on a free kick, but less than a minute later, Fouladi rammed through a 15-foot explosion to make it 5-1, Rams.

Throughout the final quarter winning the affair seemed no longer the quest of the San Jose gang—it was now a matter of lessening the amount of humiliation.

Little Abdul Mashal had this in mind all the way as he popped in a 20-footer for 5-2, thereby giving the Spartans a dim, outside prayer—a possibly evening the battle and sending the fray into an overtime period.

When Vince Liu capped the scoring from eight feet out on a jam pattern with 11:24 remaining, however, the trumpeter had played his last tune, and a 6-2 Ram soccer win was in the books.

USF has been dethroned at last. The handicappers said that it couldn't be done, but little David got his Goliath in spite of it all.

Hard-Nosed Grid Star Closes Out Big Eight Career

Last Saturday afternoon against San Mateo on the Bulldogs' field, guard Al Kent closed out a spectacular football career here as one of the finest linemen ever to don a Ram gridiron uniform.

Kent has been a pain in the side of the opposition all season long, and was quoted by head coach Grover Klemmer as "a really hard-nosed player."

The big 6-ft., 205-lb. stalwart started his football career at St. Ignatius High School in 1955. In his junior year, he gained All-City honors with the Wildcats.

Upon graduation from the parochial school in 1957, he came here that fall, and played outstanding ball for Klemmer that year.

After his first tour with the Red and White he enrolled at the University of California, where he was classified as a "red shirt," being ineligible because he was on loan from City College.

Coming back to the Ram forces this fall, Kent has been a workhorse in the line and has been stubborn to the enemy when it came to running plays on his side of the wall.

"Klemmer said that Kent, besides being an outstanding player for the Rams this year, has also been outstanding academically speaking. He has far more superior grades than anyone would expect from an athlete. And just to sum things up on him, he's a "very nice guy to know off the field as well as on."

Tough Breaks Mar Ram Grid Season

With the grid season now over, it is fitting to recall some of the high points of the season for the Rams.

The locals lost some tough ones, but win or lose, the other teams knew they had to do their best to beat the fighting Ram eleven.

Stockton came to town and finally beat the Rams, but not after a few breaks helped them. The locals traveled to Oakland and were beaten by a vicious Thunderbird attack. This was the low point of the season for the Red and White.

At Sacramento the locals lost a heart-breaker by one point. This was one of two they lost by that margin.

Modesto came to town for the Rams' Homecoming game. This one was tied in the last quarter with time running out, but a last-ditch pass pulled the show out for the locals, 20-14.

The Rams had very bad luck this year. They lost their opening game against Los Angeles Valley in the waning moments. In the L.A. City tilt they lost by one point; a missed p.a.t. Over the whole season the breaks just haven't come their way.

For All-Conference, The Guardsman sports staff selects the following team:

Center ..... Everett Stein, CCSF
Guard ..... Carl Mitchell, CCSF
Guard ..... Lloyd Dickey, San Mateo
Tackle ..... Harold Swenson, Modesto
Tackle ..... Clark Miller, Oakland
End ..... Mel Oliver, CCSF
End ..... Larry Leitch, San Mateo
Back ..... Ray Johnson, Oakland
Back ..... Ray Hall, Stockton
Back ..... Overton Williams, Oakland
Back ..... Charlie Smith, CCSF

The official All-Conference roster will be released from the office of League Commissioner, Russell L. Azara, sometime during the middle of next month.

RICH "DYNAMITE" DeLEON sets off a big charge in the Rams' recent Homecoming contest against Modesto. Rugged Rich scampered 18 yards to the one on this play to set up the first local score as Bob Simi (82) and Wayne Stribling look on. The Rams won, 20-14.

Mateans Trample Across Ram Cleat Forces, 56-14

By Doug Cathcart

SAN MATEO, Nov. 21.—Rumbling down the gridiron with the speed and power of a panzer division, the San Mateo Bulldogs racked up a 56-14 win over the Rams at San Mateo today.

This massacre was the worst the Rams have ever been dealt by a San Mateo team. The Rams, plagued by a weak defense and penalty flags, let the Bulldogs cross the goal line eight times. In the second quarter there were flags flying on 11 consecutive plays against the Rams.

Early in the first quarter CSM started the victory drive rolling on a pass from Neal Dahlen to Larry Leitch on the 11, who went over for the first Mateo score. The point after touchdown attempt was stopped by a determined Ram line.

Shortly thereafter another pass from Dahlen, this time to Jim Rhodes, went for 33 yards and the second TD with the p.a.t. good, the score stood at 14-0.

The third San Mateo scoring play was set up by a pass from Dahlen to Rhodes on the 17, who packed the pigskin to the 8. The score was made by halfback Rich Weiler who went over left tackle to move the score once again; this time to 20-0.

The still undaunted Rams finally scored via a 3-yard run over tackle by Charlie Smith. A line plunge by Dennis Bates for the p.a.t. brought the score to 20-8.

Halfback John McGregor of San Mateo intercepted a City aerial attempt on the Ram 30 and hustled over for the td. The failure of the p.a.t. left the score at 26-8. Late in the first half the Mateo men scored once again on a 32-yard pass from Dahlen to Jim Rhodes and at the end of the first half the score stood at an impressive 32-8 in favor of San Mateo.

To keep the bang-up affair going in the third quarter Dahlen threw a seven pass from the 20 to Bob Kennedy who scurried over for the score. Bob Floyd carried for the p.a.t. and the score rose again.

With the count reading 40-8 for the Bulldogs, McGregor of San Mateo intercepted a Ram pass and ran 40 yards for the score. A successful pass completion accounted for the extra two points. This raised the slaughter sheet to 48-8.

The prelude to the final San Mateo score can be attributed to a pass deflected by Bob Floyd into the hands of Jerry Scott. On the next play Jack Cecchi went over for six and the ridiculous margin stood at 56-8.

In the last minute of "glory" Dennis Bates on a keeper plunged for the Rams' second and last counter.

Winding up an unimpressive 3 win-4 loss season, the Rams were exceptionally vulnerable to the sharp and sure passing of San Mateo qb Neal Dahlen. Dahlen, hitting 8 out of 14, was protected by a front wall of exceptional strength and had all the time in the world to get his passes away.

The Ram line, sparked by captain Carl Mitchell, made a fair showing for itself, but the secondary seemed to be vulnerable against the Bulldogs.

Cagers Ready For Conference Frays

With the football season over, attention in the sports world turns to basketball, and the Rams are no exception to this rule.

Activity in the men's gymnasium has reached a fever pitch, with the hardwood court rocking in rhythm to the bouncing spheroid.

Ram cage hopefuls are sharpening their "eyes" and getting into shape for the upcoming Big Eight hoop circuit.

Head Coach Sid Phelan has begun to bring his charges out of their off-season stiffness, now that regular practice has started.

The Ram hoop schedule offers many prizes for the play this year. Among the honors to be gained on the tour are Santa Maria and Modesto Tourneys and the State Eliminations, if they cop the Big Eight title.

The season begins officially Tuesday, December 1, with a game at Stanford with the Braves.

Banquet Climaxes Fall Sports Season

Athletes participating in fall sports at the college will be honored at the semi-annual Block SF Society banquet Wednesday night, December 9, at Smith Hall.

Featured speaker for the event is Bob Tichenal, head football coach at San Jose State. He will address the group, which will include all the prep coaches of San-Francisco.

President Louis G. Conian and other college notables will also be present at the dinner.

Bob Ross, president of the Block Society, hopes that the affair will promote good relations with the prep coaches, who can put in a good word for the college with their athletes.

Approximately 65 Block SF awards will be given to members of the football, soccer and cross-country teams. This is the high point of the season for the college when it is able to bestow on these men recognition by students and faculty for a good performance as representatives of the college in their respective sports.

The dinner will begin at 7 p.m., with the awards presentation and speeches following.

This is a fitting climax for the season which had the college's soccer team come out tops in their league. The football and cross-country teams also had seasons of which the college can be proud, Ross said.

RA Excels In 3 Fields At Meet

Members of the Recreation Association excelled in archery, swimming and volleyball during Foothill Junior College's Sports Day, November 7.

Out of the 10 Bay Area two-year colleges that participated, City College placed third in archery, fourth in swimming and fourth in volleyball.

Arrangements are now being made for the RA Sports Day which shall be held in the women's gymnasium here Saturday, December 5. Twelve two-year colleges have been invited, with approximately 250 expected to attend. The following sports are scheduled for the event: volleyball, badminton, tennis, archery and bowling, according to Elizabeth Wirth, RA sponsor.

Ramblings

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

WITH Grover Klemmer and his grid kids still harmonizing "Matilda, she take all me money, run Venezuela," the Red and White soccer forces kicked off a wing-ding celebration last Saturday morning that should run clear on through Mardi Gras time.

As a result of the booters' clouting of San Jose State on that glorious a.m., Roy Diederichsen's lads brought home the first soccer conference loving cup in the entire history of the Phelan Avenue plant.

It was a banner day indeed for Ram bleacher kickers, which in addition ignited a golden bonfire on the Silver year of athletic endeavor out at Ocean and Phelan.

Now comes the big question:

How come the NCAA gives a big pat on the back to Daddy Roy, pops with that "an admirable performance, old chap" nonsense, but, comes time to send a local representative back to Connecticut for the National Eliminations, the locals are politely told that they may pound sand.

The NCAA didn't seem to concern itself so greatly with the fact that this is a two-year college when they awarded All-American honors to so many of our boys in years gone by, nor did they when it came time to collect those annual membership dues.

Now that the Rams have plucked the gold ring from the association's merry-go-round, the boys want to break open a new deck and start from scratch again.

The best of luck to Angie Donahue and his USF Dons back in Storrs. May they hold the banner of West Coast soccer up there on top where it belongs.

Lee Elsan told a story the other night that is so terrifically humorous that to forego it would be a cardinal sin in anybody's book.

It seems that during the latter part of last May the Ram diamond skipper and his four-year-old son, Danny, were out on a shopping tour in search of baseball gear for the local nine.

It had been a tedious afternoon all the way, and, following fruitless trips to Texdahl and Johnson, Free-Minetti and Missoni's, Lee and Danny found themselves on the fourth floor of the Emporium heading for the sporting goods department.

The whole ordeal had been too much for little Danny to contend with, and he was willing beyond description.

"Pappa Els," a master strategist if there ever was one, is no bush-leaguer in the field of child psychology, however, and had this one in the palm of his teeny hand.

"Now you just settle down for a minute, and daddy'll buy you a coke as soon as we get out of here."

"I don't want no coke."

"All right. We'll get ourselves a big chocolate milk shake, then."

And from the mouths of babes come the words—"I don't want no coke, I don't want no milk shake—I want a beer!"

Lee Elsan went home with a red face in place of the expected baseball equipment. That's all, brother.

Old Age Claim Rubs Out Game

A tradition was broken at the college when the soph-prof basketball game was foregone this year, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities.

Reasons given were that the faculty claims old age and the sophomore team lost almost all the time. In the history of the game the students won the classic only once.

The "official" resignation of the faculty hoozies from Laguna Honda U. bears out the theory that the old horses are not what they used to be.

The replacement for the game will be a Soph-Frosh basketball tilt, which raises the hopes of the upper classmen to win a few games.

This year's game will probably be played during the last College Hour of the Fall semester. The frosh team will be out to take over where the faculty left off.

December Brings Dinners, Service Projects, Tours

By Pat Perkins

WITH the holidays rapidly approaching, many of the various on-campus organizations are planning worthwhile service projects as well as festive activities.

The Inter-Sorority Council is again planning the semi-annual Sorority Presents to be held in Smith Hall on December 12.

Busily planning a mother-daughter tea are the new pledges of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority. The tea is scheduled for Sunday, December 6, at the home of Jean and Joan Giannini.

The home economics club, Alpha Eta Tau, spent a gala weekend at the 15th annual American Home Economics Association convention. The home economics club of the University of California hosted the affair. After a luncheon at the new YWCA at Berkeley, the club members toured the air flight kitchens at the International Airport.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity's new pledges are as follows: John Azzaro, pledge captain; Terry Alciata, John Craig, Carmen Facino, Charley Hanks, Al Judge, Ted Olsson, Pete Papapietro, Paul Plansky, Roger Romero, Don Tarantino and Bill Thompson.

On November 14, Gamma Sigma Sigma (the college's service sorority) held a service project at Laguna Honda Home. The sisters and the pledges assisted the women at the home with a bingo game with the help of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity pledges. A meeting was held at the home of Mary Ann Gooschin to discuss a mother-daughter tea to be held sometime in December.

Phi Beta Rho sorority's service project for this semester is visiting the Shriners' Hospital. The sisters help the disabled children at the hospital with an arts and crafts program.

Members of the Engineering Society will soon depart for Richmond, where they will be the guests of the Standard Oil Company, in touring the plant, Peter Hoch, president of the club, disclosed. The tour is slated for Tuesday, December 1, and free transportation and lunches will be provided for those students on the tour.

Any engineering major is eligible to join this club and those interested may inform Gail Gray, secretary, in S-200 during College Hour. The other officers of the club include Don Harrington, vice-president, and Tom Chan, treasurer. Club members will soon be making arrangements for their annual dinner.

Yule Concerts To Feature Soloists December 11, 12

Presentation of the 25th annual Christmas Concert is scheduled for Thursday, December 11, in Smith Hall at 8 p.m., and Friday, December 12, in the library during College Hour, according to Robert M. Morton, music instructor and director of the concert.

Highlighting this year's concert will be six soloists in the production of Ringwald's The Song Of Christmas, narrated by Louis Carl Mayo. The soloists are Jean Thompson, soprano; Carroll Bergdahl, alto; Fred Bryant and Meredith Withers, tenors; Lance Grameich and Andre Brehaut, baritones.

The A Cappell Choir, directed by Morton, will sing Adeste Fideles, Away In A Manger, Silent Night, a selection from Handel's Messiah, and other Christmas music.

Also performing at both events will be the college wind ensemble, under the direction of Meyer Cahn, playing several Christmas carols. Included in the program will be performances by Virginia Freeman, Allen Belton, Sandra Belcher, Joanne Woodberry, the Men's Glee Club, a vocal ensemble and the City College Folk Singers.

Actors Rehearse, Record Intermezzo

Rehearsals are now underway for the Little Theater group's production of Intermezzo, which is scheduled to open January 8, according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

A new technique is being used in the form of a tape recorder. Tapes are recorded at each rehearsal and then played back to members of the cast. "This enables them to hear what they sound like and correct their mistakes," Griffin said.

The production is scheduled for presentation on January 8-9, 15-16, 22-23, and 29-30.

Members of the cast include James Robinson as the mayor; Gerry Running, doctor; Erika Andre, Isabel; Diane Flores, Gilberte; Ann Vallerga, Daisy; Martha Rose, Lucy; Sue Gettins, Viola; Helen Branchcomb, Denise; Ann Osorno, Marie Louise; David Terry, inspector; Charles Graziani, supervisor; Leah Pashoian, Armand Mangeobis; Carla Voorhees, Leonide; Phil Osborne, Ghost; Frank Stuckey, first executioner; Jordy Cooney, second executioner; Ken Stone, Monsieur Adrian, and Bob Tamerdin, Papa Tellier.

TV Star Advocates Experience, Study

Part-time work as a means to practical knowledge in a chosen sphere was advised by a prominent San Francisco television personality.

Commentator for the Associated Women Student fashion show here November 4, Bob Douglas, co-producer and master of ceremonies of San Francisco Close-Up, a KPIX television program, believes there is no substitute for actual experience.

Douglas' major in college was English Literature. At the same time he worked in a small broadcasting station, learning the profession that would some day be his livelihood.

At no time during his high school or college career did he study public speaking.

"Just goes to show that if one is learning something from experience one should not have to take courses on the subject," he said.

This was the first time for Douglas to narrate a fashion show.

"There is no one in this world who knows less about fashions than I," he confessed.

CAB's Yule Food Drive Kicks Off With Roberto-The-Great Magic, Double College Hour December 4

Magical performances by Roberto the Great will kick off activities for the second annual Christmas Benefit Drive scheduled for a double College Hour, 10 to 11:30 a.m., Friday, December 4, according to Ben Northrup, Club Activities Board president.

The drive, which will run through December 11, is sponsored solely by CAB. The purpose is to provide needy Bay Area families with food orders for Christmas, Northrup said.

Food orders will be provided through donations collected during the six-day drive.

Approximately 40 students will participate actively in the food drive, with representatives from each fraternity, sorority and club in CAB soliciting donations on campus, Northrup stated.

Students may also contribute to the cause by putting their donations in the five-gallon, food drive containers to be placed in the cafeteria, library and faculty dining room.

To stimulate interest in the drive, CAB, Inter-Fraternity Council and Inter-Sorority Council will sponsor fund-raising competition among their respective members.

At the end of the drive, a trophy will be awarded to the student collecting the largest sum of money in each organization.

Recipients of the food orders will be selected by CAB, the San Francisco Welfare Department, SF Fire Department and the News-Call Bulletin.

BEN NORTHRUP, Club Activities Board president.

"All students and members of the faculty are invited to attend the entertaining performance in Smith Hall by Roberto the Great," Northrup said, adding, "The magician made a college appearance for the Christmas Drive last year and succeeded in captivating the audience. He caused such an atmosphere of suspense that you could hear a pin drop."

Veterans Recruit 'Toys For Tots'

Repairable toys are needed now for the "Toys for Tots" Drive, sponsored by the Veterans Association and the Freshman Class, according to Bill Keane, Freshman Class president.

Toys may be brought to the cafeteria, the library or Science Hall and deposited in boxes placed at various spots.

The drive started last Friday and will continue through Friday, December 4, to allow sufficient time for these toys to be repaired before Christmas, Dick Alcala, Veterans Association president, said.

Each year the Veterans Association handles this drive, thus providing toys for underprivileged children.

These toys are distributed among needy families at Christmas.

Previous campaigns for the "Toys for Tots" have been overwhelmingly successful, Alcala declared.

On December 4, the Marine Corps is expected to perform during a double College Hour to help boost the drive, but this is only tentative, Keane said.

Jaywalkers Face Two Dollar Fine

Jaywalking offenders, who are not complying with the San Francisco traffic code, are creating a congestion at the crosswalk at Phelan Avenue, according to Martin Novitski, chief of the Campus Police.

Novitski stressed that a $2 citation will be issued in the future to those students who ignore the force's warnings.

More than 1400 parking permits have been issued to date, while only approximately 800 citations have been given to offenders at the college, considerably fewer when compared to numbers at this time last semester.

Non-Observance Of Smoking Rules Could Bring Expulsion—Anderson

By Paul Plansky

Smoking students who practice puffing in restricted places on campus and discourteously drop their cigarette butts, causing fire hazards, are subject to expulsion, according to Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management.

A state law permits smoking on campus for colleges and junior colleges beyond the 12th grade. However, the insurance advisers of the college strongly recommend strict regulation of smoking, especially in laboratories and shops, Anderson said.

In the cafeteria, where smoking is not prohibited, the floor has become pitted by the cigarette butts dropped by students. If students smoke in the cafeteria, Anderson explained, he hopes they will either use the many ash trays available or step outside.

No vending or cigarette machines have been installed in Cloud Hall because of the asphalt tile floor. Smoking in the library is not permitted for two particular reasons, Anderson stated. First, the library should have a clean atmosphere in which to study, and second, a table scorched by a cigarette burn would cost hundreds of dollars to refinish.

"We don't want to have signs prohibiting smoking plastered in all the buildings," Anderson said, adding, "Smoking at this college is a privilege, and the students should have mature enough attitudes to be courteous and considerate in their habits."

Another hazard occurs through dropping unfinished cigarettes in a wastepaper basket, which can easily ignite a fire. The San Francisco Unified School District, which is responsible for any damages financially, therefore sets policy providing for the college to adopt strict enforcement of all smoking regulations to protect property.

Council Questions 'Healthy Rivalry' In Ram Spattering

By Bob Pacini

Charges that the splattering of the Redwood Ram with blue paint last week, suspected to be the work of students of College of San Mateo, was actually instigated by City College students to raise spirit and morale were presented to council Thursday by Darryl Stark, a student here.

Stark told council that he had heard rumors that the stunt was a device to intensify the rivalry between City College and the College of San Mateo, and also to raise ticket sales to the football game.

Fred Muller, honorary cabinet officer, disagreed entirely with Stark's report and maintained that such practices could result in the possible cancellation of the game altogether and thus certainly wouldn't raise ticket sales.

Confessing that this was the first time she has heard of such rumors, Susan Shawl, Rally Commissioner, attempting to get a clear perspective of the matter, asked Stark if he meant that students here were committing pranks to get more attendance at the games and higher spirit.

Stark declared that this is exactly what he meant.

The painting of the Ram was the sign of a "good healthy rivalry" between City College and San Mateo College, declared Bud Andress, State information service chairman.

Andress also declared that no real harm had been done, for the paint, as in the past, could be scraped off.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities, also told council that no real vandalism had been committed, aside from the painting of the Ram and a few garbage cans. Hillsman explicitly stated that he believed no student or faculty member here was involved in the Ram-painting incident.

Hillsman went on to explain to council that the Ram serves as a sort of decoy to spare the buildings any damage that might otherwise be directed against them. Hillsman made it clear that any retaliation on the part of students here would have resulted in the cancelation of last Saturday's football game.

It might also be a good idea, Hillsman said, for other colleges to make similar use of a mascot symbol.

Vandals Hit Again, Paint Red Ram Blue!

For the second time in three weeks, the Redwood Ram was in need of a paint job last Thursday. The Ram, which was painted blue, and initials of a rival college painted in various spots on campus were the remnants of a prank the night before that pointed the finger of suspicion at College of San Mateo.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities, said, "Fun is fun, but this type of sheer destruction is pointless." The Ram and other objects of the vandalism were painted with enamel paint, which is difficult to remove.

Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of City College, and Dr. Julio Bortolazzo, president of College of San Mateo, conferred on the subject, and warned that if this type of action had been repeated before last Saturday's game, with students of either college responsible, the game would have been cancelled.

South Fights To Keep Traditions

in the South are middle and particularly lower class whites who stand to have either their jobs or social standing jeopardized if Negroes are given the equal opportunities they now are denied.

These are the views and attitudes which were most outstanding to the writer during two months in Arkansas and brief stays in Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia and Tennessee.

They are the values currently being put to severe tests as Southerners consider altering them as they prepare to take their place in the passing parade.

South's Race Relations Put To Acid Test

By Don Seratti

IF THE PEOPLE of the South were put on trial today for their handling of racial relations, we believe they would be found guilty of advancing one race's interests at the cost of delaying another race's progress.

But there would be extenuating circumstances.

For one thing, the Northerners who most often pass judgment are hardly innocent of similar charges, and must admit that discrimination is just as ugly in many Northern states.

Also, white Southerners who fight to maintain racial segregation appear convinced they are guided by righteousness and a desire to preserve a way of life they have always found satisfactory.

But we cannot allow these circumstances to obscure the fact that all is not as peaceful in the South as the pleasant pictures of Southern hospitality and culture would lead us to believe. These pictures are illusory.

The people of the South are very proud of the society they have preserved, where a sense of harmony and understanding exists between the races. But the system of which they are so fond becomes odious when we find that it is based on the premise that "Negroes have a place" in society.

In this respect Negroes do not have a "place" in society. If they ever appeared to, it is because Southern whites have found it convenient to tell them so, in order to preserve white supremacy.

The phrase, "A good Negro knows his place," is fed to Negroes so con-

ISC Presents 82 Pledges Saturday

Eighty-two pledges will be officially welcomed into the college's eight sororities at the Inter-Sorority Council Presents, to be held in Smith Hall this Saturday from 9 p.m. to midnight, June White, ISC president announced yesterday.

Jerry Carson's orchestra will supply the music, and Misty, the theme chosen for the affair, will be reflected in the decorations of angel hair and Christmas greens.

Each new member of a sorority will make the traditional grand entrance through an arch and be individually introduced by her sorority president.

Formals will be worn by women who are being presented; along with an outstanding characteristic representing each sorority.

Invitations are being extended to parents of the women making pledges and parents of the president for each sorority. Invitations are also being sent to members of the fraternities at the college.

Appropriate dress for the women is cocktail dresses, Miss White said, while dark suits with white shirts and ties are required for the men.

"It's up to the women to ask the dates of their choice to this dance," Miss White stated.

Various committees, selected to start prepaartions for this affair, include Kappa Phi, responsible for hand arrangements; Gamma Kappa Beta, decorations; Delta Psi, tallies; Phi Beta Rho, invitations; Delta Sigma Tau, refreshments; Gamma Sigma Sigma, photography; Zeta Chi, flowers, and Theta Tau, rehearsal.

COLLEGE PRESIDENT Dr. Louis G. Conlan.

Holiday Greetings From . . .

As we celebrate Christmas let us rededicate ourselves to those lofty ideals which are synonymous with the season, the greatest of which is love; for love embraces faith, hope, charity, understanding and tolerance. It implies the eternal ideal of Christmas, which is peace on earth, good will toward men.

With a little more of this kind of idealism, the darkness and confusion of today may give way to the fairest dawn the world has ever seen.

My sincere greetings and every good wish to the faculty and students of City College.

—Louis G. Conlan.

Thanksgiving has barely passed, and here we are in the middle of the Christmas rush. What are we rushing toward? Let us all rush toward the true Christmas spirit of good will by acting as a united group in bringing joy and happiness to others. The true spirit is in giving and not in receiving.

During this season let's all forget the trifles of everyday life that seem to weigh down so much on our shoulders and remember the people with greater trials and tribulations.

Have a happy and joyous Christmas season.

Defense Command Sets Space Age Instruction Program For Science Students This Friday

By Bob Lane

Missile and rocket instruction is being presented this week to San Francisco students by the San Francisco Army Air Defense Command at Nourse Auditorium, Van Ness and Hayes, with this Friday at 1:15 reserved exclusively for City College students.

President Louis G. Conlan, in making this announcement, explained that although students in engineering and astronomy classes are officially attending the program, instructors who feel that the program will benefit their classes are encouraged to take advantage of the explanation and demonstrations. Arrangements may be made through Dean William K. Mayo.

Buses will leave from behind Cloud Hall at 12:30 and return to the college at 2:30 p.m.

The instructional programs have been planned to explain theories and functions of present missiles.

Dr. Harold Spears, superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools, expressed the belief that "This instruction should increase the interest of students to pursue an education in science."

Dean Mayo disclosed that one of the interesting features of the presentation will be the Nike Battery In The Attack, a sequence showing step by step exactly what happens in a Nike-guided missile site as it prepares for action, tracks the target and destroys an imaginary enemy bomber or missile attacking San Francisco.

U.S. Army missile crewmen with actual electronic gear and a Nike guided missile and catapult are used for the demonstration with the actual firing and kill being projected on a movie screen.

President Conlan explained that the idea for the instruction came as a result of a highly successful instructional program of Nike air defense equipment which was presented recently to San Francisco businessmen at the Fairmont Hotel.

He credited Ben Swig, owner of the Fairmont Hotel and one of San Francisco's foremost public spirited citizens, with taking the initiative in arranging the program for the students.

Yule Toy Charity Needs Student Help

Poor participation in the current Toys for Tots Drive will disappoint many children this Christmas, Bill Keane, Freshman Class president, said today.

There are only two more days in which to contribute a few unwanted toys, and they may be brought to the cafeteria, library or the Associated Student office, S-140.

Since the drive began two weeks ago, approximately 200 toys have been donated.

Repairable toys are needed, Keane explained, so that all children will enjoy Christmas.

The Veterans Association and the frosh class are working in conjunction with the Fire Department and the Marine Corps in the collection, cleaning, repairing and distribution of the toys.

Christmas Vacation Starts Next Monday

Students here will get a two-week Christmas vacation beginning next Monday and continuing until December 25.

Classes will resume Monday, December 28, then discontinue again on January 1, for the celebration of New Year's Day.

Because of the break, this issue of The Guardsman will be the last of 1959, but not the last of the semester.

The next issue will be distributed Wednesday, January 6.

Three Spirited Students Construct 'Chemistree'

Three students here ushered in the Yule spirit by completing a difficult holiday project — the construction of a Christmas tree in three hours.

Tony Bartmann, Associated Student president, Greg Gerth and Diane Delisle planned the project, after which they secretly obtained instruments and solutions from the chemistry and biology labs.

They later hid the equipment in their lockers.

The instruments used in the construction included ring stands, flasks, burettes, indicators, tubes, lights and a Yield god.

After the project was completed, it was shown to and approved by Manfred Mueller, Chemistry 5 instructor.

The tree, called a "chemistree," is on display in S-230.

Ten Bouts Slated For AMS Smoker

Combatants ranging from featherweight to heavyweight will square off in ten matches at the annual Associated Men Student boxing smoker to be held in the men's gymnasium Tuesday night, January 5, Roy Diederichsen, boxing mentor, said yesterday.

The AMS, in co-operation with the physical education department, organized the smoker which will highlight a series of boxing matches with gold and silver boxing gloves awarded to the winners.

A field of 60 students will be narrowed down to box ten matches in ten different weight classes, from 120 pounds to heavyweight. Preliminary bouts for the match started November 1.

Also included in the night's program is a tag wrestling match featuring "two-ton" Carl Mitchell as one of the members of the team opposing Al Kent and his partner.

"Bring Your Dads" is the theme of the smoker, but women and parents are invited with an admission fee of 50 cents without an Associated Student card, and free with the card.

A.S. PRESIDENT Tony Bartmann.

Choir Presents 25th Yuletide Show Tomorrow

Following a tradition as old as the college, the music department here presents its 25th annual Christmas concert tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. in Smith Hall, and again in the library during Friday's College Hour.

Both performances will be free to the public and no Associated Student card will be required for admission, Robert Morton, concert director and music instructor, stated.

The A Cappella Choir and Men's Glee Club, along with the City College Wind and String Ensembles, will pool their talents both vocally and musically, he added.

Included on the program as a special feature are two Russian Carols, sung in the language by the choir, with Boris Massenkoff, baritone, soloist.

Also to be sung are Adeste Fidelis and a selection from The Messiah.

The City College Folk Singers will sing four selections ineluding an old French carol, Gaevert's Joyous Christmas Song, and an arrangement of Ave Maria.

Songs by the Men's Glee Club will include such familiar Christmas songs as Hark! The Herald Angels Sing, It Came Upon A Midnight Clear, and a 12th century carol, Beautiful Saviour.

The Wind Ensemble will perform a prelude to the program and later combine with the String Ensemble in several compositions by Bach, under the direction of Meyer Cahn.

Flosetta Badger, music instructor and choir founder, is in charge of solo numbers.

Ringwald's The Song Of Christmas was chosen to climax the concert and will feature a narrator, Carl Mayo, and six featured soloists, Jean Thompson, soprano; Carroll Bergdahl, alto; Fred Bryant and Meredith Withers, tenors, and Lance Gremlich and Andre Brehaut, baritones.

Other vocal soloists will be Virginia Freeman, soprano; Allen Belton, baritone, and Sandra Belcher, soprano.

Members of the A Cappella Choir and of the Men's Glee Club will travel in the spring to Modesto for the Northern California Junior College Music Educators Choir Festival. There they will join vocal groups from other two-year colleges throughout Northern California.

Job Center Open Through Holidays

A demand for workers during the late stages of the holiday season by florists, beverage stores, and confectioners will cause the placement center, S-187, to remain open during the holiday season, Joseph Amori, director of the placement center, said today.

At present, Amori explained, the San Francisco labor market is saturated with college students in a wide variety of roles, ranging from mail carriers to Santa Clauses and Ski Patrolers.

The number of workers has now reached a high in holiday season employment with the post office department leading the list of employers.

The basic post office department wage is $1.86 per hour with a ten per cent differential for all work performed after 6 p.m.

Women workers, employed in department stores and specialty shops in both downtown San Francisco and in the suburbs, fill a variety of categories including sales, stock, wrapping, cashiering, and clerical. The wage scale ranges from a basic wage of $1.25 per hour for the inexperienced to a high of $1.86 for experienced, help.

Still in demand, Amori declared, are clerical workers with typing and shorthand skills, ranging from 50 to 60 words for typing and 90 to 120 for shorthand. These workers, because of short supply, are being paid a basic wage of $1.50 and up depending upon age, training and experience. Office machine operators with a basic understanding of bookkeeping and accounting are also in demand. The basic wage is $1.50 with a top of $2.50 per hour.

Taxi Maxim Holds Good For Student Drivers Over Holiday

CHRISTMAS is a time for joy in most American homes. However, in many homes this year there will be only tears because the National Safety Council predicts the highest death toll ever on the nation's highways and city streets.

With this in mind, it is advisable that college students going home on vacation keep in mind the motto used by one of the nation's top taxicab companies:

"Safety is the automatic by-product of a job correctly performed."

Remembering that driving is a job, particularly in the holiday rush but at all other times as well, the college student behind the wheel can do much, through careful attention to this motto, to lower the predicted total.

He will also accomplish an additional and equally desirable objective by this observance in that he will help alleviate the poor opinion of young drivers now held by most insurance companies.

It is almost unnecessary to add that the effects of alcohol cannot be overestimated since the State of California has passed a law concerning drivers who try to drive cars while "under the influence." All too often they steer them into other cars or people or stationary objects and then complain because their license is taken away.

Coffee before driving is not the answer to alcohol or fatigue. The answer is not driving at all even after a few drinks and most particularly not driving when extremely tired.

Finally, and most important of all, he will be present for the Christmas festivities and return to college after the holidays refreshed, unmaimed, and alive.

Ram's Horn

(Editor's Note: Letters to the Ram's Horn may be left with the telephone operator in Science Hall or in The Guardsman office, S-304. Deadlines are 10 a.m. each Wednesday. It so desired the writer's name will be withheld, but the identity of the writer must be known to the editor.)

• Theater Turnouts

Editor, The Guardsman:

In the editorial of November 25, regarding sparse Little Theater turnouts, the writer has struck an unwarranted blow at the student body of this college.

In blaming "apathy" and "lack of taste" for poor turnouts, the writer completely overlooks several factors. Many students work evenings, others live far from the college, and, more important, still others simply do not regularly prefer drama productions as a means of recreation or diversion.

The reference to "oft-proven apathy toward attending any college event" becomes impotent when one considers the appreciable attendance at dances and other social events here.

Finally, the writer's implication that those who do not patronize the Little Theater necessarily lack "discrimination" and "judgment," comes perilously close to a subtle if well-intended censorship. By deeming poor turnouts the "fault" of students who do not attend, the writer appears to consider himself qualified to choose the students' entertainment for them.

I hope that in future weeks the right of a college student to choose his own entertainment will be recognized and affirmed.

Foresight

By Pete Burr

PLAYING the In and Out game is getting to be a national pastime.

Based on a best selling, pamphlet-sized book of the same name, it is a sociological farce in which anybody can look down or up at anyone else with a sort of "status without conscience."

The game as played at the college goes something like this:

Meeting at the Ram is Out unless it is to paint it, burn it down, or meet a girl in a rain driven by a 40 mph wind . . . flunking physical ed. is In, especially by star athletes . . . tennis shoes are Out but can be In if the wearer does not play tennis . . . army shoes are very In while on the courts.

A gentleman's grade of C in midterms is In, but if a straight A is unavoidable, it is also In to ignore Alpha Gamma Sigma.

Spending College Hour at Prosck's is In! . . . attempting to date the elected Homecoming Queen after the festivities is Out but picking a winner before the election and dating her is In . . . Ivy League shirts and continental pants are In if they are slightly soiled.

Having a parking permit is Out and parking in the reservoir with a parking permit is so far Out that it is doubtful if the Out will ever be able to get back In.

Dunking Lorna Doone cookies in coffee brewed in the Science Hall basement coffee machine is In . . . riding the elevators without a key is In . . . telling filthy stories in the "quiet" section of the library is In . . .

Black stocking and other death wish attire is In . . . athletic bobby socks on women students is Out . . . reading The Guardsman is Out but writing irate letters to the editor is In . . . full beards are In . . . goatees or trimmed mustaches are Out . . . a crew cut is Out but a shaved head a la Y. Brynner is In.

Getting into the Cercle Francais is In if you speak no French and have trouble with English. A slight accent is always In if it is of undetermined origin . . .

And so on . . . In and Out.

It is In to hint darkly of "payola" when the KCSF 10 o'clock news broadcast funnels into the classroom. The H&R 65-cent special is Out. Fasting over the lunch hour is In. Pledging a fraternity or sorority is In if you don't make the grade. Mental instability, preferably with a nervous tiek, is In.

Old Art In A Modern Way

Students Use Imaginative Form, Acquire Richer Background While Engaging In Original Ceramics

For thousands of years various peoples have engaged in the art of making pottery. It has been found in old ruins, ancient tombs and dug up at numerous other places, all evidence of its importance in the past.

Even in today's modern way of life ceramics plays an important role. This age-old art is very philosophic, and gathers and absorbs people in productive purpose, according to Roy Walker, ceramics instructor here, who also considers it an exciting and imaginative form of self-expression.

In a busy, but somewhat secluded corner of the campus, approximately 100 students spend many hours a week engaging in this fascinating and useful study.

The first step in learning is to make clay and discover its variety of uses by making decorative relief tiles. Then after advancing to abstract forms, students finally begin making such items as bowls, pots, compotes, vases, bottles, lamps and many other objects.

Associated with chemistry, this cultural introduction includes the techniques of glazing which gives character to textures and colors. When a piece of work is completely shaped, by use of a potter's wheel (the oldest machine known), it is baked from 12 to 24 hours at 2300 degrees Fahrenheit in one of the two electric kilns.

Fine taste in decorative wares and three dimensional design is taught. The general background of ceramics is concentrated training on the potter's wheel with special emphasis on some form and decorative technique.

Many of Walker's students are using their knowledge by teaching the art in schools or as hobbies. Others are supplementing or earning a living as studio potters. Some have gone into technical jobs which call for adeptness of hand and mind which they developed in the ceramics course.

"One usually thinks of a two-year college as only an introductory and experimental period, but some of the students are acquiring a semiprofessional perfection in the craft which is truly a creative experience," Walker said.

One of the most recent of the well-known is Win Ng who has set up his own studio in San Francisco. After finishing his courses here he was graduated from the California School of Fine Arts and is now continuing his education on a scholarship.

Many former students are showing their work in local and national shows while others are still in training.

To acquire a richer background introduction is the main purpose of this elective course which has no prerequisites.

TWO WEEKS to Christmas and the campus is right in the spirit of things. The traditional decorated tree in Science Hall was up a few days after Thanksgiving, many of the fairer sex began wearing mistletoe even before December was here, and the flagpole received its most unusual decoration for many a semester.

The mistletoe "tradition" was started by the Scandinavians, but the British, who knew a good thing when they saw it, brought it to its finest flowering. It is recorded that from 780 A.D. until 1117 A.D. successive waves of "kissing fever" swept the British Isles during the winter festival, and that no other business was accomplished.

When people began hanging up mistletoe in late September, however, cooler heads prevailed and laws were passed rigidly limiting the practice. Britain risen went on to become a great world power. But it wasn't as much fun as it had been before.

AN ASTRONOMY instructor asked his class last week why we see only one side of the moon. He expected some original answers, but those he got more than overwhelmed him.

One coed said the moon didn't actually exist, that it was no more than an illusion, a reflection in midspace from some object millions of miles away.

"You can't shoot at it," she said, "because it isn't there. That's why all our attempts to reach the moon have failed." Wonder if this idea had ever occurred to Mr. Von Braun. It could turn out to be quite a money-saving idea.

IN CLOSING, a hint to all journalism students.

There is an old story in the writing game about a professor who told his students that they should attract their readers at the outset, through the blending of religion, sex, royalty and mystery. One of the students promptly came up with the greatest of lead sentences:

"My God!" the duchess cried, "somebody's stolen my garter!"

Avalanche In C-303

Dog Collar Leads Article List In Lost, Found Dept.

The old saying that he would lose his head if it were not attached to his body is proved by the present condition of the lost and found department here.

Not only have numerous articles of clothing been turned in to Ruth Hoburg, secretary to the coordinator of educational management and in charge of lost-and-found articles, but there is also a dog collar, license No. 13873, lying on her desk, minus the dog.

Besides the dog license, Mrs. Hoburg, with three shelves filled with unclaimed textbooks, has the beginning of a small library.

Some of the books are new and represent a sizable investment on the parts of the owners.

Since the beginning of the semester, her lost and found wardrobe has been added to considerably. There are many sweaters, predominately girls', jackets for males, and any number of items including Bermuda shorts, physical education outfits, raincoats and a girl's skating outfit.

There is a tray containing prescription ground eyeglasses representing a good investment on the part of the owners.

Mrs. Hoburg, whose office does not have the dimensions to suffer an avalanche of lost articles, is anxious to return these articles to their owners.

Anyone who has lost something recently might find it wise to visit the lost and found department in C-303.

It's That Time

Yuletide Signs Mark Holiday Season Again

By Bob Pacini

A biting, chilling frost in the air; milk-white snow driven into fluffy mounds by the winds; the soaring strains of Handel's Messiah; the sound of carolers lifting their voices in traditional melodies—these are the images that make up Christmas.

The gay jingle of sleigh bells; the return of the jolly old man in the bright red suit and his entourage of elves and reindeer; the novelty of children conspicuously displaying the good behavior kept in hiding the rest of the year; large holly wreaths wearing vivid red ribbons—surely it isn't hard to tell it's Christmas.

Crowded department stores with ingeniously decorated windows; shoppers struggling with mountains of packages in anticipation of children and adults; a festive and cordial atmosphere about everyone that warms the wintery air—no mistaking, it's Christmas once again.

A closet full of mysteriously wrapped boxes safely out of the reach of tiny, temptation-filled hands; the appearance of little mangers with their flocks of make-believe cattle and sheep, their miniature shepherds, their symbolic stars and that special place reserved in each of them, perhaps to remind us, for the little Child whose time of the year this is—this time we call Christmas.

A hint of something wonderful fills the air. Joyous feelings arise in the hearts of men and transcend anything that could be put on greeting cards. A blanket of hopefulness covers the earth, and, unfortunately, fades all too quickly after that special time of the year we eagerly await and welcome—that time of the year we call Christmas.

Displays Show Science Is Fun

Amusing coffee-drinkers and other habitants of the west end of Science Hall's basement are two displays prepared by students of the electrical engineering technology department.

"Since taking over the display windows from the geography department last year, we have put up around six demonstrations a semester," Rex F. Harris, engineering instructor, said. These displays, which prove science can be fun, are made by engineering students during their spare time.

The present displays are two electronic counters. One of them is an ancient model which counts only up to 100.

By comparison, the second counter is a modern one which functions much more efficiently, Harris said.

Earlier displays included a thermister, which uses a time delay to change the electrical resistance causing a bulb to light, and a common blinker warning light.

RAMBLINGS

Santa In Biggest Holiday Role Yet

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

'TWAS THE NIGHT before Christmas and down at the gym,
Not a creature was stirring from the morgue there within;

The gridders were sleeping, all snug in their beds;
Their visions of grandeur had long since been dead;

With Sid and his cagers all busy upstairs;
Not running patterns—playing musical chairs;

"Pappa" Schwarz and Jack Gaddy had long since departed,
Along with Coach Klemmer, all three broken-hearted;

When out on the lawn there arose such a roar,
As brought cops from all stations to light at the door;

And what to their wondering eyes should appear,
But "Lumpy" Lee Eisan and his tiny reindeer;

"On Comet, on Bulldog, on Mustang and T-Bird,
On Monarch, on Panther, you dragged the Ram leeward;

"Messrs. Johnson and Leitch, you may both be 'all-pro,'
But to Coach Grover Klemmer you were nothing but woe."

Then down through the roof-top he came with a grin,
Dumping acres of goodies all over the gym;

"For Fischer and Wilson I've canes painted white;
You Big Game officials were a horrible sight;

"And greetings, Roy Diederichsen, from all USF;
I've a carload of cranberries from the Green and Gold chef;

"For little Lou Vasquez, of track and field fame,
Here's Sword Dancer and Nashua to strengthen his name;

"While to mermen Coach Burkhead, so agile and slim,
There's a lifesaver jacket, 'til he learns how to swim;

"For John Sidney Phelan, whom none can berate,
A thousand-word pamphlet on how to lose weight;

"But 'Grandpa' Jack Gaddy, oh where dost thou roam?
Here's 12 years free boarding at Laguna Honda Home;

"And to 'Black Panther' Schwarz, that USF great,
A spot with the song girls for the basketball slate;

"And tell Grover Klemmer, when e'er he gets back,
I've Unitas and Berry for his "straight t' attack;

"But, alas, for Ram rooters, to the last single one,
No gift in existence fits all you have done;

"You savored your victory; you swallowed your loss;
And stood by your athletes, no matter the cost;

"So to each loyal backer, right down through the ranks,
I've nothing to offer, save the simple word, thanks."

And the night filled with splendor as he rose through the air.
With his best for the season to all, everywhere.

59 Varsity Competitors Receive Awards Tonight

The college's Block SF Society will pay tribute to 59 Ram athletes, following its semi-annual awards banquet at 7:30 tonight at Smith Hall.

Varsity competitors and managers in football, soccer and cross-country will receive Block awards at the conclusion of the banquet, brief addresses by President Louis G. Conlan, other administrative leaders, and the remarks of Bob Tiehenal, head football coach at San Jose State.

Aside from the usual comments on the valor of the athletes, the progress of the new football field will be mentioned.

The following athletes will receive block awards at the banquet's conclusion:

Football players Bill Baker, Dennis Bates, Rex Child, Andy Citizen, Bernie Cummins, Rich DeLeon, Paul Disterhoft, John Donham, Alton Fuller, Jack Hickey, M. T. Johnson, Al Kent, Bill Lambert, Scooter Lemp, Leamond McGriff, Carl Mitchell, Tim Moffet, Walt O'Conner and Mel Oliver.

Members of the conference-champion soccer squad who will receive blocks are Anaslas Anastasiou, Barry Clark, Yacob Dudum, Emilio Dergan, Art Fisher, Jahan Fouladi, Julio Guerra, Giovanni Halstead, Mike Joseph, Dave Kingsley, Vince Liu, Jim Lynch, Gaetano Marra and Bill Mosiem.

Other soccer stalwarts to be honored are Raul Poplachich, Alan Palmer, Emil Ruiz, Bill Valiente, Ken Wright, Ed Zumot and Manager Tom Federman.

The Block Society will also welcome into its fold cross-country runners Jim Gallon, Bill Hotchkiss, Tom Jennings, Frank James, Tony Vance and Phil Fortier.

Three Teams Tie For First Place In Coed Volleyball League

The Recreation Association - sponsored coed volleyball league closed out its third week of play last week with three of the six teams entered in a tie for the league lead.

RA No. 1, RA No. 2, and the Wholey Six (Newman Club) are all knotted for the loop lead on equal 3-1 records, with the Ramblers (Newman) 2-2, Rally Committee 1-3, and Filipino Club 0-4, bringing up the rear.

It appears as though the league will be forced into a playoff session, as neither of the leaders is pitted against the others in tonight's final round of play.

At present Fay Fountain, with 36 serving scores, is leading the field, with Judy Schwarz (35) tight on her heels.

Kovacic will soon show their first exhibit for the Designer Craftsmen of California. The first show will be at the San Francisco Museum of Art at the War Memorial Civic Center, December 14 through January 10, 1960.

Visitors are always welcome at the ceramics building, Annex C at the north end of the new football field, Walker stated.

ACT II—Sid Phelan's Silver Anniversary cage forces took up where those '58-'59 conference champions left off, as they opened pre-season action with a trio of games last week. Pictured above, George Shawl scores over the head of Vallejo's Augie Garrido in last year's action.

Cagers Unveil 'Silver' Hoop Wares Via Trio Of Triumphs

By Frank Dunne

The Ram cagers got off to a blazing start in the opening week of their 25th basketball season—the Stanford Braves were scalped 55-38, Vallejo also toppled 58-40 and the University of San Francisco Frosh were humbled, 48-39.

In the opener against the Braves the locals led throughout. Cleo Cofield potted 16 points to lead the Red and White in scoring. Shelby Dirks and John Lewis cleared the boards continually over the taller Injuns.

Coach Sid Phelan used the "platoon system" to take advantage of his team's speed to wear out the Braves. Employing a fast break the Rams were able to move the ball into Stanford's zone before the Farm had time to set up a defense to hold down the scoring.

On defense the locals were equally effective. Guards Mel Wilson, Vern Coleman and Mike Carson stole the ball from the hesitant hands of the Braves' dribblers many times in the contest and drove down court for scores.

Cofield's jump-shot was the scourge of the Braves throughout the game. Driving across the key or from beyond the foul line he was equally deadly.

The Rams had set up a good lead by the time intermission rolled around as they boasted a 26-15 advantage. In the second half Phelan cleared the bench and the Red and White further plastered the dazed Braves.

The Vallejo fray saw much the same performance by the locals. The outcome was never in doubt as the Phelan Avenue sharpshooters outclassed the East Bay men. Will Camp copped the high scoring honors as he stuffed in 11 counters.

Dirks and Lewis did a phenomenal job of clearing the boards as each grabbed 13.

The Rams set-up their plays well and carried them out to perfection. Vallejo tried to run with the locals but soon gave up as the Rams poured it on, forcing the East Bay men to run out of gas.

Dennis Bates and Nate Jackson also starred as they forced Vallejo to give up the ball many times by recovering bad passes and faulty plays tried by the East Bay five.

The Rams led at the half 22-14 and breezed the rest of the way to the final outcome of 58-40, leaving Vallejo nothing but nightmares after the game was over.

The locals had a cold night against USF, scoring only 48 points. This was the weakest of their first three outings. At the half they had a comfortable 28-19 lead, but twice in the second stanza, the Hilltoppers almost evened the count. But the combined

Two Rams Make Big 8 All-Star Football Roster

With the conclusion of a paltry 3-win 4-loss season, all hopes for some sort of recognition for the Rams seemed to have "gone with the wind."

This state of affairs was quickly remedied last week when it was learned that two outstanding Ram gridders had been picked for the Big Eight All-Conference first team.

Carl Mitchell, the first of the pair, starred his football career at Washington High School, where he held down guard position. Filling the same bill for the Rams, Mitchell was also captain of the 1959 squad.

Mitchell finished his football career here at the conclusion of the San Mateo game, where he was the driving force that held toegther the withering Ram effort until the final gun was sounded.

When asked to whom he felt most appreciative for the honor that was bestowed on him, he very simply said that he wished to thank everybody connected with the squad.

Everett Stehn, the second City winner of a slot on the All-Conference first squad, started his grid history playing center for Lowell High School. Sparking the center of the Ram line this season, Stehn was one of the outstanding "mules" who have donned a Ram skin for many a year.

Stehn attributed the unimpressive Ram record this season to a very weak pass defense. He felt that it was the cause of the majority of the Ram defeats this season.

The official All-Conference roster is as follows:

Ends: Buck Del Naro, Stockton, and Larry Leiteh, San Mateo; tackles: Harold Swenson, Modesto, and Clark Miller, Oakland; guards: Mitchell, San Francisco, and Bill Dickey, San Mateo; center: Charles Peoples, Oakland, and Stehn, San Francisco.

The backs are Ray Johnson, Oakland; Wayman Hall, Stockton; John Scruggs, Contra Costa; Lou Blakely, Sacramento, and at quarterback, Mike Flock, Stockton.

Block SF, Zeta Phi Rule Mural Loop; Season Nears End

With the end of the intramural basketball season in sight, the Block SF has swept into the lead of the Club Activities Board-Independent league with a clean slate of four wins against no losses.

Leading the Inter-Fraternity Council league is Zeta Phi, which also has an undefeated record that boasts three wins.

The Blockmen, leading as of November 30, amassed a fantastic number of points during their first four games.

The four-game total of 251 points, 96 of which were scored in the team's game with Alpha Phi Omega, is one of the highest ever to be reached during the first four games in league history.

Hot on the heels of the Blockmen in the CAB-Independent cage loop race is the Recreation Association, which has also won four games, but a single loss lowers its percentile standing to .800 against the 1.000 of the Block club.

The race for high individual scoring honors in the CAB-Independent league is shaping up as one of the closest ever. The two men vying for this slot are Dave Nigel of the Recreation Association with 73 counters and Wilson Williams of the Block SF with 68 points.

Williams, a very strong rival of Nigel, hit almost half of his total points in the game with Alpha Phi.

The Inter-Fraternity Council league seems to be in a rugged state of affairs.

This is parallel to the situation in the CAB-Independent league. Zeta Phi leads the loop with a record of three wins against no losses. Feasibly all the other contingents in the league are still in strong contention for the crown.

The individual high point scoring honors in the IFC loop are a toss-up between two men (as of the November 17 games). These two are Al Gere of Zeta Phi with 31 points and Lou Cooper of Tau Chi Sigma with 30 counters to his credit.

Results of recent action in the loop's play are as follows:

In the CAB-Independent league The Guardsman was slaughtered by a confident Newman Club 70-27; the Block SF tromped Alpha Phi Omega 96-26; a close one between the Dodgers and the Filipino Club ended with the Dodgers emerging victorious 20-15.

The Recreation Association breezed past Alpha Phi 67-15; the Block SF kept the victory train rolling by defeating the Filipino Club 50-15; the Dodgers beat the Hotel and Restaurant Society 51-41; the Newman Club smatched up an easy win because of a forfeit by Alpha Phi Omega.

Outplayed by the Recreation Association, the Filipino Club dropped one to the former by a score of 55-22; The Guardsman kept its no-win record going by settling down to a slaughter at the hands of the Dodgers 85-20.

The Block SF swung into the lead of the cage loop as of November 30 with a win over the H&R Society 55-16.

Aetion in the IFC league as of November 17 went as follows: Beta Tau beat Kappa Rho by a forfeit; Zeta Phi won a close one over the Phi Delts 39-31, and Tau Chi over Alpha Phi Epsilon by a forfeit.

'Red Carpet Day' For Bat, Cinder Signup Set For Tomorrow

Track Coach Lou Vasquez and baseball mentor Lee Elsan have slated signups for their respective sports tomorrow in the men's gymnasium.

Elsan wants all batsmen to report to the gymnasium at 3 p.m. and Vasquez will meet the cindermen at 3:15 p.m.

The purpose of the meetings will be to acquaint the coaches with their material for the coming season. They will also serve as instruction periods for the coaches to tell their men about getting into shape and of ways to improve their chances of making the teams.

After the signup the mentors will also have a chance to check on the academic record of each hopeful.

There will be no organized practices until the spring semester, but it is expected that each man will work out on his own, because those coming to regular practice will then have a better chance of making the team.

Dunn Requests Aid In Curbing Student Cafeteria Abuses

Disorderly and careless conduct, displayed by students while in the cafeteria, prompted John Dunn, instructor in charge, to appeal last week to the college's administration and Student Council for help in curbing these disturbances.

In an outline distributed to the college authorities, Dunn listed the abuses which he hopes will stir some action.

Among the abuses listed by Dunn are: sitting on tables, playing of bongo drums, throwing spit balls; bending of silverware and many others.

Also listed are cafeteria privileges. Smoking is allowed, the cafeteria may be used as a gathering place by college organizations, and food that is comparable to the best served at other colleges and universities is served at reasonable prices.

Cafeteria rules call for ladylike or gentlemanly conduct at all times, and no moving of chairs, since there is only enough space for six chairs at a table.

Dunn pointed out that while there are 450 chairs, an average of 1000 students is served breakfast from 7:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. An equal number is served lunch between 10:45 a.m. and 1:15 pm.; the fountain is in service from 10 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. and serves 2000.

The cafeteria operates on a scramble, or block system, which provides for faster service since there is no waiting in line. During the lunch hour the cafeteria is completely operated by students of the Hotel and Restaurant Department who rotate duties every three weeks.

Primarily a training program, the cafeteria is serviced completely by the Hotel and Restaurant Department, although some experienced help is hired.

Film Series To Show Trek To Alaska Friday

Alaskan Alcan Trek is the title of the film to be shown Friday during College Hour in S-136, Madison Devlin, audio-visual instructor here, said today.

Alaskan Alcan Trek shows the trip of a trailer club visiting Alaska, their adventures and mishaps.

The film is in color, which adds to the beauty of each scene along the 3000-mile trip by trailer, Devlin said.

The real title of Da Vinci's painting known as the Mona Lisa is La Gioconda, the ballad singer.

Three Political Parties Enter Candidates In AS Elections; Petition Deadline Dec. 30

Three major political parties have been formed to date to vie for offices in the Associated Student elections on January 11 and 12, Jerry D. Griffin, Election Commissioner, stated today.

With more than three weeks remaining until December 30's deadline for petitions of candidacy, the Individual, the United Students, and the Student Participation, Unity and Responsibility (SPUR) Parties have emerged as the three major contestants in January's student elections.

Presidential candidates on these tickets are Judy Day, Individual; Wally Hayes, United Students, and Bill Ideker, SPUR. The names of other candidates on these tickets as well as independents will be released after the petition deadline.

Griffin reminded interested students that any group of three or more students may combine to form a political party so long as they file their petitions of candidacy before the deadline. In addition, all parties must submit a roster of candidates appearing on their ticket by midnight, January 4.

Petitions of candidacy can be obtained in S-148, S-150 or from Griffin.

Campaign expenditures for executive officers must not exceed $30 and expenditures for other offices must not exceed $25, he warned, adding that campaign regulations require that all candidates submit three 5 by 7 inch pictures and five 2 by 3 inch pictures to Griffin by 10 a.m., January 4.

Each candidate erecting two or more posters, which can be no larger than 14 by 18 inches, must have a picture of himself on one of them.

All publicity for the election will be handled by members of the Election Committee, who are Sue Shawl, Stan Anderson, Jean Freese and Bob Siekman.

Conlan Covers Campus Construction, Vandalism, Parking Problems, Night Library Hours In Speech To Council

By Bob Pacini

Further development of the campus, parking problems, "juvenile" vandalism and the possibility of having the library open at night were some of the topics covered by Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, in a talk to Student Council last week.

President Conlan told the council that the additions to the campus are progressing satisfactorily and added that he is very happy with the whole program. Though hampered by the steel strike, President Conlan said, the construction program was still ahead of schedule.

Spring 1961 has been selected as the target date for completion and occupancy of the new arts building. The addition to the gymnasiums and the athletic field are scheduled to be finished by Fall 1960, and those of Smith Hall next spring.

The construction of the student center is another possible addition to the campus, President Conlan disclosed. He also informed council that the horticulture center would have to be moved with the construction of a freeway ramp due to run uncomfortably close to the campus.

Modern lighting, soundproofing and the conversion of some classrooms into lecture-demonstration rooms in Science Hall is also an important part of the construction and expansion program, the president declared.

Maintaining that the cafeteria was "too small the day it was opened," President Conlan said that even with the additions to it, the cafeteria will still be inadequate in relation to the size of the student body here.

While ex-students are always welcome to come back, President Conlan told council that the cafeteria should not be turned into a hangout for students who are no longer attending classes here.

President Conlan said that the culprits responsible for the chopping down of the flagpole have not yet been apprehended. In this same vein he denounced the recent painting spree that hit the college as "juvenile," and said that there was no excuse for such actions.

Regarding parking problems on campus, President Conlan said that every available open space on campus will have to be utilized to accommodate the large numbers of student cars. The reservoir parking area will be a "permanent student parking lot," President Conlan said he is firmly opposed to charging a student parking fee for use of parking areas.

In a final matter, President Conlan announced that the library in Cloud Hall will be open to students at night, beginning with the Fall 1960 semester.

Funds are not available right now that would allow such a plan to commence.

In a previous meeting two more budgets were acted upon by council. The budget for the Soph Class was almost tabled, but council passed a partial budget for $350 to allow preparations for the soph ball to be completed and awaited further discussion on the rest of the budget.

Rainman Appointed Publicity Chairman

Filling a vacancy left by the resignation of Bill Ideker, Don Rainman will assume the duties of Publicity Chairman for the Associated Students for the remainder of the semester.

Illness and the desire to devote more time to his classes were the main causes of his resignation, Ideker said, adding that he would still serve on the committee to the best of his ability.

Counterpoint: South's Irrationality Shown In Ignorance Of Negro Potential

stantly that they are often heard uttering it themselves.

Expanding on this doctrine, whites frequently say that Negroes are inferior as a race, that they do not want to improve themselves, that they are inherently lazy, irresponsible and dishonest.

In expressing such views, the whites ignore anthropological facts which state that there is no basic difference in intelligence among the world's races. Confronted by these irrefutable facts, they retreat into their shells of irrationality, point to the generally uneducated Negroes around them, and say, "You haven't lived with 'em!"

If Southern Negroes are still in a comparatively backward stage of intellectual development, it is because they have been struggling through second-rate schools and accepting a second-rate social status for the last century.

Southerners who point with pride to the "new schools we've built for our Negroes" overlook the fact that this has been achieved, for the most part, only during the last decade, and only in a few regions of the Southern states. "Equal facilities" is in reality a myth. The Negro is still in virtual "intellectual captivity," which the whites prefer to call "recognizing and accepting their limitations."

How much longer will the "white man's society" prevail in the South?

Forever—if the most rabid segregationists, the middle and lower class whites who don't relish Negroes competing for better jobs and social standing, have their way.

Not much longer—if the forward-looking liberals can continue to extend the influence they have recently gained.

Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, has come forth from a segregationist stronghold to evaluate his society's school segregation arguments in this way:

"Going to school has been made into the image of an intimate social gathering, rather than a place where children go separately to be taught. The myth of forced social mixing has become a fixed one, as if attending classes was similar to attending a dance."

Negroes are now asking poignant questions about the morality of Jim Crow laws, and are admitting openly that it is inconvenient to have to walk across town at lunchtime to find a restaurant that will serve them.

As the number of educated Negroes increases with time, we believe the maxim, "You can't keep a good man down," will prevail and that more and more barriers, which now keep countless opportunities closed to Negroes, will be broken down.

If the South persists in believing it can maintain white supremacy, it may have a costly battle on its hands, a battle between diehard segregationists and Negroes who will someday vigorously oppose the denial of equal opportunities.

On the other hand, a swallowing of pride, a modification of hitherto inflexible values, and a recognition of the growing potential of the Negro by white Southerners can solve the racial problem short of a battle and allow both races to work toward the formation of a truly "New South."

Semi-Pro Students Comprise Half Of Total Enrollment

By Diane Beeson

Students enrolled in the semi-professional courses here comprise 45 per cent of the total registration, Louis F. Batmale, dean of instruction, stated recently.

The semiprofessional courses constitute 32 two-year curricula, ranging from ornamental horticulture to criminology, which prepare students for steady, well-paying jobs.

"The percentage of students following these curricula is higher in the spring because many university parallel students became acquainted with our two-year offerings and find them more suited to their interests and academic ability," Batmale explained.

Included in this category are advertising, hotel and restaurant, dental assisting, photography, commercial art, business education, accounting, airline stewardess training, insurance, real estate, traffic and transportation, recreation leadership, X-ray technology and engineering technology.

A great deal of preparation goes into the adoption of each new semi-professional curriculum, and usually the adoption is the result of a request by that particular industry, Batmale added, citing as an example the newest curriculum, dental laboratory technology.

The need for such a course of study was brought to the attention of the college by the Northern California Dental Laboratory Association and the California Dental Association. The next step was to form an advisory committee to consider this.

Two dentists and two dental laboratory technologists, suggested by the American Dental Association, joined Batmale to form the committee. They set to work developing a curriculum, studying facilities, making suggestions and finding instructors.

When these tasks were completed, only students were lacking. Information in trade journals and the college catalogue and available through high school and college counselors discovered the 15 students, four of whom were already students here, who are now enrolled in the new dental laboratory technology curriculum.

Students who complete any of the curricula and meet the requirements (usually a 2.0 average) receive a certificate of completion in addition to their Associate in Arts degree.

The department recommends for employment all graduates who receive the certificate and in conjunction with the college placement service makes a special effort to find a position for them. This is accomplished largely through graduate recruitment day, Batmale declared.

At the end of the fall semester a special day is devoted to engineering graduates.

Business is featured in spring graduate recruitment day with the personnel department of about 35 large firms interviewing at the college and placing graduates.

Famous Photog Visits Here

FACULTY ROW'S PHOTO GALLERY recently housed the works of Ruth Bernhard, one of the nation's leading contemporary photographers. Her work has been displayed in many of the world's foremost galleries and appeared in art periodicals that lauded her expression and sensitivity.

The collection used sea shells, bones and driftwood as symbols of social comment, leading some critics to term many of them "controversial."

She is the daughter of Lucien Bernhard, the famous poster artist and type designer. Above, she holds an invitation, set by graphic arts students here, in Bernhard Tango, a type face designed by her father. A sample of the type is seen in the top right. Club Cavalcade Presents, Yule Projects Set For Holiday Season

By Pat Perkins

WITH midterm exams over for another five weeks, the various campus clubs and organizations are busily planning new activities for the coming holiday season.

The sisters of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority will go Christmas caroling during vacation for their Yule service project. Also being planned by the sorority are the decorations for the rapidly approaching sorority presents.

Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority welcomed the following pledges into the organization: Birgitta Bergman, Norma Ottiniano, Olga Tourkoff, pledge captain, and Mary Ellen Wheatley. The pledges are now in the process of completing their ten-hour service requirement by helping in the library. A formal installation and tea will be held at the home of Diane Olson sometime this month.

The pledges of Kappa Phi sorority for this semester are Sandy Barsocchini, Janice Benetti, Marlene Bobrow, Helen Bowie, Julie Clark, Carol Coggin, Helen Hanretty, Sharon Johnson, Pat Lange, Jackie Lyons, Gail McCall, Joanne Pomeranz and Pat Watkins.

Three $50 or two $75 scholarships will be offered to foreign students Friday night by the International Relations Club from the proceeds of its annual fair held last month.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 noon in The Guardsman office, S-304.

CAB's Annual Drive Ends This Friday

Roberto the Great captivated the audience with his magic performances, and kicked off the beginning of the second annual Club Activities Board Christmas Benefit Drive last Friday.

The drive, running through this Friday, is sponsored exclusively by CAB, whose purpose is to provide needy Bay Area families with funds for Christmas. Representatives from each fraternity, sorority and club in CAB are participating actively in this Christmas fund drive, CAB President Ben Northrup said.

To stimulate interest in the drive, CAB, Inter-Fraternity Council and Inter-Sorority Council are sponsoring a fund-raising competition amongst respective members, at the end of which, Northrup declared, a trophy will be awarded to the student collecting the largest sum of money in each organization division.

Such organizations as the San Francisco Welfare Department, San Francisco Fire Department, News-Call Bulletin, and CAB are to select recipients for the funds.

Election Edition

Twenty-Fifth Year

Official Publication of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco

VOLUME 49 — SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA — WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1960 — NUMBER 10

AS General Elections Start Next Monday

Judy Day

THE CANDIDATES who are seeking election as representatives of the Individual Party come from all walks of college life. We are not attached to any particular group so it is our desire and intention to take a keen interest in all activities at City College as they affect the life of each "individual" on campus.

We believe the time has come when a "New Deal" should be instituted whereby EVERY student has a voice in the events that come under the jurisdiction of the Associated Students. The only way you can assure yourselves of having representatives who will be keenly aware of your needs and who will endeavor to fulfill your wishes is to vote for the Individual Party.

3 Parties Bid For 20 Offices In Rally Friday

By Don Seratti

Featured by a drive for student participation and prospects of vigorous campaigning, this semester's Associated Student general elections will be held here Monday and Tuesday.

Voting machines will be open from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. on each day, according to Election Commissioner Jerry Griffin.

An election rally near the redwood ram is scheduled for Friday during College Hour, when the candidates who are competing for 20 student offices will be introduced and outline their respective platforms.

Three parties have entered candidates in this semester's race—the Individual Party, the newly-formed Party for Democratic Action and the United Student Party.

Seeking the top office of AS President are Judy Day (Indiv.), Wally Hayes (USP) and Don Rainman (PDA).

Vice-presidential hopefuls are Vicky Aumann (Indiv.) and Margi Hill (USP).

Bill Keane (USP) is running unopposed for Associated Men Student President as no other party entered a candidate for this post.

For the presidency of the Associated Women Students, voters will choose between Faye Fountain (Indiv.) and Stevie Tissier (USP).

Three candidates are running for Sophomore Class President—Bob Edwards (PDA), Leroy Robinson (Indiv.) and Jack Vega (USP).

Freshman Class presidential aspirants are John Azzaro (USP) and Ethel Enonn (Indiv.)

The USP has seven candidates for the seven seats in Sophomore Council—Art Curry, Larry Feldman, Alberta Giannini, Bill Lambert, Fred Loebenstein, Ron Recchioni and Diane Robinson, while the Individual Party has entered Shirley Clayton, Maryann Gooschin and John Palmer.

An even greater preponderance exists in the race for seven Freshman Council seats, with the USP offering Terry Alciati, Jan Benetti, Marlene Bobrow, Flo Galli, Jean Miller, Donna O'Leary and Georgene Peterson, and the PDA supporting Suzanne Weiss.

Because a last-minute extension of the office petition deadline failed to coincide with The Guardsman deadline, the above lists may be altered by the late addition of further candidates, party spokesmen said.

Griffin intends to "hit students from all angles" to stimulate interest in the elections. His current plans include posters and announcements on the campus public address system.

A fourth group, the Student Participation, Unity and Responsibility Party, withdrew from the race last week when its standard bearer announced he would take a leave of absence.

Wally Hayes

WE OF THE United Students Party appreciate the student's interest in the coming election. We point with pride to our achievements in the current semester and welcome this opportunity to present our program of ACTION.

1. Obtain additional parking areas in strategic locations.

2. Activate the program for night use of the library.

3. Lower the price of Associated Student cards so that more students may participate in activities.

4. To provide more money and better entertainment for rallies.

5. To keep the students better informed on affairs.

In closing, we remind you that we are the only group with experience and student backing for ACTION.

Council Okays 2 Amendments To Constitution

Two amendments to the Associated Student constitution will be offered to qualified voters for a decision on election days, January 11 and 12, according to Tony Bartmann, AS president.

The Inter-Fraternity Council is asking for a change in Article V of the AS constitution which deals with the Club Activities Board. At the present time IFC sends a representative to the CAB as a liaison officer, in accordance with this article which states the CAB will be composed of representatives of each "duly chartered" on-campus organization.

IFC, however, is asking for a complete break from CAB, along with its affiliated fraternities. Hasko Hofmeister, who read the resolution to council for approval before it could be placed on the ballot, said that the purpose of the resolution is to make IFC an independent organization in order to obtain a budget.

If passed, the new amendment would make Article V read that the CAB is to be composed of all duly chartered on-campus organizations with the exception of IFC.

The other amendment up for consideration asks permission for the Publicity Committee to aid any on-campus organization that has 100 per cent AS membership.

Election Committee Lists 5 Voting Sites

Five voting machines will be placed around the campus by the Election Committee for voting in the January 11 and 12 Associated Student elections.

Machines will be located at the silver pole in Science Hall, the nearwest library entrance, in Smith Hall next to the fountain, the area between the men's and the women's gymnasium, and in the refreshment center in the basement at the south end of Science Hall. Rules provide that voters must sign the registers at the polls.

Bill Rainman

I BELIEVE that in order to establish effective student democracy and a more meaningful student government, a few practical measures must be taken.

All students must have the right to vote. At present there is a $5.00 poll tax in the form of an Associated Student card. Because of this only 2375 of the 7000 registered students may vote. I believe that a part of our democratic heritage insures that all citizens have the right to vote. Aren't all students the citizens of this college?

I propose a student government that is more nearly the vote of ALL students. I propose that the power of student government be extended to benefit ALL students. A student government that is active in the interest of ALL students is the best extension of student government.

Student Nursing Program Gains Fresh Support

A two-year Associate in Arts nursing program to be sponsored by the college in co-ordination with San Francisco General Hospital has been proposed by George Monardo, the hospital's administrator, Lloyd Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction, disclosed recently.

Similar programs have recently been established at Santa Rosa and Contra Costa colleges, which were developed after several years of experience in nation-wide pilot programming for two-year college nursing education.

Under the present system here, student nurses complete only part of their nursing course at the college and graduate at one of the four hospitals affiliated with the college, thereby making it impossible for them to obtain an Associate in Arts degree.

The four affiliated hospitals are St. Luke's, Mary's Help, St. Francis and Mt. Zion, and Mt. Zion has recently announced it plans to discontinue its school of nursing, but no new students will be enrolled.

Subjects offered here now to student nurses for the first two semesters are physiology, anatomy, microbiology for laboratory courses, and nutrition, history of nursing, psychology 1A, sociology 1, political science 36, communication 6A or English 1A.

Friday's Movie Covers Space Age

Man's adventures in flight from the Wright brothers to the latest satellite developments will be shown in C-136 this Friday during College Hour as part of the college film series, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor, announced recently.

Early Days and Exploring By Satellite are the titles of the films to be shown. Devlin added that Exploring By Satellite is a new movie which shows the latest advances in the field.

Early Days is a series of film clips from 1900 to 1917, which includes experiments with balloons and the earliest airplanes, plus shots of well-known persons of the period.

St. Francis Offers 26 H&R Students Key Posts Jan. 14

By Paul Plansky

A hotel which has been host to world distinguished dignitaries will turn over its maintenance, from managing director to steward, to the college's hotel and restaurant majors as the ninth annual "Operation St. Francis" gets underway next Thursday, January 14.

Nineteen H&R fourth semester students, seven third semester students, and members from other college departments have been invited to take part in the yearly event by the hotel's managing director, Dan E. London, according to Lawrence B. Wong, H&R placement director.

Also attending the affair will be President Louis G. Conlan, Louis Batmale, dean of instruction, and Wong.

London, who initiated this operation nine years ago to give H&R students a chance to take the reins of a large metropolitan hotel giving them invaluable experience, will name students to key positions in the hotel's framework, Wong stated.

The most important hotel staff members, including managing director, executive chef, and personnel manager, down to Mural Room captain, room service and mail department positions, will be replaced by students who will work together closely with the personnel they will be replacing, Wong praised London and David Plant, assistant general manager, for their cooperation.

Sitting behind London's desk will be Peter Conkley. His executive staff includes Richard Melodia, financial manager, filling in for George Love; Twain, Marsan, assistant general manager, taking over Plant's job; and Donald Haven and Paile Thomsen, who will be assistant managers.

All students participating in the program will be welcomed to the hotel at 9 a.m. in the lobby by London, Wong said. Immediately following guided tours through the hotel to observe how their jobs should be executed, the H&R students start on their day's assignments.

After a luncheon, the students will work until 4 p.m., and then they will engage in a social hour in one of the hotel rooms.

Basketball Game, Dance Highlight Sophomore Week

Sophomore Week, which includes the presentation of the Soph Ball, will officially begin next Monday, January 11, and continue to January 16, President Anthony Lopez announced last week.

Students interested in becoming candidates for Soph king and queen, a traditional feature of the Soph Ball, may obtain contest applications now at the offices of the deans of men and women. Deadline for filing of applications is this Friday, Lopez emphasized.

The semi-annual dance is scheduled for presentation on Saturday, January 16, in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel with Rudy Salvini's orchestra doing the musical honors.

Theme for the affair is Ours To Remember. Admission is free to Associated Students and $2.50 for non-AS members. The appropriate attire is cocktail dresses for women and dark suits for men.

Voting for the Soph king and queen will serve as the opening step for the "big" week.

The penny-vote system will again be used as the determining factor in selecting the winners of the contest, Lopez stated, adding that small milk containers, displaying each candidate's picture, will be placed in the cafeteria and at the silver pole in Science Hall for voting purposes.

Engineer Recruitment Day 1959 Nets 95 Jobs

Approximately 60 business, industrial and government recruitment and procurement officials will visit the college next Wednesday, January 13, for the fifth engineering department day program, Joseph Amori, placement director, said last week.

During the last recruitment day program, held January 16, 1959, a total of 95 top engineering graduates of the college was hired.

The students, members of the Spring 1959 semester graduating class, were not only successful in finding suitable employment, but received higher salaries than any previous engineering graduating class, Amori stated.

All but two of the graduates were placed with firms located in the five San Francisco Bay Area counties. One student was hired by the Federal Government, the other obtained employment in Los Angeles.

Of the 36 individual engineering firms that participated in the recruitment program, Ampex Corporation of Redwood City hired the largest number of graduates, which was eight.

Following closely were Eitel-McCullough, San Bruno and San Carlos (7), Litton Industries, San Carlos (5), and Stanford Research Institute, Menlo Park (4).

The salaries ranged from a high of $559.00 per month for a graduate in electrical engineering technology to a low of $310.00 per month for a junior draftsman. The average salary for the entire group was $402.00, the placement director said.

Several factors accounted for the difference in salary level, Amori said, such as age, veteran status, previous experience, military training in specialty, scholarship and college rating.

With the rise of science and technology new, almost unlimited opportunities have been opened in photography, declared Charles Lamp, photography instructor here, who made many illuminating comments about the field of photography.

Photography, according to Lamp, is more than ever a necessity in industry, in electronics and other scientific fields. Recalling some of the former students who have gone directly into photographic fields at the conclusion of their two-year course of study here, Lamp cited:

Ester Lisama, now working at the radiation laboratory of the University of California; Jerry Latham, second in command of a photo lab for a large insurance company, and Dave Abrahams, engaged in photography work with a company dealing with atomic development.

Any student interested in photography can take such courses here, Lamp stated, adding that the college supplies cameras and all other equipment including developing chemicals, but does not provide students with film or paper.

Classes in photography are labeled semiprofessional courses, a division of courses which is completed at the end of two years of study and requires no further scholastic training.

Lamp also mentioned the Ram Cam, a club for students interested in the field of photography. He said that the group meets during College Hours in C-249, and added that all students, whether they are currently taking photography courses or not, are welcome. The club is under the sponsorship of Emmett Smith, another photography instructor here.

Smith disclosed that his motion picture classes had produced a half-hour science film for showing in the classes of Jules Fraden, life science instructor at the college.

The film, showing the nerve and muscle action of a frog, required cooperation from a number of other departments to make its production possible.

The art department made posters and diagrams used in the film and the radio and television department aided in producing the sound track.

Lamp declared that there are more jobs in the photography department than qualified students.

Less Than 10% Of Voters Will Elect New AS Officeholders

THERE are nearly 7000 students in this college. Of this number, about 2375 have Associated Student cards, or one-third of the total enrollment.

We are not pessimists but if past statistics are any indication of what can reasonably be expected, fewer than one-third of these cardholders will vote in the coming election, which is to say, about 500 students, or fewer than ten per cent of the enrollment and fewer than a quarter of those eligible to vote.

That is to say that a faction-divided fraction of the voters will elect 20 student officers to administer over $25,000 of funds donated by students through AS card sales, vending machine profits, ticket sales and campus bookstore profits.

There are few valid reasons for eligible voters failing to take advantage of their privilege of expressing their opinion where it has some real effect. Yet it is these same non-voters who complain the loudest when they feel that the spending of their money is being mishandled.

Since The Guardsman is an impartial expression of student opinion in any election, it never offers individual or party recommendation but does have a recommendation to make to the voters themselves.

Apathy is the besetting sin of our students.

Despite multitudinous privileges which offer opportunities for civic, athletic, and cultural attendance and participation, students consistently ignore, fail to attend or fail to respond to such challenges.

We are fully aware of the difference between censor and censure and we believe that to censure or blame students for their indifference to opportunities and their failure to take advantage of them in no way constitutes censorship of their freedom to choose their own activities.

Therefore we recommend that students who have the privilege of voting exercise that right with intelligence and discretion in the coming election since it is only by use that privileges remain effective.

In other words, VOTE, dammit!!!!

Modern Society Produces Its Own Genuises, Accuses People Of Living, Bans Thinkers

IT HAS BECOME increasingly apparent as of late that genius, as such, has suffered a schism from what used to be termed in the old sense as greatness.

The two entities were never inseparable, but in the minds of men less endowed with that elusive and misunderstood quality of intelligence, they went together like ham and eggs.

It was an assumption that had a certain veracity; a vessel that always held water.

The one salient fact that distinguished the two was that genius could be measured; greatness could not.

It is simply that greatness is no longer enough and, in fact, may even obtrude upon whatever sensibilities remain in the rarefied atmosphere of human achievement.

Brilliance has become so specialized that a da Vinci may roam unrecognized through a throng of Ph.D's clinking ice cubes at the informal alumni get-togethers in which all come and go talking of Michelangelo.

The axiom that heroes, as well as geniuses, are born, not made has lost its identity in an astounding reversal wherein both can be produced like automobiles and vacuum packed coffee.

Packaged and neatly labeled, they come in all sizes and all shapes to fit all needs. Nothing is left to the imagination and answers to all pertinent questions are clearly defined to the point toward that happy event where fewer and fewer questions are posed until the day when no questions arise and all is satisfactory.

Getting back to Leonardo, who knew everything because he knew nothing, we find that he is not qualified. He is not qualified to comment on architecture or biological science or physical science or art or music or philosophy. Versatility is an eccentricity and therefore suspect. For the Leonardos, all of them, we have provided park benches and pigeons.

A harsh accusation admittedly and certainly unsupported by fact. But the definition of life bears the same burden. One is accused of living and can procure neither witness nor testimony to verify or refute his existence; death is his only judge.

We have substituted idols for heroes, scholars for genius, payola for nobility. The few remaining authentic personages have become anachronisms, evolutionary vestiges along with receding hairlines, appendices and tonsils.

There is no longer any west to go to, young man, and don't give us that jazz about outer space.

The thinking man with his thinking filter can't even think himself into doing what he'd really like to do.

Polka, Schottische, Waltz . . .

Enthusiasm, Gay Music Add Color, Variety To Coed Folk Dancing Class

Take the rhythmic strains of lively music, a few quick movements of the feet, some whirling skirts and a lot of enthusiasm. Put them together, adding approximately 10 men and 25 women, and the delightful result is one of Melia Furgis' folk dancing classes.

This coeducational part of the physical education program needs many more men in order to balance more evenly the ratio between men and women, and thus the class is open to all.

The active participants of such classes hail from many lands and bring many cultural backgrounds to the class as they come closer to one another as, in the words of John Masefield, they "clasp hands and know the thoughts of men in other lands."

As this line suggests, folk dancing is beneficial because through it, the style, music, costumes and other aspects, one learns about his neighbors not only in this hemisphere but also across the seas.

The beginning and intermediate classes learn basic traditional steps common to all countries. These include the polka, schottische, waltzes and two-step.

Folk dances originate from many areas of Europe, where peasants enjoy music and rhythm and naturally turn to daneing when they assemble for holidays or celebrations.

Groups may later get together to improve on and add to these dances or change the music in some way.

Many dances have been recorded in foreign countries and taught to others. Groups such as the touring Russian dance company sprung up as a result.

Dog Finds Post As Office Aid

Some students may have pondered whether City College has gone to the dogs. This question arose among those students who, upon entering Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, were greeted by Buffy.

Buffy is a well-trained Golden Cocker Spaniel, aged 12. She started college when her master, Edwin C. Browne, now retired, became dean of men here. Now she commutes from the Santa Cruz Mountains whenever Browne visits San Francisco, and is dellvered into the care of Dean Hillsman's secretary, Uriel Furlong.

When her master was here, Buffy was his personal messenger. She proudly walked by his side about the campus, and when directed would carry important papers back to the dean's office.

"She never lost a one," commented Miss Furlong, "a record which student help has never equaled."

Although Buffy is only a school girl at heart, she is getting along in years. She now majors in sleeping under the filing table in the dean's outer office.

THE trials and tribulations of learning a foreign language.

One coed on a nearby campus while trying energetically to pronounce a difficult word in a Russian-language class, dislocated her jaw. Had her mouth shut by a doctor and couldn't open it again for two weeks.

Sad part of the whole incident is that she had no recourse but to drop the course.

EVER STOP and think that all the music we have today, no matter what kind or type—classical, contemporary or jazz—is all derived from only seven notes, so no wonder many pieces resemble each other.

A music class was asked how many modern day songs they could name that could be traced back to a classical composer. Puccini and Verdi were mentioned, but above all, credit goes to Handel for having written the Hallelujah Chorus, thus indirectly giving us the good old party mixer song, Yes, We Have No Bananas.

A PASSING FANCY. This is the title of one of the poems selected by the Board of Judges of the National Poetry Association to be published in the Annual Anthology of College Poetry. Congratulations are due to the author, Bill Forshay, editor of The Guardsman, who adds another laurel to his list of literary honors.

The Anthology is a compilation of the finest poetry written by the college men and women of America, representing every state in the country. Selections were made from thousands of poems submitted.

MEMBERS of the drama department are still talking about the wonderful performance being given by former drama student Virginia Rae. Miss Rae has the leading role in Annie Get Your Gun at the Sausalito Gate Playhouse, which has performances scheduled for Fridays and Saturdays.

Graduating last semester, Miss Rae held many leading roles in various drama department productions. These included the roles of Nerissa in The Merchant Of Venice, and Madame Ranevsky in Chekov's The Cherry Orchard.

Haven For Coeds

Pessimistic Picture Painted By 3-To-1 Ratio

By Don Rainman

With 7066 students enrolled at the college this semester, statistics from the office of Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, reveal that 2333 are women. Of these, 567 attend night classes as do 786 of the 4733 remaining men students.

On the face of it these facts tend to paint a pretty dull picture of the cold, hard facts involving enrollment. Treated a little differently, though, these numbers become quite revealing.

For example, even though fewer than one student in three is a woman, if all the men students were divided equally among the women, the ratio would be approximately two and one seventy-fifth men students to each coed.

It is plain to see that the women are in a decidedly favorable position; however, they cannot just go around, dividing men into seventy-fifths. For that matter, dividing the men into any size fraction is downright unpopular these days.

This is not to imply that some previous statistician has not already divided men students into fractions. On the contrary, they have been divided into fractions almost since the beginning of time.

Asked to comment on the statistical fact that 2¼ out of 3¼ day students are men, Hardly Strong, a preloafing major said, "Oh, I thought those guys were midgets!"

Among some of the other comments were two left jabs, a right cross and a judo chop. Nevertheless, this intrepid reporter was able to bring out the facts.

Over the past few years, according to Miss Learnard's statistics, the ratio of men to women has diminished very slightly. If the ratio continues to change at the same rate, men students may always be represented by mixed numbers.

Rams Beaten In Santa Maria Final

Hosting Hancock Five Nabs First Place, 76-62

By Frank Dunne

SANTA MARIA, Dec. 30.—In tonight's championship game of the Santa Maria Holiday Tournament the Rams went down to defeat before hosting Allan Hancock, 76-62. The Rams turned in one of their finest performances but could not withstand the Bulldogs' 53 per cent shooting average in the second half.

To gain the finals the locals defeated Hartnell in the opening game of the meet, 64-35, and in the second round they humbled Coalinga College, 51-45. Both of these wins gave the Rams the right to play Hancock who had won two games in another bracket, for the championship.

The Hartnell game was the easiest meeting in the tournament for the Red and White as they scored at will over the outclassed Salinas shooters. The Ram starting five played the first 10 minutes piling up a 21-3 margin. The locals' second unit gave little ground as the half-time score read 35-10, Rams.

Every one of the Rams scored in the tilt making it a win for the entire Red and White team. Cleo Cofield led with 13 and Mike Carson followed with 10 points.

The 64-35 final was by no means the entire story of the game, as the Rams got the necessary confidence to handle the challenge of a very tough Coalinga team on the second night of the tournament.

Coalinga came into the game bent on upsetting the Rams. They tried to out maim the locals with a fast break, but found out the Red and White express could run faster and longer than they could, as the 51-45 outcome proved.

John Lewis and Cofield poured in 16 points each to lead the locals in the scoring department. George Shewl and Shelby Dirks controlled the boards for the Rams, giving them the extra shot if they missed a try at their own basket and stopping the enemy from getting the second chance.

This averted a Coalinga win and gave the Rams the right to face Allan Hancock for the title.

Hancock and City College were evenly matched going into the final game. The Bulldogs had the benefit of the home town crowd to root for them, but man to man the teams were even. The first half was played just like that with the Rams ahead at half-time, 34-33.

Both teams played flawless basketball as the score swayed from one side to the other continually in the first half. But then in the second half the Bulldogs found the Rams in a slight cold spell and took advantage of it, giving them the margin to stay ahead.

The Bulldogs hit a sizzling 53 per cent of their shots in the second half to top the Rams and give them the win.

Cofield and Dirks were high point men for both sides as they collected 23 and 21 points, respectively.

This was the Rams' finest effort to date even in defeat, since they have finally jelled as a team and if it weren't for the cold spell in the second half they might have beaten the classy Bulldogs.

Ram forward Cleo Cofield was picked for the All-Tournament team, an honor he richly deserved as he played flawless basketball throughout the tournament.

The Rams now head for the Modesto classic, in which they could possibly face Hancock again for the championship.

Block SF Grabs CAB Crown; IFC Race Continues

Rolling on to victory in all of their games, the Block SF has clinched the CAB-Independent league crown, while the Inter-Fraternity league is still undecided with games still remaining to be played, as intramural play draws to a close.

High point man in the CAB-Independent comes from the second place team, the Recreation Association. Dave Nigel is the winner with a total of 102 counters scored for the season.

The second place team, the Recreation Association, came into second place only because of their defeat at the hands of the Blockmen earlier in the season.

In the IFC league Zeta Phi is still in the top slot despite its loss to Gamma Phi, a strong contender for the crown. Still leading the league in individual points scored is Al Gere of Zeta Phi with 43 counters thus far. Close behind Gere is Lou Cooper of Tau Chi with a total of 39 points.

Previous action in the CAB-Independent league saw the Filipino Club get an easy one away from Alpha Phi because of a forfeit, the Dodgers down the Newman Club 49-30, and the Recreation Association tromp the Hotel & Restaurant Society 69-29.

The Guardsman went down fighting as the Block SF defeated them by only 10 points, 72-62; the Hotel & Restaurant Society won over Alpha Phi Omega by forfeit, and the Block SF over the Newman Club, 39-21. The Recreation Association didn't even have to work up a sweat as they defeated The Guardsman by forfeit, and the Hotel & Restaurant Society whipped the Filipino Club 38-34.

The Block SF downed the Dodgers 46-37 in a hard-fought game, while undaunted Guardsman won their first game in three seasons via a forfeit over Alpha Phi Omega, and the Recreation Association downed a determined Newman Club 39-32.

In IFC action, Gamma Phi overcame Zeta Phi 32-16, Alpha Phi Epsilon downed Kappa Rho 45-28, and the Phi Delts defeated Tau Chi 61-35.

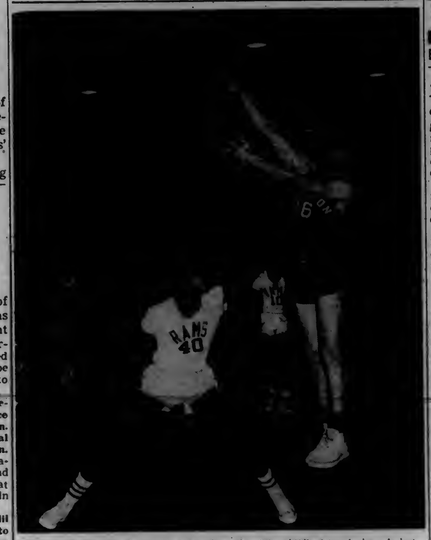
Zeta Phi came back with a 42-26 victory over Beta Phi, Gamma Phi downed Tau Chi 49-24 and the Phi Delts topped Kappa Rho 56-37.

Conceivably, most of the teams in the IFC league still have a chance of winning the crown.

One of the main problems that still prevails in the intramural league is the number of forfeits that have been chalked up. Athletic Director Jack Gaddy feels that teams which might otherwise have won the game never get a chance because of a poor turnout of the members of the squad. This habit, he believes, injures the league as a whole.

Guardsman Cagers Win By Default In 'Racketeer Infested' Mural Go

The local edition of the Alpha Phi Omega National Service fraternity lived up to its name late last year as it handed The Guardsman basketball team its first win through three seasons of intramural play.



On the basis of the newspapermen's 21 straight losses it seemed well apparent that it would take much more than a simple miracle to bring them out of their stumbling plight.

The Omegas were not to be set back by the impossible, however, and put together a fool-proof plot, the very essence of which was to spell out the makings of 'mural history at Ocean and Phelan.

They saw to it that no more than three of their members would show up for The Guardsman fray. The plot proved true to its format and the scribes rode home Iree via a 2-0 forfeit win.

A few fans may still believe that the astounding outcome is tied in with the gamblers' control over boxing, but APO President Pete Pedrotti advises otherwise.

"Service is our line," he said, "and nobody needed it more than The Guardsman."

Cagers Belt Out Three Southern Powers, Move On To Modesto

Now boasting an over-all 9-2 win-loss record thus far, Sid Phelan takes his 1960 basketball forces on to Modesto this week-end to close out the local's exhibition slate via the star-studded Modesto Invitational classic.

Southern California sent up an assortment of their best cage teams to face the Phelan Avenue express but they were all sent back to the smog belt licking their wounds.

The Ram eagers humbled Fullerton 87-73, Sequoias 71-46, Marin 57-53, and Santa Ana 65-52. The only team able to top the locals was the Cal Frosh, 61-52.

Fullerton, rated one of the top teams in the Southern loop, came to town flying high on the wings of a string of victories but was halted in no uncertain terms by the Rams as they topped them 87-73. This game saw the Rams pour in the most points of the young season.

Ram guard Mel Wilson led the scoring for the locals as he dropped in 16. Shelby Dirks and John Lewis controlled the boards for the Rams, blocking many shots to lead the defense.

College of the Sequoias fared no better as they came out on the short end of a 71-46 contest. From the start the Rams showed their class as they scored almost at will.

George Shewl got the scoring honors for the Red and White as he collected 11. Lewis and Dirks got 10 points each.

Then the day of reckoning arrived for the high rolling Rams as they invaded Berkeley to do battle with the Cal Frosh, only to come out on the short end of a 61-52 decision.

Owing to the absence of playmaker Mel Wilson, the Rams never could get organized, but only hung on by experience. Mike Carson led the locals in the losing affair as he potted 15 and Wil Camp surprised the taller Bears as he grabbed many rebounds.

Santa Ana was the unlucky recipient of the Rams' wrath as they bounced back from defeat to squash them 65-52. Cleo Cofield poured in 34 points for the locals as they led from start to finish over the Dons.

College of Marin fell before the Ram wave, 57-53, as the locals gained the necessary drive to gain the win. Wilson held the high point honors as he got 17. Again the Ram defense came through to ward off a possible Marin win in the closing minutes of the tilt.

RA Wrecks' Win V-Ball Pennant

The coeducational volleyball league wound up its season in a close game between the Recreation Association and the Newman Club.

The final score was the RA Wrecks 18 and the Wholly Six 16. Trophies for the leading servers were awarded to Faye Fountain, Judy Schwarz, Dennis Scheehe of the Wholly Six, and Dave Bartholmew of the Wrecks.

The RA Wrecks will play a trophy game with the faculty team, but a date for the game has not been set.

Members of the RA also held a successful Sports Day on campus December 5, RA President Gladys Grassini reported.

Nine Bay Area colleges participated, including Foothill, Contra Costa, Diablo Valley, Monterey Peninsula, Oakland, San Mateo, Santa Rosa and City College. Two hundred and fifty students displayed their skills in the competitive sports of volleyball, bowling, archery, badminton and tennis.

The college achieved first place in volleyball, San Mateo was first in bowling and Foothill placed first in archery. Individual winners in the tennis and badminton games were not recorded.

Baseball Team Lacks Depth Of Power Unit

Baseball coach Lee Elsan announced last week that his forces for the coming season are still very lacking in depth.

Although the original sign-up of December 10 produced some standout performers, there were not enough interested players to promote a formidable squad.

Interested competitors are advised to leave their names in the men's physical education office, regardless of experience.

Ramblings

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

AULD LANG SIGHS—Pawing his way through a mess of dirty confetti, broken champagne glasses and equally - shattered resolutions, little Mr. Achilles Olympics-Year VIII has survived the first crash and is now a strapping bronco of six days' vintage.

By the time New Year's eve had rolled around, the age-old proverb concerning "peace on Earth to men of good will" had been shipped back to the North Pole with St. Nick and his troops, and local sports mongers convened at various residences and watering holes to "ring in the new" by drinking themselves blind and tearing at one another's throats.

Horace Stoneham was hanged in verbal effigy for sacrificing such an up-and-coming catcher as Roger McArdle of Phoenix in his pitchers-at-any-price deal with Paul Richards and his Baltimore Orioles.

According to one hot stove trap-flapper the Candlestick Cowboys are a cinch to do great things with Billies Loes and Pfiel added to the hurling staff, but Jackie Brandt and Leon Wagner should have been enough to complete the Giants' end of the dickering.

If the O's wanted a bigger slice of the pie Horace should have tossed in an engraved gift order good for one baseball stadium to be constructed anywhere in Baltimore by the Charles L. Harney Water-Skiing Enterprises, Inc.

In the category of thrills, spills, and the rest of that rot, professional basketball was voted to run second only to the Sunday pinochle sessions of the retired seamen out in Golden Gate Park.

The reasons concerning why them %?*& 49ers collapsed again the way they did was thoroughly raked over the coals, and everybody from Red Hickey right on down to the peanut venders was hung on the rack as the Stanyan Street Singers provided the background music with "The Hangin' of John Brodie."

Hostilities reached the boiling point at midnight when a tipsy Don Juan came up with the wrong wife for his traditional New Year smootch; hubby horned him with a right to the cookie and following a donneybrook that lacked nothing but Don Dumphy's ABC microphone, the entire colony took in the Washington-Wisconsin fray from Matt Carberry's El Barro Hotel.

As the old staying goes, it's not whether you win or lose that counts, but how you play the game—and a happy New Year to you too, Mr. Murrow.

Tichenal, Conlan Highlight Varsity Awards Banquet

Honoring this fall's outstanding athletes, the Block SF banquet, held on December 7, turned out to be an overwhelming success.

The evening was directed by Al Kent, who presided as master of ceremonies. The first member of the college administration and faculty to speak was Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of City College.

One of the subjects the President discussed was athletics and the college. He strongly disagreed with persons who disregard athletics as an important factor in the school curriculum.

Head football coach at San Jose State College Bob Tichenal stressed the importance "of giving a sport all you have."

One of the highlights of the evening was an oration dedicated to Soccer Coach Roy Diederichsen, given by soccer star Emil Ruiz. Speaking of Diederichsen, Ruiz said, "He taught us things down at the gym that we could have learned at the top of the hill."

The most valuable player award in football was given to Carl Mitchell, in soccer Ruiz and Jim Lynch were co-winners, and in cross-country the coveted award was given to Frank James.

New Year Brings Recollection Of Fond Memories

By Pat Perkins

THAT wonderful year was 1959. As an exciting new year is rung in, memories drift back to fall '59 (a semester full of fun and activity).

The college dances, the Little Theater productions, the football games, field trips and the struggle through midterm exams are all moments to remember.

Recollections of pledge week fun, teas and luncheons are also part of the many pleasant fall semester experiences.

January brings in a new, wonderful year, boasting a new flock of activities. Associated Student elections are rapidly approaching, and many of the campus clubs are also planning for new officers.

Ours To Remember is the theme for the semi-annual Soph Ball to be held at the St. Francis Hotel on Saturday, January 16, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight. The music will be furnished by Rudy Salvini.

January 15 is the current date for the Feminine Fling, a get-together for all women students, including refreshments and entertainment in Smith Hall.

Plans for a new big-little sister program are now being drawn by the Associated Women Students. If all works out as planned, each new woman student enrolling at the college in Spring 1960 will have a big sister. All women students interested in becoming big sisters are invited to attend the College Hour meetings (the first being January 8). Dean Mary Golding may be consulted for further information.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Deadeyes Capture Third Championship

Winning for the third straight year, the Marksman team of the Campus Police captured the championship trophy at the Oakland Pistol Matches, held last December 6.

The four-man team included Bill Donovan, Frank Mateo, Laurence Miles and Richard Werneche, whose total score amounted to 1051 points out of a possible 1200.

Shooting 1067 points out of a possible 1200, the Sharpshooter team took second place against the Hamilton Air Force team. The four-man team included Paul Anderson, Richard Gamble, Jim Olson and Alfred Palmer.

Six campus policemen captured first place medals in the Individual Matches. The men were Donovan, Gamble, Mateo, Miles, Olson and Werneche.

Members of the Campus Police force will be guests of the San Francisco Police Department this Sunday, when they will compete in the qualification matches.

The inter-class shoot is scheduled for Monday, January 18, when all members in the criminology department will compete.

The Caterpillar Club was organized in 1922 and is a club for those whose lives have been saved by a parachute.

Students Receive Profits Earned By Ramporium; Funds Help Support AS Social Activities, Athletics

By Roger Williams

Ninety per cent of all the profits earned by the Ramporium have been returned to the Associated Students in the form of fund allocations from the Student Council, Richard Main, manager, announced today.

This money pays for approximately 40 per cent of the college social activities. It also helps to support the college's athletic teams.

CAB Yule Benefit Drive Tops Last Year's Take

Competition between campus organizations paid off as the Club Activities Board's Christmas benefit drive here collected $300 in six days, CAB President Ben Northrup said this week.

This semester's total almost doubled the $165 collected last year, and Northrup attributed the increase to the competitive spirit motivating the fraternities, sororities and CAB members who participated.

The proceeds of the drive were given directly to approximately 60 needy families in the Bay Area.

Main stated that standard prices are charged for all new books sold in the Ramporium, and those books which are not badly defaced or damaged may be redeemed at half price at the end of the semester.

Books are not the only commodities handled by the bookstore. Aside from the scholarly essentials, there is a line of novelties which includes such things as college pins, stationery, decals and novelty book covers that tend to bring out a brighter side of education.

The Ramporium has been under the management of Main and his wife, Lois, since its opening in 1950. This semester it was necessary to add a new member, Mary Gregg, to the full-time staff. This need for extra help is attributed to the fact that the bookstore, in contrast to previous semesters, is now self service, Main said.

Ramporium received its name through a contest held on the campus and open to all students. The final decision on the selection of a name was reached by a special committee.

The services of the Ramporium are available to all students from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

During rush week Main sometimes hires a limited number of students for part-time work, and those interested in this type of work can consult him at the bookstore.

Film, Statistics Of Polio Move Council Hearts

By Bob Pacini

Crippling diseases was the subject of a highly moving and rather blunt film shown to Student Council last week by Don V. Nicholson, chairman for the March of Dimes crusade in this area.

Nicholson told the council that this year's fund-raising drive, which commenced last January 2, is setting its goal at $65,000,000.

"Polio is down," Nicholson declared, "but not licked yet." He stressed the importance of obtaining the Salk polio vaccine.

Some staggering figures were presented to council by Nicholson, who said that a severe case of polio might run medical expenses anywhere from $10,000 to $45,000.

Polio is not the only crippler that the March of Dimes battles, for Nicholson reminded council that the money collected from the drives is also used for treatment of birth defects and arthritis.

Nicholson then showed the film which was produced by the National Foundation of Radio and Television.

The picture was not for the squeamish, for it showed all too vividly and, some might think, rather brutally, how crippling diseases affect children and adults. Its powerful message—how much persons afflicted with such diseases need help—was brought across more potently than any campaign slogan or plea could match.

Afterward, Nicholson said that the film will be released to local television stations for showing. He stressed the importance of each donation, regardless of its amount, and said that each person's small offering adds up to big amounts.

In previous business, Judy Day, finance chairman, brought before council for approval, the budget for the physical education department. The budget, which totaled $423, was passed unanimously by council.

Students Host AF's Recruiting Career Day January 15

Hopeful pilots will have an opportunity to discuss with the recruiting team of Colonel W. "Doc" Baily and M/Sgt. Stanley Allen on Friday, January 15, the possibility of a career with the Air Force.

This date has been set aside by USAF Recruiting as Career Day here.

There will be a display in the courtyard plus free literature designed to answer the majority of questions generally asked by interested men.

In addition to the display, Colonel Baily and M/Sgt. Allen will be available for a personal interview with any interested individual.

It is not necessary, Sgt. Allen emphasized, to have completed one or two years of college in order to apply for aviation cadet training. High school graduates are accepted.

Thursday, January 21, in the afternoon, is the time designated for the aviation cadet testing.

Applications for this test should be submitted to Dean Ralph Hillsman in S-148 well in advance of the testing date.

Not only is the Air Force interested in future officer material but it is also offering a complete program for men wanting a career in the enlisted status.

In this category, electronics, mechanics, and administration are a few of the careers offered.

Intermezzo, Latest Little Theater Production, Opens Friday Offering Comedy With Philosophic Theme

Romantic comedy with philosophical overtones earmarks the latest Little Theater production, Jean Giraudoux' Intermezzo, slated to open this Friday, January 8, at 8 p.m.

Michael Griffin, drama director, said that the eight performances, running through the four January weekends, will be presented in turn-of-the-century costuming and sets, although Giraudoux' ideas are timeless.

Makeup, he said, is used boldly and dramatically to emphasize the element of fantasy prevalent throughout the play.

Griffin also said that two sets will be used, a forest scene and an interior, created to further the effect of the slightly unreal.

Tape-recording their lines has been a useful help to the performers, Griffin said, because they can hear their own speech in relation to the rest of the cast. Pleased at the newly-tried technique, he plans to make it a regular part of rehearsals.

The plot revolves around the actions of Isabel, a girl of about 18, whose mind is filled with fantasy. She still retains many childhood beliefs, but possesses an awareness of nature, the side of life that is close to truth.

While she arranges rendezvous with a criminal and later his ghost, various representatives of government and science arrive at the town to investigate unusual happenings which she has been masterminding.

Comedy and drama alternate as the play builds to its revealing climax, while under it all lies some Giraudoux philosophy concerning life and death.

The cast includes James Robinson as the mayor; Gerry Running, doctor; Erika Andre, Isabel; Diane Flores, Gilberte; Ann Vallerga, Daisy; Martha Rose, Lucy; Sue Gettins, Viola; Helen Branchcomb, Denise; Ann Osorno, Marie Louise; David Terry, inspector; Charles Graziani, supervisor; Leah Pashoian, Armand Mangebois; Carla Voorhees, Leonide; Phil Osborne, Ghost; Jordy Cooney, second executioner; Ken Stone, Monsieur Adrian, and Bob Tamerdin, Papa Tellier.

Two additions to the cast are Ed Kirschbaum as Monsieur Tulip and Bob Martin as Monsieur Louise. Vic Rosenberg has replaced Frank Stuckey as the first executioner.

Music Program Features Three Soloists Jan. 15

A solo and ensemble concert will be presented by the music department during College Hour, Friday, January 15, in E-8, Meyer Cahn, music instructor, stated recently.

The program for the day includes Haydn's Concertino for string and piano conducted by Tilda Tsoi, a clarinet quartet, and excerpts from Tschaikowsky's Nutcracker Suite. Solos and soloists include John Marks, percussion; Vicky Aumann, piano, and Joseph Meeker, tuba.

A selection will also be presented by the college band.

The purpose of this special concert is to give an opportunity to young instrumentalists to appear in a public performance, Cahn said.

Judicial Branch Seen To Counter Cafeteria Antics

Student government officials are currently discussing the addition of a judicial arm to student government, thereby enforcing the rules of the college and rendering punitive action by the administration unnecessary, Tony Bartmann, Associated Student president, declared in a recent interview.

Bartmann, whose New Year's resolution for student government is to rectify the disorderly situation created by students in the cafeteria, said that discussion of the addition to student government is a result of problems existing in the cafeteria now.

Following an appeal made by John Dunn, instructor in charge of the cafeteria, and a report to the Student Council, action has been taken, according to Bartmann.

Two committees have been formed, one to deal with the before-mentioned branch, which would be composed of a board of student members, and another committee which will take immediate action in the cafeteria.

One of the planned methods of warfare against disorder and carelessness will be to combat forgetfulness by placing signs in the cafeteria reminding students of the rules.

Instructor Here Receives Praise As Art Authority

National recognition and praise for City College is given in the January issue of American Artist.

The story, written by Janice Lovoos, staff contributing editor of the magazine, consists of an interview with Carl Beetz, a member of the advertising art faculty here.

Beetz, who is recognized nationally as an authority on the teaching of anatomy in art, contributed 14 of his own drawings to illustrate the text.

The magazine is due on newsstands January 10.

Counterpoint: Shelters Are Vital To City

By Don Seratti

IMAGINE yourself somewhere in San Francisco, immediately after an approach of enemy planes or missiles has been announced. You might have as little as five or ten minutes to act. What will you do?

If you are at home, you will find the safest place to "hide" and will regret not having a protective mask and an adequate supply of canned goods and water on hand.

Should you have an auto available, your thoughts may turn to fleeing the city until you find the four exits clogged for miles by thousands of people entertaining the same thought.

The actual announcement of an incipient attack would place a large portion of the city's population in a panic—simply because they wouldn't know what to do.

Most individuals appear willing to assume that there probably will never be a nuclear war, and are content to resort to the previously mentioned last-minute measures if their assumptions are proved incorrect.

As long as humans wield the instruments of destruction, however, a nuclear war can never be considered impossible.

Recent findings of the Senate-House committee on atomic energy expose people's complacency as an extremely impractical position. Under the present national defense setup, about 20 per cent of the country's population would perish in an atomic attack; but civil defense preparedness could reduce casualties to about three per cent.

One very practical answer to the problem of unpreparedness is the building of underground bomb shelters in large quantities.

Such shelters could be built under streets and buildings, and would have to be large enough to accommodate anyone seeking refuge. They could contain sufficient supplies of food and medical equipment to last until people are able to return to the surface, thus protecting them from the greatest cause of casualties, blast effects.

The shelters should be situated in strategic parts of the city, so that any person, no matter where he is when a warning comes, would be no more than five or ten minutes away from protection.

The feeling of relative security and certainty of purpose people would possess in knowing the exact location of a nearby shelter would greatly lessen their inclination to become panic-stricken. They would proceed to shelters in as orderly a manner as is possible under such circumstances.

Scientific Age Creates Need For Writers

By Don Seratti

A WIDENING GAP between science and an uninformed populace, which is bound to occur when science becomes so intricate that only thoroughly trained individuals can grasp its many facets, is one of the great challenges facing this country.

Despite the advances made in past centuries by enlightened men such as Galileo, Newton and Darwin, only in recent years has scientific knowledge snowballed to the extent that it directly affects a great many of us, controlling many aspects of our daily lives.

While a 16th century Italian peasant might have gone about his work in total ignorance of the significance of Galileo's famous experiment at Pisa, we of the modern world need only look around us to discover how much science has become a part of nearly everything we do.

From tranquillizers to new fabrics, from jet airliners to new views on theology, we have proof that we are living in the Age of Science.

CITIZENS MUST KNOW

When such an all-embracing involvement exists, it becomes increasingly important for average citizens to keep abreast of the discoveries that are now shaping their lives.

Could we solve this problem by inducing scientists to step out of their laboratories periodically and tell us what they have been up to? Probably not, since it is often very difficult for scientists to convey the nature of their work comprehensibly to the masses. They would first have to conduct classes of orientation to get their message across to those lacking a higher education.

NEED FOR SPECIALISTS

What is needed to close the growing gap between science and the masses is the development of technical writers, a class of specialists whose sole duty would be to cull the essential discoveries from scientists' laboratories and handbooks, rewrite them into an easily digestible resumé, and place them before the masses for consumption.

Griffin To Announce AS Election Results Today

Official results of Associated Student elections held here Monday and yesterday will be released this morning, Election Commissioner Jerry Griffin announced this week.

The days preceding this semester's elections were marked by various energetic campaigning efforts of candidates, including speeches delivered in the open court behind Science Hall.

Another feature of election week was the active role played by Griffin and his assistants, who placed posters around the campus to arouse student voting interest and awareness.

Campaigning reached its emotional zenith Friday when all candidates were introduced at a special election rally and several made speeches outlining their respective platforms.

Complete election results will appear in The Guardsman next Wednesday.

Coronation Of King, Queen High Point Of Ball Saturday

By Elmer Milligan

Winners of the Sophomore king-queen contest will be announced and crowned at the Soph Ball, to be held this Saturday, January 16, in the St. Francis Hotel's Mural Room, President Anthony Lopez stated last week.

The semi-annual dance will be held from 9 to 12 p.m. and Rudy Salvini's orchestra will supply the music.

Admission is free to Associated Students and $2.50 for non-AS members. The appropriate attire is cocktail dresses for women and dark suits for men.

Special event of the evening will be the coronation of the Soph king and queen. President Lopez will crown the queen and present her with a bouquet of roses.

Climax of the ceremony will be the presentation of individual and perpetual trophies to the royal couple, donated by Beta Tau fraternity and Theta Tau sorority.

A fashion photographer will be at the Ball to take pictures of all interested couples. Two 5 by 7 pictures may be purchased for $3; however, an additional sum will be charged for color photographs.

Ours To Remember is the theme of the Ball, which will conclude sophomore activities and draw the curtain on the Fall 1959 social season.

Sophomore Week officially began last Monday and will continue through Friday, President Lopez said.

Voting for the king and queen served as the opening step in the "big" week.

The couple will be elected by a "penny-a-vote" method. Coin boxes bearing the pictures of the candidates have been set up in the cafeteria and at the silver pole in Science Hall for voting purposes.

Proceeds from the contest will be given to the March of Dimes campaign, the sophomore president stated.

The Soph-Frosh basketball game will be played this Friday in the men's gymnasium during a double College Hour, 10 to 11:30 a.m.

Men students who are interested in participating in the game are urged to sign up in the Associated Student office, S-140.

Faculty sponsors of the Sophomore Class are Mary Perry of the counseling department and Edward Rogers, physics instructor. The winners of the king-queen contest last semester were Bob Stammer, Hotel and Restaurant department, and Eleanor Vilanova, Zeta Chi.

The first Sophomore Ball was held during the Fall 1936 semester, and in 1940 a "sweetheart" was elected to reign over the affair.

In the fall of 1945, the first Soph king was elected, thereby giving the men a share in the honor. The dance was given a theme for the first time in May of 1955.

Feb. Registration Reduced To 2 Days

Registration days for the Spring 1960 semester have been cut from three days to two, the registrar's office announced last week.

Registration for returning students will take place Monday, February 8, and registration for new students will be Tuesday, February 9.

Instruction will begin on February 10, lasting through February 11. Friday, February 12, Lincoln's Birthday, is a holiday.

Originally Spring 1960 registration, as listed in the college catalogue, was to include February 8, 9 and 10, 1960, but because there are always more returning students in the spring than new students, the college administration felt that one day could be eliminated, Mary Jean Learnard, registrar, explained.

Opening Nighters View New Techniques In Intermezzo

Artistic and electronic craftsmanship merge to produce an eerie forest scene complete with a befuddled group of staid government officials, an outdoor class of giggling little girls, and a grim ghost in the Little Theater's current production, Intermezzo.

Seen by an opening night audience last Friday, Jean Giraudoux' comical fantasy is to be presented Friday and Saturday nights at 8 p.m. through the three remaining January weekends.

Double College Hour To Cancel 10 O'Clock Classes

A double College Hour this Friday, featuring the Frosh-Soph basketball contest, will result in the cancellation of classes normally held during the 10 o'clock hour.

College Hour during this special double session will run from 9:50, immediately at the conclusion of 9 o'clock classes, to 11:30 a.m. Then, however, the college will return to the regular College Hour schedule, with 11 o'clock classes beginning at 11:40 a.m.

A large cast of 22, dressed in elaborate costuming, perform before two sets which combine some new methods of construction and lighting. Designed by David Terry, who plays the inspector in the play, the backdrops create an illusion of depth and mystery.

The acquisition of a new Concertone, multi-head, stereo tape recorder, said drama director Michael Griffin, along with a major reconverting and rewiring job by Charles Huntley and Tom Wilson, Jr., has made possible a new range of sonic versatility.

Throughout the play, background music, selected and compiled by Jordy Cooney, is used to heighten the over-all effect, as are some live-recorded sound effects.

Erika Andre and Diane Flores Griffin said, will alternate in the lead role of Isabel, switching with the part of Gilberte, one of the schoolgirls.

In charge of decor is art major Charles Graziani, cast as the supervisor in the play, while Gerry Running, the doctor, has the job of wardrobe master.

Martha Ross, in the part of Lucy, designed the costumes.

Others in leading roles include James Robinson as the mayor and Phil Osborne as the ghost. Leah Pashoian and Carla Voorhees play Armande Mangebois and Leonide Mangebois, respectively, while Vic Rosenberg and Cooney play the first and second executioners.

An atmosphere of light-hearted comedy shares the spotlight with several profound messages by Giraudoux, and there are some vividly dramatic moments.

One of these moments comes with the death of the false spectre and the surprising appearance of his real ghost with an ominous promise to return on the morrow and reveal to Isabel the secret of the dead and why they fail to return when it is in their power to do so.

H&R Operates St. Francis Tomorrow

26 Students Fill Key Positions At Major Hotel

By Paul Piansky

The reins of one of the largest metropolitan hotels in Northern California will be turned over to the college's hotel and restaurant majors tomorrow when the H&R forces steer the ninth annual "Operation St. Francis" to reality.

The invitation from the hotel's managing director, Dan E. London, to give students key positions in the hotel's framework was accepted by Lawrence B. Wong, H&R placement director.

The most important hotel staff members, including managing director, executive chef, personnel manager, Mural Room captain, room service and mail department positions, will be replaced by students who will work together closely with the actual officials of the hotel.

Selected to take the position behind London's desk is Peter Coakley. Filling in for the financial manager, George Love, will be Richard Melodia. David Plant's replacement as assistant general manager is Twain Marsan.

Also within Coakley's immediate staff will be Donald Haven, Palle Thomsen and John Lyons, who will fill in for important assistant manager positions.

Rupert Sutton will have the task of filling the personnel manager's shoes, and the food and beverage manager will be Marvin Elfman.

In the hotel's kitchen, James Lydon will take charge with the post of executive chef, while assisting him will be Keith Simon and Ronald Yamaoka acting as sous chef and pastry chefs, respectively.

Managing the clerical duties of the hotel will be auditor Charles Henthorn; credit manager Richard Reutlinger, and head cashier Armand Sanzio.

Tomorrow the St. Francis housekeeper will be Jim Neil, while the building superintendent and chief engineer will be Jack Hansen. Jerry King takes the post of purchasing agent, and the assistant food and beverage manager's position goes to Michael Morris.

Gary Stanton heads the publicity department and Doreen Caldwell takes over the telephone network of the hotel.

In charge of the Mural Room is Stuart Betz; the Grill Room will be under the guidance of Frank Quadrelli. The responsibility of the Terrace goes to Charles Katz, and patrons of the hotel will call Guido Salomone for room service.

David Shen is in charge of the banquet, and Jack Wolfenden is the mail department head. At the helm of the stewards will be Marcellino Alfiche.

In addition to the H&R participants, members of other college departments will also get a good day's experience.

Top H&R Student Wins Sheraton Award For College Grades, Spirit

Outclassing two other students, Peter Coakley, hotel and restaurant major, was awarded the semi-annual Sheraton Hotel Corporation of America award during a presentation dinner January 4 at San Francisco's Sheraton-Palace Hotel.

Coakley, a fourth semester student, was selected over Twain Marsan and Palle Thomsen, two other H&R students from the college.

The award, given annually until two years ago, has been in existence for four years. It is given on the basis of performance, grades and representation of the college.

All fourth semester H&R students are eligible for the award. Three finalists are selected to go to the Sheraton-Palace Hotel by the other H&R students and faculty.

The finalists are interviewed by Harley Watson, general manager of the Sheraton-Palace, and a board, unknown to the contestants, decides on the winner. The board determines its choice secretly to avoid favoritism.

The Sheraton Hotel Corporation of America offers six such awards to colleges around the country, including one to an eligible Cornell University student.

Voluntary Student Support Can Help In Saving S.F. Symphony

THIS COLLEGE has been the host for two Symphony Forum meetings in the past two years. It may never host another.

Artists such as Isaac Stern, Leonard Rose and our most recent notable, the famed cellist Mstislav Rostropovitch, attend such forum meetings while they are here as guests for the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

But, the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra is in serious financial trouble. Faced by a debt of $71,577 plus pay raises for members, and higher operating costs, the possibility exists that this city may lose a famous and capable orchestra with subsequent loss of other prestige in the city's opera, ballet, and the Art Commission Summer Concerts.

It can happen here.

The Guardsman queried Howard Skinner, manager of the Opera House, as to the possibility of the college's having a fund-raising campaign and was informed that one of the main points of the Symphony Forum's rules was that the colleges would never be exploited.

It was felt, according to Mr. Skinner, that the students had too little money as it was, and if they purchased their share of the special Wednesday night concerts, they would be doing their part in supporting the orchestra.

As has been usual during the last three years, this college has bought all of its tickets, and even a few extra not used by other colleges, and several of our students are active concert-goers while others act as ushers for many events at the Opera House.

This is not enough!

Sold out houses every night will not erase the debt.

Private individuals donating freely and to the limit of their ability will erase the debt.

Therefore, we urge the individual student to send his own contribution to the San Francisco Symphony Association, War Memorial Opera House, San Francisco 2, California.

353 Days To Go

Nonchalant Students Attempt To Maintain Resolutions As Cheerful New Year Comes In

Already 13 days of the new year have elapsed. This is ample time for all students to have settled back into their normal patterns.

There have been some slight changes, though, because of that fine old institution . . . New Year's Resolutions.

Many students have sworn to do or not to do a number of things, which has posed several problems. What they did last year openly and without shame, must now be hidden. What they did not do must either be done or seem to be done.

Take the example of Daphne Laughing. For many years this girl USED to eat her lipstick. This always left her teeth red and unslightly, and made it hard to attract the friendly attention of the boys. Daphne finally made a resolution never to eat her lipstick again. She now eats licorice.

Another case is that of Alfred E. Schlofen, who in three semesters has never been able to arrive on time for his 8 o'clock class. Last New Year's Eve he swore on a stack of blue books to reform. Any one who has seen or knows the whereabouts of Alfred might inform his mother.

A third fine example of New Year's resolve is the case of Herman Weak. Herman, sometimes less than an honor student, has a very fine collection of textbooks at which he has never looked. In a fit of gaiety at a New Year's party he resolved to look them over from time to time. Poor Herman, not being used to looking at print smaller than movie credits, has lost his sight and his desire to go on to higher education.

And so the college and its citizens plunge into a new year with resolve a-flying. As their collective eyes are scanning future horizons, they are mindful of their own grim determination and past failings, which make them the potential greats of this generation.

Absolve you to yourself, and you shall have the suffrage of the world.

Art Versus Entertainment: Bergman, Kramer Typify European-American Film Attitudes

TWO EXCELLENT examples of what the European and American demand and sometimes get at their respective cinema houses, examples which typify two extreme attitudes in a visual medium, have been playing the San Francisco screen for a brief period.

Ingemar Bergman's Brink Of Life and Stanley Kramer's On The Beach offer the interested movie-goer the opportunity to compare two first-rate directors, giants in their own right, and to ponder upon the obvious question of who's on first base.

On The Beach is not really a good film. It is trite and easily digested. Hollywood has again made everybody good looking, and without missing so much as a single hair, everyone on the film arrives at the end of it in good time. We all go home feeling profoundly entertained.

The one saving grace which only a brilliant director such as Kramer can pull off with impunity is the unseen undercurrent of doom which pervades the entire story. There is no struggle, either moral or otherwise, because all struggling for anything except sanity has become absurd. Nobody dies; people just cease to exist. There is no end to On The Beach. It just stops, when the human race becomes extinct, ironically at nothing.

On The Beach is not art. It is entertainment.

Bergman the Swedish mystic, on the other hand, becomes Bergman the realist in dealing with life at its very source.

As in most European films, the viewer, if he has not made a mistake, goes to the theater to be somehow uplifted by what he feels as a result of what he has seen. There is a certain charm to this which, in the necessarily reserved opinion of this reviewer, the American would do well to observe.

Bergman's Brink Of Life is a work of art. By no stretch of the imagination can agony in its most stark and vivid form be considered entertainment.

Three women (the interplay of three forces seems to be a Bergman trademark) await maternity in a hospital ward. An intellectual (sensible and reasonable) miscarries and in the delirium of anaesthesia, condemns herself for her inability to love or be loved and yet, in a Bergman close-up that tears mind from body, she speaks of never having been so close to life itself and that it had passed like water through her body.

The second, a blonde Nordic ideal of woman come of earth and water, miscarries for no good reason. Unexplainably, life was denied the child. In the words of the third, a girl "in trouble," "It was as if all life had stopped, as if nothing would ever be born again."

It is, again ironically, this gum-chewing girl with her unwanted, illegitimate progeny still in her womb, who closes what is after all only an episode with a note of hope as she decides to keep her baby.

World-Traveling Model Happy Here

Dress Designer And Fashion Model To Major In Education

Fashion model, world traveller and dress designer are some of the attributes of Charmaine Pratt, a vivacious import from the land of Shakespeare and Chaucer, who is planning to major in education here and call America home.

In America six months, Miss Pratt declared that she has decided to remain in this country and beamed when she said that she has already taken out her first citizenship papers, although it will be a full five years before she can call herself a true American citizen.

Exclusive fashion salons, Simonetta in Rome and Dior in Paris, and also fashion centers in Florence and Germany, are familiar to the blonde Miss Pratt.

While she did modeling of all kinds, including poses for several European fashion magazines, Miss Pratt remarked that she modeled "mostly hats."

In addition to Italy, Germany and her native England, Miss Pratt also spent considerable time in Cuba. She gave interesting and colorful descriptions of the island country before the regime of Fidel Castro.

CHARMAINE PRATT, English miss, currently enrolled here.

Miss Pratt told of the arduous life of the country and the totally alien sight, at least to American eyes, of armed guards patrolling the roads, searching public buses and also of the frequent sneak attacks by rebels in the mountains.

'Missing' Pooches Not Missed Here By English Miss

It was during this time in Cuba, in the famous — or infamous — Oriente province that Miss Pratt engaged in teaching a class of Cuban girls the art of dress designing.

This was sponsored by the government in an effort to start some sort of dress-designing industry which would also help to relieve Cuba's severe unemployment problem.

"Very friendly," was the way in which Miss Pratt described the people of America. She also feels that American schools are doing a better job than English ones of preparing students for life.

It is an extreme rarity in England for a student to hold a job in addition to attending classes, Miss Pratt said.

One of the most delightful observations made by Miss Pratt about America was the absence of dogs on the streets. She explained that in London dogs literally crowd the streets, and the lack of them, or near lack, in San Francisco is a welcome relief.

March Of Dimes

Money Renders Help To Crush 'Cripplers'

Polio, arthritis and other crippling diseases — these are the ruthless adversaries that money collected from the March of Dimes crusade, which commenced last week, helps to battle.

It is all too easy and natural to consider such drives and fund appeals as the March of Dimes all for the next guy with a flippant, casual remark, such as:

"What will my dime matter? It is, after all, only one dime. It won't make any difference."

They may appear to be only shiny, thin coins, but they can be turned into a powerful army to battle the various crippling diseases that afflict young and old alike. Truly, a march of dimes.

First of all, what is a dime?

It's two nickels, yes; it's also ten pennies. But think of them not merely as denominational values, but rather as to what these nickels and pennies potentially could represent.

The first penny might mean a doctor or nurse to watch over and care for a person, now confined to a bed, unable to use his arms and legs.

Penny number two might mean an iron lung, grotesque and monstrous, but, nevertheless, an absolute necessity if a polio victim is to be able to breathe.

The third penny could represent, perhaps, rehabilitation equipment for an arthritic.

Cent four might be artificial limbs, again unpleasant, but, nonetheless necessary, for some unfortunate person born into the world with some defect, and ready to make use of manmade arms or legs.

To complete the first nickel, the fifth penny could be regarded as the way to get the numerous medicines that people struck by crippling diseases must have.

We come now to the second nickel. What is it to be spent on? The answer is research, the tireless, ceaseless efforts of dedicated men and women asking questions and seeking answers that spell the doom of polio and arthritis forever and perhaps discover why babies are brought into the world deformed and thus deprived of a chance for normal, full life.

This is what that little, but very mighty "one dime" can do.

Unblemished Record Snapped . . . Finally

Guardsman Team Looms As Threat For Next Semester Intra-Murals After Fluke Win Over Fraternity

When The Guardsman's basketballers ended a 21-game victory famine recently by whitewashing Alpha Phi Omega, 2-0, they served notice that they are a force to be reckoned with next semester.

The triumph, coming in the scribes' last game of the Club Activities Board League season, came easier than their 21 losing efforts. All they had to do this time was make an appearance at the men's gym to be declared winners by forfeit over the college's service fraternity.

A quick poll of observers who had been set to cover the titanic struggle of cellar dwellers revealed the predominant belief to be that APO had "chickened out" rather than be humiliated by The Guardsman stalwarts.

The Guardsman's stunning conquest wrote a perfect ending to their first four semesters of CAB competition, when they were not exactly the most feared team in the loop. Their first campaign, Spring 1958, began on a note of optimism but ended in a dismal 0-5 won-lost mark, and since then they've been regarded as "push-overs."

That 0-21 record they carried into their tiff with APO, however, is not fully indicative of their progress. They played almost all their games with no bench, and considered themselves lucky if five men suited up for any one game. The sight of five men playing 40 minutes a game earned them the sobriquet, "The Five Iron Men."

Does The Guardsman believe an abundance of reserves and supporters would have made a difference in their overall 1-21 record? "Sure," said a Guardsman spokesman. "It would have been at least 2-20!"

During its first three seasons, The Guardsman was led in virtually all scoring departments by Nick "The Greek" Peters, who was known in the trade as a "tanker" for his ability to cast off from any spot on the floor. (Peters was also the team statistician.)

Since his departure, the club has been made up of such nonentities as Ray "Hooks" Hackett, "Frantic Frank" Dunne, "Dangerous Don" Seratti, and Roy "Rough 'n' Ready" Theobald.

Indications of their coming greatness came in their next-to-last game of the season just concluded, when they surprised everyone by daring to take the floor against the highly touted Block SF five. They threw a real scare into their adversaries, blocking a field goal attempt at midfield and losing by only 72-62.

Then came the dramatic victory over Alpha Phi Omega that established them as odds-on favorites for the coming season. A tradition may have been started. If The Guardsmans "basketball factory" can continue to prove that good writing and good athletes are compatible, watch out for them. They'll be dangerous!

NAR Unit Trips To Spain Via Air

The rain in Spain was observed personally by Roy Twitty, a student of this college who flew to Spain with a Naval Aviation Reserve Unit, November 30.

He undertook this mission as radar operator on one of the planes, and while in Spain visited the picturesque and serene cities of Seville, Cadiz and Jerez de la Frontera. After nine days of active duty, Uncle Sam hustled him back to the hurry-scurry life of America.

The Spanish are a very friendly, informal and honest people, Twitty reminisced. They love to wrangle. An example of this can be found in the custom of shopping, which is not a simple cash and carry proposition, but a highly developed art. They argue, wrangle and bluff until the customer or the shopkeeper, whoever is hoarse first, wins the price war.

Twitty returned home on December 13 with the serene beauty of cities with cobblestone streets, ancient ruins, and dark-eyed senoritas imprinted indelibly upon his memory.

Cagers Collapse Early At Modesto

Rams Held To 12 Shots In 2nd Half, Die, 48-37

By Frank Dunne

MODESTO, Jan. 8.—A zone press by a strong Fresno five beat the Rams 48-37 and sent them home after the second round of the Modesto Junior College Basketball Tournament.

This was the poorest showing by the locals this season as they fell apart before the Fresno defense, which only gave them 12 shots in the second half and the Rams only sank five of the 12.

Fresno went on to the championship game and played Allan Hancock for the title. Hancock, the team that beat the Rams in the Santa Maria tournament, won 57-50.

In the opening round of the meet the Rams edged the El Camino College Warriors 63-54. Trailing all the way until the last three minutes the locals finally started to catch fire as they potted 16 points to beat the Warriors.

Camino led at half-time, 26-20, and it seemed as if it would end with the score in their favor as the Rams played lifeless ball, only staying in the game with an experienced defense that held down the Warriors scoring.

In the second half the Rams showed in parts the offensive power they have as they came within one point of evening up the score twice only to fall behind again.

The game was played in the last three minutes for the Rams, as they hit a scoring spree of 16 points to catch up and beat El Camino.

Cleo Cofield led the scoring for the locals as he netted 17. John Lewis and Shelby Dirks followed with 13 each. Mel Wilson and Vern Coleman headed the defense that held the Warriors down throughout the first half.

In the Fresno contest the Rams reversed the pattern of the Camino game as they opened the game almost scoring at will and it appeared as if they were home free, but then late in the half Fresno woke up and the slaughter began.

The Rams led at the end of the half 22-19, but as soon as the second half started Fresno went ahead to stay, having found the weakness in locals.

Fresno employed a zone press which forced the Rams to make the mistakes that cost them the game. Many times when the Rams brought the ball down court the Fresno five forced them to make a bad pass which they intercepted and turned into a score.

Cofield was held to only seven points by Fresno, only getting three points in the first half. Mel Wilson led the scoring with 12 points. John Lewis collected 11 points for the losing cause.

RAMBLINGS

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

SID PHELAN and his power-packed hoop forces may have the opinion of the experts behind them in their quest for a repeat performance of last year's conference title drive, but Phelan himself is the first to warn that things are not exactly as rosy as they might seem.

"Oakland's Thunderbirds were hard-hit by the loss of All-Conference Rufus Hawkins and sharpshooter Russ Wickwire by way of last June's graduation ceremonies," he says, "but in spite of this Bill Rockwell's gang could well be the team to beat this year."

The T-Birds, whose over-all 9-2 record thus far is a carbon copy of the Rams' effort, boast unparalleled board strength in 6-8 veteran Jim Hatchett, along with a formidable shooting duet in letterman Levan Patton and frosh stalwart Charlie McKinney.

Although the two clubs will not tangle personally until the 29th of this month in the Ram gym, each opens its Big Eight grind tonight. The Rams do battle with Santa Rosa's Bear Cubs in the Red and White barn while the T-Birds journey to Sacramento for their initial fray.

PROPONENTS of the theory that politicians can never get together on anything saw their theory washed down the canal during the recent edition of the Shrine East-West classic when SMU's Henry Christopher and Wyoming's Jimmy Walden pooled their talents for a 17-yard pass play.

In spite of the "let's bury the hatchet" routine, Southern Methodist's Don Meredith swung the election and carried the MVP award back home to Dallas with him.

FORMER UC cage director Nibs Price tells the tale concerning his first assignment as a prep basketball coach back in "them there days."

"We weren't much of a club," he recalls, "and were barely hanging on to fourth place in our seven-team league."

It seems as though Nibs' kids were in the tank against a no better than fair-to-middling aggregate. "With just over a minute to play and us down by two, I hollered for one of our boys to call time out as soon as we got the ball."

You guessed it, pal. One of Price's lads stole the basketball and was driving toward the bucket with nobody near him when one of his teammates inadvertently screamed for a halt.

To make the yarn even more unbelievable, Mr. Price's charges tied up the affair in spite of it all but went on to lose in overtime.

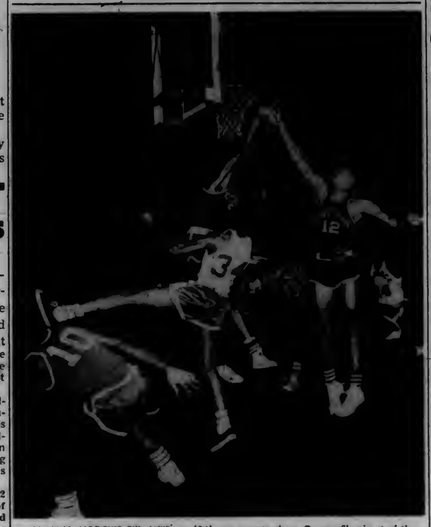
Cofield Picks Up 'All-Tournament' At Santa Maria

Cleo Cofield, star Ram cager, was voted All-Tourney at the recent Santa Maria classic. Cofield, who started his cage career at Washington High School under his present coach, Sid Phelan, really stole the show at the tourney.

One of the main reasons for his success was his spectacular and confusing across-the-key jump shot that he executed with his left hand while moving to the right. The tourney team, which was picked by newspapermen, consisted of the outstanding players present.

Cofield, who was an All-City man in high school, scored 13 points against Hartnell College, 16 in the team's go with Coalinga College, and made a name for himself with his fine ball playing and 23 counters against Allan Hancock College.

Coach Phelan, looking back into the past, remembers when Cofield scored 100 per cent while he was at Washington. His record for that game was 1 for 1. The only trouble, the coach lamented, was that he dropped the ball in the wrong basket.



Cofield has really improved since that terrible day "way back when," and Coach Phelan tabs him a "fine all-around ball player. He does everything well," said the coach; "he's a good dribbler, a good shooter, and he's smart."

Returnees Bring Up 1960 Track Hopes

Although unable to salvage any better than a second-place finish in the All-Conference meet last May, Track Coach Lou Vasquez seems hopeful of bigger and better things from his Ram spikers during the coming season.

Highlighted by the return of stalwart veterans Ralph Mathis (high jump, broad jump, pole vault), Ray Blatz (miler from '53), along with sprinters Ed Tank and Ellis and Alex Jenkins, the Red and White squad could well fulfill his expectations.

Vasquez is also high on a good number of frosh performers.

ALLAN HANCOCK'S Billy Williams (34) manages to chase George Shawi out of the action as he struts the trademark of his rock and roll namesake in play against the Rams in the recent Santa Maria Holiday Tournament. Dennis Bates (12) jumping with Will Camp sank his tip, but Hancock won the hassle, 76-62.

Blockmen Edge GPY, 41-38, Bring Home Mural Cage Title

By Doug Cathcart

The Block SF, having trampled all opponents in the Club Activities Board league, is this season's champion of the entire Intramural league by virtue of their hard-fought 41-38 victory over Gamma Phi, Inter-Fraternity Council champions, on January 4.

The championship game with Gamma Phi was one of the closest championship games in the history of the league, and the 41-38 nod made the blockmen undisputed champs. The high scorer of the fray was Will Gasper of the Block squad, who racked up 16 counters. Charlie Riley and Rudy Vasquez of the Gamma Phi squad also scored very well with 13 points apiece.

The Recreation Association is CAB co-champion. The reason for the CAB-Independent league having co-champions was just what the name of the league implies. At the beginning of the season the Independent league didn't have enough teams for a well-rounded league.

Jack Gee, director of the Intramural league, condensed the CAB league and the Independent league into one. When the co-winners of the league were realized, a play-off game was scheduled to see who would face the IFC champs.

On December 29, the RA players gave it everything they had when they faced the Block SF. This determination, however, wasn't enough, as the Block power rolled over them in a 47-31 victory.

Over in the IFC league, the reason for the championship going to Gamma Phi was a last ditch stand loaded with determination. With the end of the season not too far off, Gamma Phi played some of its best ball. The men had to because at that time the league was still a toss-up, and they clinched the championship with a 50-21 victory over Beta Tau.

Other end-of-the-season action was as follows: Tau Chi humbled Beta Phi with a score of 70-22. In the Tau Chi victory, Tony DeFelippo racked up 12 buckets for a total of 24. Gamma Phi, loaded with determination, trompled Kappa Rho 37-7, and coupled that with their last victory over Beta Tau by a score of 50-21.

Alpha Sigma Delta defeated Tau Chi with a 56-21 victory with Bob Mulhall and Dick Cate sharing the scoring honors with 16 counters apiece.

The league, as a whole, was a hard-fought affair, but the power of the Blockmen left little doubt as to who would come out on the top of the pile.

Varsity Golf Signups Open For Coming Season

Golf season is slated to begin next semester, but Coach Grover Klemmer expects all interested parties to report to the men's gymnasium before the end of the present semester.

Klemmer stated that all persons who wish to play golf should see him there or during the spring semester signup.

The golfers play the same teams as all the other varsity units in the college. The teams are those of the Big Eight conference.

Ram-Bear Cub Go Opens Big 8 Hoop Play Friday Night

Sporting a five-win, six-loss record, the Santa Rosa cagers come to do battle with the Rams this Friday at 8 p.m. in the locals' home court, in the first game of the Big Eight league schedule this year.

The Rams have fared well in the pre-season matches with some of the best cage teams the State had to offer. In the Santa Maria Holiday Tournament the locals finished second behind a hot-shooting Allan Hancock five. The wins over high-rated Fullerton and Santa Ana were the most coveted ones for the Rams in their pre-season slate.

Santa Rosa has a young, inexperienced squad which has only one returning letterman, forward Percy Millett. The rest of the squad are untried freshmen.

Bear Cub Coach Bob Mastin has a dim view for the season ahead, but advised no counting out of his team, for it could be a surpriser.

Using a man-to-man defense, he hopes to hold the home boys, forcing them to make dreaded mistakes and enable his team to take home the win.

Out to see that the Rams avoid these mistakes, Coach Sid Phelan will have his top men, Cleo Cofield, who won top honors at the Holiday meet; Mel Wilson, the sparkplug of the team; Will "Stick" Camp, rebounding ace; Vern Coleman, defensive specialist, and Shelby Dirks, all rolling at top speed.

Santa Rosa will start with center Bob Linsten, forwards Neal Austinson and Millett, guards Curt Motton and Chuck Harless.

The Bear Cubs hope to top the Rams with these openers, but the locals have a different idea about how things will work out.

Call Still Out For Horsehiders

The college's baseball team is starting to take shape, and although no practices have been held as yet, Coach Lee Eisan has his men working out on their own so they will be in better shape for the upcoming season.

Late signups are still being accepted, Eisan said last week, asking anyone interested in playing to consult him in the men's gymnasium or to leave his name with one of the other coaches for Eisan.

Eisan anticipates the coming season with an air of hope but he cannot predict how far his team will go since most of his charges are new to him and he doesn't as yet know their potential.

In order to be eligible, a player must pass not less than 10½ units this semester.

Ram Heavyweight Meets San Jose Ace In AMS Card

An exhibition heavyweight match between Pete Schwindt from San Jose State and Don Beyma of City College will be one of the highlights during the evening of the Associated Men Student boxing matches at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the men's gymnasium.

Schwindt will be boxing for the Spartan team next semester. He is matched against an able opponent in Beyma, who won the intramural tournament last year.

A sidelight during the evening will be a three-man tag team wrestling match featuring Carl Mitchell and Al Kent.

Bring Your Dads is the theme of the evening, offering refreshments consisting of coffee, coke and doughnuts. Admission will be free with an Associated Student card and 50 cents otherwise.

Awards given to the winners of the matches will be miniature gold and silver boxing gloves.

The night's pairings will be:

Bob Vitallis	(120)	Lesli Hom
Al Valle	(126)	Stephan Fujii
Dilcon Harrison	(132)	Stephan Orme
Frank Lucero	(139)	Joe Moorehead
Winnett Hagens	(146)	Bill Wheeler
Harvey Moore	(155)	Alberto Deacha
Tom Pickthall or Max Moses	(165)	James Dennis
Robert Pollitt	(175)	William Civielo
Joe Lichenstein	(Heavies)	Bob Minocchi

*Winner of elimination match scheduled to box Dennis.

THE THREE MAIN COED ACTIVITIES on campus will join forces this Friday to present the Feminine Fling. Art Instructor Here Honored In American Artist Magazine For Outstanding Lithographic Prints

Carl Beetz, artist and art instructor here, has been honored in the January issue of American Artist Magazine for his "outstanding" work in the field of lithography.

The magazine, one of the foremost in the art field, presents 14 of his lithographs and drawings besides an extensive article summarizing his career. The article also calls attention to the college's art department and William Eckert, head of the advertising art department, who works in close conjunction with Beetz.

An explanation is given of lithography, the art of working in black grease pencil on a finely-ground stone.

Much preparation, for example, is put into planning the picture before it can be drawn on the stone. Water is poured on the completed picture and adheres only where the pencil has not drawn. The printing ink in turn adheres only where there is no water.

A skilled printer of lithogaphs can then produce a limited number of pictures.

Beetz' works portray behind-the-scene glimpses of the sports world where fighters, jockeys and spectators are caught in the enhanced shadows of lithography. His realism prompted Los Angeles Times art critic Arthur Millier to sum up his work in these words:

"Another painter for whose work collectors and museums will one day bid is Carl Beetz. He is to 'backstage' life in the sporting world what Remington was to the Wild West!"

The recipient of many awards, Beetz' work has appeared in the Los Angeles County Museum, the M. H. de Young Memorial Museum in San Francisco, the Jepson Art Institute Gallery, and the San Francisco Museum of Art.

An instructor at the college for 14 years, Beetz has also taught at Chouinard Art Institute in Los Angeles, California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, and the Academy of Art in San Francisco.

Some of his art work is currently on exhibition here in the display case at the south end of Science Hall.

Organizations Hop As Exams, Dinners Climax Semester

By Pat Perkins

BEFORE vigorous studying for final examinations really gets underway, many of the campus organizations are holding their club elections and having end of the semester dinners early in the final mid-term period.

Officers of the Political Discussion Group (Sigma Tau Sigma) are as follows: Bob Edward, president; Gerald Jung, vice-president; Lillian Echels, treasurer, and Sue Weiss, secretary.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its pinning dinner at the Plantation Inn last Saturday.

A Miles of Dimes day, sponsored by Phi Beta Delta fraternity, will be held this Friday to raise money for the March of Dimes drive.

The Engineering Society had its first end of the semester dinner at the San Remo last night.

Zeta Chi sorority pledges recently gave a dinner for the sisters in Mill Valley. Election of new officers was held on January 5. The officers are as follows: Irene Palmini, president; Pat Randuch, vice-president; Sue Blue, recording secretary; Phyllis Hurter, corresponding secretary; Ginger Eileard, treasurer; Artys Colten, historian, and Rose Haas, alumni liaison.

Zeta Chi will hold a car wash Sunday at 3356 San Jose Avenue between the hours of 9 and 3. The price for the wash will be $1. A drawing will take place for a free case of motor oil, and tickets for this may be purchased from the sisters around the campus or at the wash.

Operation St. Francis: 26 Students Run Hotel

and Walt Wilshire will be working in the hotel's refrigeration plant; Phil Arenson and Masaru Wadama of the photography department will learn about the internal operation and over-all method of hotel public relations along with students from the journalism department.

Martin Novitski, chief of the Campus Police, will represent the college's criminology department and will assist the hotel detective.

Bill Forshay, Vicky Aumann, Bob Pacini, Carl Mayo and Beverly Ginsberg will make up the visitors from the journalism department.

Smorgasbord Slated For Fling

Dougherty Award Highlight Of Event

Smith Hall will be the scene of a smorgasbord supper this Friday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. when the Associated Women Students join forces with the Inter-Sorority Council and the Recreation Association to present the semi-annual Feminine Fling, Dawnita Campbell, AWS president, announced last week.

The Fling, which is the only time women may wear pedal pusher or capris outfits on campus, will have a Scandinavian ski lodge atmosphere. Miss Campbell explained that this is made possible through the co-operation of Scandinavian Airlines.

Entertainment will be supplied by the airline and students of the college. A travel authority who recently returned from Russia will be the commentator, and ski costumes will be modeled.

The Inter-Sorority Council, headed by June White, will handle decorations while the Recreation Association, led by Gladys Grassini, will take care of clean-up. Marie Radillo is food committee chairman.

The home economics department will assist with the serving. Entertainment chairman is Shirley Clayton, and Margi Hill and Anita Carcione are in charge of posters.

Prospective graduates will be honored and the new presidents of AWS, ISC and RA will be announced and installed. Athletic awards will be presented, and the Margaret Dougherty award, top event of the program, will go to the sorority with the highest scholarship during the past semester.

Miss Campbell extended an invitation to all women students and women faculty members.

Big-Little Sister Setup To Orient New Coeds

Some 200 incoming coeds will be oriented to college life by members of the Associated Women Students via the Big-Little Sister system next semester.

This semester an entirely new setup will function. According to Diane Beeson, co-chairman of the Big Sisters, there have been at least five Little Sisters to every Big Sister in previous semesters. However, this February there will be one Big Sister to every Little Sister.

Last Friday during College Hour, Helen Huffman, psychology instructor and counselor here, met with the group to discuss problems confronting a freshman at City College.

During the process of the meeting, all the women who had signed up were matched with a Little Sister either graduating from the same high school or entering the same major field.

Plans were also drawn for the traditional coketail party to be held Sunday, February 7, for which the chairman will be Martha Bradley. The party is to be held in Smith Hall.

As is the usual custom, the coketail party is primarily for the purpose of acquainting Big Sisters and Little Sisters, introducing them to the college by showing them around the campus, and helping them during registration.

Council Presents Service Awards At Tonight's Dinner

Winners of the outstanding student service award and the outstanding instructor award, chosen from a group of students and faculty members nominated by Student Council last week, will be named tonight at the council dinner to be held in Smith Hall.

Four students have been mentioned as possible winners of the service award. They include:

Dick Fontaine, for outstanding work done in connection with the United Crusade; Roberta Beeber, corresponding secretary of the Club Activities Board; Dianne Beeson, for work done for the Associated Women Students, and The Guardsman's sports editor, Pat O'Shaughnessy, for outstanding work in sports promotion and coverage.

Eight faculty members have been nominated to receive the outstanding teacher award. The instructors and their subjects are:

John W. Dunn, hotel and restaurant operation; Michael Griffin, drama; Henry Leff, radio and television broadcasting; George Mullany, one of the college's two journalism instructors who also works in Graphic Arts.

Harry Eugene Nelson, ornamental horticulture; Gertrude Norgard, counseling; Donald Mareus, counseling, and Elizabeth Wirth, health and physical education for women.

Phi Beta Delta Sponsors Mile Of Dimes Friday

No red tape is involved in Mile of Dimes day this Friday—just adhesive, Vicky Aumann, publicity chairman for the campus March of Dimes campaign, said today.

Phi Beta Delta is sponsoring a Mile of Dimes day with a strand of tape which will reach from the cafeteria to the presently sawed-off flagpole. The tape will make a silent attempt to have itself filled with help for crippled children.

As students enter or leave the cafeteria, they can add a dime to an adhesive tape strip that will be alongside the sidewalk.

The expected amount to be taken in from the Mile of Dimes is $300.

As a special incentive, Phi Beta Delta officers said, a recording of Molly Dee by the Kingston Trio will be given away free for all donations of $1.00 or more. All proceeds of the record, which the trio made exclusively for the March of Dimes, will be turned over to the foundation.

The drive will start at 8 a.m. and finish at 2 p.m. or whenever the dimes reach the flagpole.

IRC Awards Three $50 Scholarships

For the first year since its inception, the International Relations Club has awarded $50 scholarships to three foreign students instead of two. The recipients, Bente Nielsen, Feridoun Virdeh and Annop Assoratgoon, represent Europe, the Near East and the Far East, respectively.

Miss Nielsen came to the United States in August, 1959, from Odense, Denmark. Now in her first semester at the college, she is majoring in chemistry and plans to attend the University of Copenhagen.

Virdeh, an electrical engineering major, is now in his third semester, having arrived here in March, 1958, from Iran. "Fred," as he is called by his friends, plans to teach engineering at the University of Tehcran in Iran.

Assoratgoon is also majoring in electrical engineering and plans to transfer to Berkeley. He comes from Bangkok, Thailand (Siam).

Sixteen Future Dental Assistants To Graduate Tomorrow At Tenth Capping Ceremony In Smith Hall

Sixteen young women who have completed their training in dental assisting curriculum here will be graduated at the college's Tenth Capping ceremony to be held by the Dental Assisting Program at 8 p.m. tomorrow in Smith Hall, Ruth Inskipp, dental assisting instructor, said today.

Dr. Leroy Cagnone, instructor, will introduce Dr. John Tocchini, dean of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, who will be the speaker at the ceremony. The topic of Dean Tocchini's speech to the graduates will be Your Next Horizon.

Also participating in the capping ceremony will be President Louis G. Conlan, Dean Louis Batmale, Mrs. Inskipp, Rachel Kuruma, president of the San Francisco Dental Assistants Society, and Barbara Crawford, certified dental assistant and a graduate of the college.

William Richardson, Alpha Gamma Sigma adviser, will give a musical touch to the program, and will be assisted by Jean Thompson, soloist.

Those to be capped are Gayle Barnett, Karen Bluechel, Gloria Correa, Jodie Ellis, Pam Gardella, Joanna Geary, Virginia Hyde, Shirley Kinread, Joanne Ligi, Jeri-Ann Mackall, Estella Marin, Maureen McCann, Irene Palmini, Judith Skau, Stephanie Tissier and Caroline Vickers.

Faculty and students are invited to attend the capping ceremony, Mrs. Inskipp said.

All Books Due Jan. 20

All library books, magazines and pamphlets must be returned for this semester by Wednesday, January 20, unless special permission is granted for study during finals, Irene Mensing, reference librarian here, announced today. No books will be issued between semesters.

Technical Writers Seen As Middlemen

various fields are the ones from whom capable technical writers can be developed. Journalists, educators, lawyers, technicians with writing ability — these have a background which would enable them to form the nucleus of a technical writing profession.

The advantages to be derived from the formation of a technical writers' class are so numerous that no society can afford to ignore them:

(1) It enables the citizenry to keep pace with modern scientific developments and helps to create cohesion in the society.

(2) If people are better informed, more potential scientists can develop than they would if people felt "cut off" from scientific activities through a growing inability to understand them.

(3) It places on the scientists the responsibility of accounting to the people for their actions and expenditures, and keeps them from letting their knowledge become unduly esoteric and thus from making the uninformed populace completely dependent on them.

Employment Recruitment Teams Interview Engineering Grads Today

Recruitment teams from 23 industrial and technical firms in the Bay Area will interview graduating students of the department of engineering here today for positions in their establishments, according to Joseph Amori, head of the placement center.

Ninety graduates and 55 representatives will begin the day with breakfast at 8 a.m. in Smith Hall.

At the breakfast, Amori will act as master of ceremonies, and will outline the procedures which will be followed during the day. Louis G. Conlan, college president, will give the address of welcome to the procurement teams.

Dean William Mayo will introduce the engineering staff, and John Jipp, vice-president of Ampex Corporation, will speak for the firms.

When the meal is concluded, students and guests will go to Cloud Hall where the interviews will begin at 9 a.m. All industrial representatives will be given a special room in which to hold their interviews.

Each student is allowed to select 10 firms which he would be interested in working for, and will be given 20 minutes to talk to each interviewer, Amori said.

This year the number of firms represented has decreased from past years because of the lack of ready jobs through strikes and other causes, but Amori emphasized that all are looking for men to fill key positions in their companies.

Some of the men on the procurement teams are former students at the college, Richard Heintzelman, '53, Hewlett Packard Company; Elmer Smith, '59, Sandia Corporation, and Harvey Tom, '57, Ampex Corporation.

Firms represented are Ampex Corporation, California State Department of Public Works (Division of Highways), California State Personnel Board (Division of Architecture), San Francisco Bay Toll Crossings (Department of Water Resources), Eitel-McCullough Incorporated, Fairchild Semi-Conductor, Federal Aviation Agency (Region 4), Heat and Control Inc., Hewlett-Packard Corporation, International Business Machines Corp., E. O. Lawrence Radiation Lab. (Berkeley and Livermore), Lenkurt Electric Company, Inc., Litton Industries, Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (Missiles and Space Division), Pacific Gas and Electric Co. (Area and San Francisco Divisions), Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, Sandia Corp., Standard Oil Company of California, Stanford Research Institute, Sylvania (Electronic Defense Lab, Reconnaissance Systems Lab, Micro-Wave Lab), Varian Associates and Western Gear Corp.

US Prosperous While India Lacks Essentials

By Don Seratti

WE AMERICANS lead pretty comfortable lives. Our nation's productive capacity has brought such widespread prosperity that luxury, not subsistence, is now foremost in our minds.

The United States, with six per cent of the world's population, consumes more than half of the world's wealth. The disparity between Americans' standard of living and that of even relatively prosperous European countries is great, not to mention the millions in Asia and Africa who do not even approach the poorer Europeans' standards.

For an illustration of the vastly unequal distribution of the world's wealth, let us compare the aims of average Americans and Asians.

Most Americans occupy themselves with thoughts of how to spend a weekend, wearing clothes that are in style, keeping the family car well polished, and how to keep their weight down.

In striking contrast, millions of people in underdeveloped countries are concerned with keeping warm and dry during winters, providing enough food to keep their children from going to bed hungry, and finding some way to prevent diseases from wiping out their loved ones.

While the American is shopping for a new car, the Indian or Pakistani is searching for something to cover a hole in his shoe sole.

What does one hear most frequently about a country such as India? Not about its poverty, but about what a wonderful vacationland "romantic, picturesque India" is for wealthy Americans who have trained themselves to look the other way should their guide mistakenly steer them through a district of starving peasants.

Since Americans are concerned first with making themselves more comfortable, is there any reason to wonder why they know or care so little about the plight of other less fortunate peoples? People are naturally selfish, and the more they get, the more they are inclined to look upward at those they envy rather than downward at those who could benefit from a showing of generosity.

And yet there are some in this country who, in the midst of personal prosperity, are able to look beyond their own interests and dedicate themselves to the needs of others. Many capable statesmen, for example, are motivated by a sense of responsibility toward the underprivileged.

But in a country of such immeasurable wealth and productive capacity, many more people now in the background could easily step forth with plans for advancing living conditions of the world's needy people.

Some of the ways in which this could be achieved are:

(1) Seeing that the United States spends foreign aid wisely, so that it aids common people directly instead of strengthening only their governments.

(2) Convincing men of wealth to spend some of their huge fortunes (which they cannot hope to spend themselves) on projects to benefit impoverished people.

(3) Informing Americans of the needs of other peoples in hopes they will some day develop a sense of selflessness and pressure their governments into adopting a more workable aid program.

(4) Convincing American businessmen to GIVE their surplus foods to needy countries. Why should food be dumped or allowed to spoil simply because it isn't profitable to sell it at low prices?

Unrelenting courage is certainly required of those who advocate such plans in this land of prosperity, for they are apt to be branded "idealists" who don't understand the "realities" of world politics or economics.

Persons who are able to place the wants of others ahead of their own, who cannot relax while they know others are literally starving, hold the key to worldwide prosperity. For it is such individuals who, by realizing their noble ideals, may some day enable the underdeveloped countries to meet their needs and finally learn what the words "prosperity" and "comfort" mean. What we need is more of these idealists.

Giraudoux' Drama Draws Wide Acclaim

Four More Performances Due As Flores, Andre Share Lead

By Tom Wood

Intermezzo, the two-act romantic comedy by Jean Giraudoux presently being performed by the Little Theater group, has been the object of interest and favorable comment, reported drama director Michael Griffin yesterday.

To be presented two more weekends, with Saturday night, January 30, as the closing date, the production will be free to students with Associated Student cards and $1 for non-AS members. Curtain time each night is at 8 p.m. The Little Theater is located in the basement of Science Hall, S-28.

Featured in the primary role are Diane Flores and Erika Andre, who alternate in the part of Isabel, a girl of about 18, and in the role of one of the schoolgirls, Gilberte.

The play opens with the mayor of a small French village, played by James Robinson, nervously discussing with some high-ranking government officials what has been happening around the town to cause a stir among the inhabitants.

Isabel has "different" ideas about the nature of things. In temporary charge of a class of little girls, she teaches them to think her way, much to the displeasure of the inspector, played by David Terry.

Meeting in the forest from time to time with a murderer, played by Phil Osborne, Isabel thinks him a spirit returned from the other world, when in reality he is hiding out as a fugitive.

Interested in her, he plays along, but eventually meets his demise at the hands of two executioners, thereby becoming a real ghost.

Plugging for her affections and later her hand in marriage is the supervisor of weights and measures, played by Charles Graziani, who attempts to sway her thoughts from the enigmas of the unknown to thoughts of the physical world and the beauties of reality.

During this action, the government VIP's ponder the situation while two gossiping old ladies contribute their highly entertaining 15 cents' worth.

As the scenes progress, Isabel is faced with a choice, and on her decision pivots the meaningful climax.

Others in the cast include Gerry Running as the doctor; Ann Valiergo, Daisy; Martha Ross, Lucy; Sue Gettins, Viola; Helen Branchcomb, Denise; Ann Osorno, Marie Louise; Leah Pashoian, Armand Mangebois; Carin Voorhees, Leonide; Ken Stone, Monsieur Adrian; Bob Tumerdin, Papa Tellier; Ed Kirchbaum, Monsieur Tulip, and Bob Martin, Monsieur Louise.

Guardsman Staff Elects Clifford Spring Editor

Jim Clifford was elected to succeed Bill Forshay as the Spring 1960 semester Editor-in-Chief at a recent Guardsman editorial board meeting.

Other editorial board members are Elmer Milligan, managing editor; Vicky Aumann, news editor; Bob Pacini, feature editor, and Frank Dunne, sports editor.

Outgoing members of The Guardsman include Pat O'Shaughnessy, Forshay, Don Seratti, Geneva Warner and Ray Hackett.

Milligan is former news editor; Miss Aumann was feature editor; Pacini, editorial staff member; Dunne, reporter; Miss Warner, staff editor; Seratti, former editor-in-chief and staff writer, and Hackett, editorial assistant.

Stadium Set For 1960 Completion

Completion of the new college stadium and cafeteria is in its final phase of construction, Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator of educational management here, declared last week.

Seating capacity in the new stadium will accommodate 4000 persons, and Anderson stated that track facilities here will be the best in Northern California when completed.

Added cafeteria facilities will be partly in use next semester, although the serving area in the snack bar won't be finished until the fall semester, Anderson said.

Some of the other construction work going on campus are the remodeling of the men's and women's gymnasiums and the erecting of the new arts building.

Spring of 1961 will see the dedication of the arts building, while the gymnasiums will be fully occupied in the fall of 1960, Anderson explained.

AS Service Awards Go To Griffin, Fontaine

Sophomore Dick Fontaine and drama director Michael Griffin were the recipients of special awards at this semester's Student Council dinner last week in Smith Hall.

Fontaine, a member of Tau Chi Sigma fraternity, received the outstanding student service award in recognition of his work in the recent United Crusade Drive.

Griffin was given an award for outstanding contributions by a faculty member for his efforts as drama department instructor and director of student productions in the Little Theater.

Commenting on the awards, Ralph Hilisman, dean of student activities, cited Fontaine's "helpfulness when people needed attention," and declared that Griffin has "provided unselfish service to the college above and beyond the demands of the job."

United Student Party Makes Clean Sweep As Hayes, Hill Win Top AS Executive Posts

The United Student Party made a clean sweep of six executive offices and captured 12 of 14 Student Council seats as it routed opposing parties in the Associated Student elections here last week.

Wally Hayes (USP) was elected AS president for the Spring 1960 semester as he polled 241 votes to top the other presidential aspirans, Judy Day (Individual Party, 148) and Don Rainman (Party for Democratic Action, 78).

The closest margin occurred in the AS vice-presidential race, where Margi Hill (USP) won over Vicky Aumann (Indiv.), 232 to 205.

Running unopposed for Associated Men Student president, Bill Keane (USP) was assured of that office, receiving a total of 338 votes.

Stevie Tissier (USP) polled 248 votes to 176 for Faye Fountain (Indiv.) and is the new Associated Women Student president.

In a three-man competition for Sophomore Class president, Jack Verga (USP, 255) defeated Leroy Robinson (Indiv., 124) and Bob Edwards (PDA, 73).

The Freshman Class presidency went to John Azzaro (USP, 324), who defeated Ethel Enonn (Indiv., 136).

The seven Sophomore seats on council were filled by Ron Recchioni (363), Bill Lambert (350), Diana Robinson (345), Fred Loebenstein (316) and Alberta Giannini (298) of the USP, and Shirley Clayton (251) and Maryann Gooschin (244) of the Individual Party.

Eight candidates vied for seven Freshman positions on council, with Georgene Peterson (330), Jean Miller (346), Donna O'Leary (341), Flo Galli (333), Terry Alciati (325) and Jan Benatti (299), all of the USP, winning seats. Suzanne Weiss (PDA, 203) was the sole unsuccessful Frosh aspirant.

Proposition B, which would have made the college's fraternities independent of the Club Activities Board, failed to receive the necessary two-thirds of the total votes cast. The vote was 292 yes and 129 no.

According to figures released by Election Commissioner Jerry Griffin, 486 Associated Student members voted, representing only 19 per cent of the 2375 students who hold AS cards.

Griffin termed this voter turnout "absolutely miserable," and believes that the parties began their campaigning too late to arouse sufficient student interest. "Regulations allowed the parties to open their campaign as early as December 14, and if they had started then, more students might have developed an interest in the elections."

Commenting on the election results, the commissioner attributed the USP's landslide victory to its longer background, strong organization and wider recognition among students here. He said that the defeat of the PDA's candidates may be due to that organization's late entry onto the college's political scene.

NEW AS PRESIDENT, Wally Hayes.

Stepped-Up Registration To Start February 8

Returning students with registration numbers up to 6500 for the Spring Semester will register on Monday, February 8, the counseling department explained today.

Registration for students with numbers beginning with 6501 and new students will take place Tuesday, February 9.

Instruction will begin Wednesday, February 10, with Friday, February 12, an official holiday.

Gamma Sigs Win DoughertyAward

Climaxing the semi-annual Feminine Fling held in Smith Hall last Friday night, Gamma Sigma Sigma, local chapter of a national service sorority, won the Margaret Dougherty Award, presented to the sorority attaining the highest scholastic record during the past semester.

Gamma Sigma captured the award, consisting of both a trophy and plaque, by compiling a 2.378 grade point average. Zeta Chi came close for the honor with 2.331, and Phi Beta Delta had a 2.260 average.

The trophy will be kept by the sorority for the next semester while the engraved plaque will remain in Dean Mary Goldings' office. The award was originated in honor of Margaret Dougherty, former dean of women here.

This semester's officers of Gamma Sigma are Judy Cordy, president; Faye Fountain and Jean Freese, vice-presidents; Diane Olson, treasurer; and Linda Jaillite, secretary. Dean Golding is the sponsor.

Council Hears Plan For Night Patrol To Halt Plague Of Campus Vandalism

By Bob Pacini

A committee report from the Campus Police and more discussion on the proposition of presenting an entire group with a service award instead of the usual single student, dominated Student Council last week.

Campus Police Chief Martin Novitski told council that next semester a suggestion has been made to have a guard patrol the campus at night in order to prevent the kind of destruction that has plagued the college this semester.

He cited the many acts of vandalism that have occurred here and in particular, the recent smearing of Cloud Hall with swastikas and various other unpleasantries.

On a happier note Novitski announced that the college's pistol team has won the 1959 marksman championship in the West Regional Re-volver Association. This is the third consecutive time, Novitski said, for the squad also won the championship in 1957 and 1958.

Council once again discussed a proposal by Bud Andress, state Information Service chairman, to present a service award to an entire organization instead of the present practice of citing only one student for the award.

Andress had the Little Theater participants particularly in mind for the service and enjoyment they give students of the college through their productions.

Bill Keane, Freshman Class president, said another fine on-campus group was the Club Activities Board, mentioning the work the board did during its Christmas drive.

To investigate the matter more fully, council, following a procedure that has become something of a tradition, formed another committee, scheduled to report its findings to council later.

Self-Evaluation Now Offers Promise Of Successful Future

THE END of a semester is the beginning of re-evaluation.

Final exams are only a part of this process. More important to the college student is the "Where do I go from here" dilemma.

Many of the perplexed will be graduated, others will marry, some will fail and drift off with no further attempt to make the grade academically. Higher education will lure a fresh influx of confused high school students while many graduates will leave for upper division work at other colleges and universities.

The point is that many of these students still do not have a clear concept of their own capabilities, goals or purposes.

Primarily, the question relates to Socrates' famous "Know Thyself" dictum and this requires an objective viewpoint which few of us achieve. However, since most of our self-conceptions are subjective, this motto becomes unrealistic.

Perhaps a wiser choice would be to evaluate, as scientists do, on the basis of available evidence. This requires that we judge our grades on the basis of effort in the course, study actually done, preparedness and planning forethought, our personal reaction to what we have learned and the value we placed on the subject in comparison to other subjects and outside interests.

Grades are not the only criterion so we must go on to where our interests really lie both in and out of college. Are we spectators or participants, do we prefer reading or watching, are our interests cultural, civic, academic, occupational or athletic?

These questions are related to whether we can concentrate, assimilate, and retain what we read, hear and see as well as coordinate what we do absorb. Can we inter-relate separate branches of knowledge and make them apply to each other?

The answers to all these questions depend upon the individual, but only if they are answered and the implication of such answers are accepted and understood, can they be used to plot a future course.

Finally, this is not something to be put off since most decisions require positive action by the person who wishes to accomplish something. The time to evaluate is now before the next semester finds the individual still floundering, looking for himself and his goals, or dropping out of college to pursue some fruitless and unsatisfying goal.

A decision based upon the foregoing points will lead to a congenial and satisfying aim in life and aid the student in keeping a running check on his own abilities, goals and purposes in a manner calculated to lead to a fuller and more rewarding life.

Student Joins Scottish Chorus

Mathis Sings, Dances In Colorful Opera Ring Production Of Brigadoon

Words of praise for his remarkable talents in song and dance won Ralph Mathis, sophomore student here, a chorus role in the San Francisco Opera Ring's latest production, Brigadoon.

Mathis is one of 20 actors who was selected through open auditions to perform the Scottish song and dance numbers in the little theater's musical production, Jinx Hone, Opera Ring's jubilety director, stated.

Brigadoon, a colorful musical under the direction of Irra Kay, is written in a framework of fantasy. It concerns a Scottish village in the Highlands which comes to life for one day every 100 years.

Mathis' role in Brigadoon marks the second time he has appeared in a drama production. The 19-year-old actor made his debut in Take A Giant Step at the Community Theater in Marin City in May of 1959.

Take A Giant Step, written by Louis Peterson, noted Negro playwright, featured Mathis in the lead role of Spencer Scott, a Connecticut Negro boy who was confronted with the task of "growing up" when his former White friends neglected him.

The play was staged in Marin City and San Francisco for a total of four months.

Prior to his debut in the little theater, Mathis was recognized as one of the most popular college singers on the West Coast.

In the spring of 1958 he became leader of The Ambers, a rock and roll group, whose travels took them to most of the largest cities in the country.

The quartet "rocked" the Apollo Theater in New York City, Bolero Club in New Jersey, Paramount Theater in Los Angeles and numerous other clubs in Chicago, Hollywood and Philadelphia.

Mathis enrolled here in September of 1958.

His third talent, as an athlete, was displayed throughout last semester.

During track season, he became the college track and field squad's leading high jumper, in addition to his participation in two other events, the broad jump and pole vault.

One of the track star's most important victories was scored at Sacramento on April 24, 1959. He won the high jump at 6 feet and placed second in the pole vault, giving the college enough support to win the conference meet with a total of 83½ points.

Three weeks later, the devoted track star was injured at the Big Eight Conference Championship Meet at Sacramento.

Mathis, competing in the pole vault, attempted and made the height of 12 feet; however, his descent from the bar resulted in the dislocation of his left ankle, thereby eliminating him as a participant in remaining events.

"Mathis was a good athlete and was very valuable to the team," Coach Louis Vasquez commented, adding, "His accident at Sacramento was very unfortunate, for if he had not been injured we would have won the championship meet."

Triumphs, Honors . . . And Vandalism

Achievements Mark Semester

By Don Seratti

As preparation for finals heralds the end of another scholastic session, students here gazing in retrospect will have to look hard to find a dull moment in the semester now drawing to a close.

Appropriately, the Fall 1959 semester, part of the college's 25th year, was an eventful one. While its 7000 students pursued their daily search for truth in the classrooms, the college got into the limelight by virtue of a multitude of achievements.

City College was the center of attention among northern California junior colleges when it hosted the California Junior College Student Government Association Conference (Northern Region) in October. Four hundred delegates from 26 two-year institutions met here to co-ordinate plans for the statewide CJCSGA Conference in Berkeley, in November, to which this college sent six delegates.

Nineteen Hotel and Restaurant students carried the college's name into the commercial world as they took over the St. Francis Hotel for a full day in the ninth annual "Operation St. Francis" last week.

Further laurels came to the college when the International Relations Club won a first-place trophy for its float in the Pacific Festival parade, and Saiko Suzuki, a former student here, captured an art scholarship at the New York School of Design.

The Little Theater amused and thrilled its audiences with comedy and drama as they presented Blithe Spirit and Intermezzo.

At the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea, 11 women instructors, who have served at the college since its inception in 1935, were honored.

Visitors to the campus included Guiseppe Medici, Italian Minister of Education, and Ruth Bernhard, a nationally renowned photographer.

An outbreak of vandalism in October and November failed to mar the college's overall success, but still attracted campus-wide attention. Within a few days, the center court flagpole was broken off in a night attack and the Redwood Ram underwent a kerosene bath and superficial burning.

The college's glory extended into the sports world as Roy Diederichsen's Ram soccer team finished with a 6-0-1 record to take its first conference crown.

In football, a losing Ram season was compensated for as two outstanding linemen, guard Carl Mitchell and center Everett Stehn, were named to the All-Big Eight Conference team.

And The Guardsman, still giddy from the effects of its first basketball (forfeit) win (courtesy Alpha Phi Omega) tried to cop an additional double College Hour for the students only to run into an alert faculty which frowns upon such frivolity so close to finals. A good try though. . .

The World Of Nevil Shute

On The Beach Message Aims To Fight Bomb Complacency

At this time in history when man is deeply concerned by the looming possibilities of the evils of nuclear war, perhaps bringing with it the annihilation of the entire population of the earth, it is ironic to learn of the death of a man who has done much to alert people to this danger.

On The Beach of Australia, people wondered just what happened and who started it. They knew that in a few short hours their neighbors to the north had ceased to exist. Now they must wait helplessly for a slow and painful death controlled by the winds.

Meanwhile, they had to live, and it is characteristic of man to cling to life as long as possible and give it up reluctantly.

During this time, some of them discovered why they ever existed, others sought a way out, but all asked, demanded, "Why?"

But their queries no longer mattered. What they did, said and thought would not matter next year for there would be no next year for them. It would come and leave.

Then a decade and a century. All eternity would come and find lifeless homes and empty streets. Then a time would come with nothing remaining reminiscent of civilization.

Thus is the state of the world imagined by Nevil Shute in his significant best selling novel published in 1957 and immediately hailed by the world's critics. Because of its urgent message, it was made into a movie which recently made its premiere in many great cities in several countries.

Screaming a message designed to combat a sense of complacency because "everyone has so many bombs that think about it is the "moment of truth." A noted philosopher and humanitarian once said, "The end result of human endeavor is the sum total of human effort."

Whoso would be a man, must be a nonconformist.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Midnight Oil . . .

Students Cram For Final Exam

Once again that curious and forbidding time in the life of a student has arrived. Final examinations, the last major conflict of the semester, are but two days away.

Tonight and tomorrow students will be pulling dusty and forgotten texts off the shelves in an attempt to arm themselves as the battle draws near. Midnight oil, that ill-used commodity, is being issued to all academic gladiators.

On campus there is an air of fearful anticipation as hoards of students rush to and from classes not wanting to miss a single important word.

Attendance is the highest of the semester as students pile into class hoping to pick up heavier armament with which to battle their machine-scored adversaries. Students hang on every faculty-uttered word expecting all pertinent facts to be brought out in the next two days.

Not all students have been remiss in their studies, however. For these students, a minority to be sure, finals do not represent a battle, but the last opportunity of the semester to prove and improve their academic status.

But whether this period means conflict or confirmation, there can be little doubt that it is the "moment of truth." A noted philosopher and humanitarian once said, "The end result of human endeavor is the sum total of human effort."

Switchboard Operator Still Hospitalized

SEVERELY INJURED in a pre-Christmas accident was Marie Kenison, the college's switchboard operator in S-169. Mrs. Kenison, who has been at the college for 13 years, will be replaced during her absence by Ann Maody of the mimeographing department.

As the result of a serious accident which occurred at a pre-Christmas party given at the Little Theater, Marie Kenison, the college's switchboard operator and "voice" of City College, has been hospitalized for seven weeks, according to Ruth Hoberg, secretary to Oscar E. Anderson.

Mrs. Hoberg said that Mrs. Kenison has been bed-ridden in San Francisco Hospital, ward 45, since the accident on December 10. She suffered a broken arm, wrist and leg in addition to a fractured pelvis after falling from the stage.

The Little Theater stage has no steps leading from the floor to the stage proper, and Mrs. Kenison, in stepping from the platform, slipped, causing the four injuries.

The suggestion was made recently, Mrs. Hoberg stated, for students here to band together and send Mrs. Kenison a card or note, and Mrs. Hoberg has offered her assistance. To join in the move, students can do so by calling on Mrs. Hoberg in C-303.

There is no telling just how long Mrs. Kenison will be disabled.

Shots At Ramdom

By Vicky Aumann

OF WHAT VALUE is U.S. education? Adlai Stevenson recently echoed the popular cry for a more intense academic training in the nation's schools, deploring the present tendency of colleges to fill precious hours with "trivial" extra-curricular activities, and asking a sharply pointed question: ". . . If colleges give scholarships to boys with co-ordinated bodies rather than with co-ordinated minds, which one will the students value?"

Mr. Stevenson's views are neither uncommon nor invidious to the current trend of thought on schooling. There is, however, in addition another great misfortune which is slowly but surely creeping into the U.S. education system.

In our IBM age, most schools and colleges today have an ever increasing number of examinations marked by machine. The student is supplied with a special graphite treated lead; all the questions are either multiple choice or of the true and false type. What you do is simply mark answer A, B, C or D in the appropriate place. The machine does the rest. At the college, unfortunately, we are quite familiar with this system.

Recently publicized in the local papers was the case of a student at the University of Chicago who had gained access to the answers to a test in economics.

"I can tell you everything there is to know about Economics," he said to his fraternity brothers. "A, B, B, C, D, A, A, D, C, C, B, B, A, D, B, C, C, D, A, A, B, D, A."

He was graduated with highest honors. A monkey just marking the A's was going to get one out of four right anyway. This student obviously knew more than a monkey.

RAMBLINGS

One Man's Advice In Parable Form

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

IT HAS BEEN a long time since the first Red and White clad Ram athletic unit stampeded onto the field of battle, but despite the tremendous changes in style of play since then, there has been one thing which has ever remained the same.

In order to bring about an attendance figure worthy of the Phelan Avenue masthead, promoters have been forced to resort to the lowest form of athletic advancement known—in desperation they have stooped to the use of the gimmick.

Some have met with a reasonable amount of success, but many were laughed at by their fellow students and labeled nothing more than a contingent of scottish blockheads.

To these insatiable students who scream for action but never seem to be on hand for that first pitch or opening kickoff, the following parable is offered as one man's humble advice toward an ultimate solution:

* * *

In a small province, very far away, there once lived a pair of young men who considered themselves very wise in all things, for they were indeed very proud and wanted very much to be admired in the eyes of the land's people.

But there was one thing which kept them from being acknowledged as the smartest men in the province. Outside a large town on a little farm on top of a hill there lived an old farmer who always proved himself wiser than these two men, for he was a very wise man.

AN ANGRY PAIR

Now the people of the province knew this, and so when they had any problem which required the advice of a very wise man, they went out to the old man's farmhouse in order to receive guidance. This made the two men angry, for they were a very jealous pair.

To show themselves wiser than the old farmer they devised a plot by which they thought they would trap him in front of all the people in the province and then become the wisest in the land.

They decided that they would go out to his farmhouse with one of them holding a partridge in his hand with enough of the bird's wing exposed so that the old man would have no trouble at all in knowing what it was.

THE TRAP SET

Then they would ask him whether the bird was dead or whether it was alive.

Now if the old man said that the bird was dead, the one who was holding it would release it, and as it flew away all the people would be able to see plainly that the old man was not wise at all, but indeed a very great fool. If he said that the bird was alive, the man who was holding it would squash it in his hands.

By this the people would know that the old man was not as wise as was thought and so they would turn to the two young men for future counsel.

Thinking that this was indeed a foolproof plot, they met with all the people in the province and gathered the whole group of them together in the largest town.

When all of the people in the land were assembled in this town, one of the two young men addressed them in this manner: "Now you all think that the old farmer who lives up on the hill is much wiser than my friend and I and, indeed, the wisest in the land. But you are mistaken, and if you will go with us to his house, we will prove your error to you."

THE TRAP SPRUNG

In accordance with their original plans, the two young men approached the old man, one holding the partridge in his hands and the other speaking thusly:

"Tell us, wise old man, what is it that my friend is holding in the palms of his hands?"

The old man told him that it was a bird. "Very good," said the other of the two. "But, may it please you, tell us one more thing: Is the bird dead, or is it alive?"

* * *

It is the answer of this ancient sage that would go well in the pipes of those who laugh at the futile efforts of our sports promoters:

Looking toward the man who held the tiny bird within his hands he said plainly, "It's up to you."

Comets Unable To Contain Rugged Ram Board Play, Collapse, 60-36

By Frank Dunne

Contra Costa came out on the short end of a 60-36 decision Friday night as the Rams staged an awesome display of offensive and defensive power. The Comets went into the game confident and before the game was five minutes old they were a very dismayed ball club.

The Rams put together the brand of ball they were supposed to have produced all season, completely out-playing the Comets in every department.

For the first five minutes of the contest both sides were playing even ball. Then the Rams broke loose a fast break that caught Contra Costa asleep and from then on it was the Rams' ball game.

Mike Carson led the play for the locals in the first half as he stole the ball eight times from the fumbling Comets and returned the ball down court for the lay-up or a quick pass to Mel Wilson who would race down the other side of the court for the follow-up.

The Carson and Wilson duo was responsible for the 35-14 spread enjoyed by the Rams at half-time.

Cleo Cofield and John Lewis, working under the baskets, controlled them as if they owned them. Three times during the first half the Comets took five shots in a row and each was blocked until Cofield and Lewis tired of playing "handball" with Contra Costa and turned their efforts toward controlling the defensive boards.

In the second half the Rams didn't give an inch to the visitors even though Sid Phelan cleared the bench to give all his charges a chance.

Phelan opened the second stanza with his first club but quickly ushered in all the replacements he had and every one of them scored.

Contra Costa had its first string in all the way in an effort to save face by closing up the score against the locals' second team, but they fared no better against the fired-up subs.

Nate Jackson and Dennis Bates led the home town club in the second period, both scored their share of points to keep the Rams on top.

When the buzzer sounded to end play the Rams headed for the dressing room enjoying a two-win no-loss record in league play, along with the knowledge that they had jelled into a solid unit able to take the test of any teams the Big Eight has to offer.

Next Friday the Rams travel to the State Capital to battle the Sacramento Junior College Panthers, a team composed of mostly new players, but this promises to be a good test for the locals.

Block SF Looks Ahead To Catering Business

Al Kent, head of the Block SF Society, stated his club is interested in operating the concession stand in the new track and football field.

This would be a service to the college as well as a financial help to his organization, Kent said. Members would handle the entire operation of the stands, designed for over-all student enjoyment.

Santa Rosa Falls To Tune Of 56-40

By Don Seratti

Shaking off an early cold spell, the college's cagers overcame an early deficit and went on to rout Santa Rosa's Bear Cubs, 56-40, in their Big Eight Conference opener here last week.

The victory was a team effort as all Rams who saw action combined to out-hustle and out-defense the Santa Rosa entry. Scoring was also evenly distributed as Mel Wilson, Cleo Cofield and John Lewis chipped in with 15, 13 and 11 points, respectively.

After both clubs started slowly, Santa Rosa untracked itself first, cracking the Rams' inner defense briefly and charging to a 9-4 lead after about five minutes. The Rams lost the ball twice on bad passes, had a shot blocked, and couldn't find the field goal range.

Then suddenly they looked like a new team, cutting loose with six straight points to take a lead they never relinquished. Wilson hit on a set shot, Lewis sank two free tosses, Vern Coleman broke loose for a lay-up, and Cofield hit a jump shot. At this point City College held a 12-9 lead, and the Bear Cubs never recovered.

From the start of this drive until the half ended, the Rams rolled up 26 points to Santa Rosa's nine and held a commanding 30-18 halftime lead. They settled down after pulling ahead and were a much steadier club for the remainder of the fray.

The second half saw Sid Phelan's charges keep the Bear Cubs at bay while adding to their own lead. Dennis Bates, Mike Carson, Nate Jackson, Phillip Otis and Bob Grayson saw action in the second half, with Carson giving the Sonoma County entry fits with his pressing defense and ball-hawking.

Three minutes into the period they struck again with lightning speed as Cofield drove through the Bear Cub defense for an impressive layup, Coleman laid one up, and Wilson stole the ball and scored, all within a few seconds. At one point in the second half the Rams led by 23.

It was these scoring outbursts, combined with a tough zone defense that kept the Bear Cubs off balance, and all-around hustle that did the trick for the Phelan Avenue five.

Behind the three leading Ram scorers were Coleman with seven, center Wil Camp and Grayson each with four, and Bates and Carson with one marker apiece.

Lewis was a deadeye from the charity line, making five of six free throw attempts. He also meshed three field goals at crucial periods to contribute to the Rams' first-half blitzkrieg attack, adding a humorous touch to the game by dunking one of them at the close of the half.

Wilson's 15 points were garnered mostly on sets and jump shots from outside. He joined Lewis and Cofield in the first-half scoring surge that gave the Rams their decisive margin.

City College opens its conference road slate this Friday in an 8 p.m. contest at Sacramento.

'Can't Lose' Blockmen Reign Due To Team Spirit, Ability

Owing to a display of team spirit and sheer ability, the Block SF, reigning as Intramural League champions this year, were dubbed last week the Blockmen who just "couldn't lose" as they swept into the coveted position because of a no-loss season.

The Block team started its victory train rolling at the start of the season by slaughtering the Recreation Association 60-26. On November 3, only one night after their win over the RA, the Blockbusters crushed Alpha Phi Omega, 96-26.

With two victories under their belts, the Blockmen then rolled over and outclassed the Filipino Club, 50-20. On November 30, they whipped the Hotel and Restaurant Club, 55-16. From the beginning of the H&R game the end was inevitable, and the cooks scored only 5 points in the first half.

Well on their way to the league championship, the Block SF came close to losing this till, for the hard-fighting Guardsman squad put up a battle such as it had never done before. The power of the Blockmen, however, really manifested itself that night as they defeated the fighting Guardsman in a 72-62 game.

Having won the Independent crown the Blockmen went after the entire CAB-Independent championship. On December 29, the Block team went up against the CAB champs, the Recreation Association, and when the final buzzer sounded had won, 47-31.

Pitting their all against Gamma Phi, the Inter-Fraternity champs, the Block SF defeated the fraternity men in their final go of the season.

So, by way of edging out Gamma Phi 41-38, the Block SF reigns as Intramural League champion. Their power showed its might, and their might brought home the crown.

Exhibition Match Is Added Touch In AMS Ring Card

A "no-decision" heavyweight match between the college's Don Beyma and Pete Schwindt highlighted the Associated Men Students' boxing show last Thursday night, while a three-handed tag team match featuring six members of the varsity football team provided the comedy.

The boxing results are as follows: Ben Vitalis (120 lb.) downed Les Hom; Deleon Harrison (132 lb.), who was stunned in the second round, made a great comeback in the third to defeat Stephen Orme.

In the 139 lb. division Joe Morehead, voted outstanding boxer of the evening, beat Frank Lucero. The 155 lb. division saw Bryan Gould, voted fightingest fighter of the smoker, outslug Alberto de Acha.

Other results: Billy Wheeler (146 lb.) over Winett Hagens; Richard Phillips (126 lb.) trompled Stephen Fujii; James Dennis (185 lb.) over Max Moses; Robert Pollit (175 lb.) topped Bill Civiello, and in the heavyweight division Joe Minocchi over Joe Lichenstein.

Swimming Sign-ups Get Underway Today

All students interested in a berth on the varsity swimming team should sign up with Coach Roy Burkhead today in the men's gymnasium at 3 p.m.

Through this sign-up, Burkhead hopes to get some idea of potential strength of the team so that he can start filling the events in which there will be competition. He will also check the academic standings of his charges and keep them eligible for the team.

Sacramento Hosts Locals In Panther Fray Friday Night

Sacramento plays host to the locals at 8 p.m. Friday in the first of the Rams' road conference games.

The Panthers have a young squad composed of freshmen and very few lettermen. Frank Calacano and Walt Pfeiffer are the only second year men.

Gerald Anderson, coach of the Panthers and ex-Cal great, says his team will use a man-to-man type of defense to try to halt the Rams.

This system should put the pressure on the man with the ball and force him to shoot a bad shot or make a faulty pass. Local guards Mel Wilson and Vern Coleman will have the job of overpowering this defense.

The Panthers will start with forwards Charles Jackson and Calacano, guards Pfeiffer and Tom Pugliese, and center Charles Walker.

Walker is the big gun for the Sacramento ball club. He has led his team in both scoring and defense.

Sacramento showed great promise for a young team in the Modesto Tournament against some of the roughest teams in the state. This proves they are not to be counted out in the race for the roses in the Big Eight.

The Rams, by their play in the pre-season tilts, show they are a team that runs hot and cold, coming up for some and in a slump before other teams. If they can become more steady they have the material to garner the honors in the league.

Cleo Cofield has been the leader of the team this season in the scoring department, while Mike Carson and Mel Wilson have led the sturdy Ram defense, which has seldom faltered during a season of spotty offensive productions.

Sid Phelan is working his charges in an effort to bring them around for teams like Sacramento, for each win in the early season will give the locals a cushion in the latter part when the going for the honors gets a bit tougher.

Campus Activity Slows As Finals Approach Rapidly

By Pat Perkins

THIS week being dead week, quiet has descended on the campus, and no new activities have been scheduled in hopes students will study for final exams.

Many of the campus organizations have already made plans for after finals and next semester.

The Associated Women Students are planning the semi-annual coke-tail party, presented each semester for the new women enrolling at the college. The party will be in Smith Hall, and is scheduled for Sunday, February 7. At this time the new coeds will meet their Big Sisters who will in turn show them around the campus and help them with any registration problems they might have.

Alpha Phi Omega (men's service fraternity here) recently held its semi-annual end of the semester banquet at the Seven Hills restaurant, according to George Carlino, chairman of the dinner. The fraternity's new officers are Dick Trauner, president; Bob Sickman, vice-president; Gary Lait, service secretary; George Huga, social secretary; Dick Pool, recording secretary, and Pete Pedrotti Sr., treasurer. The remaining officers will be selected by presidential appointment next semester.

Students of the retail floristry department attended their semi-annual dinner held at the Penguin Club, January 13, Mary Hope Jacks, director of the department, announced.

Dan Ciernick, wholesale florist grower, was the guest speaker. Guests of honor were Bob Stien, first graduate of the retail floristry department, and his father, Victor Stien, adviser to the floristry committee.

Coeds were reminded last week that Board of Education policy provides that capris, peddle pushers, and other casual regalia are campus taboo—even during finals week.

A one-man photography show featuring the talents of Bev Pasqualetti, photography instructor here, is currently on display in the Cloud Hall faculty gallery.

The photo collection, which consists of pictures of Yosemite Valley, scenic portraits, documentary prints and picture-story shots, is the result of a skilled career that began in 1935.

One remarkable photograph in the display is the picture of a church in Shuri, Okinawa, the only building left after the invasion of the island.

Pacqualetti is the originator and present co-ordinator of the college's photography department.

Task Force Of Twenty-Six Hotel, Restaurant Students Takes Key Jobs In Ninth Operation St. Francis

By Bob Pacini

Armed with the knowledge that two, three and four semesters here have embedded in them, a task force of 26 Hotel and Restaurant students invaded the St. Francis Hotel last week in the ninth annual Operation St. Francis.

Accompanied by representatives from the journalism, publicity and photography departments, the H&R students were shown the vast hotel from its basement level to its towering 13th floor overlooking Union Square.

Staff members of the St. Francis who relinquished their posts for the day to their H&R counterparts all stressed the importance and value of a program such as the "operation."

Robert Snider, one of the assistant managers and a City College graduate of 1956, described the program as having "real merit" and said it was a fine opportunity to let students get a smattering of what running a large hotel is like.

The college was commended for the "excellent job" it was doing in its H&R department by David Plant, assistant general manager, who was replaced for the day by Twain Marsan, a fourth semester student here.

Following a luncheon in the Mural Room students were guided on a tour of the hotel, seeing such departments as the mammoth kitchen, the complicated switchboard room and various other departments.

The climax of the tour was a visit to the magnificent Presidential Suite on the sixth floor, which had been recently remodeled at a cost of $35,000.

Photographers from three local television stations, KPIX, KRON and KGO, took films of the students wandering through the hotel, including a shot of Vicky Aumann, Guardsman feature editor, scrubbing a greasy pot over a sink full of hot water in the kitchen.

The news films were shown on evening news programs.

At the conclusion of the day, staff members and their student counterparts attended a reception given by the hotel. Guests at the affair included Dr. Louis Conlan, president of the college; Louis Batmale, dean of instruction, and John Dunn, H&R department instructor here.

AMS Provides Suggestion Box For Voice Of People

Constructive criticism concerning the college can now be effectively aired by students, stated Bill Keane, Associated Men Student president.

Keane's group has placed a suggestion box outside S-140, the student government office.

The organization has set up an investigating team composed of Bob Basso, Will Waller and Keane. The team will look into the feasibility of the suggestions, and the ones deemed practicable will be presented to the Student Council for debate.

Conlan Cites Gains In Education Here; Scholarship Climbs

By Bob Lane

That educational achievements have been keeping pace with the rapid expansion and growth of City College is the view expressed recently by President Louis G. Conlan.

Accurate entrance testing and research, counseling and guidance, rigid grading, and higher academic standards have strengthened and refined the college population with the result that scholarship has been improving steadily during the past five years.

Highly acclaimed by faculty and administrators is the two-day institute each semester during which members of the faculty meet and discuss new methods and ways to improve instruction, thereby introducing a continuous process of improvement. This year's institute is scheduled to be held February 4-5.

President Conlan pointed out that students have displayed an active interest in all of the college functions during the semester. Their initiative has culminated in several different phases to bring the semester to a successful conclusion.

Successful activities this past semester were the Regional California Junior College Student Government Association Conference held in October; the "Nike Goes to School" program presented by the Army Air Defense Command which 3000 students attended; the first United Crusade Fund Drive, and the Club Activities Board Christmas drive for the needy.

Looking toward the future, the President stated that, in all probability, the library will be open evenings next semester. This will enable students working during the day and extended day students to make use of the library facilities.

An advisory committee is now being formed to meet and consider the factors involved in establishing a two-year program leading to an Associate of Arts degree in nursing.

Ahead of schedule because of the exceptionally good weather are the new athletic facilities, the new classroom building, and the addition to the cafeteria. Occupancy of the new classrooms is expected for the art and music departments by the Fall 1960 semester.

Evening Division Offers Biology 40

Biology 40, a study of the Bay Area's flora and fauna, will be offered next semester for the first time as a part of the college's extended day program, Mary Jane Leanard, registrar, said today.

Registration for evening classes, which account for more than 20 per cent of the college's students, begins Thursday, February 4, from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., in the library.

Along with Biology 40, courses in business administration, chemistry, communications, economics, English, geology, history, humanities, mathematics, music, ornamental horticulture, philosophy, political science, psychology, sociology, speech and zoology will be available.

Students registering for the evening classes are limited to six units unless they have previously completed at least six units with a grade-point average of 2.5 or better.

All students, including interested day students, must take the courses for credit, since auditing of night classes has been discontinued, Miss Learnard explained, because of space limitations.

Evening class instruction begins Monday, February 8.

Student Vote Power Behind Government

ONE of the privileges Associated Students possess is the right to vote for their own student government officials to act as their representatives. An additional privilege is the right to run for such offices if all requirements are met.

Many new students are unaware of the power of their vote or the way in which they can avail themselves of the opportunity to act in and become known in student government when they have purchased the card which makes them official members of the Associated Students.

MEETINGS OPEN TO A.S.

One way in which new students can become acquainted is by attending Student Council meetings, held every Tuesday and Thursday, and which are open to all AS cardholders.

There they can watch AS President Wally Hayes and the new council pass on budgets totaling nearly $25,000, as well as help to set up rules and regulations for students, form committees for specific problems, act upon advice of cabinet members and in general, act as the executive and legislative branches of the college in the same way the corresponding offices operate in the state and national government.

The council is composed of 14 members, seven from the freshman class and seven from the sophomore class. Operating under the AS constitution, the council passes on most questions by a simple majority vote.

Assisting the President and working on social events, the Vice-President, Margi Hill, works closely with all groups planning dances, or entertainment.

CABINET ADVISES

Advising the President and council are the members of the President's Cabinet who, with the exception of elected officers, are chosen by the President with the approval of council.

Principal among the cabinet's elected members are the Associated Men Student President, Bill Keane: the Associated Women Student President, Stevie Tissier; the Sophomore Class President, Jack Verga, and the Freshman Class President, John Azzaro.

In addition to these positions being elective, they are also in line for succession to the presidency in the order listed.

Other members of the cabinet include the Publications Board Chairman, Publicity Committee Chairman, who will lead the 25th anniversary average on and off campus; a Campus Affairs Co-ordinator, the Club Activities Board President, the Interfraternity and Inter-Sorority Council Presidents, the Rally, Elections, Awards and Men's Athletic Commissioners, the Finance, AS Card Sales and State Information Chairmen.

PROCEDURE ORDERLY

Always found on the left of the president in council meetings is the parliamentarian, who rules on the constitutionality and procedural acts of the council and thus helps maintain order and dignified procedure.

For students desiring a less formal opportunity to meet their representatives, the Associated Student office S-140 is also open to AS cardholders, and is a room where students may give suggestions and meet student government officials on an informal basis.

Lively Arts Here Offer Experience In Music, Drama

Courses in two of the liveliest of the lively arts, music and drama, scheduled to be housed in the new arts building when completed in 1961, are offered to interested and qualified students here.

Three organizations available for vocalists include the A Cappella Choir under the direction of Robert Morton. Membership in the group is by audition. An annual Christmas Concert by the choir is one of the outstanding musical events of the fall semester.

Morton also directs the Men's Glee Club, which gives concerts on and off campus, and the Treble Cleff Society.

Meyer M. Cahn directs the college's band and orchestra. Versatile is the word for the band, for it plays at football games, gives a jazz concert and also a formal concert.

The college's orchestra, also directed by Cahn, offers students the opportunity to practice and perform great musical works of all styles.

The drama department, under the direction of Michael Griffin, offers training and experience in all the arts, crafts and techniques of the theater. Courses include theory and technique of acting, play reading, speech for the theater, theatrical make-up and stagecraft.

Students interested in joining the drama department are advised to watch the bulletin board outside the Little Theater where the drama productions are given in the basement of Science Hall.

Students From 53 Countries, 47 States Lend Cosmopolitan Atmosphere To College Life

By Jim Clifford, Editor, Spring '60

Keeping in step with the nation's rapidly expanding two-year college programs, the college climbed to a total enrollment of 7066 last fall semester.

Almost as cosmopolitan as San Francisco itself, the student enrollment represents 53 countries, 47 states, and three districts, with the city's public high school graduates numbering nearly half the total enrollment.

Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, released statistics which show more students from George Washington High School than any other San Francisco school. The enrollment boasts 749 former Eagles. Lincoln is second with 585, Galileo 559, Balboa 508, Lowell 402, Poiytechnic 371, Mission 308 and Benjamin Franklin 153.

All but three states, Rhode Island, Vermont and Idaho, have students attending the college. States with students enrolled here are Alabama 13, Arizona 9, Arkansas 21, Colorado 21, Connecticut 11, Delaware 1, Florida 15, Georgia 18, Illinois 47, Indiana 13, Iowa 19, Kansas 15, Kentucky 7, Louisiana 50, Maine 2, Maryland 6, Massachusetts 28, Michigan 30.

Minnesota 29, Mississippi 11, Missouri 24, Montana 19, Nebraska 11, Nevada 16, New Hampshire 2, New Jersey 20, New Mexico 9, North Carolina 7, North Dakota 5, Ohio 31, Oklahoma 14, Oregon 38, Pennsylvania 41.

South Carolina 5, South Dakota 3, Tennessee 10, Utah 16, Virginia 10, Washington 50, West Virginia 1, Wisconsin 20, Wyoming 4, and Alaska 8.

The newest star on old glory, Hawaii, ranks first with 86. Texas is in an unaccustomed second place with 84, and New York holds show with 61.

The Philippines lead the number of foreign students with 65. Japan is second with 40 students. Other countries with representation are Australia, Germany, England, France, and many South American nations.

MARY JANE LEARNARD, registrar of students, released figures on composition of enrollment.

The cosmopolitan air has given rise to such student organizations as the Chinese Club, the Filipino Club, and the encompassing International Relations Club.

Classes Begin Tomorrow; Rushing Registration Due

Regular classes start tomorrow and continue through Thursday with Friday, February 12, scheduled as an official holiday in honor of Abraham Lincoln's birthday.

The second holiday this month will be observed Monday, February 22, when the college's calendar will honor George Washington's birthday.

Registration for Inter-Sorority Council rushing, open to all women students, is scheduled February 23 to 26 in Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150.

During College Hour on Friday, February 26, an orientation meeting is slated in S-100 for rushees.

CITY COLLEGE of San Francisco was founded in the spring of 1935 by the citizens of San Francisco in order to make it possible for San Francisco high school graduates to begin their collegiate education in this community. The class that entered during the fall semester 1935 was the first in the history of the icollege. Thus, the present entering class is the fiftieth one to start here during the 25 years that have elapsed since the college was founded.

May I take this opportunity, in behalf of the admistration and faculty, to extend to the members of the entering class a warm and sincere welcome. It is our fondest hope that you will take full advantage of this opportunity for further education. Louis G. Conlan, President

Footsore Students Urged Choice Of Balboa Park Site For College

One of the most interesting aspects in the history of City College is how it came to rest on the site it now occupies.

The story goes back to the days when the need for a two-year college became so vital that one was organized without even a building to house the students.

They walked or rode from one classroom to another located in some 25 different locations in the city and submitted to the ridicule and smart cracks of the students of other colleges because of their homeless wanderings.

Classes were held mainly at Galileo High School and the University of California Extension building, then on Powell Street.

As the moans and groans, gripes and subtle curses grew in volume, and the pressure became intense for a place the students could hang their hats, the Board of Education searched at a feverish pace for a suitable site on which to build the new college.

When every worthy site had been sought out, the board was faced with the task of choosing from among 15 of them.

Of the 15, two were considered as real possibilities: the 10 acres of the Lincoln site at 23rd and Rivera and the old county jail site in the Ingleside district.

Meanwhile, someone thought it might be a good idea to ask the students who were going to attend the new college what they thought about the locations. A straw vote was taken on campus, and the results were compiled and released one week before the board was to take its final vote.

Of the 118 ballots cast by the students, 96 were in favor of the Ingleside district. Of the five cast by the board, four were for Ingleside, one dissenting.

The choice of the site and the acquiring of the land settled only one problem, for buildings were needed. Over the years, they came and are still coming.

Science Hall was opened in 1940, the gymnasiums opened at the same time, temporary buildings and an old Navy training base made up Hurley Village and provided housing for veterans and temporary classrooms after the Second World War in the place where the reservoirs now provide parking and also on the site of the new arts building.

In 1954, Cloud Hall was opened and named in honor of the college's first president, the late Archibald J. Cloud.

The following year, Smith Hall was opened and more recently, construction was begun on the arts building and the college stadium planned to accommodate more than 4000 students.

From a hectic beginning the college has grown in enrollment and reputation till it is now recognized as one of the best two-year colleges in the nation.

Two-Year College Prime Key To Encouragement Of Ideas

THIS GENERATION has often been called "the generation without a cause." The new students here probably have had this generalization tossed at them a few times already, and they are quite familiar with such other terms as "complacency," "beats," "status seekers" and "materialists," all terminology that, to some, seems to be what America stands for.

The first label, when seriously contemplated, appears to be a gross misnomer. We're probably the most cause-enveloped young citizens who ever stepped over the threshold of society. We have the threat of nuclear war hanging over our heads, the crumbling of values constantly around us, and cynicism and skepticism plaguing us daily. A number have quietly withdrawn from meeting these antagonists and curled into their shells—being "beat" before they even start to fight.

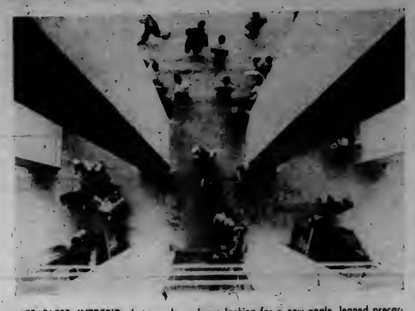
The only means to counteract this eating away at the timbers of our society is through ideas, and that's one of the prime missions of any college—the display and encouragement of ideas.

A cause that educators have been urging earnestly recently is the two-year college—an ideal setting, many of them feel, for the adjustment to college life. The two-year college not only takes a great deal of weight off the shoulders of the universities, but salvages many young people who come under the heading of late bloomers.

This college is one of the fastest growing of these new dispensers of higher education. The paint on Cloud Hall was hardly dry when the ground was broken for construction of the arts building. The once-spacious cafeteria in a few semesters became so overcrowded that steps are necessary to prevent seat-hogging. The first step—consideration for others.

The present cause for any student at the college might well be to take advantage of the two-year college system by fathoming any ideas displayed to him, to learn, but not necessarily believe them, to accept or reject them and to display ideas of his own. With the weapons of ideas, one can show the world we have many causes to work for.

Restless Ram Rests At Last



EASY DOES IT. Professional draymen lowered the massive ton and a half statue of the Redwood Ram onto its permanent site in front of Smith Hall on January 3, 1956.

Carved from an enormous redwood stump, the Ram was created by muralist and sculptor Dudley C. Carter at the World's Fair on Treasure Island in 1939. The figure took about 16 eight-hour days of work to complete.

Following the fair in 1940 the Ram was formally presented to the late Archibald J. Cloud, then president of the college, by the late architect Timothy Pfleuger as Carter's gift to a new and expanding institution.

Shifted from place to place about the campus, the "traveling" statue finally came to rest in its present spot. Rumor has it that students should kiss the Ram before finals, for it will assure them of passing. It's worth a try, isn't it?

Onward, Up—Ooops, Wrong Way!

A FEARLESS, INTREPID photographer, always looking for a new angle, leaned precariously out of a window to snap this unusual photograph looking downward through the pillars of Science Hall. Unfortunately, the sill was wet and slippery, and, making like a Cape Canaveral satellite . . .

Picked up from among the ruins of his camera was a strip of film on which the above photo was found.

Bewildered Students Need Guide To College's Campus

By William L. Forshay, Editor, Fall '59

Silver Pole, Smith Hall, the Ram—now where the heck is that lab? These seemed to be the questions in the eyes of a shaggy-haired freshman as he weaved through the milling throng on the first day of regular classes.

Calmly diving into the mob after him, a veteran Guardsman reporter drew him to one side and inquired, "What's the trouble?"

"Where's Science Hall," the frosh replied, "and Cloud and what's the Ramporium and the Silver Pole?"

"Steady, lad," was the answer of the fourth semester student, "you just come with me and I'll show you around."

Taking him to the top of the hill overlooking Phelan Avenue, he pointed out the two asphalt-lined depressions and explained, "Students with Associated Student cards and parking permits park in the reservoir on the left and sea gulls without cards park in the one on the left."

Spinning him around, he pointed to the building on top of the hill and explained that it was Science Hall. "Here is where the capital letters come in," he said, "the S stands for Science Hall."

In the lobby of Science Hall, he pointed out the Silver Pole where, "If you wait long enough, you'll meet all your friends."

In the basement, he showed him the Little Theater and the electrical labs while explaining that the building was arranged in numbered floors so that S-111 would be on the first floor of Science Hall while S-19 would be in the basement.

Leading the still confused freshman down the hill toward Ocean Avenue (after extracting a dime from him for a coke) he pointed out Smith Hall and explained that the cafeteria was located there.

The low building to the left of the Ram in front of Smith Hall was described as the student bookstore.

"You can buy all your books there and when you finish or drop a course, they'll buy them back from you. They have art and engineering supplies and sales on all sorts of things. Besides, their profits go into student activities," stated the reporter.

Rounding Science Hall into the courtyard, he dismissed the truncated flagpole with the remark, "children must play" and pointed out Cloud Hall and the library while explaining that the numbering system was the same as in the Science Hall.

"That is," he said, "C-105 would be on the first floor, C-209 on the second, and C-336F would be the office of a faculty member on the third floor."

Walking through Cloud Hall, they came out facing a low building from which strange sounds were heard. "Phonograph's on the blink again," the reporter commented as he explained that this was B-5 and B-6, the music bungalow.

Pointing to the right, he indicated B-3 and B-4 and next to them, the press box for the new stadium. To the far left was the new arts building under construction and across the new stadium he pointed out his favorite building on the left, the women's gymnasium, while dismissing with a shrug a similar structure on the right, the men's gymnasium.

"There's one thing about all this," the veteran student told the weary frosh. "If you're lost, just ask for help, for we're all friends on this campus."

Guardsman Invites Letters-To-Editor

In accordance with The Guardsman's policy of serving the best interests of the college and its students, an opportunity for student expression of opinion is provided through The Guardsman letters-to-the-editor column, the Ram's Horn.

Contributions for this department may be left with the telephone operator in Science Hall, or brought to The Guardsman office, S-304.

50,000 Pathways Lead To Learning In Library Here

By Bob Pacini
Feature Editor, Spring '60

From Machiavelli's ruthlessness to the soaring, inspiring words of the Bible, from Aristotle to Zola, from practically anything you want, the thoughts of the great men and women of history and of our own time are available in the college's 50,000-volume library, located in Cloud Hall.

The doors of the library are open to all students of the college from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Seating capacity in the library is about 700.

Worthy of attention is the fact that the library is run on the "open stack" system. This means that any student may enter the stacks, located directly behind the check-out counter, whenever the library is open.

While many colleges insist upon frequent inspections and restrictions, complete library freedom is advocated here.

A student may, under the open stack system, look up a book in the card catalog by author, subject or title and then seek the desired book in the open stacks. Books numbered 000-600 are found on the first floor of the stacks, and volumes numbered 700-900 on the second level.

In addition to the thousands of books available to students here, unbound magazines, shelved alphabetically, are located in the periodical room and may be borrowed for overnight use.

Volumes of bound magazines intended for use in the library only, are in the reserve reading room.

Across from the reserve reading room is the reference reading area. Here students can find standard references such as encyclopedias, atlases and dictionaries.

In addition to these study aids, students are also offered the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature and the Book Review Digest.

Rams Boast Pro Ring Laurels Of Ranked Contender

By Don Seratti, Editor, Spring '59

Of the many famous athletes who have attended the college in the past 25 years, probably the most well-known representative of boxing was "Irish" Bobby Scanlon, whose gloves hung here during the fall semester 1957.

Scanlon, who was a physical education major, did not take part in the college's official boxing program because of his professional status.

But he did work out frequently in the men's gymnasium before many of his local bouts, always attracting a great many observers.

Scanlon had a wide following at the college, and each time he fought he was cheered by scores of students who sometimes constituted a formidable rooting section.

Some of the popular lightweight's most exciting bouts were staged in Bay Area rings, after he migrated here from Buffalo, New York.

Soon after coming West, he opened his bid for recognition on Cauliflower Row with convincing victories over two former lightweight champions, Lauro Salas and Wallace "Bud" Smith. The Smith go, held at the Civic Auditorium here, really revealed Scanlon's boxing talents as he completely outclassed the veteran campaigner.

BOBBY SCANLON

About this time Scanlon had reached what up to now must be considered his peak. He was undefeated in 28 pro fights and had earned a spot among the top ten lightweights.

As the transplanted Irishman was enjoying fabulous success, a veteran Italian slugger named Paolo Rosi came to town and upset his applecart.

Scanlon met Rosi twice before huge throngs in the Cow Palace with many students from the college looking on. In the hectic third round of their first bout, Rosi decked Scanlon, Scanlon returned the compliment, and Rosi then got off the floor to drop the Irishman for the ten count in one of the most stirring finishes in local fistic annals.

Their return bout went the distance, with Rosi getting the nod.

Since the 1935, Block Society has awarded 2268 letters to Ram athletes.

Spring Athletic Units Boast Leadership 'Par Excellence'

By Frank Dunne, Sports Editor, Spring '60

Spring sports at the college hold a prominent position in the Ram athletic program. Heading the teams are Lee Eisan, baseball; Sid Phelan, basketball, and Lou Vasquez, track.

Eisan is a charter member of the coaching staff, having been with the college since its inception. He starred at Cal where he played football, and was on one of the Rose Bowl teams.

His baseball squads have done well over the past two years, showing themselves to be formidable units.

Eisan's experience and talent have helped every one of his charges to play to the best of his ability.

Phelan has been with the college coaching staff since 1955. He is a graduate of College of Marin and the University of California, and started his coaching duties at Napa High School, where he remained for two seasons. Moving to George Washington High School in the city, he led the Eagles to several city championships in his eight years at the school.

He came to the college in 1955, and from then on his teams have had a very impressive record in league play. Last year they grabbed the Big Eight championship. From there they went on to the State Tournament and played well against the top teams in California.

Vasquez, head track coach, is an alumnus of City College, where he played under Eisan and the late Russ Sweet. After two years here he transfered to San Francisco State College where he starred in football and track.

The war caught up with him while he was at State and he enlisted in the Air Force. The Air Force sent him to the University of Nevada where he majored in physical education. After the war he went back to State, was graduated from there and then studied for his master's degree at Stanford.

Vasquez' first coaching job was at Presidio Junior High School, from where, after one semester at Presidio, he went to Washington High School in 1947 and coached track and served as assistant football coach.

He joined the faculty here in the fall semester of 1957, and has been track coach here since then. His teams have done well in the Big Eight, winning the state championship in Vasquez' first year as coach.

Veterans, 'New Blood' Strengthen Tennis Team

Sparked by returning veterans and bright newcomers, the 1960 Ram tennis team appears as a strong contender for the championship this year. Led by Coach Roy Diederichsen, the team will play its first match in March.

With such veterans on the squad as Fred Botsford, number three man in the conference last year, the Rams look stronger than they did two years ago when they were the league champions.

Among the new talent is Anatole Brashnik, who won fame as one of the great junior players in the State. With such men as Brashnik and Vincent Chinn, number three man on the St. Ignatius squad of three years ago, the Rams show an abundance of both speed and power.

Three More Ram Grid Stalwarts Receive Pro Pacts

Three more former Ram grid stars joined the pro football ranks last week as Willie Hudson, Jerry James and Al Chatman joined the Los Angeles Chargers of the new American Football League.

These men bring the total of graduates to six men who have made the pro ranks. Ollie Matson, Dick Stanfel and Burl Toler have played for several years in the National Football League.

Hudson was a linebacker for the Rams, James a tackle and Chatman a halfback with the 1954 team. All three starred at Polytechnic High School, and Hudson and James were named to the All-Conference and All-American teams. After a brilliant 1953 season, James was sidelined with an injury in 1954.

Hudson also received Little All-Coast mention at Cal Poly.

The Los Angeles Chargers, new to the pro ranks, signed the players for the 1960 season. This will be the first year the team will be in operation, and Sid Gilman, former Los Angeles Ram coach, will direct the team.

Soccer Forces Made History In '59 Via First League Title

By Doug Catheart

From fourth place in the 1958 season to champions in 1959; that's the 1959 Red and White soccer story.

The consensus, at the start of the last Ram soccer season, was that an improved squad was competing, but that the University of San Francisco, at that time sporting a 38-game winning streak, would capture the Northern California Soccer Conference crown.

This record was soon to be broken, for on October 10 the Phelan Avenue men dropped the Dons in a 3-0 fray. This was an entirely unexpected win for the Red and White, but it turned out to be an indication of great things to come, for after the USF victory the power of the booters seemed to manifest itself more and more as the season progressed.

On October 31, with the University of California and the Red and White in a deadlock for the first slot, the two conference leaders played to a 0-0 deadlock, thus keeping the NCCSC still in a tie.

This predicament was soon to be remedied, for on November 14 the Rams downed the Santa Clara Bronco 9-0, and coupled with the fact that the UC forces were shut out by the USF Dons, the Ram booters swept into the first slot in the conference.

On November 21 the "do-or-die" game was played when the Rams were pitted against the San Jose Spartans.

At the end of the first period the tally stood at 3-0 in favor of the Phelan Avenue powerplant. The crown and the kings were closer and closer to meeting, and at half time the score had been raised to 4-0.

In the third quarter the Spartans finally managed to score, with Joe Batigli doing the kicking. However, almost immediately after the Spartan goal was made, John Fouladi scored again to preserve the Red and White's four-point margin.

The fray was to end in the manner which had been anticipated by almost everyone. Vince Liu concluded the scoring for the victorious Rams with an eight footer, and thus the game ended in a 6-2 victory in favor of the Rams. Coach Roy Diederichsen's boys had picked up the first Northern California soccer championship in the college's 25-year history.

New Semester Promises Abundance Of Activity

By Pat O'Shaughnessy, Sports Editor, Fall '59

In addition to its high academic standing, City College of San Francisco offers the incoming freshman a well-rounded athletic program.

Whether he be a varsity competitor of terrific ability or no more than a huffer and puffer, Athletic Director Jack Gaddy has a program of activity in store for him that is guaranteed to please.

Through the coming semester the Rams will field varsity units in baseball, track, golf, tennis, boxing and swimming, while the basketball team will complete its league schedule.

In addition to the foregoing, the Red and White also uniforms a junior varsity basketball team, encourages participation in its intramural cage program and has commissioned a Recreation Association to promote such sports as bowling, volleyball and archery.

While baseball coach Lee Eisan has his eyes open for promising diamond competitors, track coach Lou Vasquez, golf mentor Grover Klemmer and Roy Diederichsen, director of the tennis squad, find themselves in the same boat and are ardently seeking athletes for their respective sports.

Doubling as boxing coach, Diederichsen has always fielded a well-loaded squad of ring talent that would be a credit to any two-year college in the land.

The college's JV basketball team, under the direction of Alex Schwarz, has always proved itself a formidable unit, competing against the Olympic Club JV's, military clubs and various high school teams throughout the Bay Area.

Under the joint guidance of Gaddy and Associated Men Student President Bill Keane, the college's intramural basketball program always shows itself an exciting extracurricular activity for all men students, regardless of ability.

The league should get underway sometime in March and in the near future The Guardsman will publish further data concerning its program.

Furnishing the coeducation end of Ram athletic activity, the Recreation Association opens its doors free of charge to all members of the Associated Students of City College.

Under the direction of Elizabeth Wirth, the association participates in minor-sport field days with various two-year colleges throughout the Northern California area.

College Mermen Prep For Coming Tank Encounters

After an absence of 17 years, swimming returned to the Ram athletic calendar last year as a sanctioned varsity sport.

Although the mermen, under the tutelage of Roy Burkhead, were able to produce a team of no more than seven men during this season, they still managed to gain fourth place in the Northern California meet at Watsonville at the season's end.

Despite the fact that all members of the squad are returning for this year's competition, Burkhead is still faced with the problem of developing a unit with more depth.

Burkhead feels that if he had a team of about 15 men under his hand last time out, his swimmers would have fared much better than they did.

ROY BURKHEAD

This year's squad appears to be quite a distance from reaching this desired depth and unless an abundance of interest is shown in the near future, Burkhead again may be forced to go with his baptised veterans.

Rich Bruhns, Gene Gayner, Laurie Hansen, Pete Panasik, John Rosenberg, Craig Schwarz and Bob Urrea comprised last season's team.

Interested swimmers may sign up for the team during their physical education classes. The season is scheduled to get underway during the middle of March.

1960 Golfers Seek New Talent To Bolster Squad

The college golfers, who placed fourth in the Big Eight Conference last year, open their current league play early next month.

The golf team is under the direction of football coach Grover Klemmer, who announced recently that there are still a few positions open for incoming freshman contenders. Interested golfers may sign up in the men's gymnasium during their physical education classes.

In road matches last year the Ram linksmen whipped Sacramento, Modesto and Contra Costa. Home matches, however, were lost to San Mateo, Stockton, Oakland and Santa Rosa.

COEDS WITH PROBLEMS find friendly guidance from Dean of Women Mary Golding.

AMONG his many duties, former star athlete Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, serves as college representative to the Big Eight.

Numerous Clubs On Campus Supplement Academic Life

By Paul Plansky

Since scholastic achievement is not the final fulfillment of purpose in the American college, City College offers its students access to numerous clubs and organizations, which enable them to attain well-roundedness, supplementing the academic phase of their collegiate careers.

All clubs, fraternities, sororities and organizations are under the jurisdiction of the Club Activities Board, which co-ordinates the activities and affairs of campus groups.

Providing opportunity for Christian growth and development is the purpose of the Collegiate Christian Fellowship, which opens its doors to all students.

Serving Catholic and other interested students, the Newman Club promotes the social, moral and cultural welfare of its members.

Hillel Foundation is an organization for the Jewish students on the campus, whose functions include social as well as religious activities.

The sectarian groups of Christianity are well represented by the Canterbury Club, for students of the Episcopal faith; the Christian Science Club, open to all students; the Lutheran Club, serving Lutheran students who wish to attend discussion groups about their faith; the Wesley Fellowship, for followers of the Methodist belief, and the Westminster Fellowship, accommodating the Presbyterian students.

With the object in view of bettering the individual and offering service to their college, ten fraternities have been given "on campus" status and take an active part in a multitude of college functions.

Alpha Kappa Rho, which came on campus in February 1950, plays an important role in student government and aids the public through community service projects.

Inaugurating their service project with a drill team, the Marching Hornets, Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity has scholastic service and social development as their goals.

Presentation of an annual dance by Alpha Sigma Delta is one of the means by which college life can be supplemented by social activity.

The college's first active fraternity, Beta Phi Beta, holds the Golden Slipper Dance each fall semester and was awarded the Russell L. Sweet Memorial Trophy during the 1947-48 season.

Beta Tau fraternity's tradition is the decorating of a Christmas tree by the Silver Pole in Science Hall.

Highlighting Gamma Phi Ypsilon's agenda are a semi-annual intra-fraternity bowling tournament and the annual Spring Fever dance.

Phi Beta Delta, which was founded in the Fall of 1947, presents an annual Shipwreck Dance, and in the Fall of '48 it sponsored "Sammie the Ram," a fraternity member dressed in a ram's "suit," to promote college spirit at games.

Tau Chi Sigma came on campus in November, 1946. It sponsors the House Of Blue Lights as an annual dance, and the annual campus blood drive.

The newest fraternity on campus is Zeta Phi Sigma, having been chartered in the Spring of 1955. The fraternity has had members in the Honor Society and student government.

The seven college sororities are Gamma Kappa Beta, the newest sorority on campus, initiated in Fall 1957; Delta Psi, which has a semi-annual dance and Christmas party; Delta Sigma Tau, promoting self-improvement and service to society; Kappa Phi, established in 1939 to promote social fellowship; and Phi Beta Rho, which assists in the annual blood drive and is hostess for the college's Little Theater productions.

Theta Tau has established an honorary collection of books for the blind in the Cloud Half library, and Zeta Chi has participated in fund-raising affairs and entertained at the Goodwill Industry.

In order to make all races, colors and creeds compatible to the college picture, an International Relations Club's purpose is to develop better international relations at the college.

The Chinese Club uses the proceeds from its annual Sweetheart Ball to furnish two annual scholarships to deserving members.

Understanding problems in a new land, fostering the best ideals of Filipino and American cultures are the objectives and purposes of the Filipino Club.

Alpha Phi Omega, a national service fraternity, has the Iota Phi Chapter here at the college, being chartered in 1946. The national women's service sorority, Gamma Sigma Sigma, won the Margaret Dougherty Award last semester for attaining the highest scholastic record of all sororities on campus.

The scholastic honor society is Alpha Gamma Sigma. A 3.3 grade point average for four out of five semesters assures life membership.

In order to promote high scholarship in the social sciences, Sigma Tau Sigma was originated in May, 1936. Only students with grades of "B" or better in university parallel courses are eligible for membership.

The Ram Cam welcomes all ambitious photographers, while the amateur geologist will find his paradise with the Pick and Hammer Society.

Mathematicians and scientists have the opportunity to meet and exchange ideas in the Engineering Society, open to all students in such major fields.

Membership in the Horticulture Society, Hotel and Restaurant Society, and the Dental Assistants Society is open to students in those semiprofessional divisions.

Those expressing interest in Masonic groups may vie for active membership in the Acacia Club, and the veterans attending the college are invited to join the Veterans Association.

Enrollment in any of the merchandising classes at the college entitle a student to membership in the Merchandising Club, and for those who like to idle their time leisurely but keep mentally stimulated, the Chess Club should solve their problem.

The California Student Teachers Association aims at promoting the social, professional and economic welfare of future teachers.

Alex Schwarz is the sponsor of the Block SF, composed of the athletes who have won letters in the college's sports division.

College Heads Frown On Cuts With No Excuse

Regular attendance, in accordance with the State law, is required in all courses undertaken at the college, and John J. Brady, co-ordinator of the division of student welfare, heads the department which frowns on excessive absences.

Student absences are limited and classified under the categories of excused and unexcused.

The total number of both excused and unexcused absences that any instructor need accept may not exceed twice the number of hours that the class meets in one week.

Absence because of illness may be excused by a student presenting a satisfactory excuse either to the dean of women, S-150, or the dean of men, S-149, and obtaining an official written verification. The student then presents the verification to each instructor in whose class the absence has occurred.

JOHN BRADY, co-ordinator of the division of student welfare.

Students more than 21 must present to the dean a satisfactory oral explanation, while minors must present an acceptable note from the parent or legal guardian.

Occasionally the president may officially excuse students from classes to take part in curricular or extra-curricular activities under faculty supervision.

The total allowance of unexcused or emergency absences, known more commonly as cuts, may not exceed the number of hours that the class meets in one week.

Students absent from a course for any reason are required to make up all the work missed and are responsible for keeping track of the number of absences they have taken. Disqualification and a final grade of "F" will be given to any student who has cut in excess. Tardiness three times in one course is supposed to count as one cut.

In addition, Brady added that a student may not withdraw from a course in order to avoid receiving a failing grade because of excessive unexcused absences.

Man Of Many Duties

IN THE OPERATION of any large institution, much goes on behind the scenes. Here, Oscar Anderson (above), co-ordinator of the division of educational management, takes charge of these never-ending jobs which include the maintenance of buildings, control of traffic and the student loan program.

His duties are highly diversified. Besides the aforementioned responsibilities, Dr. Anderson's work ranges from compilation of data for the college budget, direction of commencement exercises, disposition of unclaimed personal property found on campus, and helping the staff of the division of instruction plan time schedules.

He is best known to students, however, through his tireless assistance in keeping the Associated Student budget in balance.

Students Choose From Four Types Of Study Programs To Prepare For Future Success

By Elmer Milligan, Managing Editor, Spring '60

City College, a community institution of higher learning, seeks to provide each student with a general education which will enable him to lead a constructive and well-balanced life in a democratic society.

To accomplish this aim, the college offers two-year programs of study which are organized, administered and supervised by a co-ordinator and three deans of instruction.

The instructional program comprises a comprehensive group of courses arranged in four categories:

University Program, which consists primarily of courses equivalent in subject matter and standards to the first two years of university or four-year college study.

Semiprofessional Program, through which the college offers two years of training for high school graduates who desire further preparation for employment. Ranging from engineering technology to hotel and restaurant, the semiprofessional courses constitute 32 curricula which prepare students for steady, well-paying jobs.

General College Program, which consists of certain general-education and foundation courses, technical courses equivalent to various courses offered by the State colleges, and certain courses that students may take to remove high school deficiencies.

Extended-Day Program is provided in the evening for adults as part of the college's regular program of instruction. University courses are offered in addition to certain general college and semiprofessional courses.

CO-ORDINATOR of the division of instruction Lloyd Luckmann works with the three deans of instruction in administering the instructional program.

DEAN LOUIS BATMALE supervises the semi-professional courses, including the hotel and restaurant program, which has won national acclaim.

Police Chief Asks Students To Get Parking Permits

Stressing the need for co-operation between students and Campus Police, Richard Werencke, chief of Campus Police, today urged all students to get their parking permits early.

Parking regulations must be strictly adhered to, Werencke said. Failure to comply will result in the issuing of a citation payable at Room 164 of the City Hall.

The prescribed "on campus" parking areas, according to regulations, are as follows:

Area B: bounded by Ocean Avenue and athletic field.

Area C: bounded by men's gymnasium and east of Cloud Hall.

Area D: bounded by men's gymnasium and horticulture center.

Reservoir: bounded by Phelan Avenue and Riordan High School.

All other "on campus" parking areas are reserved for the faculty. Parking on the paved roadways or marked stalls in these areas is strictly forbidden. Parking is also forbidden on any of the dirt areas on campus.

Signs relevant to parking are posted at the entrance to all parking areas, and posters describing parking regulations are mounted on all bulletin boards in the college buildings.

The Campus Police, Werencke explained, are here to serve the students. They are on duty from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. during days when classes are in session.

Bookstore Meets Students' Needs

New and used textbooks, student supplies, and novelties are available to students at the Ramporium, the college bookstore, located at the south end of the campus, near Smith Hall and the Redwood Ram.

The self-service store, which is managed by Richard Main, returns 90 per cent of all profits to the Associated Students in the form of fund allocations from the Student Council. This money pays for approximately 40 per cent of the college social activities and helps to support the college's athletic teams.

Standard prices are charged for all new books sold in the Ramporium, with the books redeemed at half price at the end of the semester if they have not been badly defaced or damaged.

The services of the Ramporium are available to all students from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

DEAN WILLIAM MAYO heads the curricula which include the engineering department, one of the largest in the college.

DEAN EDWARD SANDY'S responsibilities encompass the extended-day program.

Guardsman Staff Issues First Edition March 2

This issue of The Guardsman is a special freshman edition, planned for distribution today.

The first regular issue of The Guardsman will appear on Wednesday, March 2, with the library in Cloud Hall, the cafeteria in Smith Hall and the Silver Pole in Science Hall the regular weekly distribution points.

This issue is the result of the joint efforts of both the outgoing and incoming members of the editorial staff.

Hillsman Yields Post Of Council Adviser

FLYING SQUAD—Sherm Elworthy, adviser to student government, parleys with Willie Hudson (right), member of the student traffic control group helping Elworthy maintain order in the cafeteria. Elworthy expects the control group to be highly effectual in keeping things moving; Hudson, former grid star here and at Cal Poly, was recently drafted by the Los Angeles Chargers of the newly formed American Football League. Elworthy also boasts the services of Stan Rosenberg, former star guard on the Ram basketball team. Both Rosenberg and Hudson are currently enrolled here. —Guardsman photo by Gene Gayner.

Successor Elworthy To Tackle Noise, Space Problem In Cafe

A time-consuming and demanding work schedule has forced Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of men and student activities, to step down as faculty adviser to Student Council.

Hillsman will be succeeded by Sherm Elworthy, an English instructor here.

The post of adviser to council should be held by someone who can devote enough time and effort to it, declared Hillsman, who had held the position since the fall semester, 1955.

Confronting the council and its new sponsor this semester is the tangled problem of the college's cafeteria, which, Elworthy feels, is much too crowded and just plain slovenly because of the number of litterers and loiterers who jam the place each day.

The undesirable situation doesn't appear to be in for alleviation, he commented, even with the addition of the new section which is now under construction and scheduled for completion shortly.

To help relieve the problems of congestion and mess in the cafeteria, Elworthy has enlisted the aid of students who will be paid to aid in keeping the cafeteria in order.

Elworthy stressed that this does not mean that any strong-arm tactics will be employed, but only a mild, much-needed sort of supervision. The two students who are currently helping Elworthy in his campaign are Willie Hudson and Stan Rosenberg.

Another plan considered by council and soon to be tried, involves dividing the cafeteria into sections, thus enabling one part of it to be cleaned while the other is being used by students.

Elworthy expects to increase the number of his student staff if this proves necessary.

Loitering, Littering OUT

Open Letter From Elworthy Asks Student Co-operation

(Editor's Note: The following letter, by Sherm Elworthy, adviser to student government, is presented to all students of the college. Because of the increase in enrollment a new section, presently under construction, will be added to the Smith Hall facilities this semester. Meanwhile, Elworthy is faced with the responsibility of maintaining order in the present, overcrowded cafeteria.)

TO THE STUDENTS OF CITY COLLEGE:

Many of you have seen me in Smith Hall. Most of you realize that I am there to help solve the traffic problem. Some of you may be temporarily inconvenienced, but when you realize that common sense and necessity lie behind the following, you will agree that conditions will be improved for everybody.

First, socializing in Smith Hall will be "not the thing to do" when the rush is on between 11 and 1. Almost everybody wants to eat lunch during a portion of those two hours. You have a right to expect clean tables and enough chairs—almost forgotten luxuries under the present setup.

We will, therefore, ask you to take your tray to a numbered section of the cafeteria. By seating you in one of three or four such areas, in rotation, the staff should be able to keep a section cleaned and polished for those arriving after you. In order to accomplish this successfully, we will ask you to observe a reasonable lunch period.

Please co-operate with the Smith Hall staff and the faculty-student traffic control group. We are all working to make the cafeteria a more pleasant place for you.

Next, a reminder is in order. Smith Hall, as well as the rest of the City College campus, is for the use of currently enrolled students of this college. The Board of Education has an explicit ruling in regard to loitering in or about school property. This rule is for your protection. You will be doing your non-City College friends a big favor if you will arrange to meet them off campus. Please carry your current registration card as you would your driver's license in your possession at all times.

Finally, please do something about the trash problem, in or out of the cafeteria. All civic and many national organizations are campaigning vigorously against littering. Let us get into the act, too. Use the garbage cans.

Members of the faculty and administration have stated that they would be ashamed to bring visitors into the student dining areas at peak periods. We are hoping to change this opinion soon. There is no reason for the "front of the house" to be the way it is at present. The "back of the house" provides you with the best food obtainable at the lowest cost possible.

Let us achieve the same atmosphere that you have a right to expect in any first class cafeteria. Loitering and littering are out of style.

Please encourage those few who are not aware of ordinary give-and-take behavior to get with it.

Sherm Elworthy.

Hayes Announces Officers For 18 Appointive Posts

Positions of appointive and honorary offices of the President's Cabinet have all been filled as of last week, according to Wally Hayes, president of the Associated Students.

The appointive offices and appointees are AS Secretary, Rose Marie Schindel; Finance Committee Chairman, Faye Fountain; Parliamentarian, Ron Cook; Corresponding Secretary, Sol Hernandez; Information Service Chairman, Bud Andress; Alumni Liaison, Carolyn Vukasin; AS Card sales, Marilyn Middleton; Campus Affairs Co-ordinator, Tony Lopez; Men's Athletic Commissioner, Al White, and Elections Commissioner, Jerry Kucserka.

Honorary appointive offices and appointees are Rally Commissioner, Marilyn Santos; Club Activities Board Chairman, Delmar Rose; IFC President, Jerry Herrmann; Publications Board Chairman, Jim Clifford; Publicity Chairman, Judy Day; Campus Police Chief, Richard Werencke; Recreation Association Commissioner, Sandra Hayden, and ISC President, Linda Lauro.

Extensive advertisement of student government and athletics will be the goal of the new-instated administration, the AS President claimed.

Hayes said, "Students realize their interest in college government too late in their junior college career, when they are unable to participate."

Through the medium of advertisement the student government will try to stimulate the college student's interest early in college life.

Another ambition of the student government is to promote a closer working relationship with the Hotel and Restaurant division.

A change in the election date was recommended by Hayes, advancing the date two or three weeks in order that the freshman and sophomore members of council can learn parliamentary proceedings early in the semester.

Scholastic Average Denotes Upswing

Enforcement of scholastic standards last semester resulted in the sending of 521 letters of disqualification to students who failed to maintain a 1.5 (C minus) grade average, according to John J. Brady, co-ordinator, division of student welfare.

Brady feels that these figures show an upswing in the college's scholastic achievements. In the Spring '59 semester some 860 students were disqualified for failure to maintain a 1.5 average, as compared with this semester's 521.

It is estimated that of these 521 students, one-half will reapply and will be readmitted to the college.

Also disqualified were 87 students who failed to meet attendance requirements last semester.

AS Donations Honor Dean's Memory

Early in the semester the death of Dean Emeritus Margaret Dougherty came as a shock to staff members, students and former students.

Last week Student Council joined many former students by contributing to the Dougherty Scholarship Fund in memory of the late dean.

Miss Dougherty (at right), the first woman named as an Alumni Association life member, first came to San Francisco's young two-year college in 1936. During her early association with the college, Dean Dougherty taught in the home economics department and worked with the vice-president-dean of women.

From 1937 to 1940, the former Girls' High School instructor both taught and filled her position as adviser, and in 1940 was appointed to the newly created post of dean of women.

Retiring in 1953, this position was filled by one of her former pupils, Mary Golding, the present dean of women. It was at that time that the Faculty Wives' Association established the Dean Margaret Dougherty Scholarship Fund.

IFC Exhibitions Highlight 14th Smoker Tonight

Inter-Fraternity Council members will present their 14th consecutive smoker tonight from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, Jerry Herrmann, IFC president, announced last week.

"The purpose of the smoker is to interest all new students in the college fraternities by helping them realize the goals and ambitions of each organization," Herrmann said.

Each fraternity will have its own stand boasting individual awards and achievements, and students will therefore have the opportunity to register for the various activities offered by each organization.

"An interested student should sign up for the activities of different fraternities so that he can obtain an over-all view of the organizations and pick the one that best fits his personality," Herrmann stated.

Also invited to the smoker are the male members of a student's family.

Presentation of outstanding awards is scheduled to begin the night's activities. One award will be given to the fraternity with the highest scholarship achievement of last semester. This medal was provided by Beta Tau fraternity. The second will be for the organization that participated, during the semester, in the most beneficial student activities.

After the presentations a speech will be made by Ralph Hillsman, dean of men here. Several short talks by a few members of the Ram basketball team will follow.

Each fraternity president, Herrmann said, will make a brief speech describing the activities of his own organization and will be followed by entertainment provided by the ten fraternities.

The fraternities which will participate in tonight's program are Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Phi Omega, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Phi Beta Rho, Tau Chi Sigma and Zeta Phi Sigma.

KCBS Hosts Song Fest For Hopeful College Crooners

All students interested in launching a singing career should consult Flossita Badger or Robert Morton, music department instructors, this Friday.

Radio station KCBS, in co-operation with Columbia recording stars Nelson Riddle and Peggy Lee, is sponsoring a singing contest for all Bay Area colleges.

The college will pick one finalist to represent it in the contest to be held on the Dave McElhatton show on KCBS. The date of the contest will be decided in the near future.

Competition conditions provide that students should prepare a song from Riddle's album, Sing A Song With Riddle. The list of these songs contained in the album can be obtained from music department representatives.

Top award in the Bay Area contest is a possible recording contract. The first place winner will also be awarded a portable stereo phonograph, the second place winner $25 in

Educated Student Knows Cafe Is Place To Eat, Not To Meet

THE CARE AND FEEDING of college students is developing into a big mess. "Mess" seems appropriate, except that any ex-GI can attest that chow time was an orderly function, with the order imposed somewhat from without, like a mother teaching her child table manners.

A college student's order should be resolved from within, but if the present situation in the cafeteria keeps up, someone will have to take steps to impose order.

The cafeteria is a place to eat, not to meet. That may have the ring of a slogan, but it's not meant to be facetious. The congregating there is causing a bottleneck that results in time lost for those using the cafeteria for its proper intent. One wonders what a Fire Marshal would think of supposedly "educated youth" behaving in this manner.

The poor guy who wants to eat and get some studying done before his next class often finds himself battling through loitering crowds to the serving line, and once served he's forced to go on a safari to find a vacant seat—and then it may be "saved" for someone else. Then he practically has to be a sanitation engineer to clean up the mess that somebody else bequeathed him.

The cafeteria staff is doing the best it can in cleaning up, but it is fighting against tremendous odds. Receptacles are practical things and have little esthetic value. They're to be used—not to be looked at.

The aims of education become a travesty when a member of the faculty has to ask for student cooperation, or an editorial of this nature must be written.

If these and other infractions of common courtesy continue to be broken some remedies will have to be taken. In other words, if we continue to act as children, we will be treated as children.

A Life Devoted To Youth

ANY MAN'S DEATH diminishes me, because I am involved in Mankind," are some often quoted words of John Donne that were carried on the wings of truth recently when the college suffered the loss of former Dean of Women Margaret Dougherty. An idealist, devoted to the highest ethics of the teaching profession, she lived for one objective—the betterment of American youth.

She served as instructor from 1936-1940, and as Dean of Women from 1940 to 1953, but like most statistics, these cold facts can not reveal the inspiration her work instilled. Upon retirement in 1953 the Faculty Wives Association established the Dougherty Scholarship Fund. Possibly this last item reflects the warmth of her personality.

President Louis G. Conlan most adequately summed up the feeling of loss those close to her felt: "Since her graduation from the University of California, Miss Dougherty devoted her life to young people."

Foresight

Students Nix H'wood As Books Eclipse Stars

By Elmer Milligan

IT SEEMS impossible that students would sacrifice a movie role with three Hollywood stars for the sake of studying, but such an incident occurred at the College of Pacific in Stockton, California.

Three weeks ago, Bing Crosby, Fabian, Tuesday Weid, director Blake Edwards and a movie crew rolled onto the college's campus for the filming of a new movie, High Time.

It was reported that the administration and faculty had worried about students, especially the coeds, cutting classes because of the movie stars.

Much to everyone's surprise, COP students proved to be a serious and studious group as casting for student roles was harder than originally anticipated.

When tryouts were first held, there was not as much enthusiasm as one would have expected. However, the director managed to hire enough students to use in the film plus several instructors, who were also given small roles.

NOMINATIONS WERE made last week for the 32nd annual Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences Oscar Presentations, to be televised on NBC-TV, April 4.

The $15,000,000 production of William Wyler's Ben-Hur, currently showing in San Francisco at the Coronet Theater, was nominated as best picture of the year.

In addition to Ben-Hur, the other pictures nominated were Anatomy Of A Murder, The Diary of Anne Frank, The Nun's Story and Room At The Top.

Shelley Winters (The Diary of Anne Frank), Thelma Ritter (Pillow Talk), Hermione Baddeley (Room At The Top), Susan Kohner and Juanita Moore (Imitation Of Life) are the nominees for best supporting actress.

Best actor nominations went to Charlton Heston (Ben-Hur), Laurence Harvey (Room At The Top), Paul Muni (The Last Angry Man), Jack Lemmon (Some Like It Hot) and James Stewart (Anatomy Of A Murder).

Best supporting actor nominees were Hugh Griffith (Ben-Hur), Robert Vaughn (The Young Philadelphians), George Scott and Arthur O'Connell (Anatomy Of A Murder) and Ed Wynn (The Diary Of Anne Frank).

Pretty Doris Day was nominated as best actress of the year for Pillow Talk, a sophisticated comedy in which she plays an interior decorator.

Miss Day's competitors are Audrey Hepburn (The Nun's Story), Simone Signoret (Room At The Top) and Katharine Hepburn and Elizabeth Taylor (Suddenly Last Summer).

This occasion marks the third time Liz Taylor has been nominated for a best actress award. Her portrayal of a rich, flirtatious Southern belle in Raintree Country brought the first nomination in 1958.

A year later, Miss Taylor became a nominee in the Oscar race because of her outstanding performance in Tennessee Williams' prize-winning drama, Cat On A Hot Tin Roof. Her portrayal of Maggie the Cat indicated that she could hold her own with the best of dramatic actresses.

Suddenly Last Summer, which brought her third nomination for best actress, ends its seven-week run at the St. Francis Theater today.

Suggestion Box Proves Popular

Most Ideas Constructive; Some Languish In File 13

Satisfaction and complacency create dullness. An awareness for changes and improvement stimulates alertness and interest. Such interest in improving on-campus problems is the primary reason for the Associated Men Student suggestion box, inaugurated by Bill Keane, AMS president, which is becoming increasingly popular.

An example of a suggestion acted upon is the recent numbering of the bungalows. Originally, for new students, locating the bungalows was almost as frustrating as registration day.

Another suggestion acted upon is the reinstatement of music in the cafeteria. Students complained when the broadcast music was terminated.

Under consideration are such ideas as to keep students from sitting on the stairs by installing benches in the basement, selling milk in the gymnasium, and serving something warm such as soup in the snack bar after the cafeteria has closed.

Naturally, in keeping with the peculiarities of human nature, the legitimate suggestions are accompanied by offerings more colorful but of a less desirable nature.

Even though it was suggested, the college will not be burned nor will finals be outlawed. Such fertile offerings of expanded brain cells are read and filed in the No. 13 file.

It is hoped by Keane that students will not silently fume or by their complacency tolerate unpleasant situations which by written suggestion might be either changed or improved.

Looking Forward To Rome . . .

World Recalls Olympic Fanfare, Pageantry In Squaw Valley Playground

By Vicky Aumann

Today all is quiet at Squaw Valley. The mountain-made amphitheater not far from Lake Tahoe is strangely silent. The fanfare and pageantry are over.

The parade of athletes, lighting of the Olympic Torch, the release of 2000 pigeons and 20,000 ballons, the thrills and spills, the tears and smiles of both victor and loser—all these are but memories now. But they will long be remembered.

It was but two weeks ago that the eyes of the world were focused on a compact little valley, an area which the world had said was unable "to stage such an event on such an impossible stage." But those ten days proved to be not only among the most glorious in the history of the State but of all the Winter Games yet held.

Heroes fell. New heroes were crowned. The four-year goal of only a few of the thousands of the world's great athletes was attained. From those unsuccessful, many will strive again for their goal—a glistening gold medal, an emblem worthy of the greatest sacrifice, at the next games, the IX Winter Olympics.

From a humble beginning at London in 1908 and then on through Chamonix, St. Moritz, Lake Placid, Garmisch - Partenkirchen, Oslo and Cortina, this expanding international spectacle of true sportsmanship reached its climax in the Sierra of California.

PAMELA KURRELL.

This Olympic pageant brought together 30 nations, each pitting their finest athletes against one another in a spirit of friendly but fierce competition, ever holding to the Olympic ideal:

The important thing in the Olympic Games
Is not to win, but to take part.
The important thing in life
Is not the triumph but the struggle.
The essential thing
Is not to have conquered but to have fought well.

Not since 1932, when the Summer Olympics were staged in Los Angeles, has a sports event of this magnitude and importance been held in the United States.

Although lacking a representative at these Winter Olympic Games, the college can boast of an Olympic representative at the 1956 Olympic Games at Melbourne, Australia. Pamela Kurrell, a recreation major currently enrolled here, gained a berth on the U.S. athletic team as a discus thrower.

Although Miss Kurrell failed to qualify for the discus finals at the Melbourne Olympics, she returned from the games with a firm determination to train even harder.

According to the consensus of track coaches, Pam Kurrell should reach her peak by the 1960 Olympics in Rome and the discus crown could well be hers.

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob Pacini

TOM SWIFT, Tarzan and Winnie The Pooh are the kind of books that would look just a little out of place in a college library, for they simply aren't the usual brand of reading material college students demand.

This was the kind of reading that was such an important part of those long past days of our childhood—at least it's past for most of us. These were the days before television had reached the prominence it holds in most homes today.

Kids still read then, even if it was only Pinocchio or a Nancy Drew mystery. But now Nancy has been replaced by Perry Mason, Pinocchio by Huckleberry Hound and all the rest of our childhood heroes by a virtual army of marshals, deputies, school marms, cattle rustlers, shot gun riders, prairie dogs—the human genus, and saloon keepers.

Don't get us wrong. This is not intended to be a general attack on television. We don't dislike television.

We just hate westerns!

We don't care if it's a northern western, a southern western, an eastern western or a western (they're the worst kind): if it's got a horse, just one horse, and a bow-legged cow poke with a limp "do it yourself" cigarette hanging out of his usually unshaven face, it's enough to make us wish that the Indians, notoriously naive businessmen, hadn't sold that "piece of real estate back east for 24 bucks thereby starting the whole thing.

It must be admitted, however, that the above description of the All-American western hero is not really accurate, at least not since television has corailed him.

Now the cowboy is no longer content to ride his trusty old pony and flash a pair of six guns. Now he rides on elegant riverboats and wears Southern finery. He studies law, invents a remarkable shot gun, runs a newspaper, hands out engraved name cards, carries a fancy cane, kisses girls (!) and conducts wagon trains across the country that never quite seem to reach their destination. (It must be at least three years since the first one set out from the TV sound lot.)

Tom, Tarzan, Winnie—if you want to get some of those fans back you'd better get your horses, boys, and go—we hate to say it—west!

Returnees Bolster Hopes Of Ram Horsehiders, Cindermen

College Batsmen To Meet Broncos In Season Opener

With most of the positions up for grabs, Coach Lee Eisan has been holding daily workouts for the Ram baseball hopefuls at Balboa Park in preparation for the official opening of the season tomorrow in Santa Clara against the Broncos.

Bob Farber, the only All-Conference man from last year, will be switched to the catching position from his usual left field spot because of the loss of Johnny May.

Farber batted .340 last year and is expected to be one of the big guns for the Red and White horsehiders this season.

Other veterans who are being counted on to supply extra punch are Paul DeMartini who will be patrolling the right field pastures, and Byron Beckos, a smooth gloveman at second base.

Another returnee after being ineligible last year is third baseman John Doriham, who will be battling Jerry Goslin for the hot corner.

The pitching staff looks promising with a couple of crack southpaws in Dick Murray and Randy Pace.

Pace, who looks the better of the two, shows great potential with his blazing fastball and slow changeup, but is a little on the wild side.

Hank Padilla, a little righthander, has impressed Eisan with his slow stuff, and was a pain in the neck for the enemy batsmen while pitching for Sacred Heart in previous years.

Reno DiBono, a teammate of Padilla at the Irish school, can either help the pitching staff or be a factor at first base.

New faces trying for infield berths include Don Leonardini at first base, Don Loewpinski first base, and Bob Lane second base.

Local Tracksters Face Stern Test In Coming Year

With 12 veterans returning from last year's squad, the 1960 version of the Ram track team looms as stronger than that of last year. The rest of the league, however, also seems to be improved.

Last year the Red and White placed second behind Modesto with only a half point margin separating the two.

Some of the returning vets are Jess Siries who participates in the broad jump, pole vault and high jump. The Jenkins twins, Ellis and Alex, are also back in their respective sprint positions.

The 1960 Red and White track schedule is as follows:

Saturday, March 19, 1:30 p.m.: Big Eight Conference Relays at Sacramento.

Friday, March 25, 3 p.m.: Contra Costa and Modesto at Modesto.

Saturday, April 2, 10:30 a.m.: UC Frosh and Oakland at Oakland.

Friday, April 8, 3 p.m.: San Mateo and Stockton at Stockton.

Friday, April 22, 3 p.m.: Sacramento and Santa Rosa at Santa Rosa.

Wednesday, April 27, 3 p.m.: Diablo Valley College at Lafayette.

Saturday, April 30, 1:30 p.m.: Northern California Relays at Modesto.

Saturday, May 7, 10:30 a.m. (trials), 3 p.m. (finals).: Big Eight meet at Santa Rosa.

Saturday, May 14, 7 p.m.: West Coast Relays at Fresno.

Tuesday, May 17, 3 p.m.: Northern California trials at Sacramento.

Saturday, May 21, 1:30 p.m.: Northern California finals at Salinas.

Saturday, May 28, 7 p.m.: State meet at Modesto.

RAMBLINGS

Fan Lack Not Fault Of Student Body

By Frank Dunne

FOR YEARS various factions of our scholastic society have endeavored to promote spectator interest in the college's athletic program. The results of these campaigns have differed in respect to the zeal involved in the effort.

When the projects failed to live up to the expectations of the initiator, the brunt of the blame has been given to the student body. With this negative attitude prevailing on any campus, little hope can be held for the improvement of a so unfortunate situation.

There is a common maxim that you can beat a dog just so often before he will turn against you. The same story can be applied to the insults directed at student bodies anywhere.

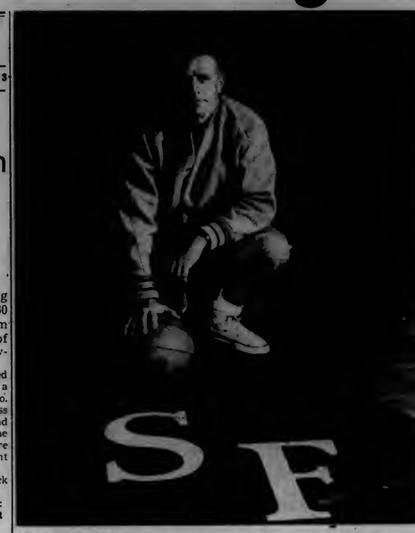
Members of the student body here, in general, are interested in the sports programs at the college and very probably would attend athletic events more often if they received the necessary incentive to go. One incentive is enough information prior to the game.

The Guardsman can supply only a part of the requirement because of its weekly publication schedule.

The sport's publicity department is in charge of releasing pre-game stories to the city newspapers and upon completion of the contest they also forward the results to the press.

The papers have co-operated with the college in this effort, but it seems natural to give greater coverage to schools whose student bodies seem, by reason of attendance, to be more interested in their teams.

The vast majority of the players on Ram teams come from San Francisco. The newspapers will follow these players all through high school with near-eulogistic acclaim, but when these players come to a college where the spirit seems to be low, they in turn are demoted in stature. This unfortunate situation destroys public or outside interest in our teams.



But the college should not need to rely on public support for its teams because it is up to us to improve the attendance at games, thus improving the press coverage problem.

The Rally Committee has done a good job around campus but some feel that even more could be accomplished through this organization. They should be the main source of information for the student body in matters that deal with game attendance.

Throughout last semester's football season rallies were held for the team, but the emphasis was placed on entertainment and not on the real purpose of a rally—and that purpose is to promote spirit to support the team. During the present basketball season rallies have not been in evidence at all.

A bulletin board in the main court with the dates of coming games has been suggested, as well as posters placed in prominent places throughout the campus. These suggestions are all good if they are carried out on a permanent basis.

The points listed are not intended to be negative, but rather as a list of constructive suggestions aimed to promote the general good of the entire sports program at the college.

CROUCHING ON THE threshold of success, after leading his men through the darkness of early season conflicts, Basketball Coach Sid Phelan faces the future with an optimistic eye toward a standout finish for his team in the current cage season.

Phelan joined the college coaching staff in 1955, and in the 1958-'59 season led his charges to the Big Eight Conference crown.

Guardsman Photographer Gary Ono accomplished this pictorial essay using a Speed Graphic camera with a multiple strobe set at F-11.

Rams Gain Tenth Straight Loop Win; T-Birds Fall 44-43

By Frank Dunne

During the semester holiday the Ram cagers faced eight teams in the Big Eight Conference and defeated all of them, giving them the lead in the league with a ten-win no-loss record.

Sacramento fell to the Rams on their home court, 48-38. The Panthers were up for this game and led most of the way, so that not until the last four minutes of the contest did the Rams pull the victory from the hands of defeat. Mel Wilson led the scoring for the victors with 18 points.

Oakland City College proved the most formidable enemy the locals had to face as the Rams squeaked past the Thunderbirds, 44-43. The Red and White led all the way but by not more than a few points, and the outcome was in doubt until John Lewis sank a free throw with five seconds to go.

Modesto fell before its home town crowd, 84-64. The game was never in doubt as the Rams pressed the faltering valley men into total subjection.

San Mateo almost pulled the upset of the year in the Bulldog gymnasium before a final 61-50 demise. Carl Wehe led the Mateans with 17 while Mike Carson led the locals with 17. San Mateo held the lead at half-time, 31-28, and the Rams had to play their best second half to come out on top.

Stockton was routed on its home court by the Red and White, 62-39. This was perhaps the easiest game the Rams had all year, with Cofield scoring 23 and spearheading the local attack.

Sacramento came into town for a second try at the Rams and fared no better than before as the Panthers were defeated, 70-60. The locals had a winning margin built up by half-time (34-21) and coasted to the eventual victory. Wilson and Carson both collected 16 points.

Contra Costa hosted the Rams and treated them to a victory, 87-75. This game was one of the best offensive shows put on by the Rams to date. Everyone on the Pigtan Avenue squad scored to make the win a true team effort. Bill Lacy took the high scoring honors for both teams as he led the Comets with 22 counters.

Santa Rosa played the Rams on its home court and came out on the short end of a 75-63 decision. The Bear Cubs surprised the locals as they never gave up during the whole game. Cofield led the scoring for the Red and White with 23, and Vern Coleman led the defense.

Rams May Own, Can Still Win Big Eight Crown

With the outcome of last night's Ram basketball game against the Oakland Thunderbirds crucial to the Big Eight championship, and the Guardsman unable at press time to report the results, several possible developments can occur.

1. A win over Oakland last night gives the Rams the Big Eight championship.

2. A Ram loss last night opens the field to two possibilities as follows:

- If the Rams win Friday against San Mateo, and Oakland loses its game the same night, the Rams clinch the title.
- If the Rams and the T-Birds win their Friday games, the two will engage in a playoff for the title; if both lose the two teams will also engage in a playoff.

The Rams went into last night's game with a 12-0 record by virtue of their last week victories over Stockton 56-53, and Modesto 56-33.

Oakland entered the game with an 11-1 record, having lost to the Rams earlier in the season.

Aquamen Open Season With Team Shortage

Despite severe handicaps, the Rams will open their swimming season Friday, March 11, at San Mateo, Coach Roy Burkhead stated this week.

As usual, the swim squad, with only eight members so far, has obstacles to overcome even before the opening meet, the first being the difficulty in getting suitable practice in the McLaren pool during the allotted time of 3:15 to 4:45 p.m. This situation is complicated by the fact that two junior high schools are already using the pool, which is also open for public swimming during practice.

Netmen Clash With San Mateo Friday

With the addition of two newcomers to his squad, Coach Roy Diederichsen sends his Ram netmen into battle against San Mateo this Friday in the first Big Eight Conference match of the season.

Vince Chin, number one player for St. Ignatius High School a few years ago, takes over the number one spot on the Ram squad. Larry Draper, ranked number three for the Red and White last year, has moved to the number two spot on the ladder this year, while a newcomer from Lowell High School, Randy Chunn, is ranked third on the Ram squad.

Lynn Matteson, a veteran of last year's squad, is holding down the number four spot on this year's racket squad. Fifth spot on the ladder is held by Paul Barth, another experienced netter from last year.

League encounters are on March 18 against Stockton at Golden Gate Park; March 25, Modesto at Modesto; April 1, Oakland at Oakland; April 8, Santa Rosa at Golden Gate Park; and April 22, Sacramento at Golden Gate Park, Contra Costa will not compete in conference play this year.

The conference championships will be held May 6-7 in Sacramento, with the northern sectionals May 13-14 in Modesto. The state championships will be held May 20-21 in San Francisco.

Mural Entries Due

Applications for team entry in the Associated Men Student basketball league must be submitted in S-140 by this Friday, Bill Keane, AMS president, said today.

Complete rules for the players are on the applications, with five players or more listed on each application. League competition begins next week.

RA Lists Officers, Activity Schedule

Recreation Association activities start this semester with Sandy Hayden, president; Bob Kelley, vice-president; Gladys Grassini, secretary; and Les Adams, treasurer.

The other remaining officers of RA are yet to be appointed, according to Elizabeth Wirth, physical education instructor and RA adviser.

The two women officers of RA, together with two of its most active members, Pat Crone and Barbara Azzaro, will attend the California Athletic and Recreation Federation for College Women Conference at Los Angeles this weekend.

The daily schedule for various club meetings of RA is as follows: Coed volleyball, Monday; women's basketball, Monday; modern dance, Tuesday; fencing, Wednesday; folk dancing, Thursday; all of which meet at the women's gymnasium at 3 p.m.

Bowling meets Thursday in the lobby, although the hour is not yet determined. Archery meets during Friday College Hours. Golfers will also meet on Friday to arrange a meeting hour.

Green Ram Golfers Face Bulldogs Friday

A real test of the Ram golfers' early season form will be provided in their first Big Eight Conference match Friday, March 11, when they meet San Mateo at the Harding links at 1 p.m.

San Mateo tied with Oakland last year for the conference championship and is expected to repeat this year. With only one returning letterman, John Carlin, the Rams will be hard-pressed to improve last year's fourth place finish.

Best cards turned in during the practice matches were by Carlin and Skip Jofdan. "We are still looking for golfers and anyone interested is invited to try out. We also run an intermediate golf class for credit," Coach Grover Klemmer said.

Council Ups AS Voting 3 Weeks To May 16, 17

By Paul Plansky

Student government elections will be held three weeks earlier this semester, May 16 and 17, as Student Council legislated its first forceful decision last week.

The motion, as presented to council by Bill Keane, Associated Men Student president, passed with 13 affirmative votes to one negative.

In speaking pro, Keane pointed out that this earlier election date would allow valuable time in which to break in the new officers for the following semester. He did not propose this change as a perpetual precedent, but rather as an experimental election.

Publicity posters for this semester's elections, therefore, will be moved to May 6, according to Publicity Chairman Judy Day.

Among other high points during the first two weeks of council were announcement of budgets for future approval, appointment of several committees, and discussion of the State information charts.

Finance Chairman Faye Fountain has had 15 budgets returned to her with 23 left unheard from. She reported that $800 to $1000 will be allotted to the college's basketball team, providing the varsity wins the championship.

Miss Fountain announced three budgets which will be acted on soon but won't appear in print for the council's approval beforehand. The following allotments were asked for: the basketball team, $546.88; the Freshman Class, $771, and $1271.14 for the Executive Council.

Working with Miss Fountain is the finance committee, the members of which were named by AS President Wally Hayes. They are Shirley Clayton, Georgene Peterson, Marlene Bobrow, Alberta Giannini and Delmar Rose.

Other committees formed thus far this semester are student-faculty relations, headed by Jack Verga; the constitution committee under Ron Cook, and the transcript committee with Fred Lobenstein as chairman.

Bud Andress, State Information chairman, pointed out the exceptional job that was done on the State Information charts. He said in order to keep this semester's charts up to the standards of Fall '59, more funds would be needed. Andress asked council for approximately $35 for a trip to Pasadena City College to make a request to the California Student Government Association for more money to cover the printing of more charts.

Sherman Elworthy, council adviser, suggested that a letter sent air-mail, special-delivery would be sufficient for Andress' request and this settled the question.

Student Council has changed its meeting place to Bungalow 3.

CAB Dance Set For Friday

55 Organizations On Display During March 4 Festivities

Every CAB has its Day, and this semester's Club Activities Board offers both entering and returning students a chance to survey the 55 clubs and organizations on campus this Friday, March 4, during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., and then attend a semi-formal dance in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to midnight.

In proclaiming the date for CAB Day this semester, Delmar Rose, CAB president, explained, "The purpose of CAB Day is to familiarize students with the many organizations available to them, and also it gives them a general view of what each club stands for."

Two Films On Tap For Friday College Hour Show

Two films, Wonderful World Of Color and Living Stereo, will be shown this Friday during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m. in S-136, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids director, announced last week.

Other films tentatively scheduled for the near future are Washington At Work, Friday, March 11; Slides On West Germany, Friday, March 18; Millions On The Move, Friday, March 25, and American Cup, Races, Friday, April 1.

Club Meetings Dominate College Hour Activities

College Hours will follow the same time schedule as last semester, 10 to 10:40 a.m., each Friday classes are in session, except for March 11 when there will be no College Hour program, Ralph Hillsman, dean of men and student activities, announced last week.

Events scheduled for this semester are as follows:

- March 4: Club Activities Board Day in court.
- March 11: Pre-registration, no College Hour activity.
- March 18: Club meetings; student-faculty assembly featuring guest speaker.
- March 25: Club meetings in rooms officially assigned through the dean's office; Fullerton Junior College Choir concert.
- April 1: Student-faculty assembly featuring guest speaker.
- April 15: Easter vacation, no College Hour.
- April 22: Club meetings in rooms assigned.
- May 6: Club meetings in rooms assigned.
- May 13: Double College Hour; student-faculty assembly featuring guest speaker.
- May 20: Club meetings; jazz concert.
- May 27: Club meetings; election rally, date subject to change by Student Council action.
- June 3: Club meetings; band concert.

Organizations around campus in the professional vein are Broadcasters' Club, Campus Police, Drama Club, Engineering Society, Forum, Hotel and Restaurant, Le Cercle Francais, Merchandising Club, A Cappella Choir, C.C.S.F. Band Association, Men's Glee Club, Pick and Hammer (geology), Ram Cam (photography), and Sigma Tau Sigma.

Fraternities include Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Tau Chi Sigma and Zeta Phi Sigma.

Sororities are Gamma Kappa Beta, Delta Psi, Delta Sigma Tau, Kappa Phi, Phi Beta Rho, Theta Tau and Zeta Chi.

The Block SF has installed three new officers for the spring semester, according to adviser Alex Schwarz. They are Bob Ross, president; Jack Hickey, vice-president, and Dennis Bates, athletic commissioner.

At the end of May or the beginning of June, an athletic awards banquet is expected to highlight the activities for this semester.

Officers for the Spring semester in Alpha Kappa Rho are Andy Pandalis, president; Dick Kentura, vice-president; Lee Bertolone, treasurer; Mike Gowen, pledge master; Carmen Forcina, recording secretary; Paul Plansky, corresponding secretary; Charley Hanks, custodian; Bill Thompson, historian, and Don Tarantino, sergeant-at-arms.

Heading Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity is Anthony Lopez. Assisting him are Calvin Murray, vice-president; Arthur Curry, treasurer; Monroe Miller, secretary, and Roseoe Drisdale, pledge master.

Sigma Tau Sigma is offering to all students an opportunity to participate in discussions on current social topics during College Hours in C-210.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Rushees' Preference Slips Due March 17

Following sorority firesides, which begin next week, the coffee preference hours will take place, according to Linda Lauro, Inter-Sorority Council president.

March 17 is the date set by ISC for filling out preference slips in the dean of women's office, S-150.

Curtain Rises On New Drama Opener March 18

'Kaufmann and Hart's hilarious comedy, The Man Who Came To Dinner, starts a seven-performance run on Friday, March 18, at 8 p.m., in the Little Theater, Michael Griffin, drama director, announced.

Performances are also scheduled for March 19, 25, 26, and April 1, 2 and 8.

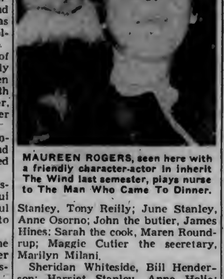
JORDY COONEY, who played the role here of the mayor in Inherit The Wind, has the part of Banjo in The Man Who Came To Dinner.

The play concerns Sheridan Whiteside, a man-about-town who, despite his better judgment, accepts an invitation from a wealthy, small-town family to go to dinner.

He goes to dinner, slips on a piece of ice and, on the advice of a small town doctor, is confined to bed in the home of his hosts, the Stanley family.

The Stanleys are nearly driven insane by Whiteside's numerous and rather odd antics which commence as soon as he is able to sit in a wheelchair.

Whiteside takes over the home of his hosts and runs their lives only to learn that he has never really been ill. His secretary falls in love with the editor-owner of the local paper, decides to marry him and quit her job.



Whiteside is determined to maintain the services of his secretary and prevent what he considers an ill-fated marriage.

Having learned that the newspaperman has written a successful play, Whiteside calls a successful actress on her way from London to New York City.

The actress arrives on the scene and proceeds with everything at her command to win the young newspaperman.

The cast includes Mr. Stanley, Ken Stone; Mrs. Stanley, Martha Ross; Miss Preen, Maureen Rogers; Richard Stanley, Tony Reilly; June Stanley, Anne Osorno; John the butler, James Hines; Sarah the cook, Maren Roundrup; Maggie Cutler the secretary, Marilyn Milani.

Sheridan Whiteside, Bill Henderson; Harriet Stanley, Anne Holle; Bert the newspaperman, Paul Teiln; Lorraine Sheldon the actress, Leah Pashoian, and Banjo, Jordy Cooney.

MAUREEN ROGERS, seen here with a friendly character-actor in Inherit The Wind last semester, plays nurse to The Man Who Came To Dinner.

AGS Urges All Top Scholars To Join Society

One hundred and thirteen additional students are eligible for membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, and are urged by faculty sponsor William G. Richardson to sign up as soon as possible. Only 87 out of a possible 200 have done so thus far.

As the purpose of the honor society is to promote scholarship, the only requirements are that members must have carried at least 12 units and maintained a B average with no final grade lower than a C for the Fall 1959 semester.

Candidates for membership should have 42 grade points for 12, 13 or 14 units, 45 grade points with 15 units, 48 with 16 and 51 with 17.

Among the privileges of belonging to the society are an early registration number for the Fall 1960 semester and "the pride which comes from good scholarship," Richardson said.

Once again the society is offering a program making coaching available to all students desiring extra help with their studies. Anyone proficient in any subject, including non-members of AGS, is eligible to coach.

Especially needed are persons able to teach mathematics, English grammar, chemistry and physics. Rates are $1.50 an hour.

Officers selected at the February 19 meeting include Jean Toso, president; Clinton Derry, vice-president, and Peter Pedrotti, secretary-treasurer.

On-Campus Groups Resume Activities After Registration

By Jeri Tarantino

THE START of the semester leaves students either woeful or ecstatic over their class schedules and looking to other activities for outlets.

Club organizations, therefore, which are officially designated on-campus, will participate in the traditional Club Activities Board Day this Friday.

Special interest clubs are California Student Teacher Association, Canterbury Club, Chess Club, Chinese Students Club, Christian Science Fellowship, Collegiate Christian Fellowship, Contemporary Jazz Club, Filipino Club, Folk Dancing Group, Hawaiian Club, Home Economics Club, Horticulture Society, International Relations Club, Lutheran Club, Acacia (Masonic), Newman Club, Veterans Association, Wesley Fellowship (Methodist) and the Westminster Student Fellowship (Presbyterian).

Honor groups around the campus are Alpha Gamma Sigma (scholastic honor society), Alpha Phi Omega (men's service fraternity), and Gamma Sigma Sigma (women's service sorority).

Organizations around campus in the professional vein are Broadcasters' Club, Campus Police, Drama Club, Engineering Society, Forum, Hotel and Restaurant, Le Cercle Francais, Merchandising Club, A Cappella Choir, C.C.S.F. Band Association, Men's Glee Club, Pick and Hammer (geology), Ram Cam (photography), and Sigma Tau Sigma.

Fraternities include Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Tau Chi Sigma and Zeta Phi Sigma.

Sororities are Gamma Kappa Beta, Delta Psi, Delta Sigma Tau, Kappa Phi, Phi Beta Rho, Theta Tau and Zeta Chi.

The Block SF has installed three new officers for the spring semester, according to adviser Alex Schwarz. They are Bob Ross, president; Jack Hickey, vice-president, and Dennis Bates, athletic commissioner.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Marksman Team Receives Trophy

Winners of the Marksman Team Trophy for 1959, the Campus Police were presented with the championship award at a dinner sponsored by the Oakland Pistol Club on Sunday, February 21, according to Richard Wernecke, chief of the department.

Each member of the team, which included William Donovan, Richard Gamble, Frank Mateo and Jim Olson, received a certificate of merit.

The force expects to enter two marksman teams and one sharpshooter team in the pistol matches this Sunday, March 6, at the Oakland Pistol Club. Team members competing are Reno Angiolini, Lou Birleffi, Gamble, Frances Lorimor, Mateo, Geno Micheli, Larry Miles, John Murphy, Olsen, Al Palmer, Ed Sarsfield, Richard Stump, Jim Tedesco and Werneche.

Parking permits can now be obtained in the Campus Police office, C-120, during each College Hour.

Loretta Ching Reigns Over Sweetheart Ball

Students danced from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. to the music of Dick Crest and his orchestra last Saturday when the Chinese Students Club presented its 15th annual Sweetheart Ball in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel.

Feature attraction of the evening was the reign of Loretta Ching, Sweetheart Ball Queen. Her attendants were Jackie Young, Nancy Hom and Betty Lee.

Tickets for the Sweetheart Ball sold at $3.75 per couple. Proceeds from the affair will be used to give a worthy Chinese student a scholarship. Donna Li Wong of Lowell High School received this semester's scholarship.

The Sweetheart Ball was planned by Chinese Student Club officers Herb Luke, president, and Jerry Jue, treasurer, with the aid of Marcelline McDermott and James Haran, club faculty sponsors.

Navy Conducts Pilot Interviews Friday

The Naval Aviation Information Team will conduct interviews on campus this Friday for all students interested in becoming naval aviators.

Equipped with displays and models of aircrafts, the site of the interviews will be the Naval Aviation Information Van.

The aviation officer candidate program is open to college graduates between 19 and 26 years of age who can meet the mental and physical requirements.

Expansion Brings Better Facilities This Year

Completion of current construction projects enlarging and improving the campus will be realized within a year, providing for extra parking space, a larger enrollment, and better facilities for instruction, Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management, disclosed yesterday.

Within one month the cafeteria annex of Smith Hall will be completed except for painting and the ceramic tile floor, Anderson explained, and the additional space will make the present snack bar area 20 feet longer.

Sliding doors will separate the enlarged snack bar from the main cafeteria and can be removed for dances or group meetings. The snack bar will be designated as a lounging area, while the remaining seating will be restricted for meals. Anderson stated that the purpose of this division is to provide better service and eating facilities and alleviate the present congestion problem.

The Smith Hall extension should be completed during the summer and ready for use this fall. Construction will also provide additional office space for hotel and restaurant instructors, and an extended faculty dining room.

Classes will be scheduled in the arts building in February, 1961. The drama department, which presently is located in Science Hall basement, will move to the new building and will present its productions in a Little Theater seating from 350 to 400 persons.

The ceramics, art and music departments will also be moved to the new site. TV production classes will be taught there, and other than science, only journalism and graphic arts classes will remain in Science Hall. There will be 24 classrooms in all, including soundproofed band and A Cappella Choir rooms.

Adjacent to the arts building, which will enable the enrollment to increase by 2000 students, will be an additional parking area, allowing for about 150 automobiles. Its entrance will be from Judson Avenue, and the faculty will enter its parking lot, containing room for 80 or 90 cars, from a Phelan Avenue entrance.

Additions to the men's and women's gymnasiums as well as the track and football field should be ready for the fall semester. Provided that the turf on the field and track are in good condition, students will be able to watch games, hold rallies, and have meetings in the 3000-seat stand. Portable bleachers may be purchased in the future for seating at the opposite side for a rival rooting section.

The men's gymnasium will have body building facilities on the lower level of its annex and boxing and trampoline apparatus upstairs. Included in the expansion of the women's gymnasium will be a room to be used as a social hall for meetings and various functions.

Closed-Circuit TV In Test Here Friday, To Originate From Little Theater's Stage

Attempting to find its value as an instrument of education, closed-circuit television will make its City College debut this Friday in the Little Theater (S-28) from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 to 3 p.m.

The Dage Television Company will supply the equipment used in the administration-sponsored event, designed to fathom student-faculty reaction to and use of the medium.

Henry Leff, TV-radio instructor here and in charge of the event, stated that the programs will originate from the theater's stage and two sets will be situated in the rear of the theater.

"Students and faculty members are urged to stop by and view the experiment," he said.

Instructors from the photography, life and physical science departments, among others, will arrange programs for the experiment.

A representative from Dage will be present to discuss the varied uses of closed-circuit TV.

The technical end of the production will be handled by students from the photography, radio, drama and engineering departments.

Leff emphasized that this demonstration is done in anticipation of an order of equipment for the arts building, which is constructed with provisions for closed-circuit television.

'Suggestions' Call For Change Machine

Ideas dropped in the Associated Men Student sponsored suggestion box last week showed marked student interest in the installation of a more adequate type of change machine in Science Hall basement near the coffee and coke machines, according to Bill Keane, AMS president.

The box is located near the Associated Student office, S-140, and is checked regularly for student requests, Keane said.

Campus Police To Swear In 11 New Men On March 22

Eleven men will be sworn in to the Campus Police force on Tuesday, March 22, by Chief of the San Francisco Police Department, Thomas Cahill, according to Fred Fitzgerald, criminology department head here.

The men to receive their badge numbers at the Hall of Justice are Michael Hancock, James Holmes, Harry Kirk, Reuben Martinez, John McClymond, Allen Mersereau, James Randall, William Reed, Ross Rich, Dick Visperas and Ronald Wilson.

Invited as guests of the San Francisco Police Department Revolver Club, the Campus Police unit will compete in individual pistol matches on Sunday, April 10, at the San Francisco Police range.

Richard Wernecke, chief of the Campus Police, recently stated that 950 parking permits have been issued to date, while approximately 550 citations have been given to students on campus. "Entirely too many citations have been issued to date," Wernecke commented.

Warning students against parking in dirt and faculty areas, he also added that parking regulation sheets are available in C-120 for those who are uncertain of the force's rules.

Leap Year Swings With An Added Hop

AWS Changes Date For Once-In-Four-Years Event

The Associated Women Student Leap Year dance, held once every four years and originally scheduled for April 29 in Smith Hall, has been moved to Friday, March 18.

AWS President Stevie Tissier said that Lady's Luck will be the theme, and dress will be casual with heels proper for women and sports coats and ties for men.

Tallies will be used in place of tickets and will be presented at the door of Smith Hall for admission. The dance will be held between 9 p.m. and 12 midnight.

Committee chairmen are publicity, Paulette Petitt; decorations, Carol Hinkson; refreshments, Pat Crone; entertainment, Juanita Shaffer, and tallies, Irene Conteras. The admission price has not yet been decided.

Mark Hosts Frosh 50th Anniversary Waltz

Choosing the Mark Hopkins Hotel as the site, the Freshman Class will hold the 50th semi-annual Frosh Ball Friday, March 25, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight, John Azzaro, Frosh Class president announced.

During the appropriately-named dance, Anniversary Waltz, which will be held in the Peacock Court and the Room of the Dons, a cutest couple contest is planned to highlight the evening. Any freshman is eligible to enter.

All freshman and sophomores who have a registration certificate and an Associated Student card are admitted to the dance without additional cost. Those who haven't had the opportunity to purchase a card will be charged $2.50 per couple, Azzaro said.

Appropriate dress, Azzaro declared, will be dark suits for men and cocktail dresses for women.

Soph Class Picks Oriental Theme For Palace Dance

Sayonara has been tentatively selected as the theme of the Soph Ball, Sophomore Class President Jack Verga disclosed last week. He also indicated that there is a good possibility that the dance will be held either in the Rose Room or the Gold Room of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel should present plans materialize. Originally scheduled for June 4, the date has been changed to June 3 or May 28, because of prior hotel commitments.

Other plans for the dance include a King and Queen contest. They will be chosen by the "Penny a Vote" method, Verga said, and crowned at the dance.

Bob Everson and his band will provide the music from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. The dance is open to those with Associated Student cards and costs $2.50 without.

Azzaro Wins AS Sales Contest

Student Government made a clean sweep of the Associated Student card sales contest as John Azzaro, Frosh Class president, took first prize, a $20 Ramporium merchandise order, for selling 275 cards to well outdistance his closest competitor, Judy Day, Publicity Committee chairman, with 65 sales.

Rally Commissioner Marilyn Santos took third place. Miss Day and Miss Santos received $10 and $5 orders, respectively. The prizes were awarded at the Club Activities Board dance, March 4.

Adding a blue note to the event, Marilyn Middleton, card sales chairman, announced that sales are still several hundred short of the 2300 goal set by the Finance Committee.

Administrators Grant One Week Midterm Extension

At the request of the faculty, the college administration has extended each midterm period one week, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, reported last week.

The date of the first midterm period has been changed from Friday, March 18, to Friday, March 25. The end of the second period has been advanced from Friday, April 29, to Friday, May 6.

The changes, Miss Learnard stated, have been made in order that the faculty may have more time in which to evaluate midterm tests.

Schedule Set For Fall AS Elections

Petitions for election to Associated Student offices for the fall semester will be available Monday, March 28, Jerry Kucserka, election commissioner, announced yesterday.

Deadline for submitting applications is midnight Friday, April 29.

Students aspiring for political posts will be able to pick up their applications either from him or the deans of men and women, or at the office of the registrar, Kucserka added.

On February 25, the Student Council voted by a 13-1 majority to move the elections to May 16 and 17.

Fall Pre-Registration Friday Shifts College Hour Time

Students who are planning to return to the college in the fall semester must attend pre-registration this Friday, from 7:45 to 9 a.m. in the library to affirm their program planning appointment and apply for a registration number, Walter E. McCloud, counseling staff member, declared last week.

College Hour will be held from 8 to 9 a.m. this week but no organizations will meet in order to allow students to complete all pre-registration procedures. The 8 o'clock class this Friday will begin at 9:10 a.m. and the 9 o'clock class at 10 a.m.

Approximately 3700 students of the total who returned participated in pre-registration last semester, the first time this method was attempted. Several faults were mentioned by both the students and the instructors including bad weather during the activity.

Criticisms were confined to the long line, the loss of class time, students "cutting" into the line and the slow movement of the line.

All of these faults, excluding one, are expected to be corrected this semester, McCloud stated. "The fact that there was a long line we can do nothing about," he said, "but we can speed the process by eliminating the bottlenecks and increasing the check stations, and thus eliminate two bad factors."

"The third improvement," McCloud added, "is to be kept confidential, but it will stop students from shuffling around in line."

McCloud emphasized that everyone should have his form filled out, checking as many free time periods existing during lunch hour.

"If students obey this simple fact all they have to do is address a postcard and pick up their proposed program sheet," he said.

The forms needed for pre-registration can be acquired this week at the entrances to Science Hall, Smith Hall and the library.

Hilarious Comedy Unveils March 18 In Little Theater

With leading actors of no mean experience, the Little Theater readies itself for Friday, March 18, at 8 p.m., opening night of The Man Who Came To Dinner, according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

Handling some of the leading roles will be Bill Henderson, as Sheraton Whiteside, the slightly eccentric dinner guest; Marylin Milani as Maggie Cutler, his secretary; Leah Pashoian as Lorraine Sheldon, a successful actress; Fred Fisher as Bert Carlton, a newspaperman; James Robinson as Mr. Stanley, the host, and Jordy Cooney as Banjo, a Hollywood nitwit.

Many of the actors of the Little Theater have had a good amount of outside acting experience.

Fisher has worked in many plays while in the service and has appeared with the famed Tokyo Players.

Aside from being in many previous presentations here, Cooney has done outside acting and singing. Miss Milani was the assistant director at St. Rose Academy and has also presented variety shows at the University of San Francisco.

The Little Theater will give a total of eight performances of The Man Who Came To Dinner. Griffin feels that the hilarious comedy will draw good houses throughout its run.

Two Foreign Consuls To Speak At IRC Meet

The Consuls of Sweden and Turkey have been invited to speak at the World Affairs Conference of the International Relations Club scheduled for Saturday, May 21, in Smith Hall.

Meeting from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., the conference will cover Europe, touching specifically on the Common Market, the Outer Seven, Swedish and Turkish diplomacy toward Russia, Europe's mistrust of a United Germany, and the chances of Greece and Austria becoming leaders in the world of fine arts.

Jose Lino Bran, president of the IRC, who is heading the steering committee for the conference, will act as chairman.

AS Card Buyers Give Financial Life To Campus Organizations

IF YOU HAVE an Associated Student card, you helped publish this issue of The Guardsman—and the remainder of this semester's editions. Without you, we'd be non-existent. Every campus organiaztion owes its life to those who buy a card.

It works something like the national budget—each organization gets a required share of the tax money to remain in operation. Your purchase of the AS card helps to field a football team, publish a paper, and keep a radio station on the air, plus many more activities. Everyone of these organizations in turn owes you something—they must prove that they are worthy of their existence, just as the executive arm of the government must justify itself to the taxpayers.

Without the taxes they would be no Armed Forces, roads, bridges and so on. Without your purchase of a card we'd have no teams, paper, KCSF or social affairs.

That's about where the similarity between taxes and AS cards ends. Your card entitles you to special discounts at stores listed inside the card. The savings one can make at these business places can more than reimburse him for the original price of the card. Cardholders are admitted to student dances without additional cost. The savings alone from the additional cost of admission to a couple of these dances should be well worth the initial cost.

Be identical twins and buy one today, tomorrow—NOT a week from Tuesday.

The Importance Of Public Opinion

A FEW WEEKS AGO a group of students from the University of San Francisco virtually declared total war on Count Marco, the widely read columnist PhD of Amorology of The Chronicle.

The Dons, stirred by the student newspaper, The Foghorn, became quite indignant at Marco's seeming belittlement of womanhood. The special Marco "coverage" of the Finch trial, which tended to make a circus out of a serious search for justice, only made the USFers' blood boil more. They felt that the Golden Voice of the West was developing a very unhealthy case of laryngitis. So, with honor offended, some men of the Hilltop marched on the Board of Supervisors to plead with them to condemn and censure the "no account Count."

We take pleasure in noting open expression of opinion by any group of students, and we encourage the use of the Ram's Horn, our letters-to-the-editor column.

It is most refreshing to see college men and women take a stand on an issue, but we question the USFer's wisdom in handling this situation. After all, if they were going to ask the government to intervene, why fool around with a few local bigwigs? Start at the top—try the UN, or break up a summit meeting. If one wants government censure he should get it from someone who really means something; don't be half safe.

Running Marco out of town on a rail may be a good thing, if public opinion does it, but if the government does it we begin to lose one of our basic freedoms—freedom of the press, a cherished American belief that should be considered of more value than the career of any alleged nobleman. The barter would hardly be equal.

If public opinion is as outraged as the Don representatives claim, The Chronicle's letter-to-the-editor column should be filled with missives from offended readers. If circulation starts to drop because of the Count, the editors will be the first to give him a royal flush. But, to all indications, Marco's column has stimulated circulation—maybe not at USF but elsewhere in the Bay Area.

Top Movies And Star-Studded Acts Dominate San Francisco's Spring Entertainment Schedule

By Elmer Milligan

SAN FRANCISCO'S entertainment schedule this spring will provide its citizens with first class entertainment featuring most of the top stars in show business.

Jane Froman, one of today's truly great popular singers, was forced because of illness to cancel her appearance at the Venetian Room of the Fairmont Hotel. Known to many GI's during World War II as "America's singing sweetheart," Miss Froman became famous for her recordings of Embraceable You and With a Song In My Heart.

Scheduled to begin her engagement in the Venetian spotlight on March 18, will be popular Diahann Carroll. Miss Carroll can also be seen in Samuel Goldwyn's $4 million production, Porgy And Bess, soon to be shown at the East Bay's Grand Lake theater.

Lovely Lena Horne, now appearing at an exclusive nightclub in Hollywood, comes to the Fairmont in June.

Fack's II, the favorite entertainment spot of Northern California college students, has put into effect a half-price-for-students policy, whereby Associated Student cardholders are admitted by paying half the toll.

Mel Young, Jack Jones, Ann Weldon and The Cabiles are the four attractions now at Fack's; their act closes March 30, and on April 1, fabulous Dakota Station steps into the limelight.

Contralto Marian Anderson will sing a concert at the Opera House on Sunday, March 27. For the past 18 years, she has given a portion of her earnings to help talented, young musicians.

Lana Turner, Anthony Quinn, Sandra Dee and Ross Hunter were in town recently for the filming of Universal-International's latest murder picture, Portrait In Black. The film depicts the life of a San Francisco socialite who attempts to murder her husband.

Hunter produced Imitation of Life and Pillow Talk and will handle the same job for Portrait. The movie is scheduled for showing at the RKO Golden Gate theater shortly after Easter.

Who said Marlon Brando was a moody, temperamental stuff - shirt? After his "performance" at Jimbo's Bop City several mornings ago, all we can say is that he is a swinging champ.

Those who missed his "act" at Bop City will have to settle for his screen performance in The Fugitive Kind with Academy Award winners Joanne Woodward and Anna Magnani. The film will be released in the near future.

Solomon and Sheba, labeled the best love story of all time, is now at the United Artists theater. The next attraction is Take A Giant Step, starring Johnny Nash, Ruby Dee, Estelle Hemsley, Frederick O'Neal, Ellen Holly and Bea Richards.

Judging from the preview, this flick is a good one.

Marilyn Monroe snagged French singer Yves Montand for her next movie, Let's Make Love, scheduled for release in San Francisco next month.

Students' Loss, Charity's Gain

IT'S THE SAME OLD STORY. Ruth M. Hoburg displays a few of the items that have made their way to the lost and found department in C-303. Coats, eyeglasses, slide rules and more unusual deposits make the lost and found one of the college's most interesting spots.

3 Lost & Found Departments No Help As Students Fail To Claim Stray Possessions

By Anton Norris

Some mysterious reason, hidden within the little understood depths of the sub-conscious, must explain the overflow of lost articles in the three lost and found departments here.

Such a thought strikes one as he looks at the numerous articles of unclaimed clothing. He might even surmise that the sub-conscious is aided somewhat by the conscious.

After all, what more unique method is there to get that new coat than by losing, accidentally, the old one?

Or those eyeglasses that you hate now and have always hated but were forced to buy. Lose them and buy new. This is the era of prosperity. Besides, maybe now you can have that pair everyone told you was wrong for you but you yourself know were just right.

How else can one explain so many pairs of glasses found without any form of identification on them? Surely no college student is so lacking in talent that he can't write his own name on his own glasses.

Yet when one looks at unclaimed, expensive slide rules the above reasoning is throttled. Would anyone deliberately lose an eight dollar slide rule? It doesn't seem feasible; however, slide rules are in the lost and found and, to date, no one has claimed them.

The ladies of the three lost and found departments, Ruth Hoburg, C-301; Uriel Furlong, S-149, and Frances Sullivan, student bank, are secretaries not gaolers of unclaimed articles nor do they wish to be.

They would gladly return all their unhappy charges if they knew who the owners are. Without identification, or if students don't check with the offices for their lost articles, returning them is an impossibility.

Perhaps one shouldn't be too concerned though. All unclaimed articles are kept until the end of the semester and then are donated to some goodwill organization. Maybe then unwanted coats will be appreciated by someone who needs them and can use them.

After the first month of the new semester the lost and found departments are saturated with books, scarves, clothes, and eyeglasses waiting patiently for their forgetful owners.

It is a pity and even somewhat of a waste. These articles should be allowed to fulfill the functions for which they were intended not, instead, be reduced to dust catchers. Even for a book such a lowering of station is embarrassing and disheartening.

Some of them are just off the press and out of the bookstore and already they are vagrants. They have been lost.

Four Students Win Scholarships In Keen Academy Competition

Whatever became of the struggling, underfed, bearded artist? He's still with us, but he has changed quite a bit.

For one thing, he's making the arrangements of paint on a flat surface pay, in the field of commercial art.

Gone is the itchy beard and the cadaverous mien, and the bottle of red wine has been replaced with a T square.

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob Pacini

RAMiniscing: Remember when most of the trees on campus had branches, when someone, displaying good Americanism, made like George Washington and went axe-happy by the flagpole, when we almost had two double College Hours (really, can't we forget about that?), when the coffee machine in Science Hall worked properly, or did it?, when there used to be a great big beautiful parking lot below Cloud Hall, when the Ram really got burned up because someone tried to wash it, and on a happier note, when our valiant hotel and restaurant department made such a fine showing at the St. Francis Hotel and on television?

FROM HERE AND THERE — mostly there. Southern Cal's Daily Trojan reports that the daisy game is fixed! You know, "he loves me," "he loves me not," etc. Well, you simply can't win because the daisy always has an even number of petals. Thus if you begin "he loves me," you're sure to end with you know what.

If you do end up with "he loves me," you're either a cheat, you can't count, or you've picked a shoddy product.

You just can't trust anything anymore!

FROM a North Carolina college comes the episode of a professor, who, handing back blue books (they have them there, too!) after a quiz wrote the word "martial" on the blackboard. He explained that it did not mean the same thing as "marshall" as some had written in their books. He said that some had spelled it "marital" and added that the terms were synonymous.

A PRACTICAL JOKER at Fresno State recently locked six pigeons in the college's library one night, and despite efforts, which would have been considered extremely ruthless by the bird watchers society, to remove them the next day, the six birds refused to budge. After closing hours, however, the pigeons were finally captured and run out of the place.

A library staff member commented on the good behavior of the pigeons during their stay among the books.

But there wasn't even a peep out of them.

PotSHOT. Currently going around is the story of the Russian ambassador, who was pacing angrily in his embassy awaiting the arrival of two aides who were an hour late. Upon their arrival he confronted them with "Where have you been? I've been waiting hours."

"On our way here," timidly replied one of the aides, "we got hungry Soviet."

Scrappy Bear Junior Varsity Overwhelms Ram Diamond Hopefuls In Season Opener

By Jesse Gonzalez

The Ram baseballers opened their 1960 season on a bad note February 26 when they traveled to Berkeley only to be defeated by a tough and determined University of California Junior Varsity squad, 6-3.

It was a see-saw battle until the seventh inning when the junior Bears scored two runs, one in the seventh and the other in the eighth to put the game virtually on ice for them.

RAM HURLER Bill Flanagan is Coach Lee Eisan's ace pitcher this year, and on his arm may rest the hopes for the future of the team.

Cal started the scoring in the initial frame by putting one on the scoreboard with a triple and a single doing the damage.

The Rams came right back in the second. Left fielder Reno DiBono led off by singling to center; third sacker Jerry Gosland walked, but then second baseman Byron Beckes forced Gosland at second, DiBono going to third. DiBono later scored the tying run when center fielder Jack Tause forced Beckes.

In their half of the second a single, triple, and another single in that order accounted for two more runs for the Berkeley lads.

A big inning in the fifth looked evident for the Eisanmen. Tause started off the frame with a double to left; pitcher Bill Flanagan then drew a walk.

With hopes high for City College, Tause was caught trying to steal third base. Ray Greggains, batting for right fielder Paul DeMartini, kept it going by also drawing a base on balls as did first baseman Don Leonardini to load the bases.

But the rally died when catcher Bob Farber popped to shortstop, and shortstop Ken Dekker struck out to end the inning, te score remaining 3 to 1.

The Blue and Gold made it 4 to 1 in their half of the sixth on a double, an error and a single. With possibilities to add to the margin, a groundout ended the threat.

Starting the seventh inning, successive walks to Greggains and Leonardini plus a booming 390-foot triple by Farber put the SF'ers back in the game at 4 to 3. With the tying run in the person of Farber at third, the rally was quickly squelched once again as Cal pitcher Jim Gianulias settled down and got pinch hitter Mel Canevaro and Tause to strike out to end the frame.

Two insurance runs, one in the seventh, and the other in the eighth for the Bears, ended any serious threat by the Rams.

Flanagan went five innings on the mound for the Red and White. He was relieved by Randolph Face, with Hank Padia finishing the last two innings. Flanagan was the loser. Farber worked behind the plate.

Ray Rohde started for UC, and received help from Gianulias. Hewitt was their battery mate.

Meanwhile, back on the local scene the same day, the Ram second unit was having a field day against its prep neighbors, Balboa, by completely demolishing the Buccaneers, 18 to 1, at Balboa Park.

Left-hander Dick Murray did the pitching for the Phelan Avenue boys with Bob Rugglero calling the pitches for him behind the plate.

Tuesday, March 1, the Rams went across town and held a practice session against the Galileo High School Lions at Funston Park. Coach Lee Eisan stated that this was mainly a "tune-up" for the official opener against the Santa Clara Broncos at Santa Clara last Thursday.

Santa Clara won 6 to 1.

Concentrating on their bunting and fielding, City College "toyed" with the North Beach school in piling up a 13 to 2 win. DiBono and Dekker did the hurling with Farber and Ruggiero handling the catching duties.

The first home game for the locals will be next Tuesday, March 15, starting at 3 p.m. against Vallejo in a non-conference affair.

The first conference tilt is slated for Saturday afternoon, March 19, against Stockton College.

Mustangs Battle Netmen March 18

Powerful Stockton will face the Ram netmen Friday, March 18, at Golden Gate Park, in the second Big Eight Conference match of the season.

The Mustangs have their entire squad back from last year and should give the local netmen a tough battle.

Coach Roy Diederichsen's netters received some bad news last week when the number 1 man on the Ram squad, Vince Chin, had to drop out of classes.

In the recent Northern California Intercollegiate Tennis Championships (Two-year Colleges and Frosh Division), the Ram representatives did not fare too well.

Larry Draper defeated Rithouse Wittimore, Cal Frosh, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4; Chin was defeated by Wes Stroud, San Jose State Frosh, 6-2, 6-3; and Randy Chunn was beaten by ex-Davis Cupper Chris Crawford, now attending Menlo College.

Sacramento Relays Mark Opening Of Ram Cinder Meets

Coming into the season with many returning veterans, and even more bright new faces, the 1960 Red and White track squad looks to be an improved squad over last year.

The first big test will be the Big Eight Conference Relays at Sacramento on Saturday, March 19, at 1:30 p.m. Last year the Rams placed second in Big Eight competition and finished seventh in Northern California. If the Rams of 1960 can do as well as some of their predecessors the season should be quite a success.

The Ram track records follow:

Mile run: 4:16.3, Patton, 1958.
440-yard run: 48.9, Moore, 1949.
100-yard dash: 9.6, Redus, 1955.
120 high hurdles: 14:4, Redus, 1956.
880-yard run: 1:57.2, Carlson, 1954.
220-yard dash: 21.4, Wade, 1952.
Two-mile run: 9:343, Patton, 1958.
220 low hurdles: 23.4, Redus, 1955.
Mile relay: 3:17.9, Austin, Zimmerman, Nasser, Thomas, 1958.
Pole vault: 13'8½", Gasper, 1958.
Broad jump: 24'7¾", Burton, 1958.
Shot-put: 55'11", Lewis, 1958.
High jump: 6'7¾", Costa, 1958.
Discus: 163'3", Reid, 1959.

Aquamen Meet Mateans Friday

With only two more days before the first league meet, the Ram swimming team is busily whipping into shape.

This Friday, March 11, the natators engage San Mateo in the Bulldogs' home pool.

Names of returning men and the stroke they will probably swim follows: Gene Gaynor, backstroke; Peter Panasik, sprints; Craig Schwarz, free style; Bob Urrea, breast stroke; Bob Fewster, free style and butterfly.

New men to the team, and their strokes are Bill Sakovich, individual medley; Al Stevens, breast stroke; Richard Sullivan, Al Swanson and Pete Urrea, sprints.

Coach Roy Burkhead expressed the need for a diver and another butterfly stroke man to "give us a well-rounded team this season."

Intramural Leagues To Debut Next Week

Sign-ups having been due Monday, the Associated Men Student - sponsored intramural basketball play is expected to start next week.

The league is divided into two separate sub-leagues, the Club Activities Board-Independents, and the Inter-Fraternity Council Leagues. Games are played on varying week nights at 7 and 8 p.m.

The champion of the respective leagues play each other for the grand championship. Last semester's championship winner was the Block SF Society, which defeated the Recreation Association in finals for the CAB-Independent title.

Locals, T-Birds End Regular Season With 13-1 Records

By Frank Dunne

The Rams wound up the regular basketball season with a routine win over San Mateo Friday night in the men's gymnasium, 58-34. This win, coupled with an Oakland win over Stockton the same night, sent the race for the Big Eight Championship into a play-off.

The winner of this contest will face Fullerton Junior College in the opening round of the State Tournament. Last year the college only lasted as far as the first round. This year both Oakland and San Francisco are stronger teams.

Last Friday, the locals led from start to finish in a determined effort not to let the Bulldogs even get close to upsetting them. At the start of the contest the Red and White posted 10 points before the Mateans scored. This was the temper of the entire contest as the Rams completely outclassed the Bulldogs.

At the half the locals led, 26-15, contens after the early point splurge to confine themselves to a defensive game.

In the second half the Rams opened up their offense until, at the end of the game, they had built a 24-point spread. Dennis Bates led the scoring with 12, and Cleo Cofield and Mel Wilson trailed with 11 each.

This win was a complete reversal of the last game the Rams played with the Bulldogs, when the Mateans led in the first half, 31-28, and it took the locals all they had to top the Bulldogs.

BULLETIN!

The Rams defeated Oakland Monday night in the Big Eight playoff game in Sacramento. This win gave the Rams the Big Eight Championship and the right to represent the conference in the State Tournament in San Jose starting this Thursday and ending Saturday evening with the championship game.

Last year the Rams went to the state meet and were defeated in the first round. The last Ram team to win the State Tournament was the wonder team of 1949, which defeated Grant Tech in the tourney at Sacramento.

T-Birds Top Ram Five, 63-59, Tie For League Lead

A combination of a partisan crowd and a fired up Oakland five proved to be the undoing of the Rams as they fell before the Thunderbirds, 63-59, in an overtime thriller at Oakland March 1.

The game started off as any game of this importance would with each team as tight as a violin string. It ended the same way.

The T-Birds led at the half, 30-27. Charlie McKinney, Bird guard, was largely responsible for the Oakland lead, as he led his team in scoring and defensive play in the first half.

In the second half Cleo Cofield caught on for the Rams, and the last stanza turned into a McKinney-Cofield battle. Both men played what was probably the finest game of their careers.

With about five minutes to go in the last half, McKinney fouled out and a few seconds later Ram center John Lewis, who led the defense for the locals, also collected five fouls.

With 40 seconds to go in the game the Rams trailed 55-50. Three quick points narrowed the margin to two points, and with two seconds to go, Ram guard Vern Coleman sank a tip-in to tie the game.

In the overtime, victory went to the T-Birds when they dropped eight points from the charity line, courtesy of Ram fouls.

Ram Cagers Show True Spirit In Loss To Oaks

By Frank Dunne

THE BUZZER sounded ending the overtime period in the Oakland clash. A small group of cagers, who moments before had been deliriously happy when Vern Coleman tied the game and sent it into overtime, stood in sad disbelief in what had occurred in the last five minutes.

The team turned and headed for the dressing room. A few loyal fans met the men as they came off the court, patted them on the back, and tried to cheer them up with a well-meaning word. But words at a time like this have no meaning nor can they ease the gap of nothingness felt in losing.

The dressing room was like a tomb, the silence broken only by the victorious shouts of the T-Bird team somewhere down the hall.

For a few minutes the Rams just stood and looked at each other, wishing someone would say something, but no one could. They went to their lockers, each blaming himself for the loss.

A funny thing about a loss; each man assumes full responsibility for the defeat, but when there's a win, it's a team victory.

Sid Phelan came in and tried to say something to his men, but he saw by their faces that words would have no meaning.

As soon as the players were dressed and had packed their bags, they faced the first post-game test; they had to pass the victorious Oaks' dressing room. They passed—with mixed emotions, some with a glint of anger, some with disdain, but none with despair.

Finally outside, they assembled near the cars and tried to discuss the game.

Came the hardest part of all—the long ride home. Each man wondered how he could explain the loss to his friends, but that didn't worry him as much as the fact that he—they had lost the game.

Sororities Plan Activities, Elect Semester Officers

By Jeri Tarantino

JUST about this time, students are wondering whether to disappear from their most difficult class or stick with it. Personally, it's easier to disappear. But then there are those . . .

A trip to Sacramento taken by student representatives of two-year colleges in California turned out to be worth while. The students who accompanied the tour brought back many ideas for the government of the college. Among those who went were Stevie Tissier, Associated Women Student president, and Diane Beeson, AWS vice president.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority elected new officers who are as follows: Pat Perkins, president; Carolyn Vukasin, vice president; Georgene Peterson, pledge mistress; Louise Ortega, treasurer; Karen Ballard, recording secretary; Mary Ann Grandemanche, corresponding secretary; Arlene Wilson, historian; Sharon Lebovetz, sergeant-at-arms, and Kathy Henderson, custodian. The sisters are now planning for their fireside, to be held tomorrow night at the home of Joan and Jean Giannini.

The officers for the spring semester of Delta Psi sorority are Joanna Geary, president; Joni Greenberg, first vice president; Judy Arjo, second vice president; Loretta Lee, treasurer; Bobby Keane, corresponding secretary; Kathy Sanborne, recording secretary; Alberta Giannini; Flo Galli, historian, and Diane Doody, publicity manager.

As an added extra-curricular activity, a bowling team will be started soon for anyone who is interested. The class will meet every Thursday at 3 p.m., and the site is temporarily set for the Westlake Bowl. Those interested in entering the competition may consult Elizabeth Wirth, physical education instructor, in the women's gymnasium. The members of the teams will obtain credit in the Recreation Association for their participation.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Publications Board Approves Guardsman Schedule For Spring

Twelve more issues of The Guardsman are scheduled for publication this semester, Jim Clifford, editor, and chairman of the Publications Board, announced today.

As approved by the Publications Board, The Guardsman's tentative dates of publication after today are March 16, March 23, March 30, April 6, April 13, April 27, May 4, May 11, May 18, May 25, June 1 and June 8.

Members of the Publications Board are Clifford, chairman; Wally Hayes, Associated Student president; Faye Fountain, AS finance chairman; Vicky Aumann, Guardsman news editor; Elmer Milligan, Guardsman managing editor; Bob Pacini, Guardsman feature editor, and Tony Lopez, president of Alpha Phi Epsilon, in charge of circulation of The Guardsman.

Publications Board rules stipulate that the chairman must approve all posters to be placed about the campus. Chairman Clifford is usually in S-304. Posters not approved are subject to confiscation.

USC Director Speaks Before Student Council, Praises Quality Of Leadership Here

By Paul Plansky

"Leadership in public services is becoming a tremendous positive force today," Dr. John Gerletti, the Public Administration Director at the University of Southern California, emphasized in an address to Student Council last week.

Dr. Gerletti stressed the importance of recruiting well qualified persons into government work. He explained that there is a great amount of power invested in public offices, and in some instances, public positions have been upgraded hastily and ill-favoredly.

"The quality of leadership material that I have witnessed at this student government meeting is exactly what we're looking for at our school of administrative training," Dr. Gerletti stated.

As an example of the great opportunities available in this field, he said there are 110,000 government employees in the Los Angeles area surrounding the USC campus, and for every 50 persons there must be an administrative official to co-ordinate their jobs.

Council gave its guest an appreciative round of applause after his closing words, and Dr. Gerletti rushed off to make a similar address in the East Bay.

In an earlier meeting, council approved budgets for the Freshman Class and basketball team. John Azzaro, Frosh president, willingly cut off $42 from the proposed budget, originally set at $771. Council passed the allocation for $729. The basketball budget for $546.34 passed with no debate.

Tony Lopez, campus affairs co-ordinator, announced that the section of dirt and weeds below the practice football field used by some students for parking, is illegally used without a permit. However, he explained, this situation will be eliminated by the freeway to be constructed through that area, which will also take out a section of the horticulture center.

Stating that the officers of the Frosh Class met all the requirements according to the constitution, Azzaro asked and received approval on the following officers: Vice president Carmen Forcina, Secretary Rosemarie Hass and Treasurer Georgene Peterson.

Council meetings, held at noon Tuesdays and Thursdays in Bungalow 3, are open to members of the AS.

38 Students Vie For 14 Available H&R Scholarships

Winners of the 14 available scholarships in the hotel and restaurant department will be announced next week.

Yesterday the scholarship committee, under Dean Louis F. Batmale, chairman, met to select the 14 winners from 38 applicants. The awards range from $100 to $500.

Besides Batmale, the committee is composed of Lawrence Wong, secretary; John Gifford, Carl Rutledge, Hilda Watson, Wendell Muntz and Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

Wong, director of hotel and restaurant placement, stated, "We will also award further scholarships in the form of tools in the near future."

Other developments this semester in the hotel and restaurant department have been the selection of H&R Society officers for the spring semester. They are Al Arnold, president; Jack Wolfenden, vice president; Doreen Caldwell, secretary; Stuart Betz, treasurer, and Elna Vance, historian.

Operas High On List Of Student Ushering Jobs

Students interested in offering their services as ushers at Opera House, Veterans' Memorial and Civic Auditorium performances are advised to sign up for tickets in S-150, Mary Golding, dean of women, said last week.

Among forthcoming operas scheduled in the Cosmopolitan Opera Company's current season are Madame Butterfly, Faust, Hansel and Gretel and Turandot.

Ushers must appear at the designated place on the date for which they have signed up, she emphasized, adding that tickets should be returned to her office a week before the performance should the usher not be able to attend.

An ushering ticket is required for admission to the performance, at which time posts will be assigned.

Only six ushers from the college may sign up for each performance, and Dean Golding urged them to do so at their earliest convenience to avoid disappointment and a long waiting line. Last semester, about 100 students offered their services at the symphonies and operas, Dean Golding said.

At performances, women are required to wear a solid black dress of street length, or solid dark blue or brown suits. Men must wear dark, non-sports suits, with white shirt and tie, Dean Golding emphasized.

Best Of '59 is currently on exhibit in the faculty gallery on the third floor at the north end of Cloud Hall. A display of student work for the entire year of 1959, it will end sometime in the middle of March.

Pictures on display are primarily from the college photography department and represent a wide variety of subject matter including photographic fundamentals, portraiture and commercial photography, photojournalism, illustration and colorprinting.

Emmett Smith, photography instructor, announced that the photography department is constantly searching for photogenic models to pose for portrait and illustration classes. Women who would like to try out as model candidates are invited to inquire at the studio, C-249, any Friday morning, he said. If accepted, they will receive pictures of themselves for posing.

Budget Balancing Time

FAYE FOUNTAIN, winner of the Fall 1959 Club Activities Board award and this semester's Associated Student finance committee chairman, is developing a financial headache by attempting to balance a deficit AS budget. Fund requisitions from 34 on-campus organizations exceed the total revenue of $25,000. A budget must have the approval of Miss Fountain before council acts.

Finance Chairman Faces Task Of Trimming Requests To Fit Funds; New System Due For Council Trial

By Dave Grieve

A total revenue of $25,000 is available to the Associated Students for Student Council allocation to 34 budgets this semester, although this sum is $4000 less than last semester's $29,000, Faye Fountain, AS finance chairman, declared in an interview last week.

Thirty budgets have already been submitted to the finance chairman, two of which have been approved by the council. The Freshman Class president cut his class budget $42, leaving a sum of $729. An amount of $546.34 was alloted to the Ram basketball team instead of an estimated $800 earmarked should the varsity win the championship.

A major budget which will receive priority, Miss Fountain said, is the Executive Council's request for $1552.62. This money will be used for the two California Junior College Student Government Association conferences, one held two weeks ago, the other due March 31. A fraction of the money will be used to buy special awards for the council banquet and for the card sales awards.

The highest budget submitted for approval this semester was that of The Guardsman, asking for an allotment of $4624.22. This revenue will cover the proposed 14 issues of the college paper this semester.

The Freshman and Sophomore classes, the latter requesting $744.50, plan to use the majority of their funds for their respective dances.

A request by the Publicity Committee for a budget of $1488.50 was submitted by its chairman, Judy Day, to be used for posters, graphic arts supplies and newspaper subscriptions.

Other outstanding budgets pending approval by the council include the drama department $3447, varsity track $2385.50, baseball $1488.50, Campus Police $1959.40, and the Club Activities Board $702.98.

A spring festival and a banquet and dance make up the major expenditures of the CAB budget.

The Finance Chairman plans to submit 30 budgets in a booklet for the council's approval, which Miss Fountain claims "will save important time by passing through the council's hands quickly instead of itemizing each budget to the council." A time limit of one week will apply to the chairman's experiment.

Last semester Miss Fountain was extremely active in the CAB and this year took on the position of Finance Chairman without any former experience. She received a CAB special award during the latter part of last year for her outstanding service.

Other members making up the Finance Committee are Shirley Clayton, Georgene Peterson, Marlene Bobrow, Alberta Giannini and Delmar Rose.

Honor Society Roll Shows Increase; Coaching To Start

Approximately 95 top scholars out of 200 have joined Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, this semester, faculty sponsor William G. Richardson reported last week.

These students are those who, for the Fall 1959 semester carried at least 12 units with 42 grade points for 12, 13 or 14 units; earned 45 grade points with 15 units, 48 points with 16 and 51 with 17.

Grade points are determined on the basis of four points for each unit of A, three for each unit of B, two for C, one for D, and none for F. An average of B with no final grade lower than C must be maintained to be eligible for membership in the society.

Dues are $1 per semester which entitles the member to an early registration number for the next semester. Although activities are available no one is required to participate, Richardson said.

Offering a program making coaching available to any student needing extra help with his studies, the honor society expressed its need for the services of any student proficient enough in any subject to coach it.

Especially needed are persons able to teach mathematics, English grammar, chemistry and physics. Rates are $1.50 per hour.

More information on coaching, meetings, activities, eligibility or other aspects of AGS can be had by consulting Richardson in S-143G or at the two remaining College Hour meetings this semester, scheduled April 8 and May 27 in C-232. Richardson asserted that everyone is welcome to attend these.

Officers seelcted at the February 19 meeting include education major Jean Tom, president; Clinton Derry, majoring in electrical engineering, vice president, and social science major Peter Pedrotti, secretary-treasurer.

Forum Magazine Needs Writers, Manuscripts For Spring Publication

Students interested in any phase of magazine work are urged to attend Forum meetings in S-257 during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m. each Friday morning.

Those interested in submitting manuscripts to Forum for possible publication should turn them in to Catherine Connelly in C-331A.

The Forum, annual literary magazine, offers students a chance to write as well as the opportunity to learn editing, make-up, advertising and advertising salesmanship.

Published each spring since its founding in 1947, the magazine has had Miss Connolly as its adviser since 1954. The coming issue has not yet had an editor selected.

Horticulture Dept. Enters Oakland Garden Show

The horticulture department again will participate in the annual Oakland Spring Garden Show, to be held this year at the Oakland Exhibition Building, 12th and Fallon Streets, beginning Friday, April 15, Harry E. Nelson, instructor in horticulture here, announced today.

This year's entry will be a landscaping arrangement for a pool-side patio, "one of the most popular features of home in California where carefree living is widely enjoyed," Nelson said.

The patio was designed by Jim Brown, a student in horticulture, now on leave of absence; and the work entailed in arranging the exhibit will be performed by Bob Maxey, president of the Horticulture Society, Roy Silva and Al Woolworth.

The theme of the garden show is From Kew To Kyoto, and the show will feature a Japanese garden and an English garden united by a bridge. Many varieties of flowers entered by various nurseries in the Bay Area will be on display, Nelson declared.

Monetary prizes will be presented to first, second and third place winners. The Horticulture Society here has managed to carry off a prize every year. The money received in past year has been spent for the purchase of books for the horticulture department's library.

The department will be called upon to carry out extensive landscaping projects on the ever-expanding campus, Nelson said, adding that from eight to nine thousand plants will be required near the track and football field in the very near future.

The department's latest acquisition, red poinsettia flowers, will be used to decorate the east side of the women's gymnasium.

With respect to the department's plant collection, Nelson made this comment:

"The horticulture center greenhouse's orchid collection has been steadily enlarged and improved through the thoughtful donation of its friends, the first of which was received during March, 1959, from the late Herbert Black of Oakland, an alumnus of the college.

"Plants have continued to arrive in small quantities from new friends, the most recent among them being Mrs. Daniel Rosband of San Mateo, Mrs. F. Ortmand of San Francisco, and Mr. John Sheehan of City College.

"The McLellan Orchid Company has offered to serve as a gathering station for plants donated to the college's greenhouse"

Attendance has never been a department problem, Nelson remarked, explaining that "students take this course because they want to, not because someone has forced them to do so or because it is a required course."

A "particularly happy aspect" of the department's work, he added, is the absence of an employment problem for its graduates. Sources of employment range from private nurseries and florists to Government positions, such as those found in forest and park maintenance and in quarantine inspection.

Low Card Sales Create Need For New Campaign

Because of a poor response to the first Associated Student card sales drive, a second campaign is in the final process of planning, Marilyn Middleton, card sales chairman, announced last week.

The new campaign will make use of extensive publication, through the means of additional posters distributed throughout the college, she said. Also, the card sales committee will try to secure the use of the information booth located at the entrance of Science Hall.

To date, the AS membership is low, with only 20 per cent, or 1100, of the nearly 5500 day students accounted for.

The exceptionally poor turnover in sales, Miss Middleton believes, is due to two reasons; one, the lack of promotion, and two, the need for additional opportunities and activities available to the AS card holder.

In addition to reduction of prices to games and dances, the card entitles the bearer to certain discounts for auto supplies, entertainment facilities, sporting goods, records and other items.

In respect to the idea of additional opportunities, several weeks ago the Student Council members attended the Northern Region Conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association. At the conference the council learned new methods of skyrocketing the sale of AS cards.

At the present time only a 40 per cent return is gained from the student bookstore. "If the Ramporium were owned by the Associated Students and a reduction in prices made on the material it handled, the store would be a greater asset to the college budget," Miss Middleton claimed.

In such an instance students would be hired by the bookstore to work only one or two hours a week.

Another idea introduced to the council at the conference was the operation of the library so that only AS card holders could take out books.

Still another idea, but far in the future, would be the construction of a Student Union for card holders only, housing a lounge, store and fountain.

"Such a project would take the burden off the cafeteria," Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser here, said, "by offering to the students some place other than the cafeteria to spend their leisure time during the 11 to 1 o'clock break."

Although the semester membership goal of 2300 has been met by less than one-half, the sales committee expressed confidence that the new campaign will bring the total in line with the amount needed to finance the traditional spring activities.

Lucky Pair To Receive Prize At Leap Year Dance Friday

A silver bowl, donated by Granat Bros., will be presented to the couple with the lucky tally at the Associated Women Student Leap Year dance, Lady's Luck, scheduled for this Friday from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight in Smith Hall.

Stevie Tissier, AWS president, announced that music will be donated through a grant from the Recording Industries Trust Fund Local No. 6 of the American Federation of Musicians. Steve Paul and his 10-piece orchestra will play for the dance.

Women will invite their escorts to the event, she emphasized. Admission is by Associated Student card only, and tickets, instead of being presented at the door, will be distributed by sorority and club presidents and by the AWS executive board members in Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150, and at the women's gymnasium. Identification may be requested at the door, Miss Tissier added.

Decorations for the occasion will be in accordance with the theme. Casual dress and heels will be the proper attire for the women and sports coats and ties for the men. The hotel and restaurant department will serve soft drinks for refreshment.

As an added bit of entertainment for those who attend this once-in-four-years event there will be a dance contest, a girl's tag and some special entertainment at intermission.

Ten H&R Students Win Scholarships Totaling $2500

Winners in the hotel and restaurant department of scholarships totaling $2500 were announced last week by Lawrence Wong, director of hotel and restaurant placement.

Those receiving Harvey M. Toy scholarships are Stuart K. Betz, Richard G. Keppard, Thomas L. Johnson, Gary E. Noonan and Thomas E. Craighead. All of these awards are for $250.

Other $250 winners and their scholarships are Thomas M. Kassis, T. Kent Morris General Foods Corporation; Jack Hansen, International Minerals Corporation, and Daniel Torres, E. B. Degolia scholarship.

Al Arnold, president of the H&R Society this semester, was awarded the Western Hotel scholarship of $150. David J. Borelli won $100 from the San Francisco branch of the Executive Stewards Caterers Association.

The late Harvey M. Toy's legacy was responsible for the majority of scholarships. Toy, a successful hotel man in San Francisco before his death, stipulated in his will that $25,000 be given for educational purposes at the college.

Hayes, 5 Others Plan For 3-Day CJCSGA Meeting

With the state convention of the California Junior College Student Government Association scheduled to meet in San Diego Thursday, March 31, through Saturday, April 2, Wally Hayes, Associated Student president here, last week named this college's delegates.

Five students, in addition to Hayes, will represent San Francisco at the convention, and participate in various convention workshops.

They are: Bill Keane, assigned to the Campus Activities Workshop; Margaret Hill, assigned to the Publicity Workshop; Dennis Bates, to the Athletic Workshop; Marilyn Middleton, to the Finance Committee Workshop, and Bud Andress, the college's State Information Chairman.

The college's delegation, along with other Northern California representatives, will submit 13 resolutions to the convention which have already been adopted by the northern regional conference of the CJCSGA.

Up for consideration is a move to permit each two-year college conference to be represented on the state athletic commission. Also scheduled to be presented is a plan to have each college sponsor a college leadership conference.

Another plan calls for the establishment of special counseling programs to aid students who plan to enter the military service to choose the courses best suited to their needs.

Forum Club Searches For Campus Authors

Original compositions of a serious or humorous nature are wanted for publication this Spring in Forum, the college's annual literary magazine, Forum Club members who sponsor the magazine said today.

Short stories, essays, short one-act plays, and poetry, none of which should exceed 1500 words, must be typed and double spaced on 8½ by 11-inch paper, spokesmen emphasized.

Manuscripts can then be turned in as soon as possible to Catherine Connolly, Forum faculty adviser, in C-331A. Any ideas for cover designs are welcomed also.

Interested students are invited to attend the Forum Club meetings each Friday during College Hour in S-257.

Published once a year, the Forum is distributed without additional cost to Associated Student members.

Curtain To Rise Friday Night On Little Theater's Showing Of Man Who Came To Dinner

Hilarity with a touch of madness will be the keynote, when the curtain rises on the Little Theater's presentation of The Man Who Came To Dinner, at 8 p.m. this Friday, Michael Griffin, drama director, said today.

The play, written by Moss Hart and George Kaufman, tells of an actual event experienced by Alexander Woollcott, famed critic, writer and lecturer.

Griffin calls the play the classic American comedy. Sheraton Whiteside, played by Bill Henderson, is Woollcott's counterpart in it.

While a dinner guest at the home of the Stanley family, Whiteside slips on a piece of ice and hurts his hip, a doctor believing the hip to be broken, confines him to the house.

This is the beginning of a series of happenings, which completely shatter the peace in the Stanley home.

Whiteside sets up headquarters on the first floor, relegating the family to the second and the back entrance.

Not a day passes without floods of calls and visitors. Strange animals are delivered to Whiteside, such as an octupus from William Beebe, the noted underwater explorer. A pair of penguins from Admiral Byrd, find their way to him. A Professor Petroff, portrayed by Serge Gregorieff, generously presents him with a colony of roaches.

As if he hasn't done enough, Whiteside manages to meddle in the Stanleys' private affairs, persuading one of their two children to marry and the other to see the world from the decks of a tramp steamer.

Highlighting the play's action is a fight waged over a newspaperman by Maggie, Whiteside's secretary, and Lorraine Sheldon, actress and notorious seductress.

The fight is brought to an abrupt end, when Miss Sheldon is persuaded to give an impersonation of Joan of Arc, from inside a mummy case. Once the actress is in the case, Banjo, a Hollywood nut, locks her in and sends the case by air mail to Nova Scotia.

Toward the end, it is discovered that Whiteside's hip was never fractured, but while leaving the house he falls and this time succeeds in breaking it.

Griffin believes that the play will draw good houses throughout its run of eight performances, scheduled through four weekends.

Heading the cast in leading roles are Ken Stone as Mr. Stanley, Paul Teilh as Bert Jefferson the newspaperman, and Marylin Milani as Maggie.

Elworthy Notes Improvement In Cafe's Problems

Overcrowding in the cafeteria is by no means completely quenched, but there is better order among the students who prior to two weeks ago made up the army of litterers and loiterers in Smith Hall, Sherm Elworthy, new successor as student government adviser, declared last week.

"Even if the new section of the cafeteria is finished sometime in April, it will not ease the confusion in Smith Hall," he said. The main room holds 400 seats and the new addition 250 seats.

The total number of seats amount to some 700, counting the adjacent room containing the "Beanery." The total enrollment of day students this semester is about 5500. That is the reason, Elworthy added, that "there is now, and in the future, a serious cafeteria problem."

Whether the use of arbitrary means of enforcing the rules will be necessary, is up to the students, he emphasized.

So far, he commented, students eating in Smith Hall between the hours of 11 a.m. and 1 p.m have been co-operative because they understand the situation.

An additional plan, mentioned by the Student Council, is to divide the cafeteria into sections, enabling one part to be cleaned while the other is being used by students. The suggestion will not be put into effect, Elworthy added, unless a more serious shortage of seats arises.

Annual Easter Seal Drive Starts Next Month

Service Sorority Sets $75 Goal To Buy Baskets For Bedridden Children

By Fumi Fowells

"Bring Easter to San Francisco County Hospital" is the slogan chosen for this year's annual Easter Drive of Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority, expected to start early next month, its president, Phyllis Bauman, announced today.

Children ranging in age from 18 months to 7 years who must spend their Easter in the County Hospital's beds will be the drive's beneficiaries.

During the drive, 14 members of Gamma Sigma Sigma will carry colorful money containers in the shape of Easter bunnies, whiskers and all, constructed from milk cartons, from class to class soliciting contributions. The goal for this year's drive has been set for $75.00, Miss Bauman stated.

The contributions received will be spent in the purchase of Easter baskets for the children whose illness has confined them to their beds.

"You should see the way children's faces light up when we enter the ward, arms full of baskets filled with candies and chicken marshmallows! Please remember: the larger the donation, the greater the number of children whose Easter can be made a happy one," Miss Bauman emphasized.

While the date of the sorority's visit to the hospital has not been set, it probably will be just before or shortly after Easter Sunday.

The Easter drive is one of a number of monthly projects by means of which the sorority helps to bring a measure of hope and happiness to the less fortunate.

A party has been planned this month for 30 girls from 4 to 17 years of age now living at the Youth Guidance Center at Westlake. Sorority sisters will spend an afternoon of games and daneing with these girls who, for the most part, are from broken homes.

Gamma Sigma Sigma, service sorority, is the only national sorority on the campus and has its headquarters in Kansas City, Missouri. Mary Golding, dean of women, is sponsor.

The officers are Miss Bauman, president; Mary Ann Gooschin, first vice president and service secretary; Margaret Lindstrom, second vice president; Norma Otinino, recording secretary; Linda Jaillite, corresponding secretary; Brigitta Bergman, historian; Jean Larson, treasurer; Irene Schreck and Olga Tourkoff.

4 Semi-Finalists Compete In KCBS Vocalist Contest

Four semi-finalists sang last Thursday for Robert Morton and Flossita Badger, music instructors here, with the winner scheduled to represent the college on the Dave McElhatton Show in a KCBS-sponsored contest for young Bay Area vocalists.

Sharon Light, Arthur Muskovitz, Robert Rosenblatt and Rick Switzler survived a field of 14 young hopefuls singing to the lively rhythm of Nelson Riddle on phonograph in an audition held March 8.

Rushees Must Make Sorority Choice Today

Rushees will indicate their sorority preferences in the dean of women's office, S-150, today between the hours of 9 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Each rushee will select three or four preferences, as the quota of pledges the sororities may accept is limited. At the same time the campus sororities will submit a list of prospective pledges to whom invitations will be issued following midterm grade reports.

Rushees are required to have at least a C average in order to pledge a sorority.

"There was a surprisingly good turnout of spring rushees this semester," Linda Lauro, Inter-Sorority Council president, commented. Eighty-three students signed up to rush.

Man's Wisdom Lags Behind Speedy Advances In Education

SOCRATES said the road to wisdom is to "Know Thyself." This has been often quoted and emblazoned on the frieze of educational institutions throughout the nation. Just how ironic these inscriptions appear, and how our educational system has made a travesty of these words, was driven home recently when Lawrence S. Kubie, Clinical Professor of Psychiatry at Yale, addressed the graduates of Goddard College with a speech entitled The Forgotten Man Of Education.

Kubie claimed that the "Forgotten Man" is self-knowledge. He stated that self-knowledge must "include an understanding of unconscious as well as conscious levels of the psychological processes." He added that education is making no effort to meet this challenge. Kubie explained that man's knowledge of things has increased tremendously in recent years, but that his wisdom has moved little.

We can't go along with an extreme change in our educational system that would have students carrying couches instead of books to classes, but we do agree that man as the basic subject of education has taken a back seat to the subject of inanimate things.

The problem is becoming more evident in this age of nuclear energy, when man can use his wisdom to benefit himself, or his lack of it to destroy himself. Quite possibly an answer would be greater emphasis on psychology, philosophy, history, political science and other social science. This would tend to steer the aims of education toward an understanding of man and his relations with other men, rather than man as a scientific statistic.

In contrast to Kubie's thoughts, a member of the faculty here commented last week that we had better gear our system toward teaching the sciences more fully, warning that if this is not done the USSR will soon outstrip us in weapons.

Looking at it from this timely and practical standpoint, it would seem that any change as vast as the one suggested by Kubie should certainly take into consideration the present world situation.

If the problem were to be investigated by some international organization, such as UNESCO, it certainly would add hope to the future of man. But such a possibility would appeal only to the strongest optimist.

Team Spirit Makes Champs

THE GUARDSMAN adds congratulations to the many already extended to Coach Sid Phelan and his men for bringing home the Big Eight Conference championship.

The crown is not only a tribute to the talent of the college's well-coached squad, but it's also a just reward for the individual and team spirit displayed all season. The last factor was best displayed in the final game against Oakland's Thunderbirds, when victory hinged on the determination of the squad. The Rams fought a see-saw battle all the way, slowing only for the final buzzer.

The Rams were rooted to triumph in that game by 1500 fans, who journeyed to Sacramento for the crown-deciding fray. The championship is also a tribute to their faith and loyalty in the basketball squad.

The spirit displayed in the Oakland contest by both player and rooter was one of the most heartening in the annals of the college.

Sometimes even a newspaper is at a loss for words, and this is one of those times . . . Thanks, Sid Phelan, Ram cagers, and Ram fans."

•Cafeteria Problem

Editor, The Guardsman:

There seems to be a great deal written in The Guardsman of late regarding the so-called "problem" in Smith Hall. Sure, a lot has been said and some things done to help alleviate this "Problem." But I do feel more emphasis has been given to it than was due. In short, I feel that the administration has made a bigger thing out of this than really is necessary.

We are not children. And if the administration persists in treating us as such, they can expect little help from us. "We got the message." I think as college students we have enough responsibility to conduct ourselves properly. "A police force" in the cafeteria is not the answer. It will only add to ill feeling.

I feel I am talking now for most of the students, as I have discussed this with them and all seem to be in agreement on this point. We all recognize that the present facility is inadequate and presents somewhat of a problem. We cannot help that. So why blame us or punish those who wish to sit together as a group, eat lunch and discuss things while we eat. Or would the administration rather march us to lunch, "Chow Down," march us away. I hardly think that this would be their policy. But in reading your editorial, I have a different picture.

By now, I think the student body is a little sick of this petty bickering between student officers, the administration and the student body.

The students are capable of solving their own problems. The administration may have sound ideas. But please examine them before putting them into use. It may only lead to antagonizing innocent parties and straining those ties we have with the faculty.

To the students, please bear with it. Do what they ask and maybe, eventually, they will get it worked out. I have confidence in the students, but apparently the Editor does not, nor does the administration. How about giving us a chance?

Interested Student.

(Editor's Note: We have faith in students . . . not in mobs. The editorial stated, and The Guardsman stands by it, "A college student's order should be resolved from within, but if the present situation in the cafeteria keeps up, someone will have to take steps to impose order")

Shots At RAMdom

Annoying Characters Add Color To Concerts

By Bob Pacini

ATTENDING a symphony concert isn't as hum-drum or as boring as it might sound to the great number of people who have never set foot inside the concert hall to hear a great symphonic ensemble.

You meet the most interesting people there.

One of the most annoying persons one is likely to encounter is Miss Late Arrival. The concert has started and you've closed your eyes, drifting with the music, relaxed and settled in your chair.

Then, an out-of-breath woman rushes quickly down the aisle. You cross your fingers and hope, but it's useless. She stops at your row, begs your pardon and, looking like a drenched mongrel wanting to be let in out of the rain, stares at you.

Taking the hint, you stand up, and so does the rest of the row, for inevitably her chair is at the other end. She proceeds to make her way through the row, but when she's directly in front of you, she drops her program.

In the greatest squeeze play since the battle of the bulge, she attempts to bend down and jam herself between you and the next row to get the program. She does!

Another type is Miss Can't Sit Still. She arrives on time, all right, but just can't seem to find a comfortable position. She squirms, she twists, she flips endlessly through her program, she kicks off her shoes, she puts them back on, she explores the hidden and unknown depths of her purse.

What's worse, she invariably has the most nauseating and ear-shattering cough you'd ever want to hear.

Then there are Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed. They're so obvious you just can't miss spotting them. They sit through the whole concert hand in hand, whispering to one another, suppressing giggles. You wonder why they didn't buy just one chair, for they'd probably enjoy that arrangement better.

There's always at least one pseudo-Toscanini, the guy who sits in his chair with a pencil, following the lead of the conductor on stage.

Finally there is the poor, hard-working, dead-to-the-world husband, dragged to concert by his mink-swathed wife.

The husband, utterly exhausted, the kind who buys Classical Music For People Who Hate Classical Music, is no sooner in his chair than he's sound asleep.

His wife, furious and annoyed, jabs him occasionally, with embarrassing results. If the poor guy wanted to sleep why didn't she let him stay home and watch TV?

Foresight

By Elmer Milligan

RARELY in the history of any two-year institution is there a group of alumni comparable to the set which this college has produced during the last 25 years.

They include newspaper reporters, public relations men, doctors, attorneys, actors, actresses, professional athletes and even a ravishing beauty who topped country-wide competition to capture the coveted Miss America crown.

Some of the alumni have become nationally famous while others are known only to this community, but they possessed one common characteristic—a marked determination to express their talents in a manner that would credit the college, administration and faculty and the city of San Francisco.

Leading the alumni "honor roll" is one of the nation's most heralded beauties, Lee Ann Meriwether, former drama student and winner of the Miss San Francisco, Miss California and Miss America titles in 1955.

Her latest achievement is a leading role in the motion picture, The Four Dimensional Man, currently being shown at Bay Area theaters.

Another shapely beauty, Barbara Huffman, won the Miss SF title while attending the college in 1951, and is presently a leading television actress under contract to 20th Century Fox studio.

For the past year, Chiyoko "Pat" Suzuki has been adding her oriental touch to the Rogers and Hammerstein hit musical on Broadway, The Flower Drum Song. She enrolled here in Fall of 1949.

Borrie Hyman, Guardsman Editor in 1941, is now United States Consul, and Shirley Murphy, Guardsman managing editor during the Fall 1955 semester, is employed with the U.S. Information Service in Washington, D. C.

Charlie Meyers, class of 1943, is a member of the California State Legislature. Bill Svabek holds the position of superintendent at H. S. Crocker Company, Baltimore, Maryland.

Heading the city's delegation of well-known alumni is Dr. Richard Kelly, a 1942 graduate and first president of the alumni association.

Edwin Fredrickson, class of 1938, is a local attorney and Ralph De Rango is foreman at George Reproduction Co., lithographers.

Earl Thollander, an advertising and commercial art graduate, is employed as a staff artist at Landphere Associates Advertising Art Service. He also has an article in this month's issue of American Artist magazine.

Polishing the city's newspaper industry are Bill Cothran, director of KRON-TV news department; Al Moss, prep and junior college sports reporter for The Chronicle; Mike Berger, Chronicle sports correspondent; Patty Moran, Examiner feature writer and copy reader, and Bob Rezak, employed in the public relations department at American Bell Telephone Company.

All of the above are former members of The Guardsman editorial board.

Turning to the sports division, there is Gil McDougald, infielder for the New York Yankees; Bobby Scanlon, professional lightweight boxer, and Ollie Matson, the powerful fullback of the Los Angeles Rams. Burl Toler, former outstanding defensive lineman, is now teaching at a local school.

Woman Electrical Engineering Student Plans Sea-Going Career

'Finnish Wanderer' Acquires Radio Background

By Jo Ann Griffin

Mustalainin is the Finnish word for wanderer, and it aptly describes the aspirations of a young electrical engineering student here, Carol-Ann Puikko, the only woman presently enrolled in this program.

A wanderer both past and future, Miss Puikko is for the moment settled down, pursuing an engineering course here which stresses a well-rounded education, and preparing to be a ship radio operator, an ambition she has held since her high school days at San Pedro.

This decision is in due accord with the course followed by her family for many generations as members of the families of both her parents have been associated with the sea in various capacities.

Her sea captain father has moved the family from place to place in Washington and California for the last 12 years, staying at such ports as Eureka, San Pedro (LA harbor), and Seattle.

Blonde 19-year-old Miss Puikko wants to spend at least five or six years sailing and then perhaps study for one of the diplomatic services at the University of Finland.

In the immediate future she plans to gain a good background at the college and then attend a radio communications school in Canada.

Interested in the international aspect of life, she has met many Scandinavian people through her active work in the Scandinavian Seamen's Church. Among these acquaintances and other friends of her family, she has pen pals in Norway and Japan and friends all around the world.

Always fascinated in how people in other countries live, she believes it important to meet people in many walks of life from many countries. When she enrolled here last semester she became secretary of the International Relations Club, in which she is now very active.

In addition to her interest in sailing and electronics she is enthusiastic about sports, music and art. A cellist and violinist herself, she enjoys classical music, Jan Sibelius and Edvard Grieg being her favorite composers.

A shipboard career would give her further chance to meet people and see social conditions as they really are, since ship radio officers have much free time at ports and on board.

Miss Puikko explained that in Norway 40 per cent of operators are women and that the career is becoming increasingly popular among young people. Wages compare with those of first or second officers.

RAMBLINGS

By Frank Dunne

MANY persons have wondered how Sacramento City College was chosen as the site of the Big Eight playoff game between the Rams and the Thunderbirds of Oakland City College.

After the locals' loss to the Thunderbirds in Oakland, both SF Coach Sid Phelan and Bill Rockwell, Oakland coach, met to select a site that would be suitable to both for the playoff. Each had his own choice.

The choices were then submitted to the Big Eight Commission, which decided on the Sacramento site.

If awards were given for the most spirit, John Dunn, Rally Committee adviser, would win by acclamation. During the basketball season, even when the team was in the opening contests and when the crowds were small, he was there cheering for the Rams.

His triumph came in the Oakland-San Francisco playoff game in Sacramento. He and his committee organized a trip for interested rooters to travel to the game. Two buses were filled and made the trip, along with numerous carloads.

With such a large crowd on hand the Ram eagers for the first time this season got the vote of confidence they deserved, and they can thank Mr. Dunn for it.

But this was not enough for him. At one point in the second half, when the Rams were down by a few points and the cheering had ebbed, he started a victory chant on the bass drum and the cymbals, loud enough and spirited enough to put fire in the heart of the most downcast of rooter.

Result? The fans went wild, and the Rams ran wild over the T-Birds.

Such spirit and drive should not go unmentioned; if more persons on campus had his enthusiasm, the teams would fare much better.

Block Club Schedules Awards Banquet May 23

The Block SF semi-annual awards banquet has been set for Monday, May 23, at 6:30 p.m. in Smith Hall. Block SF President Bob Ross said that no guest speakers had been named as yet.

Ross urged all block holders to join the club, membership in which costs 50 cents.

In other action, Rich DeLeon was named secretary, and Vice President Jack Hickey was given the additional job of awards commissioner for the society.

Thinclads Battle Full Field Friday

Entering their first big test this Friday in the Big Eight Conference relays at Sacramento against the entire field of Big Eight opponents, the Red and White track squad has exhibited some indication in practice of being a team that could go all the way in the league.

Ram Coach Lou Vasquez indicated that he believes the Rams are considerably stronger in events this year which last season were weak spots in the squad. He explained that one problem the team has had to face thus far is an over-abundance of rain, thus interrupting, or at best, making practice difficult.

The sprinting events will probably be led by the second-year Jenkins twins, Alex and Ellis, and Lon Colbert. Optimism for places in the middle distance runs lies in the legs of Tom Jennings and Tony Vance. The long distance men, Ray Batz and Frank James, are the probable mile and two-mile starters.

As far as the field events are concerned, some of the big men will be Ralph Mathis and Jess Sirles, who will be entered in the pole vault, and in the broad and high jump. Other promising contenders in these events are Jim Bush, Ed Johnson, Leonard Mentzer, Ed Molise, Jess and John Neil, Roy Williams in the high jump, and Dennis Lawyer in the pole vault. Other broad jumpers are Vern Coleman and George Holland.

In the remaining two field events, the shot-put and the discus, top entries will be Herm Cummins, Bob Grassi, Dave Hettig, Vince Sanchez, Bob Schellenberg and Mike Woods.

Three Timely Smashes By Canevaro Lead Diamondmen To Victory Over Vallejo, 12-3

By Jesse Gonzalez

VALLEJO, March 8—Paced by second baseman Mel Canevaro's three timely hits, the Ram diamondmen got into the victory column today by overwhelming the Vallejo College Falcons by the score of 12 to 3.

Canevaro, the big gun in the Ram offense, collected two line shot singles and an inside-the-park home run just over the outstretched glove of Falcon rightfielder Bruce Bigelow that rolled close to the 330-foot rightfield line in the seventh frame. He also batted in three runs.

The locals immediately jumped on Vallejo starter Bruce Bigelow with two runs in the initial frame as Bigelow's team mates afield couldn't find the ball.

A big scare swept through the Ram dugout as catcher Bob Farber was struck in the hand with the ball as he was sliding into home on a passed ball. However, he got up under his own power and was able to finish the game.

In the Birdmen's first at bats, Ram starting pitcher Hank Padia couldn't find the plate and walked four Falcons, and before he was out of the inning, the score was knotted at 2 and 2.

The Phelan Avenue men then continued their wild melee in the third frame as they came up with five big runs to jump ahead, 7 to 2, and it was apparent that they were never to be headed after that.

Though Padia showed considerable signs of wildness during his five inning stint for the locals, he gave up only three runs on two hits.

Randy Pace, the slick-throwing lefthander for Coach Lee Eisan, took over the mound in the sixth inning and pitched flawlessly, striking out six Vallejo batsmen and not yielding a hit to them.

The Rams travel across the Bay Bridge tomorrow afternoon to engage the Treasure Island baseball team.

Batsmen To Clash With Loop Favorites Saturday

Coach Lee Eisan will send his Ram baseballers into league action this Saturday afternoon for two games against the strong Stockton Mustang nine at Balboa Park starting at 12:30 p.m.

Stockton, winner of the Big Eight Conference title last year, went on to take the state two-year college championship. This year the Mustangs are again the perennial favorites to win the loop flag for the second year in a row.

Next Tuesday afternoon the San Mateo Bulldogs came into town for an encounter with the locals in another conference tilt. The game will start promptly at 3:15 p.m. at Balboa Park.

The San Mateans shouldn't give the Eisanmen very much trouble, but nevertheless the Red and White will be up for all the games.

All the home games for City College horsehiders will be played at the Balboa diamond.

Horsehiders Drop Season Opener 5-1

Sloppy fielding was the major cause of a downfall for Coach Lee Eisan's baseball Rams March 3, as they fell victims to the Santa Clara Frosh team, 5 to 1, in San Jose.

This, the official season opener for the locals, was only a six-inning affair halted because of darkness, but not before four costly errors on the part of the locals in the first three frames did the damage and put the game in the hands of the Santa Clarans.

The Rams avoided the shutout in their fourth inning at bats.

Third baseman Jerry Gosland started the frame with a free ticket to first base. After left fielder Ray Greggains had advanced the "Goose" to second on a ground out and second baseman Mel Canevaro whiffed at three strikes, pitcher Bill Flanagan lined a single to center to drive in Gosland with the lone Ram tally.

Intra Cage Loop In Full Swing

Competition having begun last night, the intramural cage loop is now in full swing. The loop this semester will be broken into leagues, the Independent League and the Inter-Fraternity League. The league as a whole has 19 teams entered, with the Independents listing 12 and the IFC 7.

New teams have appeared in the Independent League this semester, including the Retail Floristry squad, the Pachyderms, the Lyons, the Invaders and the Ringers. Most of the teams entered in the loop last semester have signed up for play again this time.

The IFC League will begin play tonight with last semester's champions of the fraternity league, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, going against Alpha Sigma Delta. Phi Beta Delta will meet Alpha Phi Epsilon and Zeta Phi, a strong contender for the crown last semester, will play a determined Alpha Kappa Rho.

Over in the Independent League play is now going into the second round. Tomorrow night the Invaders are pitted against the Hotel and Restaurant Association, while the Ringers meet last semester's co-champion, the Recreation Association. The Filipino Club is slotted to meet the Newman Club and the Fall '59 Intramural League champions, the Block SF, will play the Pachyderms.

Netmen Meet Powerful Mustangs This Friday

Coach Roy Diederichsen's netmen face a powerful Stockton aggregation this Friday at Golden Gate Park in the second Big Eight Conference match of the season.

In the first conference match of the season the Rams defeated San Mateo 5-2 in a display of powerful net play.

Ram ace Vince Chinn defeated Tony DeCouladi of the Bulldog squad, 6-3, 6-3; number two ranked Larry Draper downed Mike Bennett, 6-4, 4-6, 10-8; while Bill Berman, playing in the number three spot for the local net forces, was edged by Dean Hammer of the Matean squad 4-6, 6-1, 9-7.

Paul Barth overwhelmed Rhody Rodolico, 6-4, 6-2; and number five rated Gary Robinson smashed to a victory over Dave Vargas, 6-3, 6-1.

Fullerton Bombs Rams From State Tournament; San Jose Wins Basketball Championship

By Frank Dunne

Fullerton waxed the lifeless Rams in the opening round of the State Junior College Basketball Tournament in San Jose last Thursday, 73-65. The locals were expected to do better than they did in the tournament, but the long drive for the Big Eight championship, which included the playoff game with Oakland in Sacramento only three days before the tourney, proved to be the undoing of the Rams.

At the start of the Fullerton affair the locals performed as they were expected to, jumping off to a 10-point lead early in the game, but about seven minutes into the half, as if someone had blown a whistle, the Rams fell apart.

Fullerton took full advantage of the lapse, and poured on the points, so that at the half the Hornets led 33-24.

In the second stanza the Rams came to life and twice narrowed the margin to four points, but they lacked the needed drive to forge ahead and win.

Cleo Cofield and John Lewis led the Rams in scoring with 14 apiece. Edgar Clark, a thorn in the Rams' side, headed the Hornets with 21 and teammate Adrain Ledbetter followed with 17.

This loss eliminated the Rams from the tournament.

The following day Fullerton met Los Angeles City College, and Allan Hancock battled San Jose City College in the semi-finals. Fullerton defeated Los Angeles 94-77 and San Jose downed Allan Hancock 89-78.

The San Jose-Hancock game was the big upset of the tournament. Hancock came in to the meet an odds-on favorite, but San Jose, using its home court to its fullest advantage, outplayed the Santa Maria team to upset them.

These wins in the semi-finals gave San Jose and Fullerton the right to play for the title.

In the final game of the meet for the championship, San Jose, again using its home town advantage, belted the Hornets 77-67. This win gave the Jaguars the State title as the top team in California. In the elimination contest Hancock defeated Los Angeles City College.

The Rams wound up the regular season with a 23-5 record, a league record of 13-1, and a tie with Oakland City College for the league championship. The Rams won the Big Eight championship as a result of their playoff game with Oakland.

Many reasons have been given for the showing of the Rams in the tourney. The main one was that the locals had to play only three days after the playoff game with Oakland City College.

The Rams were up for the Thunderbird clash, and played their best game of the season. After a game of this nature, a team is bound to feel a letdown, and with only three days to get back in the right frame of mind, the locals went into the game with a big disadvantage.

The Big Eight Conference race was a two-team match between Oakland and San Francisco, with the Rams winning the playoff.

League standings:

San Francisco	13-1 (14-1)
Oakland	13-1 (13-2)
Sacramento	7-6
Contra Costa	7-6
Stockton	7-6
Santa Rosa	5-8
San Mateo	2-11
Modesto	0-13

Equal Records Strengthen SF-Oakland Rivalry

San Francisco and Oakland formed a two-team race for the Big Eight Conference title this year which culminated in a play-off game won by the Rams, 48-42.

The trans-bay rivalry between the two colleges has been building up since their first meeting, and this year's basketball season proved the high point of the rivalry.

In the playoff game at Sacramento March 7 both teams came in with equal season records.

In the first half the teams were even, with the Thunderbirds holding a 25-23 advantage at the end of the first stanza.

In the second frame the locals tied it up on the tip-off as Dennis Bates caught the tip and sank the basket unopposed.

For the next 15 minutes the two teams traded baskets, with neither willing to give the other any advantage. Then with about five minutes left, a foul was called on Oakland and Cleo Cofield added the charity toss to give the Rams a one-point advantage.

This gave the locals the needed edge and forced the T-Birds to foul in order to gain the ball, thus in turn giving the Rams more points.

One of the biggest defensive efforts of the night was handled by Ram Mel Wilson, who held Charlie McKinney to one free throw. This is of special importance because in the last Oakland game McKinney scored 23 points.

This win gave the Rams the right to represent the conference in the State Tournament in San Jose.

The rest of the Big Eight teams trailed the leaders with much less impressive records. In the past the league has usually been more than a two-team league, but most of the colleges were in a rebuilding process this year.

Santa Rosa Hosts RA Sports Day March 19

The women's basketball and tennis tournaments are scheduled as part of a Santa Rosa sports day program at Santa Rosa this Saturday.

At the San Jose City College sports day, Chico and Humboldt State also participated with the 12 two-year colleges.

Judy Webb scored 189 in the women's bowling and won the high individual game for women in bowling.

Forty-five California colleges, the Universities of Nevada and Arizona, and Arizona State sent representatives to the California athletic and recreation conference at Los Angeles last weekend.

Carlin Gains Top Post On Golf Squad

With the Big Eight Conference race underway as of last Friday, the Ram golfers are finding competition for a place on the squad as tough as actual league play.

At present the top four men are John Carlin (only returning letterman) first, Skip Jordan second, Sandy Loube third and Bill Shaw fourth.

But fifth place is where the battle is raging. There are three men scrapping for this position: Randy Mellinger, Len Feld and Dennis Clark. Coach Grover Klemmer states that any of the three is capable of holding down the spot.

In practice contests, the college won one while dropping two. The lone victory came against St. Mary's 11½-3½. Losses were to Menlo, 4½-10½, and San Jose 5-10.

During these matches the Rams' best scores were turned in by Carlin and Loube, both with 78. The three men carding 79 were Clark, Jordan and Shaw.

Application Forms For Summer Jobs In Eight Major Categories Available To Students At Placement Center

Application forms are still available to students seeking summer employment through the student placement center in S-187, Nora North, secretary to Joseph A. Amori, director of personal placement services, announced recently.

Details concerning summer jobs were disclosed at a seminar on summer job opportunities conducted by Amori and assisted by Mrs. North during College Hour March 5 before a crowd of 500 students. During this meeting all applicants were given personal data sheets and merit rating sheets for processing prior to personal interviews.

JOSEPH AMORI, college placement director, outlines summer job requirements.

The seminar included a listing of possible occupational areas which range from jobs in California and other states to some European opportunities.

The wide range of positions includes jobs in the forestry service, resort areas, boys' and girls' camps, construction areas, European farms and camps, summer schools, tours and travel services, airlines and other types of work.

Amori outlined the requirements for jobs, listing age, past experience, education, marketable skills, willingness to live away from home, and other factors as a means of determining who will get these jobs.

In general, requirements provide that applicants should be at least 18 years old and have some experience or ability in the field in which work is desired.

Clubs Hold Usual Meetings Friday In College Hour

Organizations and clubs are scheduled to meet this Friday during College Hour from 10 to 10:40 a.m., according to Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of men.

The following list includes the organizations and the rooms in which they will meet:

Block SF, C-260; Recreation Association, women's gymnasium; California Student Teachers Association, C-269; Canterbury Club, S-111; Chess Club, C-114; Chinese Students Club, C-266; Christian Science Organization, C-101; Collegiate Christian Fellowship, C-201; Filipino Club, C-220; Folk Dancing Group, women's gymnasium; Hawaiian Club, C-267; Hillel Foundation, C-221; Home Economics Club, S-158; Horticulture Society, greenhouse; International Relations Club, C-258-259; Lutheran Club, S-256; Acacia (Masonic), S-7; Newman Club, S-204; Wesley Fellowship (Methodist), C-103; Westminster Student Fellowship (Presbyterian), C-102.

Alpha Phi Omega, S-211; Gamma Sigma Sigma, S-150; Broadcasters' Club, S-147; Campus Police, C-119; Drama Club, S-28; Engineering Society, S-200; Forum, S-257; Hotel and Restaurant, Smith Hall; Le Cercle Francais, S-312; Merchandising Club, S-258; Pick and Hammer, S-45; Retail Floristry Club, Annex C; Sigma Tau Sigma, C-219.'

College Hour Activities Offer Slides, Speakers

Slides on West Germany and Holland will be featured on the College Hour film series this Friday in S-136, according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor.

Adding commentaries on the slides will be Charles A. Waugaman of Travelword, Inc. A graduate of San Jose State College, Waugaman has lived in Europe and only recently returned from a tour of the USSR.

Two guest speakers are also scheduled to appear this Friday during College Hour. Earl Raab, president of the California Mental Health Society, will speak on The Changing Trends In Mental Health in S-100.

Biology instructor Bruce Firstman will speak on behalf of the United Religious Forum in C-102, his topic being science and religion.

17 Art Students Enter Zellerbach Poster Contest

Seventeen students from the Advertising Art Department here have entered the Zellerbach Paper Company poster contest.

Among the students who have entered are Anna Plugis, Stephen Clark and Antonio Gayer, who received scholarships from the Academy of Arts for their work in the field of Advertising Arts last semester.

Other entries are Diana Robinson, Maureen Keyes, Patricia Goates, Alberta Giannini, Neal Sereff, Hobert Harper, George Naganuma, Dennis Jeung, Barbara Robinson, Jim Faulkner, Rolando Castellon, Sam Landau, George Ho and Richard Lee.

The student who designs the best poster depicting the importance of voting privileges will win a $300.00 cash prize.

Deadline for poster entries is March 31, 1960.

Because of the increase in enrollment this semester new sections have been set up in the advertising art department, William Eckert, advertising art instructor, said.

Last semester there were not enough students enrolled to warrant the setting up of second sections, and 15 students who wanted to enroll in the advertising art classes could not do so.

Some of this semester's classes are forced to meet in rooms other than art rooms because of the increase in enrollment, Eckert added.

Club Cavalcade

Organizations Plan Ugly Man Contest, Open House, Dance

By Jeri Taranttino

IT LOOKS as though all the club plans are finally under way and meetings are being held during College Hour for all the various organizations.

Students of Retail Floristry held their second annual Open House last night at the college in Annex C from 6 o'clock on. A dinner followed in Smith Hall.

Invitations were extended exclusively to members of the flower industry.

On exhibit at the event were window displays by the advanced students, flower arranging and floral designs by the intermediate students, and an exhibit of the accessory materials used in the florist business.

The purpose behind the Open House was to show the members of the floral industry the way in which students apply the instructions and actual demonstrations given by Maryhope Jacks, instruetor in Retail Floristry classes.

Coming up later in the semester will be the California Student Teachers Association's northern conference to be held at the college. The association benefits all students interested in a career education. Their meetings are held during College Hour in C-269 every week.

Diane Beeson, vice president of the Associated Women Students, will conduct the first big sister meeting Friday in C-103. The talk for this week will concern the skills of studying for midterms and coping with exams.

Many women students seem to be anticipating the Leap Year dance which the AWS is giving Friday evening.

Future Forum Club meetings will feature recordings, discussions and other literary activities each College Hour in S-257.

Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority has elected its new officers for the semester, Phyllis Bauman, president; Mary Ann Goosehin, first vice president; Margaret Lindstrom, second vice president; Norma Otinino, recording secretary; Linda Jaillite, corresponding secretary; Jean Larson, treasurer, and Brigitta Bergman, historian.

Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity's officers are Richard Trauner, president; Bob Siekmann, vice president; Gary Lair, service secretary; George Huega, social secretary; Jack Hoeker, corresponding secretary; Pete Pedrotti, Jr., recording secretary; Pete Pedrotti, Sr., treasurer, and Ernie Falipo, acting historian.

Alpha Phi Omega is preparing for the annual Ugly Man On Campus contest and dance to be held the week of April 18 through 22. The dance promises to be a real big success with a well-known band to provide the evening's entertainment.

Two Individual Shooters Capture Medals, Trophy

While the two marksman teams and the sharpshooter team failed to win any team medals at the Oakland Pistol Club matches March 6, two members of the Campus Police captured two medals and one trophy in the individual matches, according to Richard Wernecke, chief of the Campus Police.

Frank Mateo placed first for the aggregate trophy, while Larry Miles took two second place medals.

Wernecke added that during the past week there has been a definite decline in the number of citations that the Campus Police has issued.

Deferment Test Applications Due

Applications for the Selective Service's College Qualifications Test on April 28 are now available at local draft boards, according to a government news release received here last week.

The release stipulated that eligible students should apply at once to the nearest local board for an application and a bulletin of information.

Following instructions in the bulletin, the student should fill out his application and mail it immediately to the Selective Service Examining Section, Educational Testing Service, P. O. Box 586, Princeton, New Jersey. Applications must be postmarked no later than midnight, April 7.

The results of the April examination will be reported to the student's Selective Service board for use in considering his deferment as a student.

Dental Technology Students To Hear Lecturer At Clinic Next Wednesday

Dental laboratory technology students will attend a clinic to be given next Wednesday, March 23, by James J. Campbell, Division Sales Manager, Western Division, of the Dentists' Supply Company of New York, Frank C. Szehner, Jr., dental laboratory technology instruetor here, declared last week.

A slide show and a lecture in C-245 from 1 to 3 p.m. will cover the use of artificial teeth in the fabrication of full and partial dentures.

In this latest addition to the college's curriculum of semiprofessional programs, students in the course are trained to do the various kinds of dental work not performed directly on the patient.

Szehner has taught at the United States Naval Dental Technician School, Naval Training Center, San Diego.

In the course of preparing and developing this program, many companies in the dental supply field have lent their support, and related organizations have responded with donations.

The Northern California Dental Laboratory Association donated more than $1000 for the purchase of much-needed equipment. The Jelenko-Dental Manufacturing Company of New York furnished an electric furnace.

To each student in the course a full set of artificial teeth was given by the Dentists' Supply Company of New York.

Students who plan on taking this technology course are at an advantage with such support from responsible organizations, Szehner emphasized, particularly since it is the only program of its type offered on the West Coast with an Associate in Arts degree.

Although the University of California Extension at Los Angeles has a similar program, no degree is awarded. In addition, tuition of $55 a month is charged.

Verbal Fireworks Explode In Council Over CJCSGA Delegates As Member Charges Prejudice In Appointments

By Paul Plansky

Fumes from a slowly sizzling flame descended upon Student Council last week, ignited by a proposal to rescind approval of delegates to the state convention of two-year colleges, and sparks began to fly as debate burst into an emotional explosion, fed by harsh verbal fireworks.

Council member Maryann Gooschin made the motion in old business asking a reconsideration of the following delegates to the San Diego convention from March 31 to April 2: Wally Hayes, Margi Hill, Bud Andress, Bill Keane, Dennis Bates and Marilyn Middleton.

Miss Gooschin accused council of a hasty decision approving these students and questioned the sincerity of Associated Student President Wally Hayes in appointing them. Immediately a line of disagreement was drawn, and emotional stability gave way to boiling tempers.

Andress, chairman of the delegation, and Keane, Associated Men Student president, backed Hayes' discretion to the hilt. Andress expressed amazement at the complete lack of respect and confidence due Hayes, and Keane added that each of the delegates named would return here next semester and coach the following delegation.

After Miss Gooschin named Keane as delegate in question, Hayes came forth with words of praise for the AMS President. "There isn't any individual on campus better qualified or more experienced in student government than Bill."

Another delegate in question was Miss Middleton. Miss Gooschin gave the names of Faye Fountain, finance chairman, and Judy Day, publicity chairman, as possible substitutes.

Stevie Tissier, Associated Women Student president, charged that Hayes' decision was prejudiced by the appearance the delegates made, rather than their capabilities.

Miss Fountain replied by frankly admitting her desire to be a delegate.

When a cabinet member asked Hayes to settle the quarrel by stating specific qualifications and attributes of each delegate in question, Hayes continued to acknowledge the wildly waving hands as the protests continued.

The raging ruckus suggested the Southern Democrats' filibuster, and a motion to adjourn, which took precedence over the motion on the floor, caused the bubbling council cauldron to subside but left the issue undecided.

Previously, council allocated $1000 for the basketball team because of the need for extra funds for their championship tournament in San Jose.

One other state of confusion arose concerning passage of the budget for the executive committee. Hayes asked for the $3417.64 to be passed immediately so that the funds could be used for the state convention. Miss Fountain suggested the budget be left until the council's next meeting as previously planned.

Then Hayes left the question up to the council members. Most of councilors were uninformed on the budget, and before the situation got too far out of hand, the motion was tabled. Then Sherm Elworthy, council adviser, confirmed Hayes statement that the budget was presented to council earlier and that the council members had no excuse to be so much in the dark.

Academic Assist By AGS Available To All Students

Available to any student who during the first midterm period found himself weak in any subjects and who desires additional help, is the Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society coaching program under the direction of William G. Richardson, faculty adviser.

Both members and non-members of the honor society are eligible to coach. This is because while a student may be weak in some subjects he may be proficient in another, Richardson stated.

Especially needed are students able to coach mathematics, English grammar, chemistry and physics. Rates are $1.50 per hour and services may be extended to include grade school and high school students.

Richardson also said that many students eligible for membership in the society have not yet joined. These students are those who, for the Fall 1959 semester, carried at least 12 units and maintained an average grade of B with no final grade lower than a C.

Such students should have 42 grade points for 12, 13 or 14 units, 45 grade points with 15 units, 48 points with 16 and 51 with 17. Semester dues are $1, which members are urged to pay.

Anyone wanting further information on coaching, eligibility requirements, meetings or other aspects of AGS can consult Richardson in S-143G.

"Everyone is invited to attend the two remaining College Hour meetings this semester in C-232," Richardson added.

WILLIAM RICHARDSON, Alpha Gamma Sigma adviser, directs coaching program.

This semester's officers include education major Jean Toso, president; Clinton Derry, majoring in electrical engineering, vice president, and social science major Peter Pedrotti, secretary-treasurer.

Thespians In Skit At SF State Tomorrow

Two Little Theater performers, Anne Osorno and Jordy Cooney, will be featured in a skit on a St. Patrick's Day program tomorrow at San Francisco State College.

The purpose of the skit is to promote the Irish holiday, and the show will be held in State College radio room at 12 noon.

Mel Mazzanti, former student here, will narrate the act, which features Cooney as Peadar the Puck and Miss Osorno as Kitty O'Mulligan.

The two performers are also cast in the "hilarious" comedy, The Man Who Came To Dinner, which starts a seven-performance run here Friday.

Cooney, veteran of many Little Theater productions, had a lead role in Inherit The Wind last year, and Miss Osorno was last seen here in Intermezzo.

Students See TV Demonstration Here

A crowd of curious onlookers packed the Little Theater, as City College got its first look at closed-circuit television, March 11.

Henry Leff, TV-radio instructor here, was in charge of the proceedings.

According to Leff, a series of experiments was set up to study the possibilities of educational television.

One such experiment was conducted by the art department. William Eckert, art instructor here, showed a person next to him the fundamentals of lettering. In another room, a person watched the same demonstration on a monitor.

When the works of both persons were compared, they were found to be equal in quality, showing that the demonstration had lost nothing by being broadcast.

Also televised was a scene from the Little Theater's current play, The Man Who Came To Dinner.

Michael Griffin, drama director, stated that it was difficult to televise the scene, since the shots weren't pre-planned or rehearsed, but that the results were interesting.

Cameras also shot demonstrations presented by instructors in various departments of education.

Among them were television classes by Leff, physiology by Jules Fraden and James Runner, audio-visual techniques by Madison Devlin; biology by John Harre, physics by James Ripley, reading improvement by Grace Brown, motion picture techniques by Emmett Smith, and photography by Bev Pacqualetti. Dean Edward Sandys delivered a talk on registration; Samuel Duff, English instructor, discussed study.

Handling the two cameras were the following students of the TV-radio department: Tom Summerville, George Heuga, Kenneth Jonah, Richard Molinaro and Bennett Schwartzman. The shooting lasted from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

All the equipment necessary for the shooting was supplied by the Dage Television Company. The company has been setting up similar demonstrations in various colleges throughout the country.

A representative from Dage was on hand to discuss the different uses of closed-circuit television.

Leff stated that the demonstrations were staged in anticipation of an order of equipment for the TV-radio department.

The new arts building, presently under construction, will contain a studio and facilities for closed-circuit television, he said.

Frosh Ball's Cutest Couple Contest Highlight Of Silver Anniversary Waltz Friday

Students of the college will be found skimming the dance floor of Peacock Court, located in the Mark Hopkins Hotel, California and Mason Streets, Friday night from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight, at the 50th semi-annual Freshman Ball, John Azzaro, Freshman Class president, said today.

Celebrating the college's 25th anniversary, the ball has been named Anniversary Waltz, and dance music will be supplied by Walt Tolleson's nine-piece band.

Highlighting the evening's activities will be the Cutest Couple contest. Contestants must belong to the Freshman Class, Azzaro said, and will be judged by their appearance together. Additional entertainment will be available during the several band breaks.

Admission to the affair will be by Associated Student card and official registration cards. For students who have only registration cards, a $2.50 fee will be charged.

Men students must wear dark suits, whereas their dates are expected to wear cocktail dresses.

The Freshman Class President personally invited each of the 270 members of the college faculty.

Sponsors of the ball are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Humiston of the counseling staff here, while patrons and patronesses include President and Mrs. Louis G. Conlan, Dean Mary Golding, Dean and Mrs. Ralph Hillsman, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hansen, Frances Lloyd and Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Straub.

Muskovitz Joins 23 Vocalists In KCBS Song Finals

Arthur Muskovitz will represent the college in the KCBS Bay Area collegiate singing competition. Muskovitz will join 23 other college vocalists in the contest, which will be held on the Dave McElhatton afternoon radio show.

Singing his rendition of Fools Rush In, Muskovitz was selected as a finalist by the college's music instructors Robert Morton and Flossita Badger during an audition on March 10 at the college.

Muskovitz won the competition over Sharon Light, Robert Rosenblatt and Rich Switzer, the other semi-finalists in the college's contest.

The 24 contestants will be vieing for a possible Columbia recording contract. The top three contestants, to be decided by McElhatton's radio audience, will be awarded prizes. First prize will be a portable stereophonic phonograph; second prize, $25 in Capitol records, and third prize, $15 in Capitol records.

Recording stars Nelson Riddle and Peggy Lee will audition these potential singing stars on McElhatten's show beginning April 4.

A list of 12 numbers was prepared by KCBS from which the contestants chose their respective songs.

Green Thumbs Acquire Orchids, Hothouse

The horticulture department recently received an orchid collection from Mrs. James Milliken, sister of Carl Mitchell, Balboa High School football coach, Harry E. Nelson, horticulture instructor here, said today.

Many of the seedlings received were grown from the deflasking stage by Mrs. Milliken's late husband, who was an orchid grower by avocation, Nelson added.

A 6 by 11 foot hothouse also was included in the donation. It will be assembled on the grounds of the horticulture area in the near future or stored, pending completion of the new horticulture buildings.

Class Drop Slips Due By March 30

Students intending to drop a course should see their counselors, obtain the required forms and proper signatures and file their petitions in the registrar's office on or before next Wednesday, March 30, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, said today.

Stressing the importance of meeting the deadline, Miss Learnard urged that students follow the procedure as early as possible so that all necessary signatures may be obtained.

To date, about 340 students have withdrawn from the college, Miss Learnard said, and 2165 students have dropped various courses. The number of added courses totaled 2047, and approximately 54 have added a course, then dropped it.

Concealed Alarm Foils Arson Attempt On Store

A well-concealed wire that when tripped sends a quiet alarm to the proper authorities saved the Ramporium last Wednesday night from possible serious damage by fire, attributed to arsonists.

Fluid had been sprinkled over the porch of the campus student bookstore, but flames were quickly controlled by the fire department and prevented from spreading by asbestos fire-proofing.

Because of quick action by the fire department, damage was confined to the main door.

Cafeteria, Snack Bar Change Hours

Cafeteria and snack bar hours for this semester are changed, John Dunn, hotel and restaurant instructor, announced last week.

New hours for the cafeteria are from 7:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. Then the cafeteria will close for one hour so that student workers are able to attend a lecture class.

Work will resume at 11 a.m. with the cafeteria closing down at 1:15 p.m. The change from last semester is the 11 a.m. opening, 15 minutes later than during the fall semester.

Snack bar hours are from 9:45 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. Last semester the snack bar opened 15 minutes later and closed 15 minutes earlier.

The reason the snack bar is opened earlier, Dunn stated, is because many requests from students were received asking that they be able to have coffee while waiting for a morning class. Also the extra half-hour, he believes, will help alleviate some of the crowded conditions.

Fullerton Choir Concert, Usual Film Presentations Highlight College Hour

A full schedule of events, including the annual appearance of the Fullerton Junior College A Cappella Choir and the usual presentation of films, will be offered this Friday during College Hour.

The Fullerton Choir, which appears here each semester, is scheduled to present a program of serious, semi-popular and popular selections.

Admission is free and the entire college is invited to attend the program, which will be given in the library.

Also during College Hour will be a showing of the film, Millions On the Move. Madison Devlin, audio-visual director here, said the film, which will be shown in S-136, deals with the effect of commuters on the life of a big city, and went on to say that this is a must for the students to see, considering that San Francisco is one of the biggest metropolitan cities in the country.

The following Friday, April 1, there will be offered a treat, no fooling, for yacht racing fans with the presentation of the film, The American Cup Races. This film deals with the famous yacht races for the coveted American trophy.

Next in line, scheduled for showing on April 8, will be the film, This Is Color, a technical film on the physics of color, what it is and what it does in printing and graphic arts.

Other films scheduled include Western Wonderland, the story of Las Vegas, April 22; Hearst Castle At San Simeon, a tour through the estate of the late William Randolph Hearst, also April 22; Miracle Bridge Over Mackinac, a bridge-building film, April 29, and Gateways to Playgrounds, a picture on boating and outboard motors, May 6.

Council Reaffirms Stand On Delegates To CJCSGA Meet As Members Defeat Motion

By Paul Plansky

Failing to attain a two-thirds majority, the motion to rescind the approval of delegates to the California Junior College Student Government Association conference was defeated by seven negative, two abstentions and four affirmative votes last week as the Student Council cauldron of the previous week quieted down.

Before the question came to a vote, each of the chosen delegates outlined his qualifications and aspirations concerning his eligibility. The speeches were given by Wally Hayes, Margi Hill, Bud Andress, Bill Keane, Dennis Bates and Marilyn Middleton.

Then two non-delegates, Faye Fountain, Associated Student finance chairman, and Judy Day, AS publicity chairman, stated their own reasons for being considered. After Hayes received the "vote of confidence," he reiterated a previous statement that, "In selecting these delegates, I kept the best interest of the college foremost in mind."

Following this long-sought settlement, Miss Fountain presented the executive council budget of $1611.64 for council's approval. This was the largest allocation of funds thus far this semester. Miss Fountain broke down the dollars-and-cents as follows:

State convention fees; transportation to and from the convention; special awards; the council dinner; and smaller, less significant divisions. The budget passed unanimously.

Council is expected to act on more budgets this week.

Hayes Lists Plans For Workshops

In preparation for the statewide convention of the California Junior College Student Government Association, Wally Hayes, Associated Student president here, organized a pre-conference workshop which met here last Saturday.

This local conference, consisting of five state delegates, attempted to coordinate the views of 17 Bay Area two-year college representatives so that they will be able to present a united front at the state convention.

Hayes listed tentative plans last week for a panel discussion of the importance of student government among forthcoming projects of the student government workshop. Members of Student Council and a political science class instructed by John M. Seliz, instructor here, are expected to take part in the discussion.

Another project, Hayes added, is investigation of the possibilities of forming a committee workshop to represent the Hotel and Restaurant Society in student government activities.

Numbers System Erases Kinks From Pre-Registration

A total of 3100 students passed through the pre-registration line March 11 in one hour and 10 minutes, Walter McCloud, counselor here, stated last week.

The smoothness of this semester's pre-registration procedure marked a decided improvement over last year's long lines.

To eliminate weather problems, McCloud said, lines will pass through the second floor of Cloud Hall in the future.

There, he added, students can form lines four abreast and thereby move more rapidly, allowing students waiting outside to enter the building sooner.

Kibitzing, however, is the primary problem facing the counseling department.

By the simple usage of numbering machines, McCloud said, it is hoped that such line cheating will be kept to a minimum.

"There are many students who now believe that they were successful in their kibitzing this semester," he said, "but without proper numbers appearing on their forms their cleverness was useless to them."

KIBITZERS HERE LOSE

A kibitzer, according to Webster, is a meddler, a person who gives advice to card players as he watches the game from their backs.

A kibitzer in college parlance differs from the dictionary definition.

The proper procedure in pre-registration lines is first to get a number at the door and then wait in line until the mailing card is handed the student.

The kibitzer gets his number, runs down a deserted hallway and jumps to the front of the line for his card.

The kibitzer forgets that instructors can count and that a 400 number doesn't come before a 300 number.

Building Assimilates Drama Workmen Create

Hammer Sounds Pave Way For Classrooms

By Anton Norris

Cuss it, kick it, and spit on it in the heat of the working hours but during those moments of relaxation, the coffee break or the lunch hour, sit back in your work overalls, look at the building and mentally appraise it.

The worker can't explain those moments of mental contentment—when the loading and unloading of cement, the hammering which creates the dark brown thumb nails so loudly cursed, and the hundreds of small menial labors necessary for the completion of a building begin to have meaning. When he is inwardly pleased because where once there had been nothing now a form is taking shape. A form built by men to house men; a building.

Today the walls of this building, the arts building, rising north of Science Hall, are naked slabs of concrete reaching upward waiting for the paint and windows which will clothe them. The plumbing must be attached. The electric wiring worked on. The floors finished and the roof covered over.

All of which means that there are still many weeks remaining before the building will be completed. It will be finished this spring though and at that time the men who are now working on it will take their machinery and leave. Yet a part of them will remain with the completed building for those men who will use it.

Drama exists in construction from the moment a building is an idea within a man's mind, to the appropriation of money, to the first laying of the foundation cement, and to the final coat of paint.

There is movement, noise, and dimension. There is life.

Such drama applies to the arts building. Now fast becoming more than an empty shell, it promises much for the future. Standing upon the hill and looking down upon it, one sees many stories in the making.

He gazes at the empty holes in which windows will be placed to let the outside in for people who must remain inside. He sees workmen standing on steel beams which will support the roof.

He sees these things and his mind dwells upon the future—of the hundreds of dreams that will be dreamed in those now bare, unfinished rooms; of the plans which will be made; of conquests which might be won and of those that will be lost.

Young faces will be turned to those future windows, much to the exasperation of the instructors. There will be eager faces, hopeful faces, faces filled with anxiety, and just plain bored faces.

Older faces will also turn to the windows, faces which will ask themselves whether the work they have chosen is right for them, yet all the time most will know that they wouldn't choose to do anything other than what they are now doing.

All types will be housed together within this building, and all will be seeking something. Some will know what they want; others will not, nor will they ever, know.

The building will resound with noise much different from the type of noise it is experiencing now. There will be laughter and there will be cries of frustration. The building will be battered about. Its floors will feel hundreds of feet and its walls will be leaned against.

It will tolerate all of this and although there might be times when it will complain by groaning or creaking, it will continue to retain the good disposition it now seems to be acquiring through the workmen's hands.

At night it will recover from the day. During the silence of darkness when it is shrouded in an electric light grayness it will have moments to relax. Stars will shine down on it and the moon's light will create odd shadows upon it. There will be quiet broken only by a car's acceleration or the eerie sounds of footsteps along its deserted sidewalks.

Within this quiet and these night sounds it will prepare itself for the next day's attack and it will be content. Content in much the same way the worker was when he stood back and looked at the unfinished building and told himself that his hands and his energy have helped made it exist.

The arts building is inanimate now, but soon it will live and fulfill a function which will be beneficial. It will live because man built it and man will use it.

It will have beauty because man can give it beauty and it will have ugliness because man can also give ugliness. Whatever it is given will depend upon the ones in the near future and the ones who years from now will walk along its halls or eat their lunches near its entrances.

It has been built for them as the buildings we now occupy were built for us. While watching, from the top of the hill, the activity at the bottom, one hopes that this building which promises so much will be used well.

WORKMEN SCURRY ABOUT, rushing to complete construction of the arts and classroom building. Hammer sounds, tractors and various other construction equipment will soon be silenced as the modern edifice takes shape and is made ready for students.—Guardsman photo by John Wilder.

Press Encourages Ideas; Duty Is To Report, Not To Make News

THE RAM'S HORN, The Guardsman letters-to-the-editor column on this page, was flooded with missives from the college's Rally Committee this week. Because of space limitations, all of the letters could not be printed, so the more concise ones have been run.

This interest on the committee's part is most gratifying, and we hope other campus organizations step forward to express their views.

Most of the letters deal with the lack of campus spirit here, a semesterly problem that concerns every campus group.

The committee, in its letters, has advanced what the members feel would be solutions to this lack of interest in campus affairs. A bonfire rally, more car parades and better promotion are among the projects mentioned . . . all worthy ideas.

The materialization of the first two will have to be handled by the appropriate group here, which, if we're not mistaken, is the Rally Committee. Some of the letters seemed to infer that The Guardsman could perform this function.

The press can encourage ideas, and The Guardsman is all in favor of these, but the press REPORTS, not makes, the news.

The third topic is in our bailiwick. More sports coverage was asked for. The Guardsman has a full sports page, so we hardly feel any deemphasis is being hinted. It's located on page 3, and possibly the inconvenience of opening the paper has something to do with it.

It was suggested that more front page play be given to the committee's activities. The Rally Committee is doing a fine job, especially when one considers the limited budget it is working with.

In checking The Guardsman morgue, it seems that the Rally Committee's work in the Homecoming Game has always been a front page story—complete with pictures. Other committee functions have also gained headlines, notably last semester's successful car parade. And we look forward in anticipation of adding to the morgue the reporting of more car parades and some bonfire rallies—when they materialize.

•Rally Com Proposes . . .

Editor, The Guardsman:

Rally Committee would like to suggest the following to the people concerned.

1. More writeups on games and rally activities.
2. Announcements of games in advance plus encouraging people to come to the games.
3. Develop a contest between various groups here to bring up spirit.
4. Play up homecoming games and don't forget other games though.
5. Develop a spirit on the newspaper about games and rally; in doing so this will help bring spirit to the readers plus the fact there may be people who are interested in the games but don't know where to go. (???)

•. . . Sign Board

Editor, The Guardsman:

I am a member of rally; also I am surprised at the poor publicity of the games and for the games. For a college of over 5000 day students, it is a disgrace to go to a game and find 10 people in the rooting section.

I believe there should be a large sign board (like the one at San Francisco State College) so someone would be able to tell when the games are.

I also think there should be publicity in The Guardsman of future games to a larger extent then is now given the subject.

The new stadium should help with the football games.

Editor, The Guardsman:

As a cheer leader, I suggest you give us your support through articles in the paper concerning our rallies. Is it possible for us to submit articles for your approval for The Guardsman?

We need and want your support. You can do so much to lift the spirit of the students here at City College.

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob Pacini

WOMAN, God bless her!

With these spirited words Mark Twain, the well known pseudonym of Sam Clemens, launched into one of his famous after-dinner speeches one night late in 1882 and dellvered a scathing commentary on the ways of the female sex.

Using material at times that would have brought out the Watch and Ward Society in full force, Twain, in riotous fashion, told of the women of a South American jungle tribe called the Fans.

"A woman of the Fans," Twain disclosed, "goes shopping, visiting or works at home wearing nothing but her complexion. It is the lightest costume in the world."

Twain, surely a practical man, saw advantages in such attire, or the lack of it. "At least you don't have to worry about having it laundered and coming back with an iron scorch or a button missing."

As Twain saw it, Fan women didn't go to church merely to see what the other girls were wearing, or in this case, weren't wearing.

Fan women are probably the only females in the world who can say, "I haven't a thing to wear," and be telling the truth!

Turning to the "daughter of civilization" Twain made the observation that a large part of civilized women's charm is her dress.

"Some civilized women would lose half their charms without dress, and some would lose all of it!" declared Twain.

Twain artfully deserlbed how each part of the world must offer a tribute to create the well-dressed, "exquisite and beautiful art" that is the civilized woman. She demands fashions from Paris, diamonds from Brazil, furs from the Arctic, lace from Spain and pearls from Ceylon. (They haven't changed much, have they?)

Next to feel the sting of Twain's sharp tongue was the switch, a long coil of hair once used by fashionable women to make their own head of hair, if needed, look fuller. Twain called it "her Sunday hair, not the hair she went to bed with."

A mystery to Twain was why women would never claim ownership of a hairpin found, for instance, on the floor of a Pullman car. She will deny, disown and refuse to acknowledge it, even if it is hers.

"I have stupidly gotten into more trouble and more hot water trying to hunt up the owner of a hairpin in a Pullman car than by any other indiscretion of my life," Twain confessed.

And yet with all her faults, idiosyncrasies, charms, moods, manners and mysterious ways, Twain had to end, as we must, the way he began—Woman, God bless her!

Foresight

Underpar Television Plagues US Networks

By Elmer Milligan

PAY TELEVISION went into effect last month in Canada and, if it's to be a success in this country, the entire industry will have to undergo a considerable change.

Television networks are struggling enough to persuade audiences to watch their offerings free, let alone demand a fee for the "junk" that is presently shown on TV sets.

And those commercials are something else! One minute, the sponsors are reminding a viewer to "shake the can," the next minute they ask him to "head for the Hills." Then, 15 minutes later, in the middle of a somewhat decent program, the viewer is offered a box of "coco-puffs."

The one fault in the television industry, besides commercials, is the lack of good material. Each western is basically the same, and most of the detective shows are set to a jazz score or feature some "pretty boy Floyd," who is either too cute to fight or too afraid of getting a bruise.

Recently, however, on the Peter Gunn show, director Blake Edwards presented one of the series' best offerings. It was completely different from the usual mystery programs.

The story was written especially for singer Diahann Carroll, featured in the role of a nightclub entertainer who fakes her own funeral to escape being murdered by her husband, played by actor James Edwards.

The story began when Edwards was sent to prison for murdering a man, an act for which he blamed his wife. While serving sentence, he wrote vicious letters to his wife threatening to kill her.

When Edwards was released from prison, Miss Carroll, with the help of a friend, staged a fake funeral. She continued to sing in the nightclub under an assumed name; her husband found out and hired a gunman to kill her. When this plan failed, the husband decided to do the job himself, only to have his scheme destroyed by Gunn.

Miss Carroll gave a thrilling performance as the frightened wife, and her singing was simply beautiful, a trait that could also describe the popular, young actress.

Our only objections to the program are lack of action and Edwards' role.

This actor, veteran of many top movie roles, was seriously degraded by the part given him, for he is one of the most versatile actors in the movie-TV fields, and his talents call for lead roles, not bit parts.

Newcomer's Home Run Cinches 6-2 Victory Over Vallejo In First Pre-Season Home Stand

The Rams made it two straight over the Vallejo College Falcons last Tuesday afternoon as they swept to a win, 6-2, at Balboa Park.

This was the first home game for the locals but was a far cry from the 12-3 thumping they handed the "Birds" earlier in Vallejo.

Though the score indicated two runs for the East Bay men, Ram southpaws Bill Flanagan, Randy Pace and Don Lowpensky pitched three innings each and didn't yield a hit to the Falcons.

With the Red and White holding a one-run lead after five complete frames, two Vallejomen were down when Pace yielded four walks in a row to force in a run.

Another run crossed the plate when Cateher Bob Ruggiero tried an attempted pickoff on the man on third only to see the ball carom into left ifeld. Lowpensky came in to shut out the five by striking out the last batter.

Vallejo held that 2 to 1 lead briefly as Ruggiero opened the sixth by walking, then advancing to second on a passed ball.

Third baseman Jerry Gosland also drew a walk. Second baseman Mel Canevaro sacrificed, after which Lowpensky's popup to short left field, dropped by Falcon shortstop Don Decious, brought in Ruggiero with the tying run.

Shortstop Byron Beckes skyed to the second baseman. Newcomer outfielder Eric Lyons hit a terrific line shot over the left fielder for a home run, to score the "Goose" and Lowpensky in what was undoubtedly the big blow of the game.

Outfielder Reno DiBono ended the frame by grounding out, however, not before the Rams had piled up a 5 to 2 lead.

City College scored its last tally in the seventh when the Rams loaded the bases and drew a walk to force it in.

Lowpensky finished the contest in good fashion by striking out seven and walking two batsmen. He was the winning pitcher. Falcon starter Frank Friedman was the loser.

number of people going here the attendance is very poor. Also, for those that do go to the game it spirit is quite low. This I feel is bad because of the standing of our team in the Bay Area. It's nice for the team to know that there are some interested people who come to the games.

I think that if the games were publicized more through the paper and also throughout the college by rally we would have more attendance and also more spirit at the games.

Editor, The Guardsman:

I am a member of Rally Committee and a song girl. I should like to ask why the spirit or the sports activities do not make first page. I have attended every basketball game and watched our team make first place and also play at San Jose. This was never written up very big. Our college should be very proud of our team just as they are of their clubs and football season. I bet if you stopped and asked someone in the hall about a game, they wouldn't know what you were talking about.

Our attendance at the game was fairly good—better than usual, but the spirit was awful. Can't this be improved somehow? This is not entirely your fault I know, but can't it be improved?

Ram, San Mateo Nines Clash In Loop Play Friday

The Ram diamondmen face San Mateo this Friday at the Bulldogs' home field. Coach Lee Eisan's charges have played top ball so far this year, and in this their third conference game, they are in the middle of the race for the Big Eight title.

The locals have 16 games left in the season, all of which will be a tough test for the ability of the Rams as a team.

Dekker, Ram Star Shortstop, Signs With NY Yankees

Ken Dekker, 18-year-old former St. Ignatius ace and first semester Ram shortstop, signed a contract with the New York Yankees March 10 for one of the highest bonuses of the year in this area.

Dekker, who was to have started his first season here this year under baseball Coach Lee Elsan, was approached by Dolph Camilli, Yankee scout, who outbid six American League and three National League clubs to get the strappling youngster.

A typical Yankee in build, 6 feet 2 and 187 pounds, Dekker batted .448 last year under Coach Jim Keating of St. Ignatius High School, who labeled him "the finest all-around player I have ever coached." He gained All-City honors two years in a row while at the Wildcat school.

Following graduation from St. Ignatius, Dekker enrolled at the University of California last fall, but after only one semester at Berkeley came here this spring where, at the start of the current season for the Rams, he showed great potential in just three games and already was groomed as possibly the outstanding shortstop in the Big Eight Conference until Camilli signed him.

He left last week to join the Yankee's Richmond (Va.) club of the International AAA League at its Florida training camp.

Swimmers Battle Sacramento Friday In Crucial Meet

Journeying to Sacramento Friday, the Ram swim squad will attempt to pick up its first win of the still-young season in a crucial meet against the Panthers.

This won't be an easy task as Sacramento is one of the three pre-season favorites. Oakland and Stockton stand as the other obstacles in the college's climb to improve last year's fourth place finish.

San Mateo gave the locals a 56-39 drubbing in the season's opener. The bright spot for the college was a freshman free styler Bob Fewster. Fewster took two firsts in the 220 and 100-yd. free style events. In addition, he was anchor man on the winning 400-yd. free style relay.

Pete Urrea was the only other winner for the Rams with a first in the 50-yd. free style. Members of the relay team are Urrea, Craig Schwarz, Rich Sullivan and Fewster.

The aquamen have a tremendous problem currently with the lack of adequate space to practice in. Coach Roy Burkhead's swimmers practice at McLaren pool from 3:15 to 4:45 p.m. and are only allotted two lanes in which to work out.

This difficulty puts the local swimmers in a bad position when they face some of the stronger teams in the conference who have their own pools.

Midterms Halt Intramural Play

No games will be played in the Intramural league this week because of midterm examinations.

The Inter-Fraternity Council League otherwise schedules its games on Wednesday nights, while the Independent League plays on Tuesday and Thursday nights. League play will resume next week.

Immediate action coming up in the Independent League is as follows:

On March 29 the fighting Guardsman will meet the Hotel & Restaurant club, while the Lyons will invade the Invaders. The Retail Floristry entry will play the Pachyderms, and the Recreation Association will go against the Newman Club.

Of course, a new season brings back old problems and this one is no exception to the rule. The main problem back once again is the matter concerning forfeits. If a team forfeits without advance notice, it pays the referee's fee and loses the game and its position with respect to the rest of the league is lowered.

Guardsman Wins By Forfeit

They said it couldn't be done—but The Guardsman did it.

For one glorious day (at least) the Fighting Five from S-304 were tied for the Independent League lead. The odds-on patsies of the Intramural League cage loop, with this victory won their second game in about three years.

The average person would assume that with such a paltry record the two-fingered typists would be overjoyed, but the manner in which they won prevented that.

They won by forfeit over the Pachyderms — the forgetful elephants.

Spikemen Scrap With Comets, Pirates In Big Eight Conference Clash At Modesto March 25

With their first big test, the Sacramento Relays last Saturday under their belt, a driving and determined Red and White track squad is slated to meet Modesto and Contra Costa this Friday at Modesto.

Time for the first gun is 3 p.m.

Modesto and Contra Costa will by no stretch of the imagination be easy matches for the Ram squad, which is comprised of about one-third returning veterans. Modesto was the Big Eight track champions last year while the Ram cindermen placed second.

Coach Lou Vasquez is optimistic in his views and hopes for the season, and he believes that the squad is improved over last semester's version.

Alex and Ellis Jenkins, along with Lon Colbert, hold the most promise for the short sprints. Tom Jennings and Tony Vance are strong middle distance men with Ray Batz and Frank James being the big men in the mile and two-mile runs.

The main problem at the beginning of the season was the constant rainfall that was descending on San Francisco. This hampered the team from practicing to their fullest capacity.

With a little sunshine and a lot of drive the 1960 Red and White track squad stands a good chance of capturing the Big Eight title.

Netters Face Pirates In Game This Weekend

Coach Roy Diederichsen's hopeful netmen face their toughest opponent of the conference season when they battle Modesto at Modesto this Friday.

The Pirates, heralded as the team to beat in the Big Eight Conference race, have a great supply of veterans from last year's strong aggregation plus several newcomers.

A victory in this crucial match by Vince Chin, Larry Draper, and the rest of the local forces would hurdle the Red and White squad a big step toward winning the conference title.

Local Baseball, Track Teams Win In Weekend Goes

The Rams put on their hitting shoes last Saturday afternoon at Balboa Park to hand the Stockton Mustangs a double defeat, 8-4 and 10-6, in the conference baseball openers, while the Red and White track squad emerged victorious in the Big Eight relays at Sacramento.

Southpaw Bill Flanagan started on the mound for the Rams in the first game and went the distance, giving up four runs on seven hits to the Mustangs. He struck out four batsmen and walked four.

Don Lowpensky struggled through the second affair allowing the defending champion Mustangs six runs on eight hits, striking out three and issuing three bases on balls.

At Sacramento, led by Lon Colbert and a powerful two-mile relay team, the potent Rams chalked up 54 points to defeat their Big Eight opponents.

A confident Red and White two-mile relay team in a photo finish with Sacramento broke the previous college record. The locals took top honors in four of the 13 events. Colbert, ace sprinter and anchor man on the two-mile relay team, was the spearhead of the Rams with a time of 10.1 in the 100-yard dash.

Little Leagues End Days Of Sand-Lot Ball

By Frank Dunne

WHEN basketball season ends, attention in the sports world turns outdoors. Time was when every schoolyard, sand-lot and bush league park was invaded by young hopefuls yearning to participate in America's favorite pastime.

Any kid who could scrape together the bare implements of the trade congregated with his pals for a game of baseball. An old glove, tattered and worn from many years of faithful service, was the main tool of the trade. A ball and a bat, sometimes of questionable origin, made the game complete. This was the way it used to be, back in the fabled days of yore.

Today this system has changed; Little League ball clubs have come into power. Gone forever is the day of the pick-up games, and kids are no longer in sand-lots or out in the street playing stick ball.

Today the young hopefuls join the Babe Ruth, Pony or Little Leagues in order to play. Each one of the organizations has a sponsor and plays a complete schedule of games.

Each sponsor tries to make his team the best outfitted and equipped team in the league.

Any kid within the age limit can play for one of these teams. He will get the benefit of good coaching and the spirit of fair play. He is taught the meaning of teamwork and learns to play and work with boys of his own age, thus training him for later life.

This big league training for these young men is one of the great ventures in sports in our modern society.

These leagues form a major deterrent in the fight against so-called juvenile delinquency. When more persons appreciate, with less talk and more support, the importance of the Little League, there will be a marked decrease in the delinquency problem.

Even back in the unorganized era of sand-lot ball, there was a certain spirit that bound the players together; for when they were playing and busy there was no thought of wrong passing through their young minds.

Groups Plan UMOC Contest, Dances As Rushing Events End

By Jeri Tarantino

ALPHA PHI OMEGA is currently planning for the Ugly Man Contest, to be held during the week of April 18-22. The contest itself promises to be quite a week, and the climax of the event will be the presentation of the traditional Ugly Man On Campus trophy and other gifts to the winner at a dance scheduled Friday, April 22.

All the contestants will receive prizes according to their standing in the contest. The dance will be held in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight. Dress for the occasion will be cocktail dresses for women and suits for men.

The Associated Women Student dance seemed to be a success, and now the Frosh Ball is under way. Other than the ball, clubs are still arranging for the major events they plan.

From March 31 to April 2, the California Junior College Student Government Association Conference will be held in San Diego.

Officers of Phi Beta Rho sorority are Gretchen Davis, president; Pat Whitman, vice president; Gayle Barnett, acting vice president; Marge Albrect, recording secretary; Pat Comerford, corresponding secretary; Madeline Magrini, treasurer; Vickie Vivas, pledge mistress; Maureen Keyes, historian, and Judy Wagner, sergeant-at-arms.

Phi Beta Rho's first rushing affair, its fireside, was held Sunday night. The second rushing affair, its coffee preference hour, was held Tuesday night.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity is making final plans for its Spring Fever dance on April 8. The dance will be held at the Rowing Club with music by Steve Paul.

Vic Lazcano, the fraternity pledge master, has completed work for the new pledges, and the fraternity basketball team promises a second championship in the Associated Men Student basketball league.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity holds its second traditional affair this Saturday night, March 26. The theme is Hawaiian Luau and all the fraternity brothers and their dates will come in Hawaiian dress.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 noon in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Little Theater Schedules Six Performances Of Dinner Play

By Alex Sokoloff

Gales of laughter greeted the Little Theater's opening night presentation last Friday of The Man Who Came To Dinner, and six more weekend performances are scheduled.

The comedy centers around a household whose peace is shattered by Sheridan Whiteside, renowned writer and lecturer.

Whiteside, while in the home of the Stanleys, falls and hurts his hip. A doctor, believing the hip to be broken, orders him to remain in the house.

Bill Henderson played the imperious Whiteside to perfection, ordering people about and insulting them, as though he owned them.

Marilyn Milani gave a sterling performance as Maggie Cutler, Whiteside's secretary. In the play Maggie falls in love with Bert Jefferson, a newspaperman. Miss Milani gave a balanced portrayal of both the comedy Maggie and the serious Maggie.

Scooter Lemp handled well the role of Reporter Jefferson, the man caught between Maggie and Lorraine Sheidon, an actress and a notorious seductress.

Leah Pashoian's portrayal of Lorraine could have melted a steel bar at 20 paces.

Bringing the play to the peak of hilarity was the fine performance of Jordy Cooney as Banjo, a Hollywood nut.

Deserving a round of applause was the acting of Fred Fisher as Beverly Carlton, James Robinson as Mr. Stanley and Ken Stone as Dr. Bradley.

A sparkling performance was turned in by Maureen Rogers as Miss Preen, a nurse whose faith in humanity is given a jolt after contact with the intolerable Whitesides.

Serge Gregorieff handled well the role of Professor Petroff. Petroff gives Whiteside a colony of roaches. They were in a box, to which carphones were attached so that Whiteside could listen to their mating calls.

The whole play sparkled with gems of performances, and taken as a whole, The Man Who Came To Dinner is probably the funniest comedy yet to be presented to college theater goers here.

Drama Director Michael Griffin hopes that the play proves to be an artistic as well as a box office success throughout its run.

Judging from the quantity of laughter the play drew, to call it merely a success would be an understatement.

Helping behind the scenes were Armer Brown as property mistress, and Carole Hawkins, makeup.

Police Issue 800 Parking Tickets

About 800 citations, with a minimum fine of $2 each, have been issued to parking regulation violators by the Campus Police since the first day of registration, February 8.

These citations are the same as those issued by the San Francisco Police Department and payable only at the City Hall Traffic Fines Bureau, Fred F. Fitzgerald, instructor in the criminology department here, stated this week.

Students may park in Area B, bounded by Ocean Avenue and the athletic field; Area C, bounded by the men's gymnasium and east of Cloud Hall, and Area D, the area by the men's gymnasium and the horticulture center, and the reservoir.

Warning students against parking near the construction area of the new arts building, which is located at the north end of the campus, Richard Wernecke, chief of the Campus Police, recently stated that all violators will be issued citations in the future.

"The reason," Wernecke added, "is that cars parked in this area interfere with the work now in progress."

The Campus Police have had 475 man hours on duty, and 15 hours of extra duty details on days of dances and games.

Sophomore Class Moves Date Of Ball To June 3

Sophomore Class President Jack Vyce announced recently that the Sophomore Ball will be held in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel this year. The date of the dance has been changed from June 4 to June 3.

No definite hours have been set for Sophomore Class meetings.

Sorority Sponsors Eastertide Drive

Officers and members of Gamma Sigma Sigma, national service sorority, are busy this week in preparation for the annual Easter Drive.

The drive, under supervision of Mary Ann Gooschin, sorority secretary, will run from April 6 through 8 with the slogan, Bring Easter To San Francisco County Hospital.

Daffodil yellow bannies, made of milk cartons, with ears, whiskers and tail, will serve as contribution boxes and will be carried by the sorority sisters during the three-day drive on the campus.

The donations will be used for the purchase of Easter baskets for the young children who must spend their Easter holiday in bed at the San Francisco County Hospital.

The Easter Drive is one of the sorority's monthly projects. Others on the agenda are adoption of a needy family in Hong Kong, a party for underprivileged girls at the Youth Guidance Center, and a card and bingo party for the residents of the Laguna Honda Home.

NSA Representative Outlines Student Program; Anderson Explains Finances To Council

Dispensing with all formal business, Student Council settled back and absorbed two informative talks at its second session last week. The guests of council were Dick Rettig, who plugged a nationwide organization, and Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, who explained the inside story and intricacies of the college's finances.

Rettig, a representative from the United States National Student Association, described the activities and purposes of the relatively new organization composed of 400-member colleges.

The speaker explained that the two most important projects of the national association are serving its members and taking stands on political issues. "Since we are a non-profit group," he stated, "we can arrange inexpensive student tours to Europe, as low as $850, from discount rates made possible through a member identification card."

More than 100 telegrams of support were received denouncing the discriminatory action taking place in the South, Rettig said, and we send representatives to the legislature giving USNSA's stand on certain issues.

Rettig's group is in favor of extending the G.I. bill and supports the passing of the "Royce Bill," which will allow American youth to act as technical assistants in underdeveloped countries.

Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management here, addressed council next. Sporting an Irish green bow-tie for St. Patrick's day, he immediately delved into the business of finance, especially on the points about which many council members were confused.

Firstly, he brought out that the law requires the administration to guide the students with money expenditures. This situation exists not because the faculty considers the students incapable, but the Unified School District of San Francisco requires the faculty to take charge, Anderson explained.

Secondly, he emphatically made it clear that 100 per cent of the profits from the student bookstore goes into the Associated Student funds. Although he said that the AS is not the legal owner, which would entitle one to sell the property, every penny profit is the students.

This gives the students an advantage, he clarified, for all the responsibility of insurance and maintenance falls on the administration.

Lastly, he recalled that ten years ago there was no reserve fund and no bookstore. The administration borrowed $1000 from AS funds to start the store, and over a period of 20 semesters a reserve of $55,000 has been built from the profits.

He added that from $700 to $800 a month is made from the vending machines around campus.

Ramporium Gives Full Net Profits To AS Fund

Contrary to a statement made in an interview published here last week, that "only a 40 per cent return is gained from the student bookstore," the Associated Student organization receives 100 per cent of the net profits from the campus Ramporium.

Dr. Oscar Anderson, co-ordinator of educational management, emphasized that school district policy provides that every cent of net profit from the store or any similar enterprise "is for the benefit of the Associated Student membership."

Placement Center Offers Variety Of Summer Positions

Applications are still being accepted for a wide range of summer jobs through the student placement center in S-187, under the direction of Joseph A. Amori, director of personnel placement services here, his secretary, Nora North, stated last week.

Available jobs include positions in the forestry service, resort areas, boys' and girls' camps, construction areas, European farms and camps, summer schools, tours and travel services, airlines and miscellaneous types of employment.

Requirements for these jobs include some experience or ability in the field of work desired, and applicants should be at least 18 years of age, Mrs. North emphasized. All applicants will be given personal data sheets and merit rating sheets for processing prior to personal interviews.

Mrs. North stated that at present, part-time jobs are moving slowly, and clerical jobs are most numerous. These call for typing, shorthand, and other similar abilities. There is very little opportunity in sales work, full-time jobs and specialized work.

This situation is expected to loosen during Easter, when more jobs of every type will become available, Mrs. North said.

Jewish Organization Offers Scholarship

All women students are welcome to apply for a $50 scholarship that is given by the National Council of Jewish Women, Inc. The scholarship is offered each spring and fall to all Bay Area women students. In the spring the scholarship must be applied for by the end of March, and the fall deadline for application is November 30.

Any interested woman student is advised to see the Dean of Women, Mary Golding, in S-150 before the stated time. Applicants are considered on their financial need, scholarship and activities.

Bank Of America Offers Awards To Business Majors

A Bank of America $100 cash award plus a certificate of recognition will be given to outstanding students majoring in the field of banking or business administration and another in that of secretarial or clerical work at the end of May, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced yesterday.

The purpose of the Bank of America college business awards, she explained, is to stimulate and encourage students in planning their study for a business career and also to encourage them to complete their two-year college programs.

Students are selected on the basis of being among the highest in their respective occupational area, she added, and should have no less than an average of 2.0 on a 3.0 scale, or a 3.0 on a 4.0 point scale.

Other qualifications are a minimum of 24 units, a personality appropriate to the student's occupational choices, especially the ability to get along with other people, and a record of successful participation and effective leadership in extra-class campus activities.

Preferential consideration for service in the business department is desirable but not essential, Dean Golding emphasized, and preference is given those students planning to graduate in occupational courses and enter employment fields.

Forum Magazine Seeks Material For Publication

Manuscripts are still needed for possible publication in the 1960 edition of Forum Magazine.

Material to be published in the magazine will be chosen by a group of 25 to 30 students. To insure judging on a completely non-partisan basis, the names of writers who have submitted manuscripts will be withheld until the judges decide upon the material which is to be printed. All students who are interested in reading are invited to attend Forum Club meetings in S-257 during College Hour.

Tentative publication date is set for the 1st of May or the first of June and will be available at no cost to Associated Students.

From its first publication in 1937 in mimeograph form, Forum evolved to its present printed form. The magazine was started for the purpose of giving students a chance to express their literary ability in various forms of writing.

Ideas for art work and cover designs as well as manuscripts can be submitted to Catherine Connolly, Forum faculty adviser, in C-331A, or to any Forum Club member.

Cafe Problem Shows Improvement

By Lester On

"Most students are co-operating and there is general improvement in the cafeteria," Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser, said last week in an interview with a Guardsman reporter.

Elworthy has the responsibility of maintaining order in the present, overcrowded cafeteria.

Results have been so "encouraging," he said, that the need for the "rotation" system has diminished and apparently will not be employed.

Since the congestion and traffic problem at the cafeteria was publicized, Elworthy has received many offers of assistance from individual students and organizations of the college. For this display of support and concern over a serious problem, Elworthy revealed his satisfaction and gratitude.

Elworthy further emphasized that while the situation is now somewhat eased, more improvement is possible if only a few students are more thoughtful and considerate and use the ash trays and the trash receptacles.

"Their proper use," he said, "would facilitate cleaning of the tables during the rush hours."

In discussing the problem of students who utilize the cafeteria as a meeting place and for light snacks, Elworthy said the college "realizes that there is no place yet for students to meet, such as a lounging area."

An immediate if partial solution to this problem is the addition to the cafeteria now in its last stage of construction. Upon completion, seating capacity will be increased by 240 places where students who do not wish to eat lunch can meet.

The main dining room, with a seating capacity of 472 places, will be restricted for meals only. Relocation of the existing fountain area during the summer will complete present plans pertaining to the cafeteria.

Meanwhile, because student affairs sometimes do not permit his presence at the cafeteria during peak hours, Elworthy has found it necessary to increase his staff of helpers. His current group now includes Stan Rosenberg, Peter Roddy and Lorin Waxman. Willie Hudson, who was on the previous staff, has left because of a conflict in his program.

Smith Hall Site Of Annual Spring Festival; CAB Starts Wheels Grinding For Event

Planning, petitioning and programming by the Club Activities Board for the Spring Festival on May 20 are underway on a "full-steam-ahead" scale, as described by Delmar Rose, CAB president.

The annual event will be held in Smith Hall where tables will be arranged to set up booths for each club, fraternity and sorority on campus.

The profits made from each booth will be turned over to the organization operating the booth. Each participating club stands to profit in proportion to the drawing power of their displays and gimmicks and the efficiency with which they are organized and operated.

The festival is one of the main means by which campus organizations obtain funds for their activities, Rose commented.

Petitions will shortly be sent to each group requesting a full description of the size and type of booth it will offer. If accepted and approved by CAB, the club will start working on the project.

In the planning stages are solicitation of entertainment for the affair, selection of the type of food to be served, and search for a suitable theme, Rose stated.

Another feature of the festival will be a car parade for which petitions have also been distributed. This year there will not be any large floats, but trophies will be awarded for the best decorated, the sportiest car and one for the best booth.

Fraternity Plans UMOC Festivities For April 18 To 22

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will sponsor its annual Ugly Man On Campus Contest this semester with the week of festivities scheduled for April 18 to April 22.

UMOC was inaugurated here during 1950 for the principal reason of raising funds for scholarships to be given in recognition of the outstanding man and woman students of the year who have contributed the greatest amount of service to the college and to the community, Richard Trauner, Alpha Phi Omega president, explained.

Contestants are allowed any type of costume and makeup which is original and which coincides with the rules of the contest.

Pictures will be taken of the contestants, pasted to large cans and displayed about the campus for penny votes.

The contestant having the most penny votes will be named the Ugly Man On Campus.

For the past three years the winners of the contest have been sponsored by hotel and restaurant students. It is hoped, Trauner stated, that competition will be so competitive this semester that a candidate sponsored by an organization other than H&R will win.

All organizations, he added, are invited to sponsor a candidate.

During the week of April 18 several activities will be sponsored by the fraternity, climaxing on Friday, April 22, with an auction and contests such as dunking and chug-a-lug.

A list of prizes for the winner and runners-up will be released as soon as the fraternity receives notice of them, Trauner said.

Alumni Set To Observe Silver Anniversary With Dinner-Dance April 30

An Alumni Association dinner-dance, commemorating the college's 25th anniversary, will be held at The Village, Saturday, April 30, according to Doug Smith, alumni president.

A cocktail-social gathering starts at 6:30 p.m., and dinner is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Dancing to the music of Dick Reinhardt and his orchestra after dinner will last until 1 a.m.

Reservations are $4.50 per person, and intercsted students who are more than 21 may obtain reservation forms at the dean of men's office, S-148.

The Village is located at Columbus Avenue and Lombard Street.

Other officers of the association are Vice President George de Uriosto, Treasurer Pete Chevrier and Secretary Pat Smith.

AS Budget Cuts Force Guardsman To Cancel Issues

Lack of funds cut deep into campus activities last week, forcing many of them to water down this semester's Associated Student plans.

Paramount among the austerity moves was the cancellation of two scheduled issues of The Guardsman, April 13 and June 8.

Faye Fountain, finance chairman, said all budgets are ready to go before Student Council this week for the group's approval. No budget, she emphasized, is presented in toto, all being cut because of insufficient funds in the AS treasury.

It is hoped that the budgets will all be passed by the middle of this week, Miss Fountain said.

The two largest budgets submitted, she added, were from The Guardsman, to meet a full publication schedule, and the Campus Police with $4000 and $1959.40 asked respectively.

AS funds available for this semester total $26,000 with AS card sales supplying only $8000 of the money needed.

The remaining $18,000 will come from the AS bookstore, Miss Fountain said.

Guardsman publication dates now stand as follows after today's issue: April 6, April 27, May 4, May 11, May 18, May 25 and June 1. No issue was scheduled for April 20 because of the Easter holidays.

Rushees To Pick Up Bids Friday

Sorority rushees will pick up their invitations to pledge this Friday between 7:30 and 10 a.m. in the dean of women's office, S-150.

There will be an orientation meeting during College Hour the same day in C-223. By attending this meeting, rushees will be accepting a bid to pledge.

Although pledge week activity has been modified this semester, the future sorority members are expected to find this initiation enjoyable.

The Inter-Sorority Council has set up a pledge week plan, with certain dress specifications.

Monday and Tuesday the pledges will dress in the garb and colors of Summer Session Programs Available

Schedules for the summer session 1960 have been completed and will be ready for distribution this Friday, April 1, in the office of the registrar, Mary Jane Learnard announced today.

All interested students are advised to consult their counselors before June 9 for assistance in making out their programs. Once a student has consulted his counselor and made out his program he can then take it to the registrar's office and fill out the registration book.

On June 23 students will confirm their registrations for the classes of the 1960 summer session. Instruction will begin on Monday, June 27.

Students are allowed a maximum of six units plus physical education, but those enrolled in business administration 1B, chemistry 1A, or zoology 1A-1B may not enroll in any additional courses.

The last day to drop a course is July 15, and the last day to file for a leave of absence is July 22. Final examinations will be given on August 4 and 5, with the session ending August 5.

Election Petitions Available This Week For 20 AS Offices

By Richard Shields

Students who plan to run for student government positions may obtain petitions for candidacy in the office of the dean of men, the dean of women, or the Associated Students beginning this week, Election Commissioner Jerry Kucserka announced Wednesday.

Six executive offices and 14 Student Council seats will be filled in the election slated for Monday and Tuesday, May 16 and 17.

Offices to be filled are those of AS President and Vice President, Associated Men Student, Associated Women Student, and Freshman and Sophomore Class Presidents. Student Council seats are open for seven Freshmen and seven Sophomores.

Candidates for AS presidential and vice presidential offices must have completed from 45 to 60 units of college work. AMS, AWS and Sophomore Class presidential candidates from 30 to 60 units, and Freshman Class presidential candidates from 15 to 30 units.

All candidates must have a 2.0 grade point average, election regulations provide.

Petitions must be signed by at least 15 AS card holders and returned to the Election Commissioner by a date still to be set. A registration fee of $1.00 will be charged for filing petitions.

Kucserka listed the following rules for campaign procedures:

(1) Campaign expenditures may not exceed $30 per person for executive offices and $25 per person for Student Council seats.

(2) Posters should measure 14 by 18 inches and a five by seven-inch picture of the candidate should be on at least one poster.

(3) All publicity, including posters, must be approved by the Election Commissioner.

(4) Candidates must register their party or be listed as non-partisan.

Kucserka warned that any infractions of election rules will be met with severe discipline administered by himself or by the dean of men.

Deadline for filing petitions and the election rally date are due for change to conform with voting dates rescheduled by Student Council.

Enrollment Shows Men Outnumber Coeds Two To One

Slight decreases in the college's enrollment for the Spring 1960 semester, as compared with the Spring 1959 semester, were announced last week by Gertrude Somerville, assistant registrar.

Total registration for the present semester is 6881, whereas the total number of students for the Spring 1959 Semester was 6895. Last semester the total registration exceeded 7000.

Of the present students, 5480 are day students, of which 3751 are men students and 1729 women. Compared with the Spring 1959 semester, total enrollment of day students this semester is lower by 197.

Last semester, Fall 1959, there were 5703 daytime students at the college.

Miss Somerville disclosed that there has been an increase in enrollment for extended day classes. Scheduled to attend evening classes this semester are 1401 students, while one year ago there were 1307 students.

Total enrollment for first semester students attending daytime classes at the college is 925. Miss Somerville further added, with 1584 second semester students, 736 third semester students, and 2235 fourth semester students. The latter number includes those students who attend the college after the fourth semester.

Student Affairs, College Cheating High On Agenda

With more than 300 delegates representing 65 two-year colleges in the state excepted to attend, the semi-annual California Junior College Student Government Association Conference meets in San Diego, tomorrow through Saturday.

Heading the college's six-member delegation is Associated Student President Wally Hayes.

Delegates are Vice President Margi Hill, Men's Athletic Commissioner Dennis Bates, Associated Men Student President Bill Keane, AS Card Sales Chairman Marilyn Middleton and State Information Chairman Bud Andress.

Workshops are slated as part of the three-day schedule to give student delegates an opportunity to exchange individual ideas and plans, for the major purpose of the convention is to enable student leaders to evaluate problems commonly shared and discuss them intelligently.

Miss Hill will represent the college in the campus activities workshop, Bates in the athletic workshop, Keane in the publicity workshop and Miss Middleton in the finance workshop.

Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser here, will accompany the delegation.

High on the agenda for workshop discussions are two problems which delegates consider primarily in the realm of student government.

One is that of cheating, the other, the main problem of the student affairs workshop, is that of creating a wider interest in student activities.

Primary problem due for discussion in the finance workshop is that of the source of student activity funds and the various bases for their allocation.

The athletic workshop will cover eligibility and rules for recruiting athletes, with the problem being the distance one college should go to recruit an athlete outside its respective zone or state.

Discussion to be featured on the agenda of the campus activities workshop will be whether campus activities have too much of a place on the campus of two-year colleges in the state.

A question pertinent to student government itself which will be pinpointed in San Diego is the amount of time to be allocated to the instruction of student councilis in parliamentary procedure.

'April Fantasy' Set This Friday

Following the end of first midterm examinations, a little life will be added to the college as April Fantasy overtakes students at a dance to be presented by the Filipino Club on April Fool's day in Smith Hall.

The event, lasting from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight, will feature a floor show which is now in the planning stage. Music will be provided by the Blue Mariners.

Proper dress for the affair is semi-formal, meaning cocktail dresses for women and dark suits with ties for men.

Tickets are $1 stag or drag with an Associated Student card, and $1.50 stag or drag without an AS card. These can be obtained from any member of the Filipino Club, at the student bank in Smith Hall or at the door on the night of the dance.

Officers of the Filipino Club are Cipriano Ayalin, president; Bernie Zabala, vice president; Mely Seva, secretary; Beien Pena, treasurer; Paul Alvarad, sergeant-at-arms, and John Fawcett, faculty sponsor.

Council Must Weigh Carefully Question Of NSA Membership

STUDENT COUNCIL was recently honored with a visit by a representative of United States National Student Association (NSA) at which he displayed his group's wares and asked that the college consider joining NSA.

NSA, with 390 member colleges throughout the nation, offers benefits ranging from travel discounts to a bi-weekly press service, all for the nominal fee of $109 a year. But this brings to mind that nobody, but nobody, gives things away; something for nothing. We ask council to investigate NSA fully in considering membership in such a vast organization.

This group has been instrumental in pushing renewal of the GI Bill, and in helping Negro students battle the unsavory Southern atmosphere.

Its work has received much attention from legislators. Harrison A. Williams, senator from New Jersey, devoted a speech, entitled A Legislature For American Students, to the work of NSA.

These facts lend an air of an approaching political bloc. Many groups, in labor, religions, business and medicine have originally been formed to crusade for their respective common interests, and eventually become involved in politics by swinging into a party line.

The aforementioned issues, backed by NSA, have a direct bearing on students everywhere. This is no indication that all of its aims will be channeled by student interests.

We do not know if the group has a lobbyist in Washington, but senators seldom make speeches without a little prodding.

These characteristics of NSA should be weighed carefully before reaching any decision. This college is one of the leading two-year institutions in the nation, listed among the top ten. These facts, plus stepping up their membership to 391, will even more impress any politician.

It's a serious proposition to join the band wagon of any political group on the upswing. We ask council to think of the question in these terms—not in the light of discounts or fringe benefits.

Life Is A Real Rat Race

Animal Family Finds Employment

By Jo Ann Griffin

Rats find themselves in many situations which are in turn puzzling, vexing or annoying. One may find himself attempting to scramble out of a psychologist's maze, and another may be placed in a small container only to become suddenly weightless from a rocket's ascent.

Still another may cower in the research lab and hope not to be cut up or injected with some new miracle drug.

In addition to these working rats, there are the scared rats. These are the rodents that traditionally desert sinking ships, try to avoid cat's claws and instinctively avoid traps and little boys with BB guns.

Then there are the lucky rats who have nothing to worry about but the consternation that comes from such a name as Rattus norvegicus.

Such ones are those which last week found employment by being on display in the window of the third floor of Science Hall as a part of the regular spring semester series of science displays.

These displays are prepared by the nature study class (biology 40) under the supervision of Charles J. Stewart, biology instructor here.

Each Monday a new exhibit is prepared by a different team of students. The displays usually stress anything having to do with natural history and are educational.

The exhibits are explained by cards with notes written on them, by display of proper books or pages of books and other methods as the occasion directs.

As much living material as possible is used because of its general and educational interest, Stewart said. Already displayed this semester were a mother rat and 14 babies, two guinea pigs, ground squirrels, redwood and others.

The biology department has a large stock of animals used for science classes to study growth and the results of nutritional experimentation.

Gridder Yields To Lure Of Stage

Law Student-Turned-Actor Preps For Court Room Drama

By Anton Norris

College football players have often been stereotyped as big, bombastic individuals who see life through the blinder effect of a plastic face mask —not so Bernard "Scooter" Lemp, a man of many sides—actor, law student and mainstay of the Ram grid squad.

Appearing as a newspaper reporter in The Man Who Came To Dinner, currently having its run in the Little Theater here, Lemp combines his desire for acting with a business law curriculum. By planning ahead, he explains, "I will have a profession which I will like and which will give me enough of an income to work, in my spare time, at my hobby, acting."

In addition to his grid prowess, this same Lemp, who plans to be a lawyer and who enjoys drama, is also an all-around athlete.

At San Marion High School he excelled in track and basketball. It was there that he set a 6-feet 2¼-inch high jump record. A good record in track earned for him the nickname "Scooter."

While in high school Lemp won a scholarship to the University of Colorado, but after a semester in attendance there he decided to return to California. "I want to graduate from a California college," he explained.

Upon his return to California he enrolled here and became active in sports. He played for the Ram football team, and participated in the city golf tournament.

At the University of Colorado, Lemp became a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

On the stage Lemp's six-foot, 185-pound frame commands audience attention. His acting ability must be inherent when one considers that he has had no formal coaching in drama except for the lead role in Mister Roberts when it was staged at the University of Colorado.

Lemp's goal in business law is to become a good lawyer; his goal in acting is to become a good Shakespearan actor. The two ambitions might seem to be in conflict until one considers courtroom drama where the lawyer must, among many things, have a sense for the theatrical.

With so many activities Lemp has little free time, yet during the week he manages to run from six to 12 miles in "boots," in order "to keep myself in shape."

Such determination and ambition should leave Lemp with few qualms concerning his future. Most would become tired just contemplating a 12-mile jaunt.

CARRYING THE BALL, or in this case the book, is Scooter Lemp, taking a seasonal time out from football to appear in the Little Theater's production of The Man Who Came To Dinner.

Hui Maka Makans Seek To Extend Island Magic

Lovely people, island magic, warm Pacific winds, sandy beaches, inviting water, flower fragrances and the excitement of luaus and surf-boarding are all part of the heart of Hawaii, and Hawaiians at heart keep these memories alive wherever they go.

Naturally, when one of the Hawaiian students here last semester met another of his fellows, both felt more at ease. The two new friends sought out more and more Islanders and soon informal meetings sprang up.

Thirty students and one semester later, the group, wanting to be officially recognized, appealed to Florsita Badger, music instructor here who spent two years in exchange professorship at the University of Hawaii, to sponsor the Hui Maka Maka Club.

Immediately setting a goal toward which to work, the Makans found assurance that their group would stay together until that goal was achieved. President Alian Schoening explained that most Hawaiians must have a definite goal to accomplish.

Schoening, assisted by Melvin Makawie, vice president; Loretta Ching, secretary; Jackie Young, corresponding secretary, and Harold Nikata, treasurer, has outlined the plans for the present and future.

These call for a gradual expansion of the group to include anyone at the college having a bond with or interested in the little island state. As of now, service people who have been stationed there and other persons not born there, have joined the ranks of Hui Maka Maka.

After this expansion is achieved, the $5 semester dues that each member pays will go toward a luau (a super outdoor feast) as the main project of the semester. Lured on by this delicious attraction, the surfers promise more social gatherings are in the offing.

Through clubs such as the Hui Maka Maka it is guaranteed that the Hawaiian and Hawaiian-at-heart will always extend the island spirit and reveal their enthusiasm to people everywhere. As the Hawaiians say, "Aloha."

Editor, The Guardsman:

Your editorial on Lawrence Kubie (the "Socrates of Psychiatry") was most welcome. I say this notwithstanding your apparent misinterpretation of the doctor's plea. What Mr. Kubie, along with so many psychiatrists, psychologists, and intelligent people in general, wanted to stress was clearly not a curriculum cluttered with courses and fraught with Freudian bibles at the exclusion of the natural sciences.

He wished, in lieu of this, to emphasize the worldly notion that man cannot deal adequately with "things" unless he has first dealt adequately with "people" and "meaning." It is clearly not the concrete symbols of life which must be explored and

By Bob Pacini

LOVABLE and hateful, angels or demons, portraits of saintliness or pictures of devilishness —any one of these words, or all of them, can be applied to kids, especially the very young set.

Of course, those of us who were model children find it hard to see why members of the younger generation, such as nephews or cousins brothers or sisters, have to do things which simply are not de rigueur.

Here's what we mean.

A young couple is visiting you and they've brought along junior. You can just see the wicked "want to make trouble" look in his eyes. Against your better judgment you pick him up and everything goes all right for the first few minutes.

Then you turn pale as the mother says, "Oh, look, he's dripping his strawberry ice cream on your blue suit. Isn't that cute?" . . .

You smile weakly and think murderously to yourself, "Why, you dirty little . . . ."

Or take this situation. You've been shanghied into . . . that is, you're baby sitting. The kid is in bed and there's a heart-stopping horror picture on television.

The house is unusually quiet, and you're so engrossed in this horror epic you haven't heard the kid slip out of bed and silently creep up behind your chair.

You almost have a stroke when, as the deformed fiend in the film is about to strangle the mad scientist, the kid shatters the spooky silence with, "I want a glass of water!"

Another heart-stopping moment can occur if, attempting to jam some culture into one of the little demons, you drag one of them to a museum. He's utterly bored, of course, as you point out great works of art.

Suddenly, in the midst of a group of people admiring a modern opus, he blares out to the world, "I have to go to the bathroom!" You can feel the eyes of everyone as you lead him down the hall, third door on the left.

You say a little prayer of thanks, however, that he didn't phrase the news release in a more vivid manner.

And finally, it's a rainy Saturday afternoon and you're watching junior, trying to catch up on some home work. Because of the bad weather junior is forced to remain indoors and chooses to ride his bike up and down the hall, periodically giving out with a screech that would put an air raid siren to shame.

Then there's a terrific crash. He's fallen down the basement stairs! In a state of shock you run and find him unhurt at the top of the stairs pointing prideFully at his ruined bike in a heap at the bottom. You hug him and thank Heaven he's safe.

Then your mood turns to anger. How dare he scare you like that? "Don't you ever do that again," you tell him forcefully.

That's when he usually smiles his teeth into your leg.

Some people believe everything you tell them . . . if you whisper it.

San Mateo Falls 8-4; Padia, Lowpensky Spark Ram Win

By Jesse Gonzalez

Playing like a real conference contender, the Ram baseball team breezed by the San Mateo Bulldogs, 8-4, last Wednesday afternoon in San Mateo for its third straight conference win against no losses to hold the top spot in the Big Eight.

Randy Pace and Henry Padia combined pitching chores for the Red and White. However, Pace got a little erratic in the fourth inning when he pitched himself into danger and was lifted for Padia, who finished out the game.

Coach Lee Eisan was very pleased with the showing of his men against the Bulldogs, and especially praised Don Lowpensky for his fine play at first base. Lowpensky also contributed a triple to aid the cause for the locals.

Last week Eisan lost the services of two of the veterans he was counting on to bolster the Ram attack this season. Outfielders Paul DeMartini and Jack Tause both quit the team.

DeMartini, who batted .354 last year, was to be a key man for the Red and White nine. Tause saw limited action last year but was also looked upon as a big man for Eisan's forces.

Their places have been covered by a couple of newcomers, Eric Lyons and Ray Greggains. Lyons has been belting the ball hard for the Rams so far, and has hit one home run up to date.

Greggains has been getting his share of licks at the plate. A former Riordan ace, he should fit well into the outfield position because of his experience with the Crusaders.

With a number of wins under their belts, the team has gained the necessary confidence to make a good showing in the league this year.

Goels, Pirates, T-Birds On Tap For Diamondmen

St. Mary's baseball squad comes to town tomorrow to battle the Ram diamond squad in a game scheduled to start at 3 p.m. at Balboa Field.

According to the season schedule, the Rams face the Modesto Pirates in a Big Eight clash this Saturday, with the game, a double-header, to be played at Modesto. The Pirates, one of the stronger units in the Big Eight this season, figure to give the Rams a battle.

Next Tuesday the Rams travel to meet the Oakland Thunderbirds on the Bird field. The transbay rivalry between these teams promises to promote a good contest.

T-Bird Net Squad Battles Improved Ram Team Friday

Oakland's tennis team, weakened considerably by the loss of everyone from last year's championship aggregation, faces Coach Roy Diederichsen's netmen Friday at Oakland.

Hopes for a conference championship were brightened considerably on March 18 when the Rams upset powerful Stockton, 4-3.

The Mustangs were rated as favorites in this match after their close loss, 4-3, to Modesto the preceding week. Modesto was rated as the top team in the loop before the start of the season.

Vince Chinn, top man on the college's team, started the Rams on the win road by smashing his way to victory over Mustang ace Bob Harrison, 6-0, 8-6. Number two ranked Larry Draper overwhelmed Modestan Pat Yermen, 6-1, 6-2; while Gary Robinson, the number five ranked man on the Red and White unit, drubbed Davy Rogers, 8-6, 6-1, for the other Ram singles victory.

In the other singles matches Lynn Matteson was beaten by Dave Hinckley of Modesto, 6-3, 6-1; while Paul Barth, number three ranked on Coach Diederichsen's squad, bowed to Kaye Wen, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4.

The college's top doubles combination of Chinn and Draper clinched the win by defeating Harrison and Hinckley, 6-2, 6-2. Barth and Robinson fell before the Red and Blue duo of Won and Yarmen, 1-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Rams, Bear Cubs Tee Off April 1

Seeking revenge for a 11½-4½ pasting last year, the Ram golfers will try to put down the challenge of Santa Rosa Friday on the Harding links.

If the college is to improve last year's finish, it will have to overcome the Bear Cubs. However, this looms as an imposing problem with much improvement being shown by all squads this year.

The Rams are working from the handicap of having only one returning letterman in John Carlin. And they have been forced to take their lumps against last year's co-champion San Mateo, and a vastly improved Modesto by identical scores of 13½-1½ in their first two league frays.

Against the Bulldogs, the local linkers turned in good golf. But it was to little avail as one of the strongest teams in the Big Eight was enjoying an equally fine day.

Points for the Rams have been garnered by the same two men in both matches. Carlin picked up one against Modesto and one-half against San Mateo. Sandy Loube's one and one-half were scored just oppositely.

Schwarz Coaches Junior Varsity To Successful Season

Following in the footsteps of their bigger brothers, Coach Alex Schwarz's junior varsity basketball squad recently finished out their season with an impressive ten-win, five-loss record.

Playing the preliminary tilts to all of the Ram home games, Schwarz pitted his men against practically all of the San Francisco high schools.

Only losses to the baby Rams were two to Hamilton Field, one each to Lowell and Lincoln high schools and the San Francisco Theological Seminary.

Schwarz stated that he gave up officiating basketball games to devote full time to prepare these men for varsity competition.

"Actually," he said, "it's all in fun for the kids. They enjoyed it tremendously. Because there wasn't enough backing of the JV squad," Schwarz continued, "we were only able to schedule 15 games this past season."

Talent looks promising for the varsity next year in the persons of forward Vince Courtney and center Al Richardson, the latter high point man and rebounder. Schwarz labeled this duo good varsity material.

The other three starters, Harvey Briscoe, Bob Posey and Pete Roddy are steady floormen and should be in there fighting for a berth for Coach Sid Phelan come next season.

Next year looks equally promising for the JV's as they hope to play about a 22 to 24-game schedule. A few of the other Bay Area colleges are beginning to form JV squads, which will mean more games for the Rams. Also they will do a little traveling to different towns.

Wearing cast-off varsity uniforms, the team was composed of only 11 men last season, but Schwarz stated, "Next year we intend to have 15 inexpensive new uniforms whereby we will be able to field three teams."

Block SF Cagers Take Early Lead In Mural Action

The Block SF, true to past form, took an early lead last week in intramural play, when the Blockmen downed the Retail Floristry in an easy forfeit win and in their next contest swamped down upon the Pachyderms by a score of 57-20.

Other action in the Independent league saw the Recreation Association slaughter the Filipino Club 70-26, the Guardsmen down an easy victory by forfeit over a club of forgetful elephants known as the Pachyderms, and the Newman Club go over the Lyons 51-35.

On March 17, in the second round of mural play, the Hotel and Restaurant Association fell at the hands of the Invaders 60-10. Briscoe of the Invaders was not to be stopped by the cooks as he racked up 24 points.

The Ringers and the Recreation Association battled it out, with the Ringers barely edging the Recreation club, 36-35. The Filipino Club, in a hard-fought game, downed the Newman Club by a tally of 43-35.

The other co-league, the Inter-Fraternity loop, saw Gamma Phi Ypsilon trample Alpha Sigma Delta 50-24, while Alpha Phi Epsilon bagged a victory in a close game with Phi Beta Delta, 39-36.

Zeta Phi Sigma with a powerful offense hammered Alpha Kappa Rho, 53-29. The final game on March 16 saw Beta Tau fall to Tau Chi Sigma, 29-22.

In the Independent corner, tomorrow will see the Block SF vs. the Hotel and Restaurant Association, the Lyons meeting the Invaders, the Pachyderms vs. Retail Floristry, and a battle between the Newman Club and the Ringers.

In the Independent league next Tuesday, April 5, the Ringers will be pitted against the Invaders, the Retail Floristry Club against the Hotel and Restaurant Association, which should prove to be a meeting of the garden and the kitchen, the Block SF will play the Lyons, and finally, The Guardsman, otherwise known as the "mighty mites," will go against the Filipino Club.

Tonight's play will decide who will take the lead in the Inter-Fraternity league with Alpha Kappa Rho meeting Phi Beta Delta, Zeta Phi Sigma vs. Tau Chi Sigma, Alpha Phi Epsilon vs. Gamma Phi Ypsilon and, finally, Alpha Sigma Delta against Beta Tau.

Tracksters Face Potent Cal Frosh, T-Bird Aggregations In Threeway Meet Saturday

By Doug Cathcart

Spearheaded by a much stronger and better balanced unit than last season, the Red and White track squad will meet the University of California Frosh and Oakland at the Cal stomping grounds this Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

The Cal Frosh are considerably stronger than they have been in the past, but the Rams are also a much more potent team this season.

The important results of the meet, however, will be how the locals stand up against Oakland, a member of the Big Eight Conference.

If successful, the result will contribute toward the squad's standing in the Big Eight, and the concensus is that the meet will be a close one but that the Red and White will probably emerge victorious.

If the Rams do as well in the UC-Oakland meet as they did in the Big Eight Conference Relays on March 19 there will be no doubt as to who will win.

In that meet the Red and White was, both in points and all-around ability, the best team fielded. They racked up 54 tallies to place first, with Sacramento and Oakland tied for second with 41 apiece. Coming in a close third with 39 was Modesto.

The locals placed first in four of 13 events including the two-mile relay, Tom Jennings, Tony Vance, Frank James and Ray Batz, in which a new college record was set.

Also capturing first place berths were Lon Colbert in the 100-yard dash, who turned in a 10.1 clocking; the shuttle hurdles team of Len Mentzer, Ed Molise, James Bush and Bob Taylor, and the distance medley team composed of James, Batz, Vance and Alex Jenkins, one of the Jenkins twins.

When the Ram head track coach, Lou Vasquez, was asked how he felt the Big Eight Conference stacks up against last year's, he intimated that he believes it is by no means stronger than in the past. He added, however, that he felt that it is a more evenly balanced conference this season.

Batsmen Swamp San Mateans As Track Squad Loses

Over the weekend the Ram baseballers swamped the San Mateo Bulldogs, 18-2, while the local tracksters won a three-way meet in Modesto.

Although the Red and White track men won the three-way meet, they lost in dual competition to Modesto by a score of 59-54. The powerful Pirates also dumped Contra Costa, 87-15.

Contra Costa fell to the Rams, 90-16. Jess Sirles and Ray Batz were the outstanding men of the Ram squad with both chalking up two wins. Batz was victorious in the mile and two-mile runs.

Sirles with a leap of 23'2" led in the broad jump, and a leap of six feet gave him a win in the high jump.

Modesto with this meet under their belt has swept into the lead of the Big Eight Conference.

In capturing their fourth consecutive win in as many contests, the Ram baseballers turned on the steam against the San Mateo Bulldogs.

The Rams had a little trouble earlier in the week downing the San Mateans, 8-4, in San Mateo, but Friday it was a different story as the keyed-up Red and Whites pounded out 16 hits off three Bulldog hurlers.

Don Lowpensky notched his second league win of the young season by allowing the opposition only four scattered hits.

Highlights of the victory were home runs by Mel Canavero and Bob Lane. Bill Flanagan, playing left field instead of his usual pitching role, contributed a bases-loaded triple to the cause.

Jenkins Brothers—A Tale Of Twin Track Terrors

Rivalry Marks Speedsters' Careers

By Bob O'Lear

For an athlete it's hard enough to be beaten by the same rival often. But think how this is amplified when the opponent is your brother. Then go one step further—how even more difficult when he is your identical twin.

This then sets the stage for the tale of Alex and Ellis Jenkins. Both are presently members of the Ram track squad and in their sophomore year.

The story of their track careers is one containing, simultaneously, hard work, frustration, rivalry, despair and victory.

Gifted with natural running ability, Alex showed a great deal of potential at the outset back in 1953 as a seventh grader at Benjamin Franklin Junior High. In this, his first year of competition, he took third place in the All-City 75-yd. dash. At the same time he was a member of the 90's winning relay team.

Though a productive and rewarding year for Alex, it was a frustrating and disheartening introduction to track for Ellis, who was unable even to qualify for the team.

When their parents moved the next year, a change of schools was necessitated by the different school district. So as an eighth grader at Roosevelt Junior High Alex continued to improve, winning the All-City 50-yd. dash. But the previous season had so discouraged Ellis he did not come out for the team, and even considered giving up the sport completely.

"It was pretty hard. I was always being teased for being a slow-poke while my brother was fast." Ellis stated the teasing made going out for track that much more of a problem.

But the ninth grade at Benjamin Franklin had more in store for Ellis than the previous disappointments. While still unable to beat his older brother (Alex is 30 minutes older), his own development began.

Polytechnic High was the next school to have the Jenkins win races for it. Running in separate events in the All-City as 120's had an excellent effect on Ellis, as he won his first championship in the 100-yd. dash. In the meantime, he picked up high jumping enough to place third. Alex was enjoying his usual success, being barely nosed out for first in the 220-yd. dash.

In 1957 Ellis continued to gain stature as a sprinter when he broke the city 130's 75-yd. dash record at 7.9. Alex moved up to the varsity where he garnered two seconds in the 100 and 220.

Able to win races with increasing frequency, Ellis still hadn't realized his greatest ambition—to beat Alex just once ("once would be plenty").

Therefore, 1958 stands out in both brothers' memories, but probably even more so for Ellis. For this was to be the year of consummation for Ellis, the "slow-poke" who had always been teased about his fast brother.

"It felt great. I hardly believed it when we reached the tape and I was first," Ellis remembers with a wide grin the day he defeated his brother.

But the old jinx returned in the last three meets. Alex was able to place second in the 100 and 220 again in the All-City finals, but Ellis had to settle for third and fourth in the same events.

Last year here, Ellis was again able to win in early-season meets, only to have Alex win the last two while placing fourth in the Sectional championships.

Even away from track there is still little difference between the 19-year-olds, they'll be 20 the 15th of April. They both support around a 2.0 average, while sharing a mutual dislike for English composition.

Alex aspires to be an elementary school teacher, possibly specializing in work with the mentally retarded. "I worked at a camp for the mentally retarded last summer and found it both stimulating and rewarding," Alex commented. Ellis intends to become a social worker.

If you must know how to tell them apart, here is the answer. On Alex's left cheek, you'll find a mole. Ellis has no mole, but his distinguishing feature is a birthmark on his neck.

Students Benefit As AGS Members Serve As Coaches

Approximately three students apply each day to take advantage of the annual Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society coaching program for the benefit of students needing tutoring. The program is under the direction of William G. Richardson, faculty adviser.

Available through this program is coaching of a wide variety of subjects, including science and language. At present about ten coaches are active while there is a backlog of 35 who have not been called to coach their particular specialty.

Both members and non-members of the honor society who are proficient in any subject may become coaches. This is because while a student may be weak enough in one or several subjects to bar him from membership in AGS he may be exceptional in another, Richardson said.

Especially needed at present is anyone able to coach mathematics, English grammar, chemistry and physics. Rates are $1.50 per hour and services may be extended to include grade school and high school students, Richardson added.

Some students eligible for membership in the society have not yet joined, although thus far 94 have signed up. Dues are $1 per semester and there is no initiation. Those eligible are urged to join for transfer reasons.

As the purpose of AGS is scholarship, the only requirements are that candidates must have carried at least 12 units for the Fall 1959 semester, and maintained a B average with no final grade lower than C.

Grade points should equal 42 for 12, 13 or 14 units, 45 with 15 units, 48 with 16 and 51 with 17.

These are determined on the basis of four points for each unit of A, three for each unit of B, two for C, one for D, and none for F.

Information on personal eligibility standings, coaching, meetings or other aspects of AGS can be obtained from Richardson in S-143G.

Officers of the honor society include education major Jean Toso, president; Clinton Derry, majoring in electrical engineering, vice president, and social science major Peter Pedrotti, secretary.

Members of the society are David Aldrich, Vicky Aumann, Mario Barrios, Donna Bean, Mary Blair, David Borrelli, Helen Borrone, Linda Briggs, Evelyn Brown, Ronald Bunker, James Bush, Frances Carlson, Beverly Chaney, Harry Cordellos, Thomas Craighead, Catherine Daskalakis.

Clinton Derry, Cennaro Dispa, Robert Edwards, Eleanor Everall, Nicolai Favstritsky, Robert Fishman, Pamela Gardella, Ravdall Farrison, Joyce Gill, Charlene Glidden, Walter Guest, Waldemar Gustavson.

Rosemarie Haas, Katherine Hall, David Hettigi, Dennis Hill, Jack Hom, Ralph Howell, Virginia Hyde, Linda Jaillite, Norma Jerry, Tom Kassis, Arthur Katzer, Jerome Kenney, Peter Koch, Sandra Kramer, Kuamme Gordon, William Lee, Reuben Levy, Sharon Light, Gladys Low, Gilbert Lum.

Race Film Plays C-Hour

As part of the regular college film series, The American Cup Races will be shown in S-136 this Friday during College Hour.

Several outstanding films are slated for showing in the near future, Madison Devlin, audio-visual director here, announced recently. Among the pictures scheduled are Western Wonderland, Miracle Bridge Over Mackinac, Gateway To Playgrounds and Jeep Frolic.

Dinner Comedy Wins Raves

By Alex Sokoloff

Packed houses greeted the Little Theater's laugh-a-minute presentation of The Man Who Came To Dinner last Friday and Saturday.

Michael Griffin, drama director, stated that the play has so far been shown to extremely appreciative audiences, and that the actors are becoming more adept with each performance.

He labels last weekend's presentations "almost perfect" and the response to them "the most enthusiastic yet to be received" for a play here.

So popular is the show that a request has been received by the Little Theater to give a showing of The Man Who Came To Dinner at Letterman Army Hospital.

If present plans materialize, the cast will visit the hospital sometime in April, although the performance will have to be given without the benefit of a set.

The last college production to go on the road was Inherit The Wind, which was well received at Balboa High School.

Man Who Came To Dinner To Bow Out April 9

Four more performances of the Little Theater's presentation of The Man Who Came to Dinner are left in the play's run.

Performances are given on Fridays and Saturdays 8 p.m. at the Little Theater. Final showings of the play will be given on April 8 and 9.

Michael Griffin, drama director, states that judging from the audience reactions to past performances, the comedy is certainly one of the most successful to be presented here.

At present, rehearsals are in progress for a special feature. Three one-act plays will be put on by the theaplans during three separate College Hours this semester at the Little Theater.

Griffin feels that these plays will be welcomed enthusiastically by students and faculty members. The plays to be presented are The Corner, Auto De Fe, and The Lovers.

Casting is already in progress for the drama department's next production. Final selection of the vehicle has not yet been made.

Among those suggested by the drama majors are Dear Brutus, Time Limit and Strange Interlude. The Little Theater players want to get away from comedies for a while, since they have staged three of them in a row.

Students who are not majoring in drama are, nonetheless, eligible for tryouts for a part.

Griffin stated that his actors have done such good work recently that 11 of them will be invited to try for memberships in Delta Psi Omega, national dramatics honor society.

Tryouts for membership will be held on Wednesday evening, April 13, at the Little Theater, Griffin said.

Each candidate will present a scene from a play, and Griffin will judge the acting. At present, the drama department has two members of Delta Psi Omega, Jordy Cooney and Maureen Rogers.

Council Presents Trophy To Coach, Championship Team

By Paul Piansky

Tie bars, trinkets, charms, key chains, pins and brooches were brought glimmering into the limelight at Student Council last week climaxed by presentation of the championship basketball trophy, the brightest and most meaningful metallic symbol, to Coach Sid Phelan and starting forward Dennis Bates.

Council and cabinet members weighed the pros and cons of various crests, stripes and ornaments for Student Council pins presented by Earle P. Balin, a representative from the trophy-emblem and service award division of Granat Bros., jewelers.

Balin said that basic samples should be ready this week at which time he and Associated Student officers Wally Hayes, Margi Hill and Bud Andress would present the most appropriate ones to council for a vote.

Upon accepting the championship trophy from Hayes, Phelan expressed his gratitude for AS support which the team had received this season, and added, "This year's team has been the finest that I have ever had the privilege of coaching here." Bates, also acting as Athletic Commissioner in council, posed with Phelan for news shots.

Faye Fountain, finance chairman, then brought up a suggestion, disclosing that its originator was Phelan. It was that the Student Council minutes should be distributed to faculty members in order to promote better student-faculty relations.

The important finance committee headed by Miss Fountain has not completed the stencils for all the budgets as yet, but Miss Fountain gave praise to Bob Ross, Shirley Clayton and two other cabinet members for their help, and she said the budgets should go "on the line" next week.

Other reports disclosed the following: State Information Chairman Bud Andress announced that the state information booklet should be in the finishing stages this week, and Elections Commissioner Gerald Kueserka said that he has obtained the voting machines for the coming AS elections on May 16 and 17. Kueserka stated that these machines are free of charge for use here.

Horticulture Library Grows

Ornamental horticulture students have improved the library in their building by adding 300 new volumes to its shelves and by reorganizing the old materials.

Harry E. Nelson, instructor in ornamental horticulture, disclosed that the library has been set up according to the Dewey Decimal System of classification, and the number of volumes in the library has been increased by more than 300.

Some of the new books were donated to the department, and others were bought with the students' prize money.

Besides the reorganizing of the library, the students have been conducting experiments near the gymnasiums to determine the best methods of growing grass. They have also been planting shrubs around the rest of the campus.

Wedding Bells

ASSOCIATED STUDENT President Wally Hayaa waa married to Pamela Panetto last Saturday in a 1 o'clock ceremony at the Saint Agnes Church, Masonic and Page Streets.

At Student Council meeting last Tuesday Hayaa formally invited all council and cabinet members to the wedding and also to the reception, which was held at 3255 Balboa Street.

22 Colleges Attend IRC World Affairs Conference May 21

Following tradition established by the International Relations Club, Joseph M. Jacobsen, foreign student adviser here, stated that the annual World Affairs Conference will take place in Smith Hall Saturday, May 21, at 9 a.m.

The purpose in planning a World Affairs Conference, Jacobsen commented, is to give students from different colleges an opportunity to exchange views and to experience discussion of European problems with students from the countries involved, and with experts on the subject.

Each delegate from the 22 colleges attending will participate in two discussion topics of his choice. European students and resource persons familiar with the topics will be assigned to each seminar group in the discussions.

Delegates from colleges attending the conference will act as individuals rather than as delegates representing a specific country, Jacobsen said, and a president will not be elected. There will be no voting during the general assembly, but voting by delegates will take place during the actual committee discussions on the topics.

Students are invited to attend the conference, and there will be no registration fee. Further information in regard to the conference is available in S-186.

H&R Instructors To Judge Contest

The college's hotel and restaurant department was honored recently when the National Restaurant Association invited Lawrence B. Wong, director of hotel and restaurant placement, and Pierre Coste, chef instructor, to select the 20 best sandwich recipes in this year's national sandwich contest.

An annual affair, more than 300 entries were submitted from all parts of the country. Five winners will be selected from the 20 best recipes chosen by Wong and Coste.

Prizes range from a $5000 European trip, to television sets and household appliances.

Cornell University and the University of Denver have been accorded this honor in the past.

Ram's Horn: Writer Comments On Kubie

changed for man's benefit, but the underlying and often hidden "meanings" of these symbols.

Obviously, in order to clarify these "meanings" we must go to their source—man—and to do this we must first break through the dreamlike symbolic disguises of the self and then proceed to the difficult business of analyzing the core of this "self."

In other words, Mr. Kubie feels that although we've made tremendous progress in the natural sciences, we've entirely neglected man's most important product — himself. Therefore, he would not want to decrease the natural sciences but increase the social sciences; for, it is an unwritten axiom of life that man cannot understand the world which lies outside of himself without concurrently understanding himself.

Unless man is in a position to properly evaluate the many (and sometimes dangerous) things he has created, wars will continue and the Darwinian struggle for survival will find its last justification in a mushroom cloud of inadequate answers to unasked questions. And what of man's blatant enemy—anxiety?

Will it ever be conquered by an educational system which stresses things instead of people? The Good Life can certainly not be equated with the ulcerous existence of modern man who is more than ever beset by a psychological malaise of "meaninglessness." Indeed, Mr. Kubie feels that "knowing thyself" is a necessary condition for the Good Life.

Mr. Kubie never tires of telling us that things are not important; it is our attitude toward things that is important and our attitudes should be tempered with the kind of knowledge that only self-exploration can provide. It is time to take note of what philosophers have been saying for centuries: "Know Thyself." We must be made to realize that man views "all external realities through a cloud of distorting projections of his own unconscious problems."

Man is the only animal who can laugh and yet the only one who continually cries and, as Mark Twain said, he's the only one "who blushes —or needs to." But the happy man is the well-adjusted man—the individual who has studied himself as pervasively as he has studied a complex calculus problem. He isn't happy because he has no problems, but merely because he has the capacity to solve his problems.

Unless Dr. Kubie's proposals are taken more seriously by more people (especially educators) man will continue in his same psychological rut armed with paint, clay, and atomic bombs — none of which he understands. Again I must congratulate Mr. Clifford for bringing Dr. Kubie's appeal to this student body. Mr. Clifford has no doubt recognized the great challenge implicit in Kubie's statements; it is a challenge to humanity to face up to its utter failure in understanding itself.

More meaningful as each day passes is this quote from one of Kubie's lectures: "Without self-knowledge in depth, the master of any field will be a child in human wisdom."

Discussion Group Debates Current News At Meeting

SIGMA TAU SIGMA, in conjunction with a political discussion group here, will debate current events during College Hours this semester in C-219.

This organization, with a history as a social science honor society, is attempting to stimulate student awareness and action in regard to problems confronting society.

The Sigma Tau Sigma discussions are open to everyone, although official membership in the society is restricted to those with a "B" average in the social sciences.

Don Rainman is the group's president, Norman Worth, vice president; Jenny Milberg, secretary; Robert Edwards, Club Activities Board representative, and Robert Johnson is the faculty adviser.

The Associated Women Students highlighted their first midterm meeting last Friday with a fashion show featuring summer wear from Liebes. Models were Bonnie Shoenfeld, Carol Hinkson and Juanita Shaffer.

Alpha Phi Omega swore in nine pledges at a recent smoker. They are Robert Perkins, Kymand Gee, Roger Labataille, Louis Rossi, Wayne Martinez, Bill Keener, Bob Yeary, Norman van Herrick, Hoyt Scott, Fred Martinez, Merrill Chessen and Den Lee.

Inadvertently omitted from the fraternity's list of officers published two weeks ago was Sanford Saiki, sergeant-at-arms.

The Forum Club, which meets every College Hour during the Spring semester only in S-257, welcomes anyone who is interested in reading or writing material for Forum magazine. Manuscripts should be turned in to Catherine Connolly, sponsor of the organization, in C-331A, or to any member of the Forum Club.

Force Issues Over 800 Citations In 522 Hours Of Duty

After 522 hours of duty, the Campus Police force has issued more than 842 citations to students on campus, according to Richard Wernecke, chief of the Campus Police.

Wernecke added that cars parking in Cloud Circle without a faculty permit will be given a citation.

Jim Olson, captain of the pistol teams, released the names of the campus policemen who have qualified as members of the pistol squads.

Qualifying for the Sharpshooter team No. 1 are Ralph Brown, Richard Gamble, John Kennedy and Olson. The Marksman team No. 2 includes Frank Mateo, Larry Miles, John Murphy and Wernecke, while the Marksmen team No. 3 is composed of Reno Angiolini, Lou Birleffi, Ed Sarsfield and Richard Stump.

Olson added that these team assignments are only tentative, but that at least two teams will enter in the competition on Sunday, April 3, in the Oakland Pistol Club matches. Other scheduled dates for the pistol teams are Sunday, May 1; Friday, June 3; Saturday, June 4, and Sunday, June 5.

Three Major Activities Highlight 25th Anniversary

Civic Leaders To Visit Open House Here, April 26

Under the auspices of students and faculty members, the college will present its 25th anniversary Open House, scheduled for Tuesday night, April 26, as part of San Francisco's annual Public Schools Week.

Stressing the purpose of the Open House, Judy Day, publicity committee chairman, stated that the event is given in order to let the parents and the general public see the facilities that are available to college students.

Guests of the college will tour the various special departments, including graphic arts, engineering, science laboratories and clerical divisions, between the hours of 7:30 to 11 p.m.

During this time student discussion groups will be in progress, while drama students will present a short play in the Little Theater.

Mayor George Christopher and various other officials at City Hall are expected to attend, while approximately 3000 formal invitations have been sent to college alumni, Masonic organizations, service groups, Parent-Teachers Associations in the junior and senior high schools and the parents of the 1500 freshmen here.

The committee was organized to prepare for the Open House. The three students who volunteered for this committee included John Azzaro, Marilyn Santos and Stevie Tissier.

Posters for the event will be handled by the Publicity Committee, Miss Day added, with the help of William Eckert, art department instructor.

College Singers Attend Festival

Heading for Modesto this Friday, college folk singers and the Men's Glee Club will participate in the annual Northern California Junior College Music Educators Association small vocal group and solo festival.

Not a competition, the purpose of this festival is to demonstrate what is being done in music departments of Northern California two-year colleges.

The Men's Glee Club will present selections from the Bach Chorale, and Soldiers' Chorus from the opera Faust. The folk singers, in their first appearance at the festival, will sing five opera choruses, Robert Morton, choir director here, said.

The two soloists from this college, under the direction of Fiossita Badger, music instructor, are Sandra Belcher, who will sing an aria from Gianni Schicchi, and Glen Angus, who will present an aria by Scarlotti.

Mayor Speaks To NCJCIA Convention Here April 30

A task force of 500 members of the Northern California Junior College Instructors Association will convene here on Saturday, April 30, in their annual convention, with City College acting as host in observance of its Silver Anniversary.

In an interview last week, Dr. Lloyd Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction here, disclosed the highlight of the convention's stay at the college will be a speech given by Mayor George Christopher.

Christopher's address to the convention will center around the impressions he received on his recently concluded trip through the Soviet Union.

The morning of the convention day will be devoted to opening ceremonies and discussions. Following the morning session the delegates will attend a luncheon, after which they will again return to the business of the convention in afternoon section meetings.

Spring Fever Dance Friday Slated For SF Rowing Club

Spring Fever will climax the surging fervor of Pledge Week. The semi-formal dance will be held this Friday at the San Francisco Rowing Club, 504 Jefferson Street, from 9 p.m. until midnight, Garry Torres, president of the sponsoring Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity, disclosed today.

Steve Paul's orchestra will provide the musical notes for the annual event, and only couples will be admitted for $2.50 a ticket. Proper attire for the occasion, Torres stated, will be suits for men and cocktail dresses for women.

The Rowing Club has three separate sections providing the dancers with "plenty of leg room," Torres added, and each of these rooms will be gaily decorated in the Spring Fever mood.

There will be access to an open air patio overlooking the Bay, and parking problems will be eliminated by reservation of an entire lot for automobiles.

"A large crowd is expected to end the multitude of Pledge Week activities," Torres said, "and I hope for a successful evening to prove that fraternities do have worthwhile projects. Their reputations have been marred unjustly."

Tickets may be purchased from any member of the fraternity, from the college's bank, or at the exit in the cafeteria all this week.

Bank Of America Award Winner

WINNERS OF THE Bank of America Junior College Business Awards received official notification from Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction, last week. Receiving congratulations from Luckmann is secretary major Mary Didenko, who with the other winner, Alan Wong, will receive a cash award worth $100 plus a certificate of recognition at a business awards banquet later this month.

Miss Didenko, an honor student and a graduate of Lowell High School, is in her last semester at the college. She has been activa in campus affairs, holding the positions of secretary of the International Relations Club and Alpha Gamma Sigma, the honor society.

YOU'LL BE SEEING PLENTY of this Silver Anniversary poster which will soon adorn the city's street cars and buses. The poster, currently being prepared by advertising arts students here, will publicize the Alumni Association's reunion. Wide Variety Of Activities On Tap For Friday's C-Hour

Topics ranging from super-salesmanship to civic unity in San Francisco are slated to highlight this Friday's College Hour, 10-10:40 a.m.

Frank Quinn, director of the Council For Civic Unity of San Francisco, will address Sigma Tau Sigma fraternity, composed mainly of social science majors, as part of the Student-Faculty Lecture Series. The event, announced by Irving M. Witt, social science instructor here, will be held in S-100.

Quinn, a longtime San Franciscan, is a graduate of Lowell High School and the University of California.

Meanwhile, Ray Taber of Coca-Cola Company will speak to business students on the benefits of salesmanship as a career. Taber, a veteran of 12 years with Coke, will emphasize the relationships of sales to the other departments of a large scale organization. The talk will take place in C-104 and C-105.

Taber believes that there are varied and wide opportunities for selling and participating in the business activities of the country or world. He is on record as saying that "everyone must be a salesman, whether he likes it or not."

Simultaneously, Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society will hear from Allan W. Johnson, associate dean of students at San Francisco State College, discussing the advantages State holds for the student.

William Richardson, faculty sponsor of the society, asserted that everyone, member and non-member alike, is invited to attend the lecture.

The college film series rolls on in a colorful note as This Is Color and Water Colors hit the screen. Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids director, programmed the event with the graphic arts student in mind.

This Is Color is a technical film on the physics of color—what it is, and its uses in printing and the graphic arts.

Water Colors shows the processes of water coloring in the production of plates for Ford Times magazine.

Next Friday's film series will explore Las Vegas with the showing of Western Wonderland. The Hearst Castle At San Simeon, a tour through the fabulous castle of the late William Randolph Hearst, will round out the April 13 series.

Ad Art Students Prepare Alumni Reunion Posters

Posters are currently being prepared by advertising art students here to publicize the Silver Anniversary reunion of the City College Alumni Association.

The dinner-dance reunion is scheduled for Saturday, April 30, at the Village, located at Columbus Avenue and Lombard Street.

Reservations are $4.50 per person. Interested students over 21 may obtain reservation forms at the dean of men's office in S-148.

The affair will begin at 6:30 p.m. with a cocktail-social gathering. Dinner is scheduled for 8:30 p.m., after which dancing to the music of Dick Reinhart and his orchestra will last until 1 a.m.

Posters announcing the event will be carried on buses and street cars throughout the city. George Ho, an advertising art student, designed the posters under the supervision of art instructor William J. Eckert.

Vince Breedlove transferred the original design to a silk screen and is in charge of production. Members of two fraternities, Alpha Phi Omega and Alpha Phi Epsilon, volunteered their service to produce the three-color posters in silk screen.

Space for the posters is being donated by Fielder, Sorensen and Davis Advertising.

Officers of the Alumni Association are Doug Smith, president; George de Urioste, vice president; Pete Chevrier, treasurer, and Pat Smith, secretary.

Contests To Start Soon For Campus Beauty And Beast

Searching for the campus beast, Alphi Phi Omega's Ugly Man On Campus contest gets under way Monday, April 18, while, searching for the campus beauty, the women's physical education department screens candidates to select a Silver Anniversary Queen to represent the college in the eighth annual Photo Festival at Sigmund Stern Grove May 22.

The voting for the Ugly Man will run through April 22 with each candidate allotted a large receptacle for penny ballots. These "ugly banks," bearing a photo of the respective contestant, will be placed at central points on campus. Proceeds from the contest will go toward the fraternity's scholarship fund.

Potential Ugly Men will be allowed to wear costumes and makeup to enhance their natural unsightliness, Rich Trauner, Alpha Phi Omega president, emphasized.

All coeds are eligible to enter the queen contest. The screening of candidates will end on April 29. Final judging will be conducted by a battery of Bay Area photographers.

"Miss Silver Anniversary" will appear at the Photo Festival along with a display of photo work by the college's photography department.

The event will include displays by top-ranking professional and amateur cameramen.

Students Dropping Class Must File Form Today

Students intending to drop a course must do so by 5 p.m. today, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, who also said that students should see their counselors in order to obtain the required forms and signatures before filing the petition for dropping in the registrar's office.

One week from today, April 13, will be the last day of classes before the beginning of Easter vacation. Students here will have both Thursday and Friday of next week off. Classes will resume Monday, April 18.

Next issue of The Guardsman is Wednesday, April 27.

Horticulture Department Enters Exhibit In Garden Show April 15

The annual Oakland Spring Garden Show, in which the Horticulture Department again will participate, opens on Friday, April 15, at the Oakland Exposition Building, 12th and Fallon Streets, Harry E. Nelson, horticulture instructor here, disclosed today.

As the theme of the show, From Kew To Kyoto, indicates, the main features of the show are an English and a Japanese garden united by a bridge symbolizing friendship of East and West.

The college's entry will be a landscaping arrangement for a pool-side patio, designed by Jim Brown and Alex Woolworth, horticulture students. An overhead shelter, ground covers, shrubs and a few trees, plus garden furniture, complete the design.

The first, second and third place winners will be presented with monetary prizes. The Horticulture Society here has managed to carry off a prize each year. If this year proves no exception, the award money received will be spent for a barbecue party to be given for approximately 100 Balboa High School students studying horticulture here.

The Oakland Spring Garden Show is an annual event, sponsored by the First Agricultural District of the State of California and is open for participation to nurseries and horticulture societies in Alameda County as well as those in adjoining San Mateo, San Francisco and Contra Costa Counties.

The admission to the show is $1.50. Pre-sale tickets are priced at 75 cents each, but Nelson said that he is not certain whether he will be receiving half-price tickets this year.

Librarian Unearths New Dead Sea Scroll Secret

Lure Of Writings Leads To '59 Find

Fearing an oncoming invasion by the Roman Army in 68 A.D., Jewish monks hid certain manuscripts and book rolls in cases near their monastery or community house located in an area known as the Wadi Qumran.

These writings, when found centuries later in 1947, came to be known as the Dead Sea Scrolls because of their geographical proximity to the Dead Sea, and they are now recognized as having been the "library" of the Qumran community.

The story of the library at Qumran has an association with the college's library, for the catalogue librarian, here, Katharine Greenleaf Pedley, has contributed to the lore of the scrolls through her discovery of what might be the very room in the monastery where the mysterious scrolls were written.

From the time of the first publication of the lost works she read about them constantly, gaining interest as she proceeded. In 1958, after 12 years at the college, she was granted a schoiarship to the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, Massachusetts, to study the scrolls during a summer session.

SEATED AT HER DESK in the catalogue room of the library is Katharine Greenleaf Pedley, catalogue librarian here, who has done much research and has written a thesis concerning the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Simultaneously in 1958 she acquired the position of librarian at the American Dependent School in Heidelberg, Germany. Mrs. Pedley applied for the position for a two-fold reason.

First of all she wanted to visit Europe again, her last trip having been in the summer of 1953. Secondly, she considered this a fine opportunity to visit Jerusalem and be able to increase still further her knowledge about the scrolls.

She remained at Heidelberg for a year. During her stay in Europe her ambition to visit the caves where the works were buried and to inspect the scrolls themselves was fulfilled.

Over the Easter holidays of 1959, Mrs. Pedley climbed aboard a plane heading for Jerusalem, and began "one of the most exciting experiences of my life." At her destination she took pictures of the building believed to be the origin of the scrolls, particularly the room which she believed to be the "library."

"One interesting fact was that archeologists found a basin in which some believe the monks washed their hands before writing the name of God," Mrs. Pedley said.

"Although this could be true, I believe that anyone working with books and ink will frequently wash their hands so they won't smudge the pages."

The climax to this unusual and adventurous story of a person who followed her ideas and ambitions through, is the fact that recognition was granted Mrs. Pedley by the publication of an article in which she states her theories concerning the origin of the scrolls.

The article, Library At Qumran, was published in Revue De Qumran, a French magazine which is devoted exclusively to material concerning the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Before Mrs. Pedley Came to the college in 1946 she worked for four years at Samuel Gompers Trade School as librarian. Before that she worked for one year with the State Department of Social Welfare at Sacramento.

AS Card Sales, Not Tax Money Must Promote Activities Here

ASSOCIATED STUDENT cards are selling like stock in the Edsel automotive works. All budgets have been watered down in a campus austerity move, and plans for a second card sales campaign will soon be unveiled.

And it seems that ours is not the only campus facing a revenue problem. At the recent Northern Region Conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association the college council members heard similar pecuniary sob stories from their peers at other campuses. At the conference the council learned new methods of skyrocketing the sale of AS cards. But to learn is not necessarily to believe—and we hope they didn't.

One of the ideas advanced at the confab was the limiting of library facilities to card holders. We hope such a recommendation fell on deaf council ears.

The library is open to all students—Associated Student card holder or not. Learning has never been considered an extra-curricular activity. The library is not supported by AS funds; it's paid for by the city's taxes, and as far as the city is concerned a non-card holder's money is as green as a card holder's . . . we certainly hope this proposed squeeze play never takes place here.

Another project spoken of at the meet was the building of a Student Union for AS members only, housing a lounge, store and fountain. A worthy idea . . . an adequate means for separating the haves from the have-nots and, at the same time, taking some of the burden off the shoulders of the cafeteria.

We don't know if the delegate advancing the project proposed that such an undertaking be constructed with tax or AS money, but it certainly should be the latter. If we're not mistaken, a war was once fought over taxation without representation.

Groups Fulfill Dual Functions

THE PRESIDENT of an on-campus organization last week mentioned to a Guardsman reporter in an interview that his group was designed for students who value things higher than social functions, athletics and TV. We don't know for sure if this was an inference that all other campus groups view life through a 21-inch screen . . . but we get that feeling.

Many campus organizations have many social functions, and some of them attend athletic contests en masse, but there is no indication that this is all that occupies their minds.

In contrast to this implication two groups here have planned activities of a humanitarian nature.

Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority is conducting a drive to gain money to buy Easter baskets for children at the County Hospital. Alpha Phi Omega, soon to kick off its Ugly Man On Campus contest, places the monetary proceeds from the UMOC race into a scholarship fund. And there are even more campus groups undertaking projects of this kind.

Also, the fact that the student body, when informed of the problems created by the crowded situation in the cafeteria, cooperated to the exent that the proposed rotation plan was deemed unnecessary shows that many of them feel social obligations . . . and a lot of them like sports, too.

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob Pacini

LEARNING a foreign language, as most students who have ever attempted it very well know, can be a difficult task, often arduous, seldom easy, but usually pretty gratifying.

Italian, however, is a unique language, for one can speak it and make his thoughts and desires known without saying a single word. It's all done with the hands, and Italians, of course, are notorious for the use they make of their hands when speaking.

But it is through the use of certain gestures with one's hands, often taking on the appearance of Indian sign language, that one may be able to make his way around what has been called the most romantic of the romance languages.

For instance, if you place your left hand on your hip and hold your right hand up like a traffic cop and get a stern look on your face, anyone will know you mean, "Quiet; listen!"

Or if you're at a party and someone, on one of those rare occasions, makes a particularly interesting or logical remark, tilt the head slightly forward and place the right index finger under your right eye and you're saying "Clever!"

If you happen to be in an Italian restaurant, feeling in the mood for some Italian delicacies, form a cup with the left hand and place the back side of your right hand in it, and any waiter who dares to call himself one will bring you a loaf of French bread stuffed with salami, anchovy, ham, olives, cheese, mushrooms, onions, peppers and pickles.

While there is no sign for it in Italian, we also recommend a hearty dose of Alka-Seltzer.

If you feel in a particularly grumpy mood, but not in the mood for conversation, get a sour look (the above sandwich will help), and put the side of your finger to the edge of your nose and you'll be telling everyone, "Keep your big mouth shut."

Try this gesture around midterm time when it's particularly appropriate. Grab your head with both hands and look utterly distraught. This means, "What agony!"

And at finals look even more distraught, throw both hands up in the air. No one will mistake your meaning, for what else could it be but "Momma Mia!"

There, now, isn't that romantic?

Popular Music Field Demands Versatility

By Elmer Milligan

DURING the past decade, the American music field has been dominated by six different styles—opera, classical, rhythm and blues, rock and roll, popular and jazz.

Opera is the most difficult to perform, classical is the easiest to absorb, rhythm and blues is best for travel, rock and roll is the most exhausting, popular is exactly what the name implies, and jazz is the key to the happenings.

Of these six, the popular field is the easiest to enter, but the most competitive in achievement.

Thousands of aspiring singers enter the recording field each year; some survive by producing a hit record, then transferring to movies or television, while others resort to small town supper clubs or other professions.

Possibly the most unpleasant attribute of the music industry is the fact that each singer has not one employer, but millions, for the record buyers determine whether an artist's career will be long and fruitful or short and penniless.

To show how fickle the record buyer is, a recent Billboard survey points out that out of more than 60 new artists or groups that made the charts in the past year, fewer than a dozen were able to repeat with another hit record.

Because of the changes in preference as to types of material and the ever-increasing number of record releases per week, it's harder for new talent to get itself heard.

By the same token, many of the established artists have suffered from the competition and constant shifts in taste.

The performers who do come up with successive hits have the advantage of being in movies or on television, like Patti Page, Perry Como and Doris Day. Others like Della Reese, Nat "King" Cole, Sarah Vaughn and Johnny Mathis, to name a few, keep in front of the public by constantly doing shows around the country.

It is an unique thing indeed when a recording artist can be a successful stage performer, TV-movie actress and the possessor of five original singing styles.

Such is the case of vivacious Diahann Carroll, headliner at the Fairmont, whom we had the pleasure of interviewing in the hotel's Tonga Room two weeks ago. The 40-minute interview took place alongside a swimming pool into which descends a simulated rainfall, giving the effect of a tropical rainstorm.

Miss Carroll's three-week engagement ends tonight in the Venetian Room, but she can still be seen in Porgy And Bess, currently showing at Oakland's Grand Lake theater.

Three-D Concept Of Anatomy Goes From Outside In

By Paul Plansky

A college education is a stimulating experience. Whereas in lower grades subject matter is diversified over a large area and merely dents the treasures of knowledge, higher education focuses to a smaller scope and specializes.

Not only does each course dent the treasure chest, it breaks right into the core, digs long and deep, and then questions, analyzes and concludes.

The subject illustrating this intensified, investigative enthusiasm with the most accuracy is anatomy. If any subject tears its subject matter apart more than anatomy, it has buried the remains of its findings along with its digging implements.

Psychology approaches the study of the brain only from the standpoint of its external effects; physiology covers just the functional aspect without a laboratory dismantling; but anatomy digs, dissects, and divides down to the very cells that operate an organ.

Wander into S-315 sometime and absorb a lecture on three-dimensional anatomy.

If you can stomach the sight of half a human head and various limbs preserved in formaldehyde and don't panic at the sight of a heart being cut apart, you'll be amazed at the nature of the matter which composes each one of us.

Talk about digging into a subject—wow!

The anatomy department at the college boasts the very best equipment and visual aids. Anatomy 25 is given university parallel credit and constitutes the same subject matter as the course taught at Berkeley.

Three - dimensional anatomy is a new concept of teaching this course. Covering three levels, the method starts at the dermis or skin level and penetrates so that everything is included. The skeleton, the basic structure for comparison, is the most discernible structure at the surface of the body.

All aspects of human knowledge are fascinating, but none casts a spell over its students as much as anatomy, and that's not a personal argument, for what awakens a person's curiosity more than his own body and the cells, tissues and organs that influence its birth, life and death

Squaw Issue Out Of Greedy Hands

RAMBLINGS

By Frank Dunne

Petty Problems Hurt Park Merit

TWO new names have entered the local sports vocabulary during the past year: Candlestick Park and Squaw Valley.

Both names, and what they stand for, have been subjected to remarks and blasts from anyone who considers himself a sports authority. A few of these complaints have been justified, but a majority of these statements have been unwarranted.

Expression of opinions, in the old American way, is not to be thwarted. But when un-realistic opinions intended only for personal gain are entitled to publicity far beyond their merit, this ideal is lost. Such statements tend to overshadow the good accomplished by these projects.

Squaw Valley, better known as Squawk Valley, was the site of the Winter Olympics. Some of the money to promote this project came from private concerns, but the bulk of the amount came from the State of California.

The Olympics were a huge success and everybody was happy, until somebody said the State had a huge white elephant on its hands. Then came the carpet-baggers ready to take this winter playground away from the State. After, of course, the publicity from the games had made it a place of international renown.

When the State refused to give in to these demands officials were accused of everything from highway robbery to violation of the anti-trust laws. It seems these critics never heard of public property known as State Parks.

Conversion to a State Park not only solved the problem, but protected the public from the greedy hands of commercialism.

Candlestick or Clandestine Park, the new play pen of the San Francisco Giants, indeed involves a certain amount of secrecy. John Q. Public is still wondering who is in actual charge of the project. Nobody wants to admit the mistakes incurred in the building of this edifice.

In the past few weeks an odiferous problem has arisen from the Candlestick basin. It seems "they" built the stadium on the windward side of the city dump.

This is indeed a grave problem, and everyone has an opinion on it, but no one wants to take the giant step and actually do something about it.

Many other problems have arisen in the past and many more will come in the future which must be handled fairly for both parties, even though the Giants are already in their new arena. But it is hoped that they will be handled directly by the parties concerned and not thrust upon the public, thus destroying the merits of such projects in the eyes of the money-paying fans.

Hard-Hitting Ram Nine Overwhelms St. Mary's, 13-7; Greggains Blasts 370-Foot Roundtripper For Winners

By Jesse Gonzalez

MORAGA, March 29.—The hard-hitting Rams continued their winning diamond play here this afternoon as they came from behind to down the St. Mary's Gaels, 13-7.

Trailing 4-0 in the first inning, the Rams jumped on two Gael pitchers for five runs in the second and added six more in the fourth.

Ram starter Henry Padia was shaky in the first, issuing walks to the first three Gaels. With the bases loaded, St. Mary's left fielder Harry Innocenti teed off on a low fast ball for a grandslam home run far beyond the left field fence. Padia then straightened out and retired the next three hitters.

The Red and White gained revenge in the next frame, exploding for five big runs. Ray Greggains led off with a single over second base; Reno DiBono and Byron Beckes then drew successive walks.

With the bases jammed, Padia laced a liner through the legs of Gael shortstop Steve Pruitt, scoring Greggains and DiBono. After Mel Canavero forced Padia at second, Don Leonardini singled over first to score Beckes from third, and Bob Farber doubled over the center fielder's head to bring Canavero across with the equalizer.

Still keeping the flame going, Don Lowpensky singled through the box as Leonardini raced across the plate with the go-ahead run, but Farber, legging it from second base, was an easy out at the plate on a perfect relay from the outfield. Jerry Gosland ended the slugfest by grounding out.

It was a long afteraoon at bat for the Rams. Reliever Bill Flanagan started the six-run onburst in the fourth by walking and Canavero popped to first.

Three games round out the conference schedule for the Red and White for the current season, the first Saturday, April 30, against the Sacramento Panthers in the Capitol city, in a single encounter.

Early May will find the Rams closing out the regular season against the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs. A May 3 game will be played here and a May 6 game will be in Santa Rosa.

The Rams are currently leading the Big Eight conference with five wins and one defeat and are sure contenders for the title.

Ram Baseballers Butt Heads With Tough Scheduling

A return engagement with the Oakland Thunderbirds and a two-game series with Allan Hancock College dominate the pre-Easter schedule for Coach Lee Eisan's powerful Ram baseball squad.

Tomorrow afternoon the squad travels to Palo Aito, to take on the Stanford University Braves. Friday the Red and White return home to face the tough and determined Oakland Thunderbirds at Balboa Park in an afternoon affair.

Monday and Tuesday the Rams take a breather from the Big Eight Conference to engage in a two-game series with Allan Hancock College.

After Easter vacation the Eisanmen return to league action Tuesday, April 19, in Contra Costa against the Comets, and the following Friday, April 22, the same two teams resume action against each other on the Balboa diamond.

The Treasure Island baseball team comes to town for a practice session with the locals Tuesday, April 26.

Golf Team Matches Oakland Friday As Big 8 Race Reaches Mid-Season

Riding a recent winning streak, the Ram golfers will try to maintain the streak when they meet Oakland Friday on the Harding links at 1 p.m.

Nearing the midpoint of the Big Eight conference race the college seems to have finally hit its stride with wins in both of last week's matches.

The season started off with disastrous results, when the squad lost both opening league matches to San Mateo and Modesto by large scores. However, the team was showing promise with consistent, if not winning, golf.

Finally this consistency, blended with improvement, has paid off. In a Big Eight contest against Contra Costa the Rams came away with a 10¼-4½ victory. Highlighting the locals were Dennis Clark and John Carlin with 73 and 79, respectively.

Shortly after they took on Marin, reputedly one of the strongest squads in their league, and scored an easy 14½-½ win in the non-league tussle. In this one Sandy Loube turned in the best Ram eard this season with a 72. Clark was runner-up for medalist with a 74.

The remaining schedule for the golf squad is as follows: April 13, 14, 15, Intercollegiate Championships at Pasatiempo; April 22, at Sacramento; April 29, at the Harding course, Stockton; May 6, Big Eight Championships at Richmond; and May 16, the State Tournament at Orange Coast.

Three Clubs Hold Crown In Mural Basketball Play

As of March 30, the Independent branch of the Intramural League is in a three-way tie, shared by the Block SF, the Invaders and the Ringers, all because these teams have won two games while suffering no losses.

Two of the league leaders, the Invaders and the Ringers, are new on the intramural scene. The Invaders moved into a league leading position because of their victory over the Lyons, 53-38. The Ringers defeated the Newman Club, 36-20, which accounts for their top slot.

The third team competing for first place, the Block SF, is an old hand at leading the Intramural League, having been champions of the cage loop more often than any other squad.

Other action in the league saw the terrible tyrists, The Guardsman, fall at the hands of the Hotel and Restaurant club.

The Guardsman lost this game by forfeit which, by the way, was the first match the men from S-304 have given away without a hard fight in the last three years.

The Pachyderms, better known as the forgetful elephants, racked up an easy win over the Retail Floristry by a score of 29-15.

Tomorrow night the Independent League will see the Recreation Association meet the Invaders, the Pachyderms versus the Hotel and Restaurant Association, the Lyons against the Retail Floristry, and finally, the Ringers will pit their all against The Guardsman.

Tonight in the Inter-Fraternity Council loop, Zeta Phi Sigma will meet Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Alpha Kappa Itho goes against Beta Tau, Alpha Phi Epsilon against Alpha Sigma Delta, and Tau Chi against Phi Beta.

Swimmers Try For Two-In-Row Against Stockton Mustangs

After an upset win in Sacramento last week, the Ram swimmers will be out to make it two-in-a-row Friday in Stockton.

Always tough, the Mustangs are undefeated in the Big Eight conference so far this season. Stockton has never finished below second.

The Sacramento meet brought the Ram's best times and results of the season. Leading the victory was Craig Schwarz with firsts in the 50 and 100-yd. free style events, plus anchoring the winning relay, giving the locals the meet, 48-46.

Other good efforts were turned in by Bill Sakovich, first in the 200-yd. backstroke and second in the 440-yd. free style; Al Stevens with a first in the 200-yd. breast stroke; Pete Urrea with seconds in the 50 and 100, and a place on the relay; Bob Fewster, second in the individual medley and on the relay, and Bob Corsiglia taking the first place in diving for the Rams this season with a second.

The rest of the schedule for the natators is as follows: April 22, Big Eight Conference championships at Stockton; April 29 and 30, Northern California championships at Valiejo; May 5, 6, 7, State Championships at Bakersfield.

Cindermen Down Comets In Three-Way Dual, Slate Weekend Run With San Mateans, Mustangs In Stockton

By Doug Cathcart

The Red and White track squad, with three meets behind them, are slated to meet Stockton and San Mateo at Stockton this Friday at 3 p.m. On the basis of the Rams' performance in the Big Eight Conference Relays in which they placed first, the track men can be expected to come out on top at this meet.

After the Stockton and San Mateo meet the Rams will have a slight rest before meeting the determined Sacramento and Santa Rosa squads at Santa Rosa on April 22, also at 3 p.m.

At the Modesto and Contra Costa fray the Rams won the three-way meet but lost in dual competition when they were edged out by Modesto by only five points in a 39-51 match.

The Modesto Pirates also dumped the Contra Costa Comets by a score of 87-15 and in turn the Rams downed the Comets by a wide margin in a 90-16 go.

Starring for the Rams were Ray Batz and Jess Sirles, who racked up two wins each. Batz won the mile and two-mile runs while Sirles was victorious in the broad and high jump events.

Batz' time was 4:38.2 and teammate Frank James ran a close second. In the 440-yard dash Jim Chaney placed second for the locals. In the 880, Tom Jennings ran second to May of Modesto who ran the twin loop in 1:58.6.

In the 220-yard dash, Modesto took first honors with a time of 22.0 while Ram Ellis Jenkins placed second. The mile relay was another victory for the Pirates as they beat the local contingent with a time of 3:26.3.

The events in which the Rams did not place were swept by a Modesto aggregation. The 120-yard low hurdles was won by the Pirates with a time of 15.1.

Modesto also won the shot-put with a heave of 48'3¾", which topped Contra Costa's entry.

The Pirates also won the 220-yard low hurdles, skimming the boards in 24.3, and Contra Costa placed second.

Batz Leads Way In Track Victory; Eisanmen Split

Led by star miler Ray Batz, the City College Rams won a three-way meet last Saturday with a tally of 59 5/6 points, while the Ram nine split a double-header with Modesto the same day, winning the cap 5-2.

first game 11-9 and losing the night-

In the meet at Edwards Field in Berkeley, the Cal Frosh placed second with a total of 48 5/6 counters, while the Tunderbirds from Oakland City College had their wings clipped as their 42 1/3 point score was only good enough for a third place slot.

Batz turned in a fine performance at the meet as he won the mile event with a time of 4:23.9 and the two mile run with a time of 10:16.4.

This win marks the second Red and White victory of the season, the first having been in the Big Eight relays. The Rams were stopped by Modesto March 25 which accounts for the Rams' present two win and one loss record.

The split with Modesto Saturday gave Baseball Coach Lee Eisan's men a five won-one loss league record.

Unbeaten Netmen Battle Bear Cubs Friday In Crucial

Sporting the only undefeated team in the Big Eight Conference, the Ram tennis squad faces Santa Rosa at Golden Gate Park in a crucial contest this Friday in the next to last conference match of the season.

Coach Roy Diederichsen's netmen close out their loop season Tuesday, April 22, when they battle Sacramento at Golden Gate Park.

If the locals win their last two matches they will win the league championship, their second loop crown in three years.

The Red and White squad, rated fourth before the start of the season, bounced Modesto, the pre-season favorite, from the unbeaten ranks, 4-3, on March 25 in a crucial contest on the Pirates' home courts.

Vince Chin, Ram ace, was beaten in loop play for the first time this season by Tom Muench in a long hard battle, 6-2, 12-10.

The locals' number two ranked Larry Draper dropped the first set to Pirate Curtis Atwood, 4-6, and was in real danger of losing the match.

In the second set Atwood had Draper at match point, 10 times, but was unable to deliver the winning shot, and the Red and White netter won the set, 9-7. Draper went on from that point to capture the third set and the match, 6-1.

Richard Gill of Modesto downed Lynn Mattison of the college in straight sets, 6-0, 6-1; while Ram Paul Barth fought a come-from-behind battle to defeat Robert Murata, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

The other singles match was won by Coach Diederichsen's number five ranked man, Gary Robinson, who won a straight set victory over Bob Rose, 6-2, 6-3.

Cleo Cofield Lone Ram On All-Conference Five

Oakland City College, who lost the Big Eight basketball title to the Rams, placed three players on the All-Conference team, while the Rams could boast of only one, star forward Cleo Cofield.

The Thunderbirds placed guards Charles McKinney and Solomon Wheat and forward Wendell Hayes. Charley Walker of Sacramento, at center, rounded out the first five.

The second team: Ed Greene and John Stimel, Contra Costa; Mel Wilson and John Lewis of San Francisco, and Bill Gleason, Stockton.

Honorable Mention: Curt Motton and Bob Linsten, Santa Rosa; Isaiah Simpson, Stockton; Howard Foster, Oakland; Tom Pugliese, Sacramento; Cornell Lacy, Contra Costa; Tom Muench, Modesto; Vern Coleman, San Francisco.

Team Petitions For Intramural Bowling Loop Due Tomorrow

All clubs and organizations on-campus which wish to sponsor a team in the Recreation Association's intramural bowling league must submit a petition to the Club Activities Board at its meeting tomorrow afternoon at 1 p.m.

"The competition will be among the various clubs on campus, and all fraternities and sororities are urged to sponsor as many teams as they wish," Pat Crone, RA delegate-at-large, announced last week. There are to be five bowlers on each team.

The league will compete at a local bowling alley, either in the afternoon or in the evening, she said.

All persons interested in participating in such a league should contact the club of which they are a member or prospective member.

Student Council OK's Open House Sports Budgets

By Paul Plansky

With the core of student leadership representing the college at the state convention in San Diego, Student Council diverted its attention from the mental tasks of legislation to the manual tasks of opening and closing doors and windows.

Except for the varsity swimming and tennis team budgets being passed, there was no other pertinent action taken last week.

The swimming budget, submitted by Coach Roy E. Burkhead, passed for $627.99, and the tennis budget, proposed by Coach Roy Diederichsen, passed at $645.14. The remainder of budgets will be presented in toto for council's approval this week.

A flurry of hands asking for points of personal privilege started a literal cross-wind argument blown to the heights by drafts from the open door and windows. Some council and cabinet members claimed it was too stuffy, other refuted that they were being blown to bits.

On a more serious note, Judy Day, Associated Student publicity chairman, read a resolution to set aside Tuesday, April 26, for the college's Open House night, in conjunction with its 25th anniversary. Council adopted the resolution unanimously.

Meetings of Student Council are held from noon to 1 o'clock on Tuesdays and Thursdays in Bungalow 3.

AWS To Feature Styles April 28

New Spring and Summer fashions from H. Liebes will be featured at the semi-annual Associated Women Student fashion show and tea slated for Thursday, April 28, from 3 to 5 p.m. in Smith Hall, Stevie Tissier, AWS president, announced last week.

Theme for the affair is Everything Is Coming Up Roses, and all women students are welcome to attend. Special invitations are being sent to all AWS members. Admission is free.

Any women students interested in modelling or helping with the show are invited to attend a meeting this Friday in S-215 during College Hour. Selected as commentator for the fashion parade is Gretchen Davis.

Purpose of the fashion show and tea is to honor the graduating senior women of San Francisco's public and private schools, and to enable them to get acquainted with the college in a strictly feminine setting, Miss Tissier added.

High school seniors scheduled to attend include those from Mission, Lowell, Balboa, Washington, Lincoln, Galileo and Polytechnic.

Refreshments, cookies and punch will be served and entertainment will also be provided.

Contests, Race To End Pledge Week

Pledge Week has once again enveloped the college, and is the cause of several zany and humorous activities which have been observed around the campus.

In previous semesters Pledge Week lasted the entire week, giving the pledges very little time to keep up with their studies. This semester the activities have been scheduled for Monday, Wednesday and Friday, leaving Tuesday and Thursday free for the pledges to catch up on their studying, Jerry Herman, Inter-Fraternity Council president, stated last week.

This Friday the fraternities, along with their pledges, will hold the Pledge Week games. These will consist of a relay race, pie-eating contest, egg-throwing contest, and a balloon-blowing contest.

There will be a trophy given to the fraternity that has accumulated the most points. Last semester's winner of the trophy was Zeta Phi Sigma.

There is a total of 60 pledges rushing the various fraternities this semester. It is one of the biggest pledge turnouts for a spring semester.

The largest army in the world is that of Communist China, with a total of 17,500,000, and the smallest army is that of Monaco, with a total strength of 65.

Annual Easter Drive Starts Today; Contributions To Bring Cheer For SF County Hospital Children

By Pumi Fowells

With the slogan, "Bring Easter to San Francisco County Hospital," Gamma Sigma Sigma's annual Easter Drive for the benefit of bedridden children begins today and will continue through Friday. The drive's goal has been set at $75.00.

The nickels, dimes and quarters dropped in the contribution boxes during the next three days will buy Easter baskets for the children who must look forward to spending their Easter holiday in the San Francisco County Hospital. "Please give as much as you can, so that we may make this Easter a happy one for these children," Phyllis Bauman, sorority president, urged today.

This year's drive will be carried out on more extensive scale than that of 1959, Miss Bauman stated, and it is hoped it will be the most successful Easter Drive ever held. The pledges of all other sororities on campus have offered to participate in the fund-raising campaign.

The pledges, together with the members of Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority, will carry yellow bunnie money containers constructed from milk cartons, with ears, whiskers and tails, and solicit contributions in the classrooms as well as in Smith Hall during the three-day drive.

As always, Miss Bauman added, the most rewarding moment of the drive will come with the arrival of the sorority sisters at the children's ward in the hospital, when they enter, arms laden with baskets filled with candies and chicken marshmallows, to be greeted with the bright smiles of the children.

The Easter Drive is but one of a number of monthly projects by means of which Gamma Sigma Sigma, national service sorority, helps in bringing a measure of hope and happiness to the less fortunate, here and overseas, as well.

As the project for the next month, the sorority has planned the adoption of a needy family now residing in Hong Kong.

Other monthly projects planned for the near future are a party for underprivileged girls at the Youth Guidance Center, and a card and bingo party for the residents of the Laguna Honda Home.

April 18 Set As Forum Deadline

Manuscripts, satirical or humorous in nature, are still needed for possible publication in Forum magazine.

Tentative deadline for all material has been set for the first Monday after Easter vacation, April 18. Copy should be in standard manusuipt form — typed on one side only of standard size plain paper and double spaced with wide margins, and should be submitted to Catherine Connolly, Forum faculty adviser, in C-331A or to any Forum Club member.

Students interested in advertising, editorial and publicity work for Forum are invited to attend meetings during College Hour in S-257.

Forum Magazine offers all students who are interested in writing, an opportunity to have their work published.

Caro Brown, Reno BiBono Win Frosh Couple Award

Caro Brown and Reno DiBono swept gracefully to victory in the Cutest Couple contest, climax of the Freshman Ball, March 25.

The winners, picked from 50 couples who entered the contest, received handsome trophies from the presidents of Phi Beta Rho and Alpha Sigma Delta fraternities. John Azzaro, Freshman Class president, said their names would also be engraved on the Freshman Class perpetual trophy.

DiBono, a high freshman, is a business administration major. Miss Brown is not a student here.

Runners-up Jeanette Fambrini and Pete Papapietro received flowers from Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity.

Deadline For Spring Semester Scholarship Requests April 19

Students applying for the various scholarships and awards presented each semester to aspiring but financially limited students here, must demonstrate high moral character, good citizenship, and dedication to American ideals, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

Letters of application must be filed in S-150 before Tuesday, April 19, Dean Golding warned.

Prizes Promote Participation In May Blood Drive

Tau Chi Sigma fraternity will launch its fourth annual blood drive here May 12 and 13.

Last year's record of 359 pints will have to be shattered to meet the new goal of 400, Chairman Mike Haskell stated.

Competition will be keen for the two trophies being awarded. One will go to the club with the highest percentage of donors. The other will go to the sorority or fraternity with the best record. Prizes will be awarded at the annual dance May 13.

Prospective donors are reminded that under the blood bank accounting system, donating students may draw up to 20 pints for themselves or members of their families, and up to eight pints for friends.

In addition to parents and friends of students, veterans' hospitals and charity organizations will also receive blood collected during the drive.

Joining the ranks of those working on the drive, the art and graphic arts departments will provide posters and publicity to boost the campaign. Forms are being printed now with which students under 21 may obtain their parents' permission to donate.

Last year's drive was the most successful in the history of California during peace time. The current drive is expected to reach even greater heights.

Man Who Came To Dinner Lengthens Run, Goes On Tour

Avid audience response has resulted in a decision by the Little Theater to extend the run of The Man Who Came To Dinner.

Three extra performances have been scheduled for the 16th, 22nd and the 23rd of April. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

According to drama director Michael Griffin, the decision was made when packed houses indicated that the extra performances would be well attended.

The reception given the comedy by the students and faculty members make it one of the most successful ever to be presented here.

On April 29 a showing of The Man Who Came To Dinner will be given at the Presidio Service Club.

One of the few college productions to go on the road, the comedy will have to be presented on a very small stage.

Originally the play was to have been staged in the Letterman Army Hospital. However, it was decided that some of the patients would find it a little hard to watch for two and a half hours.

On Wednesday, April 13, at 6 p.m. drama majors will try out for memberships in Delta Psi Omega, the national drama society.

The actors will present a number of scenes, which will be judged by Griffin. AS card holders will be admitted to the Little Theater free of charge.

Griffin stated that three or four of the scenes played on Wednesday will be shown again during College Hour, Friday, April 22.

Actors to take part in the showing are James Robinson, Maureen Rogers, Ann Osorno, Martha Rose, Marilyn Milani, Bill Henderson, Fred Fisher, Diane Flores, Ann Vallerga, Jordy Cooney and Leah Pashoian.

Being rehearsed now are three one-act plays, which will be presented during three separate College Hours at the Little Theater.

The plays are The Romancers and The Coiner, comedies, and Auto De Fe, a Tennessee Williams drama.

Three plays have so far been given the most consideration. They are Detective Story, Joan Of Lorraine, and Death Of A Salesman.

M.A. Holders Gain Training Here In Summer Session

Intern - instructors preparing for junior college teaching will again be provided teaching experience by the college this summer, according to Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction.

Graduate students, sent here through the Graduate Internship Program at the University of California, hope thereby to earn their Junior College Teaching Credentials.

The program, which includes a summer session of supervised teaching and seminar classes at the college plus another year of weekly seminar classes at the University of California, is available only to graduate students who hold master's degrees and who will have positions on a junior college faculty upon completion of the summer course.

Dr. Dale Tillery of the University of California, co-ordinator of the program, selects the student teachers on the basis of recommendations of junior colleges that wish to employ them. Graduate students may also apply for the program directly, though they cannot qualify until they have actual teaching positions waiting for them.

This college is the only junior college which offers teaching experience for the Graduate Internship Program.

Canada possesses nine commonweaths.

Recruitment Teams To Interview Graduates On Business Day May 10

Approximately 100 business graduates will participate in the fifth annual Business Graduate Recruitment Day here Tuesday, May 10, when selected Bay Area employers conduct interviews with prospective employees, Joseph A. Amori, director of personnel placement services, announced.

Among those interviewed will be business graduates in accounting, business machines, general clerical work, graphic arts, insurance, photography, retail merchandising, secretarial training, transportation and sales.

Business day will begin at 8 a.m. with a breakfast in the faculty dining room for the business and industrial representatives, administration and faculty. During the gathering, the plan of operation for the remainder of the day will be outlined.

Beginning at 9:30 a.m., the delegates from each firm or business establishment will conduct interviews, using offices in Cloud Hall. Each talk will last about 20 minutes.

Firms which have been invited include the America Fore Loyalty Group, American President Lines, Arthur Young & Company, Bank of America NT&SA, Bechtel Corporation, Beneficial Finance Co., Bureau of Internal Revenue, California Packing Corporation.

California State Automobile Association, California State Personnel Board, California - Western States Life Insurance Company, Crocker-Anglo National Bank, Department of the Army, Fort Mason, Emporium (Downtown and Stonestown), E. O. Lawrence Rad. Lab, Berkeley, Federal Housing Authority.

Anniversary Week's Schedule Nears Climax With Student, Faculty Coffee Hour On Friday

The crowded schedule of Silver Anniversary Week nears a climax with the Student-Faculty Relations Committee, Clem S. Skrabak, chemistry instructor, chairman, presenting a student-faculty coffee hour this Friday during College Hour.

In scheduling the event during the 25th anniversary of Charter Week, the committee will try to strengthen the ties between students and faculty members.

The "coffee break," which will be held in the open court between Science and Cloud Halls, will, Skrabak stated, "give students an opportunity to chat informally with their instructors, dissolving the stringent restrictions of the classroom."

Coffee and refreshments will be served by sorority and student committee members, and this semester an innovation will take place, Skrabak added. "The faculty will help the students serve the food and coffee, exemplifying their willingness to give a hand, bettering student-faculty relations."

The student committee, working with the instructors, is under the direction of Sophomore President Jack Verga. His group plans to present a plaque to a worthy "old-timer" of the faculty who has been an outstanding asset to the college since its very beginnings 25 years ago.

If weather threatens the outcome of the coffee hour, the place for the event will be moved to departmental offices of the college.

Members of the faculty assisting Skrabak are Mary Golding, dean of women; Ralph Hilisman, dean of men; Ruth Inskipp, dental assisting instructor; Joseph E. Chapman and Gene Slavoy, engineering, and Ronald J. Hochede, chemistry.

Members of the student committee include Terry Alciati and Georgine Peterson.

Panel Discussion Features Schools Week Activities

Lively panel discussion featuring the comments of five faculty members on the topic Preparing For And Succeeding In College highlighted the 25th Anniversary open house held here last night.

Participating panelists included Dorothy Hill, Mary Ferry, Lloyd Luckmann, Walter McCloud and Ralph Richardson.

The open house, part of San Francisco's annual Public Schools Week celebration, was held in order to let parents and the general public see the facilities available to college students.

Visitors to the college toured the various special department exhibits from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Creating great interest were the two displays in Cloud Hall featuring the criminology and architecture laboratories.

In Science Hall, the guests inspected the machine shop, surveying and map drafting laboratory, refrigeration and air conditioning, radio and electronics laboratory, little theater, graphic arts and journalism laboratories, bacteriology, nutrition and dental assisting laboratories, with the animal exhibit in S-315 claiming most of the spotlight.

The Little Theater's Man Who Came To Dinner was shown at 8 p.m.

Bus-Ed Day Attracts 60 Business Leaders

Sixty Bay Area businessmen will be conducted on a tour of the college tomorrow as the tenth annual Business-Education Day gets under way, Louis G. Conlan, college president, stated recently.

Beginning at 8:45 a.m., an orientation will be held in Smith Hall during which President Conlan, Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management; Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction; John J. Brady, co-ordinator, division of student welfare, and Barbara Brackett, Faculty Association president, will speak.

The businessmen will then be conducted around the campus to observe classes and talk to students and faculty.

Brochure Honors Silver Year

By Vicky Aumann

A pictorial history of the college from its humble beginning in two scattered downtown buildings in 1935, to its present status as one of the nation's leading two-year colleges, is only one of the many highlights featured in a booklet honoring the college's Silver Anniversary, Herold J. Miller, English instructor in the engineering department, disclosed last week.

Climaxing ten months of research and work, the booklet entitled 25th Year, was a co-operative venture undertaken by more than 35 faculty members and many students, past and present, in several departments.

Silver Anniversary observation of the granting of the college's charter reaches a climax this Saturday when the Northern California Junior College Association Spring meeting convenes on the campus.

Strictly speaking, April 17, 1935, was the date on which San Francisco Junior College was chartered by the Board of Education of the State of California.

Presentation of the charter to Archibald J. Cloud, first president of the college, took place two and a half weeks later on May 4, 1935, and it was not until February 12, 1948, that SFJC became City College of San Francisco, the change in name indicating the function of the college as an institution of higher learning serving the entire community.

All this data can be found in the booklet in chronological order, beginning with the first important milestone in the college's history, February 13, 1935, when the superintendent of schools, Dr. Edwin A. Lee, recommended the establishment of a junior college department.

Other highlights of the 36-page booklet are a series of articles on the program of the college, counseling and guidance services, placement services, student activities, academic standing of the college, all of these profusely illustrated.

Because a complete record was never kept of the college's history, the task of gathering material and data was made all the more difficult.

Photographs, came from various sources, many of which were taken especially for the booklet. A few of the earlier prints were obtained from the morgues of various newspapers.

The eye-catching cover with the title in the college's own colors, red and white on a silver background, was designed by William J. Eckert, instructor in advertising art.

Steps in the process of making the book ineluding the original manuscript, proofs of copy, original photographs and proofs from cuts can be seen in the display case on the ground floor of Science Hall for the next few weeks.

NCJCA Meets Here Saturday; Delegates To Hear Talks By UC Chancellor, Christopher

By Bob Pacini

Acting like a giant educational magnet, the college will draw to its campus almost 500 delegates from 28 other two-year colleges for the Spring meeting of the Northern California Junior College Association to be held here this coming Saturday.

Two distinguished guests, Mayor George Christopher and Dr. Glen T. Seaborg, chancellor of the University of California, are scheduled to present addresses to members of the convention.

SAN FRANCISCO'S Mayor George Christopher, above, will address 500 delegates to the Northern California Junior College Association meet here this Saturday. The mayor will speak on his impressions and findings on his recently-concluded tour of the Soviet Union. Dr. Glen T. Seaborg, chancellor of the University of California, is also slated to address the group.

The meeting is a major event of the week-long celebration of the 25th anniversary of California's granting of a charter to the college.

At a luncheon for the delegates in Smith Hall, Mayor Christopher will speak to the group on his impressions and findings of his recently concluded tour of the Soviet Union.

Earlier in the day, following special reports by the officers of the association, the convention will hear a talk in Cloud Hall by Dr. Seaborg. The subject of Seaborg's speech has not yet been disclosed.

The task of deciding upon and planning an agenda for the day-long meeting was headed by Charles E. Ohman, business education instructor here.

Ohman said that the meeting will start with the serving of morning coffee in Smith Hall and registration of the delegates.

Delegates will then assemble in the library of Cloud Hall for a greeting from Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, and a business meeting of the NCJCA.

At the conclusion of the luncheon, delegates will split up into 23 section meetings devoted to various fields of college instruction.

The section meetings will include speeches, panels and round-table discussions of topics of interest to each particular section.

Alumni Observe 25th Year With Dinner Saturday

Highlighting the college's Silver Anniversary Week will be a dinner and cocktail party sponsored by the Alumni Association celebrating the college's existence since 1935, Douglas Smith, president of the association, declared last week.

Attending the function will be civic dignitaries and prominent administrators, in conjunction with student leaders, athletic teams of the past, administrators and numerous clubs and societies.

In the spotlight will be Dr. Louis G. Conlan, college president, and Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Harold Spears, both of whom will make speeches.

The reunion is scheduled to be held at The Village, Columbus Avenue and Lombard Street, Saturday night. This occasion will feature a buffet dinner with dance music supplied by Dick Reinhart and his orchestra, between the hours of 6:30 p.m. and 2 a.m.

An open invitation is offered to all alumni, including those students over the age of 21. A $4.50 fee will be charged per person, Smith said.

An additional surprise for all the guests will be valuable door prizes.

Dress will be semi-formal, Smith said, with the men wearing dark suits and women wearing cocktail dresses "to suit their fancy."

LOUIS G. CONLAN, president (above) extended the following greeting to the college and its friends:

During this last week of April, City College will observe the 25th anniversary of the granting of its charter.

It is a source of great satisfaction to me that the Associated Students demonstrated their pride in the college by sponsoring an open house during Charter Week last night. This afforded the parents of our present students and prospective students and the citizens of San Francisco an opportunity to see our campus and learn about our program.

I sincerely trust that during the entire Charter Week students and faculty will take advantage of every opportunity to tell the people in San Francisco the story of our college.

Political Conventions Trigger Spring Election Campaign; Candidates' Petitions Due May 4

By Richard Shields

Conventions of two political parties marked the beginning of the race for 20 student government offices in the spring election, set for Monday and Tuesday, May 16 and 17.

Election Commissioner Jerry Kuckerka said that no petitions for candidacy had been filed yet, but conventions of the United Students Party and the Associated Students Party had named candidates for most of the offices to be filled in the election.

Candidates for the office of President of the Associated Students on these tickets are Bill Keane (USP) and Joe Egri (ASP).

For the second time in recent years a male nominee, Jack Verga (USP), will run for the AS vice presidential office. Georgine Peterson (ASP) will run against him.

Jerry Kuceserka (USP) will oppose Bob Kelley (ASP) for the office of Associated Men Student President.

Associated Women Student Presidential candidates are Diane Beeson (USP) and Margaret Lindstrom (ASP).

John Azzaro (USP) and Jim Bush (ASP) will contest the office of Sophomore Class President.

Aspirants for the Freshman Class Presidential office are Bob Rogers (USP) and Gary Wilkening (ASP).

The USP nominated four candidates for Sophomore Council seats, leaving three nominations for a later date. These candidates are Charles Hanks, Carol Torres, Konrad von Emster and Vick Eaker.

Two nominations for Freshman Council seats were also left open. The candidates named were Carol Hinkson, Diane Luhr, Mary Comerford, Bill Hayes and Judy Barkann.

Seven ASP candidates named for the seven Sophomore Council vacancies are Bob Ross, Pat Crone, Skip Schwartz, Russell Merrit, Sam Webb, Jerry Griffin and Barbara Lerman.

Freshman Council nominees for the seven seats open are Diane Jensen, Bob Perkins, Harry Somerfield, Roger Labataille, Bob Robertson, Norm Kalman and Ray Ferrira.

Inter-Fraternity Council President Jerry Hermann presided over the USP convention, which was attended by 12 fraternities and sororities.

The ASP convention was brightened by an address on the significance of political parties by economics instructor John Madden, and by refreshments which were served after the convention adjourned. Club Activities Board President Delmar Rose

Groups Need To Face Facts To Erase Flaming Youth Picture

FOLLOWING the much publicized midnight monkey moat raid by five of the college's coeds, Municipal Judge Lenore Underwood asked for an investigation of sorority activities here. The judge was prompted to make this move by an anonymous letter she received which claimed the act was part of Hell Week activities. So far no evidence bears out this claim.

The letter failed to cite one iota of proof to substantiate the author's argument . . . it may as well have claimed the girls were frustrated transcendentalists. It simply lashed out at sororities and fraternities.

Last year a student lost his life in a pledge week accident at the University of Southern California. Since then a great number of people feel that the organizations should be done away with entirely. State Attorney General Mosk said that one more death or injury from such activities will result in the abolition of such groups.

The entire monkey incident heightened the fact that sororities and fraternities are in a pretty tight situation. The letter proved that there are individuals ready to strike out at these organizations at the first opportunity.

Sororities and fraternities must realize that in the present situation they cannot afford to present a picture of "flaming youth" to the public; they must, rather, be regarded as clear-sighted, responsible members of society. Otherwise, to be blunt, they'll cut their own throats.

The attorney general's statement and the judge's call for a probe should alone make these societies aware that they are fighting for their existence, and when someone stoops low enough to write an anonymous letter things are getting hot.

When an individual does this he is either not firm in convictions or full of hatred—we feel it was both.

The only way to counteract this air of animosity is to undertake projects of a worthwhile nature, such as the recent Easter Drive by a sorority here, or Alpha Phi Omega's scholarship fund raising in the Ugly Man Contest.

These activities bring favorable reaction not only to the individual groups but also to the college, and, most important of all, shows a side of these societies that is worthy of existing.

Education Is 'A Public Thing'

IN A PROCLAMATION naming the week of April 24 through 30 as "San Francisco Public Schools Week," Mayor George Christopher urged all citizens to join with him in a concerted effort to acquire a better understanding of public schools and the problems with which they are wrestling.

On a note of timeliness the college, during Public Schools Week, held an open house in honor of its 25th Anniversary. The response to the open house was most gratifying, having drawn numerous interested San Franciscans to our halls.

This interest of fellow citizens is an indication that Americans are reappraising their commitments to education. Perhaps for the first time in our history, public opinion is beginning to respect the teacher and the student.

Since the "Russian challenge" was accelerated by scientific advancement behind the Iron Curtain, education has indeed become even more of a "public thing" because the populace is realizing the importance of it for the survival of our culture.

The return to fundamentals, the teaching of subjects, the building of the self, the education of the elite or the masses, are all seen in headlines throughout the country.

If the Russians have been responsible for this increasing interest in our educational system, then we say "thanks" to the boys in the Kremlin.

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob Pacini

EVERYONE in general, but college students in particular, seem to have those days in which nothing goes according to plan and makes one take a rather dim view of life altogether.

Though 25 years have passed since the college came into being, though times have changed, though styles, living costs and a million other things have changed, it seems nothing has changed as far as students are concerned.

The same things still plague them, worry them, vex them and confuse them as were plaguing, worrying, vexing and confusing to our predecessors to these halls.

One of these things is the daily hike up the hill to Science Hall, and, more recently, an added hill to climb for Cloud Hall. It seems to be an historical fact that college campuses are always built on hills.

Even before you get to school the day can be ruined, for, while getting ready to leave, have you ever sneezed while brushing your teeth?

That's enough to dishearten the staunchest of us and leave the bathroom mirror looking as though it has a good case of the measles. Striped toothpastes have a particularly colorful effect.

The men students really have it bad, for shaving, literally, is a pain in the neck. Standing there sleepy-eyed, with shakey hands tightly clutching a razor, trying to catch one's image in the mirror, can get the day off to a pretty bad start.

Deep down inside, men probably hate shaving, for most of them just can't stand the sight of blood.

Traveling to school is also a trying experience. If the bus isn't crowded, it's alarmingly late, or just as you're about to drop the fare into the box the ten pennies and one nickel slip from your hand and roll in all directions down the aisle.

As you search the floor you look up into a pair of highly disapproving eyes and offer the feeble excuse: "But really, ma'am, I was only looking for my money."

Another oft-heard line is: "Oh, I'm sorry. Was that my poli sci book that dropped on your head?"

Once at school things go from bad to worse. You've done the wrong homework, or you have an unexpected test. At least once, running for a class you collide with one of your instructors who goes off muttering something about remembering to put that down.

There's a saying that history doesn't repeat itself, but for students life seems to be one repetition after another; things go around and around in a vicious circle, over and over—just like a whirlpool.

CLASSROOM CAPERS. An out-of-breath student ran in late to his morning science class and smiled at the instructor. "Nothing like punctuality, is there?" offered the student. "Nothing like it around here!" came back the sharp reply.

In one of the college's foreign language classes last week students were engaged in reading and some across the word "coliseum." The instructor asked: "What city is the site of a famous coliseum?"

From the rear of the room a meek voice said, "Los Angeles."

SEATED BEHIND HIS DESK in his office in the St. Francis Hotel is Robert Snider, former hotel and restaurant student here, who now holds the post of assistant manager of the business department at the hotel.

Education Pays Dividends

Former H&R Student 'Sells' St. Francis Hotel To Public

By Antos Norris

Leaning back in his swivel chair behind a large and paper filled desk at the Hotel St. Francis one day last week, Robert Snider, hotel and restaurant department graduate of 1956, reminisced about his student days at City College and reflected that the important thing about education is to use it.

Snider, who is assistant manager of the business department of the hotel, believes firmly that an education is definitely necessary, "but without proper potentialities and a strong desire upon the part of the individual, education alone can do little."

No one heeds his own words with more fervor than Snider himself, a fact proved by the good record he acquired while in attendance here.

Enrolling in 1954, he completed two years of H&R instruction and graduated in 1956.

While in attendance he became president of the Hotel and Restaurant Society, won the "Accent" award, and was eligible for membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society.

During his last semester of instruction he was offered the assistant manager position at the St. Francis Hotel.

When asked why he alone of all the members of his class received this offer, Snider modestly answered that it probably was because of his grade point standing and record of activities.

As everyone knows a good grade point average is not in itself easy to attain, but add to the necessary studying a wife and two children, and an eight hour-a-day job and one wonders how, within a 24-hour period, Snider could have accomplished so much.

"The most difficult problem I encountered while at the college," Snider stated, "was having to be there at 7 and working until 3 after working from 4 until midnight on my daily job the night before. This left me little time for studying."

The hard work, however, has returned dividends when one considers how interesting Snider's present position is.

Within his department he conducts the public relations of the St. Francis Hotel. It is his job to contact organizations and individuals and "sell" the St. Francis Hotel's ample and excellent facilities.

"It's a job," Snider claims, "which places one in a position of direct contact with all types of people and anyone who enjoys working with people can understand how engaging this type of work can be."

Time And Space

Passing Years See Enrollment Alter Campus

By Fumi Fowells

Although, according to Shots At Random, nothing as far as students are concerned has changed, the college's enrollment has certainly undergone extensive fluctuation. In 1935 when it first opened its doors to seekers of higher education, the total student enrollment was 1470, of whom approximately 87 per cent were graduates of San Francisco high schools.

Today, the college's total enrollment has climbed to 6884, including high school graduates from 50 states, District of Columbia, Canal Zone, three possessions, and 54 countries. With the tidal wave of students reaching from the shores of seven continents, the college, today, is as colorful and cosmopolitan as its city, San Francisco.

Only 907 men and 564 women were in attendance when the college was established in 1935 in temporary quarters in the University of California Extension Division building and at Galileo High School.

A rapid increase in enrollment made it necessary to find a large and permanent campus, and in 1940, when it moved to its present site, 2116 men and 1111 women were in attendance.

Then came World War II. Men were called into the Armed Forces and the women went into defense factories; this led to the most marked decline in enrollment in the college's history.

Figures for 1943 indicate that there were only 298 men and 537 women students on the campus which had been designed to accommodate 2500.

With the end of the war in 1945, the campus came to life again. With the addition of returning GI's to the regular enrollment, the campus began to fill up, and by 1947 the students exceeded 5500 in number.

Currently, 3749 men students are enrolled, while women students number 1729. Of the total enrollment, 63 per cent are from San Francisco public high school.

Washington, as usual, placed the largest number of students with 770, followed by Abraham Lincoln 629, Balboa 482, Lowell 384, Galileo 356, Polytechnic 340, Mission 291 and Benjamin Franklin 186.

As for the number of graduates of high schools in other states, the newest state, Hawaii, holds first place with 84. Texas is a close second with 81.

The Republic of the Philippines leads in the number of foreign students currently enrolled here with 53. Japan and Germany are in second place with 36 each. The most troubled spot of today's world, the Union of South Africa, is represented by two.

Public Interest In Movies Spurs Hollywood To Release Top Films In Four SF Theaters

By Elmer Milligan

IN RESPONSE to the current rebirth of public interest in the motion picture industry, Hollywood movie studios will release more than 15 top new films to four San Francisco theaters within the next two months, according to local movie representatives.

The list includes I Passed For White, Portrait In Black, and Rat Race (RKO Golden Gate); Because They're Young, Mountain Road, and Hannibal (Paramount); The Fugitive Kind (United Artists), and Babette Goes To War, and The Story Of A Blonde (St. Francis).

Currently enjoying tremendous success at the box office is a Burt Lancaster production, Take A Giant Step, which played at the United Artists theater several weeks ago.

After seeing the preview of the movie a month ago, we inquired at the National Screen Service (local office) about the film's rating and were told that Take A Giant Step is a low-quality movie and would have to play on a double-bill with a top movie in order to get box office recognition.

The United Artists placed the Lancaster production on a double-bill with Solomon And Sheba, the so-called top movie. We saw both films and can honestly say that one of the movies was certainly getting a "free ride," and it was not Take A Giant Step.

In contrast to the weak "Sheba" film, "Giant Step" is a powerful, heart-warming movie with an all-Negro cast. It stars Johnny Nash, Ruby Dee, Estelle Hemsley, Frederick O'Neal and Bea Richards.

The motion picture concerns a 17-year-old Connecticut boy, Spencer Scott (Nash), who gets along with only one person in the world—his grandmother (Miss Hemsley).

First, Scott is kicked out of history class because he disagrees with the instructor on the Negro slaves' position during the Civil War, after which he violates the smoking regulations and is expelled from school.

His White friends begin to neglect him and the boy develops a persecution complex—believing that everyone hates him because of his race.

Determined to quit school, the boy leaves home and tries to have an affair with an older woman, but this fails because Scott knows nothing about sex and the facts of life.

The teenager returns home and to school. He seeks the facts of life from the family maid (Ruby Dee), instead of his parents, because the latter have always neglected him and are much too busy with their jobs.

After the grandmother dies and the maid is fired, Scott has no one to rely on. He is alone and frightened. Making a desperate effort to overcome his problems, the boy realizes he must "take a giant step" in order to establish his place in society. His parents promise to stand by him all of the time.

Baseball, Track

Ram, Panther Nines In Twin Bill Saturday

On the road, the Ram baseballers take on Hamilton Air Field tomorrow, then continue their barnstorming Saturday when they journey to Sacramento for a Big Eight conference double-header.

Tied for second with the Panther nine, the locals need wins in both contests to take over sole possession of the runner-up spot in the conference race.

Because of a double loss to Oakland recently, the Rams' championship hopes have dimmed considerably. As a further result of the disastrous series, Oakland is the league leader with eight wins, while remaining undefeated. The losses, 7-5 and 8-1, gave the college a five-win, three-loss record in league play.

Other recent contests found the college on top over Stanford J.V., 10-8, and Hamilton Field, 13-6.

Thus far in conference competition, the Rams have five men hitting above the coveted .300 mark. The players and their averages in parentheses are as follows: Bob Farber (.444), Jerry Gosland (.385), Don Lowpenski (.364), Bill Flanagan (.348), Eric Lyons (.333).

The Rams seem to feature hard-hitting pitchers as two of their top hurlers are listed among the five top sluggers. These are Lowpenski, with a 3-1 league pitching record, and Flanagan, with a 1-1 conference slate.

Leaders in the all important runs-batted-in category are Gosland (7), Mel Canavara (6), and Lyons (6).

Wolfman Speaks At Block SF Dinner June 6

Highlight of the semi-annual Block SF dinner, to be held Monday, June 6, will be guest speaker George Wolfman, head baseball coach of the University of California.

Wolfman will speak on the subject of baseball, and he will also assist in the giving out the conference championship awards to the basketball team, Block Society President Bob Ross said.

The dinner will be held in Smith Hall, he added, and Blockmen are urged to come.

Ross said that more championship awards will be given out in the future and that there could be two more this semester, with the track and tennis teams currently fighting for their respective titles.

Cindermen In NorCal Relays This Weekend

Emerging victorious in the Stockton and San Mateo meet at Stockton recently, the Red and White cindermen look as if they might go all the way this year.

Their next meet will be today with Diablo Valley at Lafayette, with the first event slated to begin at 3 p.m. Popular opinion has it that the powerful Ram thinclads will down their adversaries this afternoon.

After this meet the tracksters will travel to Modesto for the Northern California Junior College Relays this Saturday. At this affair the competition will be hard and plentiful. Last year the Red and White did fairly well in this function and hopes are that this year will see an improvement.

The Rams thus far this season have suffered a lone defeat, handed to them by the Modesto Pirates in dual competition. The locals have proved themselves to be a powerful contender. Led by men like Ray Batz, star miler, and Jess Sirles, broad jump ace, the Red and White chances seem even better.

If the locals do as well at the Northern California Relays as they did against the University of California Freshmen and Oakland City College they will have a good chance of capturing many blue ribbons.

RA Sets Full Schedule To Round Out Semester

A full schedule of events to round out the remainder of the semester has been planned by the Recreation Association, according to Elizabeth Wirth, physical education instructor and RA adviser here.

Washington High School competed with the RA volleyball club in coed volleyball last Monday, while the RA bowling league got under way April 19 at the Sports Center Bowl. All Club Activities Board clubs have been invited to enter teams in the league.

The folk and modern dance clubs of RA will play host to the local colleges and high schools in a dance symposium Saturday, May 7, at which several dances will be demonstrated by Ruth Ruling, well known folk instructor. Whelland Latherop will conduct the modern dance part of the program.

Sports day at Monterey is scheduled Saturday, May 14.

Hall Of Fame Boasts Best Of 25 Years

By Frank Dunne

AMONG the college's newest, but most honored traditions is the athletic Hall of Fame. Initiated in 1957 but covering the 25 years of City College's existence, the perpetual trophy now boasts names of 20 former members of Ram athletic teams.

Membership in the Hall of Fame is the highest honor the college can bestow on any of its athletes, and this select group is composed entirely of competitors in each sport.

The eligibility rules for election to this group are simple, yet it is only the truly outstanding man who can belong. For one of the coaches to belong he must have served in his position for at least five years, and he must now be retired from this position.

For a player to belong to the Hall of Fame, he must have participated in his sport for at least one semester and must be away from the college for at least one year.

The members are picked by a voting committee comprised of present coaches and assistant coaches and former coaches of Ram squads now serving as instructors in other fields on campus, such as Dean Ralph Hillman, Bill Fischer, counselor, and Tom Wilson, health instructor.

A list of candidates will be submitted to these men and they will be asked to select two of them who they feel deserve this honor. These names will then be processed and the two men receiving the top number of votes will be added to this year's Hall of Fame.

The football section of the Hall of Fame includes James Moilsh, 1939; James Honnert, 1940; Marshall Leong, 1944 to 1946; James Cronn, 1944; Arthur Psaltis, 1946; Robert Toquinto, 1947-48; Don Stillwell, Ollie Matson, 1948; Buri Toler, 1948-49; Al Wycoff, 1949-50; Gerald Landim, 1953; Stan Keith, 1955, and Willie Hudson, 1954-55.

Basketball members are Ralph Hillsman, 1935-36; Arthur Psaltis, 1946; Kevin Duggan, 1948-49; Bob Matheny, 1949.

Track stars are Van Parish, 1953-54; Jack Egan, 1954; Clinton Redus, 1955-56.

Lone swimmer in the Hall is the late Helen Crelenkovich, 1938-39.

15 Win Nomination To Ram Hall Of Fame

Candidates for the college's athletic Hall of Fame this year include an array of stars equal to the honor they are nominated for, as in the past only the top men in each sport have been so honored.

Two men from 15 nominated will be chosen for this year's version.

This year's candidates are Oscar Donahue, Gene Craft, L. C. Shields, football; Al Morales, Ron Frydz, soccer; Lon Simmons, Vic Corl, Mal McCormick, basketball; Will Casper, Mack Burton, Mike Lewis, Paul Patton, track; Fred Glosser, Roy Tripaldi, baseball, and Don Grant, football and baseball.

Names of the men selected will be announced here before the end of the semester.

Mathis In Orbit

BACK IN ACTION following a leg injury, Ralph Mathis, star Ram high jumper, exhibits the form that Coach Lou Vasquez deems one of the brightest spots on this year's college contingent.

Vasquez stated earlier that had Mathis not been hors de combat last year the Rams could have won the '59 championship meet.

Photography enthusiasts as well as track fans will find this shot of particular interest. Chief Guardsman cameraman Masaru Wadama caught Mathis' jump with a synchro sun strobe set at f/8.

Almost at the apex of his jump Mathis' muscles show tremendous strain. Note the contraction of the muscles in the right leg and right arm. The blur surrounding the left leg and arm indicates his hurried motion to form a scissors effect in order to clear the bar properly.

Invaders Lead Mural Action As Block SF Abandons Title

The Block SF cagers, after a seemingly endless winning streak in Independent play in the Associated Men Student intramural competition, finally lost a game, although the game actually was never really played. The only thing the opposing Filipino Club had to do that night was to show up with five men, for the long-time kings of the Independent league corralled only a determined four, and thereby forfeited the game.

A new team in the league is now in first place, a squad with the handle of the Invaders, which seems to have come out of nowhere. As it stands now the Invaders have a six-won and no-loss record to the Blockbusters' five-won and one-loss standing thus far in the season.

Other unusual things have happened in the Independent league this season. On April 19, the fighting and furious Guardsman eagers "humbled" the Newman Club by a score of 52-50 in a double overtime game.

The Inter-Fraternity Council league is led by Gamma Phi Ypsilon, who recently tromped Tau Chi Sigma, 73-27, while breathing down the necks of Gamma Phi is Alpha Phi Epsilon.

Recent action in the Independent league saw the Invaders down the Newman Club 53-24, the Lyons edge out the Pachyderms in a close one by the score of 27-25, and The Guardsman fail at the hands of the Recreation Association by default.

The Filipino Club slaughtered the Retail Floristry Club 72-40, the Ringers were downed by the Block SF 49-39, and the Lyons dumped the Hotel and Restaurant Association 45-31.

Over in the IFC league, Phi Beta Delta hit 51 and Beta Tau 32, Zeta Phi Sigma pummeled Alpha Sigma Delta 39-28, and Alpha Phi Epsilon took Alpha Kappa Rho 31-18.

Immediate action in the Independent league will pit the Lyons against the Filipino Club, the Invaders against the Block SF, the Hotel and Restaurant Association against the Ringers, and the Newman Club against the Retail Floristry Club.

The IFC league will start off with Alpha Sigma Delta against Alpha Kappa Rho, Beta Tau against Zeta Phi Sigma, Gamma Phi Ypsilon against Phi Beta Delta, and Tau Chi Sigma is slated to meet Alpha Sigma Delta.

Natators Journey To NCJC Meet This Weekend

After a comparatively successful season that showed improvement in each meet, the Ram natadors culminate the 1960 season in Vallejo Friday and Saturday in the Northern California Championships.

Oakland is the heavy favorite because of an undefeated season.

Last Friday the college traveled to Stockton for the Big Eight Championships. However, the results of that meet couldn't arrive in time for this issue.

A quick recap of the local's season shows a 1-3 won-loss record in dual-meet competition. But there was far more improvement than the statistics can show. For the first time in the college's swimming history, the Rams had a chance to defeat Stockton, only to see a questionable decision take the satisfying win away.

As a result, the college lost a fine effort, 45-47. Bill Sakovich proved the work-horse with a win in the 220-yd. backstroke, and seconds in the individual medley and 440-yd. free style.

Other point scorers and their events were Bob Fewster, first in 220-yd. free, second in the 100-yd. free; Craig Schwarz, first in 100; Pete Urrea, first in the 50-yd. free; and Al Stevens, second in the 200-yd. breast stroke. Members of the winning 400-yd. relay were Urrea, Sullivan, Fewster and Schwarz.

Former heavyweight boxing champ Rocky Marciano was given a tryout with the Chicago Cubs as a catcher.

Rams Grab Net Title; Thinclads, Baseballers Win

Displaying an awesome array of power, Coach Roy Diederichsen's netmen clinched the Big Eight Conference tennis championship with a 6-1 victory over Sacramento last Friday.

This was the Red and White's second tennis championship in three years and the second one in the college's 25-year history.

Top man on the local squad, Vince Chinn, downed Panther ace, Bob Skeeham, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-0; number two man Larry Draper, unbeaten in loop play, swarmed over his Capitol City opponent, Paul Poland, 6-1, 6-0; the number three ranked Ram, Lyn Matteson, lost to Art Dazzini in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4.

The other victors for the college were Paul Barth, who won easily over Bill Arrants, 6-1, 6-1; and Gary Robinson, who finished up the league season without dropping a match or a set, won his match, 6-1, 6-1, over Jim Turner.

Elsewhere, by edging out Sacramento, 61½ to 60½, and slaughtering Santa Rosa, 90 to 32, last Friday at Santa Rosa, the Red and White trackmen wound up Big Eight Conference play for the season. This final win of Big Eight action slots the Rams in a tie for first place with Oakland.

The Ram baseball squad beat Contra Costa 7-4 and 6-5, April 19 and 22, respectively, to stay in second place in the conference.

Big Eight Netmen Vie For Sectional Berths May 6-7

Coach Roy Diederichsen's netmen will travel to Sacramento May 6-7 to participate in the Big Eight Conference Championships.

The top eight singles players in the league will qualify for the Northern California Sectionals scheduled for May 13-14 in Modesto, while the top eight doubles teams will also qualify.

Currently standing as the only undefeated team in loop play, the Rams clinched a tie for the loop crown recently, with two smashing victories over Oakland, 7-0, and Santa Rosa by the same score.

In the match with the Thunderbirds the local netters didn't drop a single set. Vince Chinn dumped Dick Bennett, 6-1, 6-2; Larry Draper blanked Mike Phelan, 6-0, 6-0; Lynn Matteson defeated Kiyoshi Kato, 6-1, 6-3; Paul Barth overwhelmed Don Cimpher, 6-2, 6-0; and number five ranked Gary Robinson blasted Tim Lundgren, 6-1, 6-0.

In the doubles competition the Red and White duo of Chinn-Draper remained undefeated in loop action by smashing Bennett-Phelan, 6-1, 6-1, while Bill Berman-Robinson downed Cimpher-Lundgren, 6-0, 7-5, to complete the whitewashing.

Against the weak Bear Cub squad Chinn conquered John Estes, 6-1, 6-1; Draper triumphed over Dave Smith, 6-0, 6-2; Matteson subdued Norm Moore, 9-7, 6-8, 6-4. Barth mastered Mike Doyle, 6-0, 8-6; and Robinson conquered Fred Aguilera, 6-4, 6-0.

The conference's top doubles combination, Chinn-Draper, showed why they are tops by smothering Estes-Smith, 6-0, 7-5, while Matteson-Barth overcame Moore-Doyle, 6-1, 5-7, 6-2.

Journalists Stagger Sports World

Era Ends As Guardsman Wins By Playing

By Bob O'Lear

An era has ended.

Yes, one of the most spectacular events of this or any other sporting year occurred on this campus last week. Yet you won't read about it in any other periodical. Nor will it be carried by any of the local sportscasters. However, this doesn't dim the significance in any way. What happened?

The Guardsman intramural basketball team, after three patient years of trying, finally won a game by playing.

You ask how this happened? An understandable question knowing the past history of this team.

It wasn't simple. A "sudden-death" overtime, in fact, was needed. Playing a hustling Newman Club squad with everything in its favor except a driving desire, The Guardsman quintet had to overcome a 15-point half-time deficit 34-19.

In the face of this adversity a lesser team might have wilted; not so with this dauntless group. Rallying to trail by only 48-43 with 1:15 remaining, the "Silky Sullivans" of the intramural league closed fast to knot it at 48-48 at the end of regulation play.

The first overtime ended with the score changed, but not the point-spread, 50-50.

Then came a harrowing "sudden-death" overtime. Coming this close, The Guardsman five was not to be denied and a driving layup brought home the win to end one of the most remarkable streaks in basketball history.

Top man for the victors was a copy boy, newly acquired, with 18 counters. While Bob O'Lear hit for 16.

The intramural league will never be the same. And all that can be added is—bless you, Newman Club.

Miss Photo Queen Semi-Finals Set For Friday C-Hour

Preliminary judging of the Miss Photo Queen of City College contest will take place this Friday during College Hour in C-249, Emmett Smith, photography instructor, announced last week.

Photogenic women students of the college are invited to attend if they wish to be considered as possible candidates, Smith said. The judging on Friday will determine a field of semi-finalists from which the Queen and two Princesses will be chosen at a later date for participation in this year's Photography Day, an event annually sponsored by the San Francisco Park and Recreation Department at Sigmund Stern Grove.

The contest is an addition to the photography department's contribution of student work for exhibit during the college's 25th Anniversary.

Photography Day is scheduled Sunday, May 22.

Winners of the contest will participate in a parade on May 14 in addition to the posing and stage presentation on the day of the event. The queen will receive a trophy while all three finalists will be awarded prizes and merchandise.

They may also benefit from the resulting publicity, Smith declared, if they choose to enter other related competitions such as the Miss Photogenic Contest scheduled for late June at the convention of Professional Photographers in the new Jack Tar Hotel, and the Miss San Francisco contest which may lead ultimately to the Miss Universe contest at Santa Monica, California.

Pledges Debut In Spring Cotillion

Approximately 35 sorority pledges will be presented during one of the intermissions at the traditional Inter-Sorority Council Spring Cotillion Ball to be held Friday, May 6, from 9 p.m. to midnight.

The cotillion, slated for the St. Francis Hotel's Colonial Room, will feature the music of Steve Paul's nine-piece band, according to Phyliss Bauman, Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority president and band chairman.

After being presented the pledges will lead the first dance with the Presentation Waltz.

To all sorority members and their escorts admission to the dance is free. Tickets for those students who wish to attend the ball may be purchased for $2.50 from sorority members or at the door of the Colonial Room.

Sorority pledges will wear formals and each pledge is expected to display something that will distinguish her sorority. Semi-formal attire, cocktail dresses for women students and dark suits for the men, is proper for other persons attending the affair.

Inter-Sorority Council members have been working out the final details for this event.

Spring Election Campaigns Start

was the chairman of the convention; 23 clubs were represented.

The commissioner emphasized that the deadline for filing petitions is Wednesday, May 4.

Students wishing to run in the election may obtain petitions from the office of the dean of women, the dean of men, or the Associated Students.

AS presidential and vice presidential candidates must have completed from 45 to 60 units of college work; AMS, AWS and Sophomore Class presidential candidates from 30 to 60 units and Freshman Class presidential candidates from 15 to 30 units.

A 2.0 grade point average is required for all candidates.

After obtaining the signatures of at least 15 AS cardholders and paying a registration fee of $1.00 at the student bank, candidates should return their petitions to the Election Commissioner.

Kucserka added that complaints about election procedures must be typed in triplicate and given to the Election Commissioner.

He said that in view of his nomination for AMS President he would resign as Election Commissioner next week.

AWS Stages Fashion Show

16 Coeds To Model Spring Styles In Smith Hall Parade Tomorrow

By Fumi Fowells

The semi-annual Associated Women Student fashion show and tea, to be held in Smith Hall tomorrow from 3 to 5 p.m., will feature a presentation of the latest collegiate fashions ranging from beach wear to evening gowns from H. Liebes.

Theme of the fashion show is Everything Is Coming Up Roses.

Purpose of the event, as described today by Stevie Tissler, AWS president, is to honor graduating senior women of San Francisco's public and private schools, enabling them to become acquainted with the college. Among those scheduled to attend will be seniors from Mission, Lowell, Balboa, Washington, Galileo and Polytechnic.

All women students are invited, Miss Tissier said, and special invitations have been sent to the deans of women and AWS presidents of various two-year colleges throughout the Bay Area, as well as to the women faculty members here.

Invitations also have been extended to mothers of the executive officers and of the models, but Miss Tissier emphasized that any other mothers who wish to attend are welcome to do so.

The fashion parade, staged by 16 models selected from sorority and AWS members, will feature the season's newest sportswear, daytime dresses, suits, coats, evening wear and bridal gowns.

Primarily designed with the college girl's budget in mind, the clothing will range in price from $3.50 to $60.00. Each model will wear three different outfits.

Gretchen Davis will act as commentator, introducing each outfit with an appropriate song title.

Models are as follows: Merle Balatao, Diane Beeson, Marlene Bobrow, Shirley Clayton, Arlene Dougherty, Barbara Fisher, Mary Ann Grandemange, Pat Hanley, Margaret Lindstrom, Nancy Lum, Sue Rutson, Bonnie Schoenfeld, Sheila Sullivan, Diane Wilson, Karen Alward and Annette Redman.

Decorations for the hall, including a huge yellow umbrella trimmed with red and white roses, are flower arrangements consisting entirely of roses for the tea tables, as well as bouquets of roses to be carried by the models, all have been designed to provide the Everything Is Coming Up Roses mood.

Mary Golding, dean of women, Miss Tissier and other AWS officers will form a receiving line to greet the guests as they enter the hall through the bookstore side entrance.

Two hostesses will be assigned to each group of 25 guests to answer any questions they might have concerning the college and to assist them in any measure which may be required.

Before the actual fashion show commences, a string ensemble under the direction of Hilda M. W. Tsoi, music student here, will entertain with a Beethoven trio. The ensemble consists of Avis Wong, first violin; Susan Keeve, second violin, and Enedina Santos, viola.

The group will give its first formal concert on May 20 at the library here.

Additional entertainment in the form of two Japanese dances performed by Yasuko Hirai and Violet Kamatani, International Relations Club, will round out the program, following which refreshments, consisting of petite fours, brownies, cream puffs and home-made cookies, will be served with tea and punch in the adjacent fountain.

STEVIE TISSIER, Associated Women Student president, is supervising the Fashion Show and Tea, Everything is Coming Up Roses.

Among those asked to pour tea for the occasion will be Flossita Badger, music instructor, and Marjorie Balthache, foreign language instructor, both of whom are scheduled to retire at the end of the current semester.

Appropriate attire for those attending the fashion show, Miss Tissier stated, would be a cotton or a sheath dress and heels.

Because of the event, the cafeteria will close at 1 p.m. and the fountain at 2 p.m. tomorrow.

Chairmen and committees responsible for this affair are as follows: Miss Davis, commentator; Juanita Schaeffer, models; Pat Murray, clothes co-ordinator; Pat Crone, set-up; Linda Laura, clean-up; Irene Contreras, decoration; Marie Radillo, program; Brenda Payton and Joan Parkhouse, publicity; Maria Fiore, invitations;

Kay Trent, entertainment; Margaret Lindstrom, hospitality; Sophia Kwong and Irene Jen, registration; Carol Hinkson, food; Karen Hansen, serving; and Phyllis Bauman, coat check.

Auto De Fe First Of Three One-Act Plays In Theater

Auto-De Fe, a Tennessee Williams bombshell, is set to burst this Friday during College Hour in the Little Theater in Science Hall.

The play is the first of a series of one-acters and scenes to be presented during College Hours. Drama Director Michael Griffin stated that the showings will run through the rest of this semester.

Following Auto De-Fe, the thespians will present The Coiner, and then The Romancers; both are comedies.

According to Griffin, all the College Hour plays will be directed by the drama students themselves. Robert Carpenter is directing Auto De Fe. Fred Fisher will direct The Coiner.

At present the Little Theater is rehearsing its next full scale production, Country Girl. Opening night is set for Friday, May 20, at 8 p.m.

The plot centers around a former great actor, who has lost his self-confidence, and became a drunkard.

Through the play, his wife and a director try to keep him working at a role in a production, which is his only chance to get back into the theatrical world.

Griffin stated that he had planned on putting on a show with many actors but that casting difficulties forced him to pick Country Girl.

In the play, Leah Pashdian and Maren Roundrup will alternate as Georgie Evans, the actor's wife. Martha Ross and Anne Osorno will alternate as Nancy Stoddard, a young actress.

In the cast are Bill Henderson as Frank Elgin, the actor; James Robinson as Bernie Dodd, the director; Steve Doyran as Phil Cooke, a producer; Jordy Cooney as Paul Unger, a playwright, and Louis Barba as Ralph, a dresser.

Country Girl is scheduled to run for four Friday and Saturday weekend performances.

Griffin stated that the presentation will probably be the last one to be shown in the Little Theater, as the drama department expects to move into the new arts building in October.

Gamma Sigmas Push 3-Day Easter Drive Over Goal

A shorter but more intense campaign was the key to the success of Gamma Sigma Sigma's second annual Easter Drive which raised $122.00 during the three-day drive April 8-11, far surpassing the original goal of $75.00.

Mary Ann Gooschin, the sorority's first vice president and service secretary, today attributed the drive's success to assistance received from the 30 pledges of other sororities, the hard-hitting campaign staged by Gamma Sigma Sigma members, and the "wonderful" generosity of those who contributed.

The highest individual record was set by Margaret Lindstrom, second vice president of Gamma Sigma Sigma, who collected $12.00 in one day.

A penny contribution from those who could not give much also helped, since this amounted to $8 (800 pennies) in one day. Although some gave as much as a dollar, average contribution ranged from 10 to 15 cents.

With the fund, 60 Easter baskets were purchased and delivered to the children at the San Francisco County Hospital.

Having successfully completed the Easter Drive, the sorority now is engaged in preparation of other monthly projects.

Alpha Phi Omega Offers 2 Annual Scholarships

Letters of application for the two annual scholarships awarded to outstanding students by the campus chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, men's national service fraternity, are still in the process of acceptance, but must be mailed immediately to S-150, Mary Golding, dean of women, stated yesterday, stressing the word "immediately."

Qualifications for the scholarships include the participation in the leadership of campus activities, possession of high ambitions and financial limitations.

The scholarship money, $250, or $150 for each winner, was raised from the Ugly Man On Campus contest and the UMOC dance, held last Friday night in Smith Hall.

Margi Hill Steps Down From AS Vice Presidency; Council Votes To Change New Political Party Name

By Paul Plansky

In a sudden surprise move, Margaret Hill's office of Associated Student Vice President was terminated as she relinquished her post last Thursday in Student Council. AS President Wally Hayes appointed Bill Keane, Associated Men Student president, and Stevie Tissier, Associated Women Student president, to decide between them over the weeknd which one will fill the vacancy, since they are both next in line for the office.

Hayes was about to adjourn the Thursday session of council when Sherm Elworthy, Student Council adviser, called to the president's attention that he had omitted a "very pertinent" matter from the agenda.

Hayes remained silent until Elworthy disclosed the subject of Miss Hill's position.

The most controversial motion passed in the last three weeks of council concerned the USP, ASP alphabet soup political party situation.

Passed with nine affirmative votes, four negative votes, and one abstention, the motion ordered the newly formed political party, the Associated Students Party, to change its name for the forthcoming election because of its similarity to the official Associated Student organization of the college.

This move touched off a red hot explosion of opposition from members affiliated with ASP. At the session immediately following that, Joe Egri, nominated to run for AS President on the ASP ticket, tactfully stated that his group would drop their chosen name for a substitute.

Many cabinet members boisterously rebutted this move as an unconstitutional act, yet Hayes stated that council is the governing body of the students and has the final word on all student operations.

On a more progressive note, council passed a tidal wave of sports budgets, taking a total of $6642.43 from AS funds. Faye Fountain, AS finance chairman, moved to rescind the previous allotment of $627.99 for the swimming team and $645.14 for the tennis team.

After both budgets were rescinded, Miss Fountain moved to pass the entire athletic budget with one motion, which would include all teams and facilities of the athletic department which need funds.

The total amount of the combined budget passed unanimously.

Prospective Grads Aid In Commencement Planning

Prospective graduates of the June 1960 class will assist the commencement committee, John Brady, chairman, in planning the graduation ceremonies this year.

Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman is currently conducting a survey among the prospective graduates, via letters, requesting their opinions on the date, time and site of the exercises.

The names of the prospective graduates to assist in commencement planning were selected from the registrar's graduation-petition list; every seventh name on the list was chosen.

Delta Psi Makes Appeal For Books

Between 75 and 100 books have been turned in to a book drive for Korea, currently being conducted by Delta Psi sorority and under the direction of Martha Scott, sponsor, and Alberta Giannini, chairman.

An appeal to students and faculty has been made for books for the drive which will run for an indefinite length of time. Books can be left in the box at the Silver Pole in Science Hall, or with Miss Scott in S-239.

Requirements for usable books are that they must be published after 1945, they must be university, college and secondary level books, works by standard authors such as Hawthorne, Hemingway, Plato, and they must be in good condition. No paper-back books or magazines are acceptable.

Volumes published before 1945 will be put to good use in other places, Miss Giannini stated.

Annual Blood Drive To Start May 12

Tau Chi Sigma's annual blood drive will be held Thursday and Friday, May 12 and 13, Mike Haskell, member of the fraternity, stated today.

An Irwin Memorial blood team will be housed in C-249, the photo lab, both days from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. to accommodate the donors.

Those who donate a pint of blood will either receive credit with the bank for a year's unlimited supply of blood for himself should he need it, or for a member of his immediate family, or he may assign up to eight pints to someone else.

In order to avoid a misunderstanding, Haskell emphasized that only one of the three choices is offered to the blood donor.

The blood drive will be climaxed Friday with a rally during a double College Hour and a dance entitled. The House Of Blue Lights, scheduled for the same night.

Particulars concerning both the dance and the rally are still being planned.

A trophy will be given to the club or organization whose members donate the most blood; however, Haskell cautioned, those members and non-members who wish to contribute and who are under 21 must have a written release from their parents before they will be eligible to give.

Printed forms designed to secure such a release will be distributed throughout the campus a few days before the drive begins.

Lack Of Funds Nixes CAB Spring Festival

Because of the lack of Associated Student funds and the busy Club Activities Board schedule this semester, CAB has cancelled its annual Spring Festival.

However, Delmar Rose, CAB president, announced recently that the event, set for May 20, will be substituted by College Hour entertainment that day and a dance that evening.

A 15-piece band will play for students at the Redwood Ram and will also provide music for the dance that night in Smith Hall.

New Cafe Addition Brings End To 'Battle Of The Bottleneck'

By C. Wise

Rioting students in Korea forced Syngman Rhee to call out an entire division of army troops to keep the peace. City College had only Sherm Elworthy to deal with the 5000-odd hungry people who storm the cafeteria daily. Both battles seem to be over. The Korean division lost; Sherm Elworthy won.

With the opening of the new section of Smith Hall to diners this week, Elworthy looks forward to much less congestion and more convenience for those who are interested in relaxing and having lunch during their noon break.

In addition to the much needed new 240 seats in the latest addition to the dining room, there is now the added convenience of an exit at the north end of Smith Hall, as far as possible from the entrance down by the food lines and cashiers. Campus officials have every reason to believe that students will keep up the long standing college tradition of keeping off the grass when using this door, which opens behind the Redwood Ram.

The original seating capacity of the cafeteria was 472. It is now 712 or more. At one time a student looking for a seat could be told, "This one is taken," 472 times. It is hoped that the opening of the new area will not mean that a harried diner will now be told this 712 times.

Elworthy will appreciate students not holding any more seats than are necessary, and those who are having seats held for them getting to them as soon as possible.

Taking a page from the manual of the Golden Gate Bridge and also the Municipal Railway System, protocol asks that students coming through the lines to the cashiers' stands try to have the correct change ready and in their hands. This is one of the many ways that service may be speeded up in the cafeteria.

Another suggestion that has been put forward to help break bottlenecks during lunch hour is staggering students. (These are not those who have been imbibing before eating.) Rather they are the ones (and the smart ones) who do not rush to eat at 11 a.m. or 12 noon but take their time or even wait and arrive at the cafeteria at 11:30 a.m. or 12:30 p.m. They are assured fast service, seats, and still have plenty of time to eat.

Little things mean a lot, and it is the little things that can be done by each one of the patrons of the cafeteria that will make life and lunch a pleasure for all.

Stacking one dish on another and one tray on another not only makes more room on the tables but it makes it much easier and much faster for the people coming around to bus the dirty dishes. Pushing dirty dishes toward the aisles rather than toward the walls makes for another broken bottleneck in this department.

Students who are overcome by the beautiful Spring weather are reminded that when they take upon themselves the responsibility of removing dishes from the building so that they may commune with nature while they eat; also inherit the responsibility of returning those same dishes before the lunch hours are over.

Members of the City College Diners Club are asked to remember that each is only one of thousands who use these facilities every day. Using two chairs is out. Stretching out is out. If all the people who are in Smith Hall every day were laid end to end it might make it easier to clean off the tables, but it would be a lot harder to find a place to sit down.

ISC Schedules Cotillion Ball Friday Night At St. Francis; Spring Pledges Make Debut

Spring pledges will be presented by the Inter-Sorority Council at the semi-annual Cotillion Ball, scheduled for the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel this Friday from 9 p.m. to midnight.

During the evening each pledge will be formally introduced to the audience by the president of her sorority, guided by the strains of the Presentation Waltz to be played by Steve Paul and his band.

To all sorority members and their escorts admission to the ball is free. Tickets for those students who wish to attend the event may be purchased for $2.50 from sorority members or at the door of the Colonial Room.

Semi-formal attire, cocktail dresses for women students and dark suits for the men, is proper for those attending the affair.

Each sorority pledge will wear a formal and wear something that will distinguish the particular sorority she is representing.

ISC members have been working out the final details for this dance. There have been various chairmen appointed to head committees within each sorority, Linda Lauro, ISC president, stated.

Joanna Geary, Delta Psi president, is in charge of making the hotel arrangements. Gamma Kappa Beta's president, Pat Perkins, tallies, and Phyllis Bauman, Gamma Sigma Sigma, band chairman.

Gretchen Davis of Phi Beta Rho and Irene Palmini of Zeta Chi will rehearse the pledges before they are presented.

Sorority faculty sponsors who have been invited to attend the ball are Dale Forbes, Martha Scott, Olga Perfair, Vivian Ward and Ruth Inskipp.

Faculty patrons for the dance will be Herbert Davis and James McConnell. The patroness for the ball is Dean Mary Golding, sponsor and adviser for the ISC.

Fraternity Slates Blood Drive Rally, Dance For May 13

Scheduled for two days, Tau Chi Sigma's annual Blood Drive begins Thursday, May 12, with a rally during a double College Hour Friday, May 13, and The House Of Blue Lights dance that night.

During both days of the drive an Irwin Memorial blood team will be housed in C-249, the photo lab, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. for the benefit of those planning to donate blood.

"Not only is the giving worthwhile but the donor himself benefits," Mike Haskell, chairman of the drive, emphasized.

Each person who gives a pint of his blood will receive credit with the bank for a year's unlimited supply of blood for himself should he need it, or for a member of his immediate family, or he may assign up to eight pints to someone else.

However, Haskell cautioned, in order to avoid a misunderstanding, only one of the three choices is offered to the blood donor.

A trophy will be awarded to the club or organization whose members donate the most blood.

Students, Haskell emphasized, who are under 21 must have a written release from their parents before they will be eligible to give.

Printed forms designed to secure such a release will be distributed throughout the campus a few days before the drive begins.

Particulars concerning the dance and rally are still in the planning stage but, according to Haskell, good entertainment will be presented.

Student-Authors Submit 165 Entries To Forum

Approximately 165 manuscripts were submitted to Forum magazine for possible publication, Catherine Connolly, Forum adviser, announced recently.

The manuscripts are now being read in Miss Connolly's office, C-331A. Students interested in judging the material can report to Miss Connolly's office between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. today and between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. tomorrow.

About 30 short stories, plays and poems will be chosen for publication in the magazine. Manuscripts are being selected on the basis of content, aptness of thought and originality.

Former Student Exhibits Pen And Ink Sketches Of Recent Travels In Russia

Pen and ink drawings of Russia by a former student of advertising art at City College are on display at the Henry George School of Social Science, 833 Market Street, San Francisco.

Earl Thollander, the artist, began his career under the guidance of art instructor William J. Eckert while attending the college from 1939 until 1942.

The subject of the drawings is the Russia Thollander saw while on his recently concluded trip to that country. He made the trip as part of a student group which was led by Dr. Louis Wasserman, a philosophy and government instructor at San Francisco State College.

Students who are interested will be able to view the exhibit until Friday, May 13.

Feminine Fling Set For June 3

Feminine Fling, under the co-sponsorship of the Associated Women Students, the Inter-Sorority Council, and the Recreation Association will be presented on June 3 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., at Smith Hall, Stevie Tissier, AWS president, announced today.

The last social gathering of this semester for women students, the affair will feature the presentation of trophies to top woman athletes and the installation of incoming presidents of the AWS, the ISC and of the Recreation Association.

A buffet supper will be served, followed by movies.

Inter-Sorority Council Members Plan Ball

THESE EIGHT COEDS were instrumental in the behind the scenes planning for this Friday's Inter-Sorority Council Spring Cotillion Ball to be held at the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel.

Standing in the back row are Joanna Geary of Delta Psi, Pat Perkins from Gamma Kappa Beta, Audrey Ceaser of Delta Sigma Tau, Phyllis Bauman of Gamma Sigma Sigma, and Irene Palmini from Zeta Chi.

The group made the necessary arrangements for the hotel, the band, and other items such as flowers, tallies, invitations and tickets.

Keane Fills Vacant AS Post; Council Maintains Stand On Name The Party Controversy

By Paul Plansky

After formal acceptance of Associated Student Vice President Margi Hill's resignation and the immediate installation of Bill Keane, former Associated Men Student president, to fill the vacancy, Student Council last week directed its attention to the reopening of controversy over the naming of campus political parties.

Keane was sworn into office by AS President Wally Hayes after council had given Keane an unanimous vote of confidence. Also the resignation of Gerald Kucserka as AS Election Commissioner was officially accepted. Appointment of a replacement is still pending.

Robert Johnson, political science instructor here, was a guest at council's Thursday meeting to hear both sides of the United Students Party-Associated Students Party political controversy and then give his opinion of the case.

The "Name the Party Contest" started several weeks ago when council passed a motion to ban the name "Associated Students Party" from the forthcoming student elections on May 16 and 17. Council claimed that the title resembled that of the Associated Students of the college too closely and could be unjustly confused with the campus's official organization.

Speaking in favor of retaining the name, Joe Egri, ASP's candidate for President, read verbatim from the AS constitution, stating that council was reading between the lines, a judicial body's prerogative, and called council's ruling unconstitutional.

The newly installed AS Vice President spoke against "ASP," saying that the proposed name could be confused with the Associated Student organization so easily that it would infringe upon an established name of a quarter of a century's duration.

Keane added that the name would be misleading in the forthcoming elections.

Jack Verga, Sophomore Class President, added that "Associated Students" is printed plainly on all AS cards, and that this gives a patented right for the usage of the title.

In rebuttal, Bud Andrews pointed out that just because one political party in America is designated as the Democratic Party certainly does not suggest that it is the only political party that upholds "democracy."

Other orators added their advice to the USP-ASP quarrel, and the alphabet soup was getting plenty thick.

Then Johnson was called upon to give his opinion as an outsider, representing the faculty, and as an authority on political issues.

He started out by explaining that the issue is merely a confusion in the usage of terms and identification.

Johnson said that although he carries a Union Oil credit card he has never hesitated to stop at an Associated station.

He pointed out that there is a political party in this country called the "United States Party." "Does the party represent all of America?" he asked. "Most of you never heard of it," he said. He definitely sided with the cause of ASP.

After his deliberation, he received a fine hand, whereupon council member Mary Ann Gooschin moved to rescind the motion banning ASP's name. The motion failed to get the required two-thirds majority.

Council received an open letter from Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, commending all campus organizations for their "tremendous" co-operation in making last week's Open House the success it was. He singled out chairman Judy Day for her "untiring time and effort."

Petitions For AS Election Due Today; Polls Open May 16

The deadline for filing petitions to run for Associated Student government offices in the election of Monday, May 16, and Tuesday, May 17, is today.

As of Thursday, April 28, only three candidates who were not affiliated with major parties on campus had filed petitions.

In addition to choosing officers for the 20 positions to be filled in the election, voters will also be asked to consider four constitutional amendments proposed by Student Council.

Jerry Kucserka, this semester's Election Commissioner, resigned his position last Tuesday, April 26, because he is a candidate in the forthcoming election.

Kucserka said that by resigning his office he would avoid the possibility of being charged with impartiality in fulfilling the duties of Election Commissioner.

(Article 4, section 4, part D of the Associated Student Constitution states: "The Election Commissioner, during his term of office shall be ineligible to run for an elective office.")

As of last week Wally Hayes, Associated Student president, had not appointed a successor to Kucserka's office. However, Jerry Griffin, member of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity, had volunteered to undertake the duties of the position.

Students wishing to run in the election may obtain petitions from the dean of men, the dean of women or the Associated Student office.

Council Should Use, Not Abuse Associated Student Constitution

WHEN OPPONENTS questioned the validity of council's action April 19 forcing the Associated Student Party to change its name because of the confusion with the official AS organization that might ensue, President Wally Hayes quieted them by saying that council is the governing body of the students and has the final word on all student operations.

This is an all-inclusive statement that rings of virtual dictatorship. The Associated Students have a constitution, and a political philosophy such as this makes it a mere scrap of paper.

Bringing this political party name hassle to a vote made an issue of the situation, something that could probably have been avoided with a little tact out of council meeting. More important, it made an issue of the constitutionality of the power used by council. Nowhere in the constitution does council have the power to enact such legislation.

In the same light, the gap left by Margi Hill's termination of office as Vice President was settled when Hayes appointed the Associated Men Student President and Associated Women President to decide between themselves over the weekend which one should fill the vacancy.

President Hayes claimed both were in line to fill the office. Having them meet on the weekend may have had social merit, but we believe a more democratic process could have been followed.

Article III of the constitution lists the order of precedence in the President's Cabinet. In this listing the AMS head comes just below the Vice President, and the AWS President follows him.

If it was, for some reason, necessary to make a decision regarding the capabilities of the two, it seems logical for council to have the final voice, as it did when former Associated Student President Dick Cottrell resigned just one year ago. Possibly an amendment to the constitution should be added to cover these situations adequately.

We have a constitution here. Let's use it and safeguard it. A possible answer could be some type of interpretative group. However, if council is going to have the "final word" on all matters, then let's face up to it and throw the constitution away.

Open House Program A Success

DESPITE heavy rain, many interested San Franciscans visited the college's recent Open House. The laurels for this event's success deservedly go to Publicity Chairman Judy Day and her committee and the other Associated Student members who worked on the project.

Miss Day's group and the Club Activities Board spent many extra hours mailing invitations and extending personal welcomes to local dignitaries.

Guides were supplied for the event by Student Council, sororities, fraternities and clubs, programs were printed, exhibits were displayed, and a special showing of the Little Theater's Man Who Came To Dinner was staged for the Open House. Visitors were so numerous that the college's elevator had to be run in a shuttle service.

To all those who showed a renaissance of college spirit in making the Open House the success it was, The Guardsman says "Thank you."

Foresight — Names Carry A Great Importance In Life

By Elmer Milligan

A PERSON'S name is his most precious birthright. It is two or more words given specifically to an individual to place him in a family grouping and distinguish him from other people.

A name seems like a simple thing, but its importance to people is incomparable. Everyone loves his name, whether it is Crabtree or Chickadee, and the possessors go to great lengths to protect it.

While a certain name may sound amusing to some people, any criticism of it can mean trouble to the joking offenders.

With the help of certain essentials (like a little old piece of money, for one) a person's name is one of his most powerful assets, for a name can be a determining factor in the success and happiness of one's life.

Take the name Crosby, for instance. When the name Bing is added to it, approximately one-seventh of the world's population recognizes it as a "power" in this country's financial, theatrical and social circles.

Of the 6884 students enrolled here, the college's registration list contains names ranging from Aaro to Zowasky. The longest student name here is Alan Herboloshermer and the shortest is Helen Ho.

We wonder if any instructor here, teaching daily classes, would like having these students' names on his class roll: Zaviantseff, Afanasiev, Chetverikoff, Stoeppelwerth and Herboloshermer.

In keeping with the merry month of May we offer a list of pet names for students currently enrolled here.

Wouldn't it be funny if—

Judy Day were Judy Night . . .

Faye Fountain were Faye Faucet . . .

Gary Ono were Gary Oyes . . .

Geneva Warner were Geneva Switzerland . . .

Doug Cathcart were Doug Pushcart . . .

Garrick Wayne Go were Garrick Wayne Stop . . .

Ha Jay Man were Ha Say Man . . .

Bob O'Lear were Bob O'Dear . . .

Laurel Groom were Laurel Bride.

THE COLLEGE'S RADIO BROADCASTERS take their stations as KCSF prepares to go on the air. In addition to carrying items of interest to students here, the campus radio also carries musical broadcasts.

Who Decides Cafe Music?

'Voiceless' Students Request Jazz, Faculty Favors Background Music As KCSF Faces Broadcasting Conflict

By Bob O'Lear

Surprisingly, little is known about a potentially influential means of campus communications. With this in mind, it seems some enlightenment concerning the organization known as KCSF Broadcasters is in order.

Possibly a reason for the station's comparative anonymity on campus lies in the lack of a satisfactory solution to the basic conflict in which it finds itself embroiled. "The conflict has always existed," Ben Schwartzmann, general manager, states, "concerning the problem of satisfying the faculty and students at the same time."

Caught between two diverse opinions on the selection of music, KCSF has been forced into a middle-of-the-road policy in its attempt to satisfy both elements. "The students prefer jazz and good popular music. On the other hand, faculty members prefer quiet background music," Schwartzmann continued.

The compromise, as most intermediary solutions tend to be, has accomplished little in the way of an adequate answer. If anything, KCSF has been compelled to follow the expressed wishes of faculty members because students fail to express their wishes.

"There is only so much we can do," Schwartzmann remarked, "The Student Council has backed us all the way. Dean Hillsman has been most co-operative. And our own adviser, Henry Leff, has really helped. But still, without student comment, our hands are more or less tied." This apathy on the part of the student body has been largely responsible for the lack of more compliance with their wishes.

Another problem confronting the club is a faculty demand for less announcing and more music. "The purpose of KCSF is to train announcers, not solely engineers," Ken Jonah, program director, injected.

Announcing is keynoted on Campus Carrier every day at 10:10 a.m. when KCSF broadcasts to most classes coming events and club news.

Regular broadcasting time opens in the morning at 7:30. This segment of the broadcast day is mainly background music, some vocals, and at least nine minutes of classical, concluding at 10 a.m. Then the second half of the day's activities begin at noon, ending at 1 p.m. With the exception of a light jazz show on Mondays, this section is essentially background music, excluding vocals.

The broadcasting hours are piped into the cafeteria all day. Every semester the club is allotted $75 by the Student Council to replenish the record supply. A committee is then selected to purchase recordings.

Concerning the equipment, the station mailed letters at the beginning of the semester offering any assistance to the faculty in their classes.

"We want to co-operate with faculty wishes as much as possible. But we would especially like some student reaction. After all, they are why we're here," Schwartzmann said.

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob Pacini

FROM HERE and there—mostly there. Browsing through the mountainous accumulation of exchange mail, we came upon the following examples of life at other campuses.

At a midwestern college a class, studying Dante's Inferno, was followed in the same room by a class which was devoted to the study of Bible literature. Thus hell and holiness were only 10 minutes apart.

• • •

IN A KANSAS STATE university English class, students were discussing Chaucer's England. The professor explained that at the time there were three groups of people—clergy, laity and aristocracy. Each group was about one-third of the population.

One coed, obviously impressed by this, gasped, "I certainly didn't realize the clergy compromised one-third of the population."

• • •

TEACHING HAS its hazards, as in the case of a certain professor at a Texas woman's college, whose wife was enrolled in one of his classes.

His wife arrived late one morning to his lecture and entered the class saying, "Honestly, the car wouldn't start."

Giving her a skeptical glance, the prof-husband replied, "I could make a terrific slam right now, but I like to eat too much."

• • •

FROM OUR OWN HALL. At the recent open house here the question of what could be easier than one person running an automatic elevator was answered—two people. The lifts in Cloud and Science Halls were operated for visitors to the college by students, among whom were Alberta Giannini and Ron Cook, who shared the task of pushing buttons in the Science Hall hoist.

ONE COLLEGE DAY last week really got off to a pretty bad start for Pat Perkins, a journalism student here. Seems Miss Perkins and a Muni bus door had a difference of opinion, for in attempting to exit from the vehicle Miss Perkins' trunk-size purse lodged itself tightly in the door.

The bus stopped, Miss Perkins stopped, the door stopped and only the bus driver turned and bellowed: "Step up, lady!" Miss Perkins stepped up. The bus started and Miss P. started to class with a badly dented purse.

THE COLLEGE, literally, is blooming. At the corner of Ocean and Phelan can be seen the initials C. C. S. F., which were planted by the college's horticulture department.

'Terrible' Terry Makes Good Pet

Harmless Spider Takes Blame For Cousin's Actions

By Jo Ann Griffin

Spiders, although viewed by the Biology 40 students under the direction of Charles Stewart as having only scientific value, have added much to the culture and non-culture of civilization.

Tarantulas such as those displayed last week in the window of the third floor of Science Hall are particularly interesting.

Student reaction to the banana boat stowaway from Central America has been varied, ranging from emotional outcries of being subjected to the sight of it before 10 a.m., to mild murmurings of disgusted interest.

This is partly because tarantulas have added their share to superstitions. Many persons believe that they are poisonous, can leap or jump or are a bad omen. Tam Endo, Dawnita Campbell and Louise Yamaguchi, students responsible for the exhibit, assert that Terry Tarantula is harmless.

Most students are unaware of the tarantula's contribution to culture, but actually, out of the lore of the tarantula came the tarentella, a Neopolitan folk dance which originated in the 16th century.

In an Italian town on a spring morning, someone would run from a hut to the town square or meeting place. He would soon be followed by another man or woman, then more men, women and children.

TERRY THE TARANTULA, the large spider which was on display to students last week, is shown in comparison to the hand of Charles Stewart, biology instructor here. While the spider's bite is painful but harmless, most persons wouldn't relish the idea of sticking a finger next to such a creature. —Guardsman photo by Gary Ono.

There they would begin a frenzied dance, whirling and running, waving their arms and twisting their bodies.

Soon more and more villagers would run to the square until most of the residents were there. There they would dance and whirl, often accompanied by tambourines.

When the sun went down they would still be dancing savagely. This might continue for days, until everyone fell to the ground in exhaustion.

Only then would the village be free from the venomous bite of the tarantula, which everyone feared and for which everyone knew the only cure was the tarantella.

When settlers migrated to America they saw some spiders which resembled the dreaded Italian type and mistakenly called these tarantulas. The American type is not poisonous, although its bite can be painful.

But still the superstition remains, and students look at them with feelings of disgust and interest, perhaps unknowingly reflecting the original fear of the tarantula.

Ram Baseballers End Season With Cub Game Friday

Holding the number two spot in the Big Eight baseball race behind the powerful Oakland Thunderbirds, Coach Lee Eisan's hard-hitting Rams complete the season against the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs Friday afternoon on the Balboa diamond at 3 p.m.

Riding along on a seven-won three-loss record in conference play, the only defeats the Red and Whites have suffered were at the hands of the T-Birds twice and once to the Modesto Pirates.

As of April 30, the Cubs were sporting a two-won, five-loss and one-tie record in the loop, but one of those victories was over those same Bucs from Modesto, so the Eisanmen will not have it easy when the Santa Rosans come to town.

Coach Cook Sypher of Santa Rosa will show a fine array of pitching when he will start two of the finest hurlers in the league, Ed Millerstrom and Chuck Harless.

Supplying the punch for the Rams will be third baseman Jerry Gosland, who has held well on the hot corner throughout the season.

Catcher Bob Farber will close out his fine career under Eisan, and will seek his second straight nomination for All-Big Eight honors. His bat has proved that he deserves it as he is hitting well in the .300's.

Rounding out the infield will be Don Leonardini at first base, Mel Canavero at second, Byron Beckes at shortstop and Gorland at third.

The outfield is comprised mostly of new faces, with Eric Lyons in left, Bob Lane in center and Ray Greggains in right.

The pitching has been tough down to the wire in the persons of southpaw Bill Flanagan, former Berkeley High ace, Randy Pace and Don Lowpensky. Extra depth is added in Henry Padia and Dick Murray. Reno DiBono, an outfielder, can chuck well if needed.

Tracksters Take Nor Cal Relays; Batsmen Split

Racing past a valiant College of Sequoia track squad the local contingent won the Northern Junior College Relays in Modesto last weekend as they compiled 46½ points, while the Ram baseball team split a double-header with the Sacramento Panthers, taking the opener 4-2 and dropping the nightcap, 6-2.

In track, the second place squad was the College of Sequoias with a final tally of 41½ points. The Rams beat a previous relay record and tied another at the affair. In the past the wins which the Rams racked up could be attributed to the efforts of a few top men. This time, however, other team members turned in very excellent performances.

In baseball, both clubs entered the double affair hoping for two wins and a chance to stand alone in the second spot in the Big Eight.

But by virtue of the split, it eliminated both of them from title contention with the front-running Oakland Thunderbirds.

The Rams and Sacramento remain deadlocked for the runner-up position with eight wins and four losses.

In the first game, the Red and White scored all their four runs in the fourth inning off Panther starter Mel Rose.

Bob Farber started the big fourth for the locals by doubling to left; Jerry Gosland singled him home, but was out trying to stretch it into a two-bagger.

Bill Flanagan followed with a one-baser to left. Eric Lyons also singled.

After Ray Greggains flied out to center, little Ed Coit laced a double down the left field line to score Flanagan and Lyons.

Flanagan went the distance for the Rams to earn his third decision against one defeat.

The second tilt saw an erratic and jittery Ram team fall before the Panthers, 6-2.

Don Lowpensky hurled for City College in this, a game marred by throwing errors around the infield that made the ball look like a volleyball kicked around in a soccer game.

Big Eight Champions

THE RAM TENNIS TEAM, champions of the Big Eight Conference, are, from left to right, Vincent Chinn, number one ranked; Lynn Matteson, number three; Bill Berman, number six; Gary Robinson, number five; Paul Barth, number four; Larry Draper, second ranked, and, in front, Coach Roy Diederichsen.—Guardsman photo by Gary Ono.

Local Netmen Face Stern Test In League Tennis Championships

By Warren Downes

Vince Chinn and Larry Draper, top ranked men on the Ram tennis squad, lead the college's netmen into the Big Eight Conference championships at Sacramento this weekend.

The conference championships will decide the individual champions of the conference; the team title went to Roy Diederichsen's powerful aggregation April 22. The top eight singles players and the best eight doubles teams in the loop will qualify for the Northern California Sectionals scheduled for Modesto on May 13-14.

During the sectionals the top eight singles players in Northern California will be chosen, along with the eight best doubles combinations. These winners will gain a berth in the state championships set for May 20-21 at Golden Gate Park.

The battle for the conference singles title looms as a fight between Tom Muench, the Modesto ace and the only man to beat Chinn during the league season, Chinn and Draper of the local squad, Bob Harrison of Stockton, and Bob Atwood of Modesto.

In the doubles competition the college's duo of Chinn-Draper, unbeaten in loop play, is favored over Muench-Atwood, the highly rated Modesto team, and several other top doubles combinations.

Undefeated in league action the locals ended the season with six wins and their second conference championship in three years.

Gary Robinson, number five ranked on the local net squad, and Draper, second ranked, finished the season without dropping a match. Chinn, the Rams' ace netter, was the mainstay of the squad, and he and Draper combined to form one of the finest doubles teams in the conference.

The other three on the squad, Lynn Matteson, Paul Barth and Bill Berman, were extremely valuable and gave the Rams several important victories.

Block Dinner Hosts City Prep Coaches

Six more places of honor will be reserved at the Block SF Society's semi-annual awards dinner, scheduled June 6, with six seats occupied by the newly crowned championship tennis team.

The tennis team, along with the track squad, were hopeful of winning their respective championships. The track team is dual meet co-champion of the conference, so the championship will be determined at the state meet.

Ross declared that in an effort to bring coaches and athletes in closer association, a coach from each one of the high schools in the city has been invited. Ross believes that this will help the coaches get a picture of the athletic status of the college, so that they can refer their students to the college in later years.

Winners of the 1960 Athletic Hall of Fame nominations will be invited to the dinner also.

Team Forfeits Mar Intramural Basketball Play

The Invaders, unknown to the intramural league until this semester, swept farther ahead last week in their quest for the league crown, while the Block SF, defending champion and a strong contender until recently, has dropped behind the pace-setters.

The reason for the Block club's losing streak is that the five have forfeited almost all of their recent games.

The Blockmen up until this semester were the most powerful team that the league had seen in a long time. Now, however, with the forfeit problem on their hands and the powerful Invaders doing nothing to help the situation, the Block club has fallen greatly.

Over in the Inter-Fraternity league Gamma Phi Ypsilon, which hasn't lost one game this season, is the undisputed leader of the loop. The men from Gamma Phi have exhibited tremendous shooting and ball-handling ability in their games thus far this season and should be a strong contender for the entire intramural championship.

Recent play in the Independent league saw the Filipino Club drop the Pachyderms 42-25, the Recreation Association grab an easy win over the Block SF by forfeit, the Ringers down the Retail Floristry Club, also by forfeit, and the mighty Guardsman lose to first place Invaders through the failure of the two-fingered typists to field a team.

The Hotel and Restaurant team won over the Filipino Club by forfeit, while the Newman Club won in the same way over the Block SF. The Pachyderms remembered not to forget to remember and downed the Ringers by forfeit. Finally, the Recreation Association mailed the Retail Floristry men, 27-12.

There is a very interesting situation existing in the previous eight games listed. Six were won by forfeit and only two were really played.

Action in the IFC league saw Beta Tau overcome by Alpha Phi Epsilon 39-13, Gamma Phi Ypsilon down Alpha Kappa Rho 47-23, Phi Beta Delta over Zeta Phi Sigma 37-26, and Alpha Phi Epsilon over Tau Chi Sigma 60-22.

Alpha Sigma Delta over Tau Chi Sigma 52-19, Zeta Phi Sigma over Beta Tau 35-30, Gamma Phi Ypsilon 41 to Phi Beta Delta's 35.

Ram Cindermen Hopeful In Big Eight Conference Meet At Santa Rosa This Saturday

Following their narrow win over Sacramento's Panthers in a triangular meet, the Ram track squad travels to Santa Rosa this Saturday afternoon for the individual championship contest of the Big Eight Conference.

Presently deadlocked in first place in conference competition with Oakland's Thunderbirds, Coach Lou Vasquez's men will count on the performance of such notables as Lon Colbert, Ray Batz, the Jenkins twins, Ralph Mathis, Jess Sirles and Tom Jennings.

In the three-way contest against Sacramento and Santa Rosa, Sirles, Batz and Mathis led the Ram attack to dump Santa Rosa's Bear Cubs 90-32 and edge the Panthers 61½-60½.

In all, the Rams captured seven first places in the contest. A summation of the event follows:

In the mile run James (SF) placed second with Corcoran (Sac.) coming in third. The 440-yard dash saw Crabbe (Sac.) take first with a time of 50.7, trailed by Watkins (Sac.) and Tashyan (Sac.) third.

The 100-yard dash was won by Holman (Sac.) with a time of 10 seconds with Colbert (SF) taking second, followed by a third place, Jenkins (SF).

In the high hurdles it was Williams (SF), Molise (SF) and Mentzer (SF) and in the 880-yard run Andrew (Sac.) Gomzalez (Sac.) and Jennings (SF). Winning time in the 880 was 1:58.9.

The shot-put event was won by Fuller of Sacramento with a heave of 45'8".

Colbert of the Rams won the 220-yard dash with a time of 22.4, with Holman of Sacramento coming in second and Jenkins of the locals taking a third place slot.

The 220 low hurdles were also won by the Red and White tracksters with Williams, who turned in a very fine performance at the meet, the victor. His time was 25.1.

Batz, James and Graff of the Rams took the two-mile run in that order. The winning time was 9:54.1. The discus was won by Sacramento with a mark of 137'.

The relay was taken by Sacramento with a time of 3:26.1.

The final Big Eight Conference track standings are:

	Won	Lost
CCSF	6	1
Oakland	6	1
Modesto	5	2
Sacramento	5	2
Stockton	3	4
Contra Costa	2	5
Santa Rosa	1	6
San Mateo	0	7

All-Star Mermen Clash On Weekend In State Finals

By Bob O'Lear

Depending on the times in last week's Northern California Swim Championships in Vallejo, the college may send as many as seven men to the State Championships in Bakersfield tomorrow, Friday and Saturday.

Coach Roy Burkhead stated that several of the swimmers are capable of placing in the state meet if they attain their best times. However, the deciding factor is the results and times of the Northern Cal meet.

At press time these results were unavailable, but the meet stands as the last chance for the Ram swimmers to upset Stockton College this season.

Defeating Stockton has become an obsession with the locals after two "judgment" calls have cost them close victories.

In the Big Eight meet in Stockton recently, the college had second place, behind Oakland, sewed up after an apparent first place in the free style relay. However, the relay team was disqualified because of a missed turn and Stockton slipped into second, while the Rams ended in third.

The free style strength of the college was shown by a Ram-filled finals in the 50 and 100-yd. free style events.

Results of the 50 were Pete Urrea, first; Craig Schwarz, third; Bob Fewster, fourth, and Dick Sullivan, fifth. Finals of the 100: Fewster, first; Sullivan, fourth, and Schwarz, fifth.

One-meter dive: Bob Corsiglia, third; 200 breast stroke: Bill Sakovich, third; 100 breast stroke: Al Stevens, fourth; 200 breast stroke: Stevens, third; 100 breast stroke: Sakovich, fourth, Gene Gayner, sixth.

RAMBLINGS — Brawn Bows, Brain Gains In Football

By Frank Dunne

IN RECENT MONTHS there has been a rash amount of publicity concerning the so-called movement by colleges to de-emphasize the noble sport of football. Many of these institutions have been described as trading the old model rough 'n tough type grid coach for the latest styled scientific wizard.

It would seem that the latest streamlined model would fit into the current trend of the game. Football is no longer strictly a game of pure brawn. The mark of a winning team is no longer measured by the amount of tonnage a coach can field but the net weight of the grey matter stacked in the plastic headgear of his gladiators.

Therefore, a modern coach must go beyond the basic fundamentals and impart to his charges new theories of the game designed not to overpower but to confuse the opponent. This trend not only improves the game but makes it more interesting to the spectators.

Colleges do not intend to demote football, only to put it in its proper place. Since its inception, the sport grew by leaps and bounds until it got out of hand, making the mark of a good college the won-lost record of its grid team, rather than its academic standards. Finally, the colleges realized they had a monster on their hands, capable of destroying the true spirit of the game.

They are now in the process of placing the sport in its original place and using it for its real purpose. College football is a sport and not a business.

When this combination is reached, late-model-coach and football-as-a-sport, then the real purpose of sport will be realized, that is, football for the players.

As soon as this ideal is reached the coaches can impart to their men the virtues of teamwork, quick-thinking and self-confidence, without the necessity of always winning to please the general public. Then football is in its right place and used for its proper purpose.

With this new style of approach, football will prosper, but in its proper place. The men involved will get more out of the game in personal values and skills. The colleges will be known for their intellectual standards, and the fans will be able to enjoy the sport in its purest form.

Smith Hall Hoe-Down

Cafeteria Goes Western As CAB Stages Silverado Roundup May 9

Go west, young man!

Lasso yourself a young lady and "git on down" to the Smith Hall corral from 9 to 12 p.m. on Friday, May 20, for the Club Activities Board dance, Silverado Roundup, say Delmar Rose and Faye Fountain, CAB president and vice president, respectively.

The western theme of the dance will be complemented by western dress, Miss Fountain announced, and the student union will be decorated accordingly.

All the "Wild Bills and Sweet Sues" will be dancing to the music of Steve Paul's 15-piece band, who will also, Rose added, entertain during College Hour that morning at the Redwood Ram. The band will have vocalists at both the "jam session" and dance.

There is a possibility of having professional square dancers to entertain at the dance, Miss Fountain said. Another "maybe" injected by Rose was the presentation of awards for the best costume and the best dancers.

Admission is free with an Associated Student card and registration card; the latter alone will cost the student 75 cents. Guest bids may be obtained from Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150, for $1.00, Rose said.

Thespians Schedule May 20 For Opening Date Of 'Country Girl'

Rehearsals are in progress for the drama department's latest production, Country Girl. Opening night has been set for Friday, May 20, 8 p.m., at the Little Theater in Science Hall.

According to Michael Griffin, drama director, the thespians will give four Friday and Saturday weekend performances of Country Girl.

The story telis of Frank Elgin, a former stage great, who has lost confidence in himself and is trying to make a comeback.

Bernie Dodd, a director, remembers Elgin as a great actor, and wants him to take part in his play.

A conflict arises when Phil Cooke, the show's producer, states that he is unwilling to risk his money on Elgin. However, in a tryout, Elgin displays ability and is given a two-week contract as an understudy.

Throughout rehearsals he has many problems with his role. He claims he can't concentrate on his work because of Georgie, his wife, whom he describes as an almost insane alcoholic.

Believing him, Dodd calls on Georgie in hope of straightening her out. To his surprise he finds that Georgie, far from being insane or an alcoholic, is actually the driving force behind Elgin's bid for a stage success.

When a leading actor leaves the play for a Hollywood contract, Elgin is called to fill in his spot.

This, then, is the crux of the play. Can a man who has hit the bottom of the barrel bounce back up again?

Griffin stated that Country Girl is technically and artistically a hard show to put on.

Four different sets will be needed during the performance, the most ever used in a Little Theater production.

Two of the sets, an apartment and a dressing room, will be completely separate units and will be rolled out on the stage for use.

Griffin feels that the play should draw good houses throughout its run of eight performances.

The oldest educational institution in the world is the Egyptian University of Al-Azhar, first established in 989 A.D.

22 Colleges Plan To Attend Annual IRC Conference

Delegates of 22 Northern California junior colleges are scheduled to attend the annual World Affairs Conference on May 21 in Smith Hall, according to Jose Lino Bran, president of the International Relations Club.

Also invited to the convention are the Turkish Consul, the Swedish Consul and three San Francisco State College professors, who will lecture to the students following registration ceremonies. No registration fee will be required of the delegates.

These five men will head the discussions in the afternoon, "which are proposed to better acquaint the students with current European problems," Bran stated.

Each representative has his choice of several topics to discuss with other students who have chosen the same question. Each group is alloted an equal amount of time to reach a decision and take a vote on the subject.

Topics available to the delegates are economic, political, social and foreign relations problems plaguing the European powers today.

The conference will start shortly after 9 a.m. with all students on campus invited to the convention. Coffee and doughnuts will be served free in the morning, but a charge of $1 will be requested for lunch. Entertainment will be provided, although the type is undecided upon.

SCTA Conference To Meet May 13

Main topic for discussion at the Friday, May 13, Student California Teachers Association Chapter Conference to be held here will be the professionalization of education, Bev Pasqualetti, instructor here and SCTA adviser, announced today.

The program will start with registration from 9 to 10 a.m., and at 9:30 there will be a meeting for group leaders. The welcoming and introduction of guests will begin at 10 a.m. The topic, The Professional—Can You Qualify?, will be discussed starting at 10:15 and ending at 11 a.m. Professions to be discussed are medicine, dentistry, architecture and education.

After luncheon, there will be a general meeting which will break up into workshop session. Students are not officially excused from classes to attend this meeting; however, those who have free periods are welcome, Pasqualetti said.

Transposition in the official name of the organization from California Student Teachers Association to Student California Teachers Association was made, Pasqualetti said, because of confusion which developed when some interpreted the former name to mean that membership was limited to those who were actually student teachers.

Honor For Judy Day

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN Judy Day (above) was feted by Associated Student leaders at a luncheon this week honoring her outstanding work in connection with the college's recent Open House.

Miss Day and her group were instrumental in organizing the program, arranging for guides, and extending invitations to local officials.

The Open House marked the college's observance of San Francisco's Public Schools Week and was one of the many events highlighting the Silver Anniversary of the founding of the college.

59 Bay Area Business Leaders Visit Campus, Attend Luncheon As Part Of Business-Education Day Last Thursday

Eight groups or a total of 59 Bay Area businessmen were conducted on a tour of the college last Thursday as part of Business Education Day, under the direction of Louis G. Conlan, college president.

At 8:45 a.m., informal orientation was held in Smith Hall for the business leaders after which there were a tour and luncheon.

During the orientation, speakers were President Conlan, Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management; Lloyd D. Luekmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction, and Barbara Brackett, Faculty Association president.

Tour guides were Joseph A. Amori, director of placement; John W. Dunn, hotel and restaurant instructor; William Fischer, counselor; Alva L. McMillan, counselor; Herold J. Miller, engineering instructor; Thomas Nesbitt, director of testing and research; William G. Richardson, counselor, and William Schoon, counselor.

A few of the firms represented were Bank of America, Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, Wells Fargo, American Trust, Southern Pacific Co., Argonaut Insurance, American President Lines, Pacific Motor Truck, Commercial Union Group, Yellow Cab Co., Pacific Telephone & Telegraph, General Electric.

National Lead Co., Link Belt Co., Standard Oil Co., Abbot A. Hanks, Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Levi Strauss, Kinoshita & Co., Walker Engraving, California and Hawaiian Sugar, J. C. Penney Co., Spreckels Russell, California Packing, Outdoor Advertising, J. Walter Thompson.

Sheraton - Palace Hotel, Bayview Federal Savings, and California State Automobile Association.

JOSEPH AMORI, placement director, acted as tour guide for Bus-Ed Day and will host the fifth annual business recruitment day next Tuesday.

WILLIAM FISCHER, counselor, was one of eight tour guides for 59 business leaders who visited here on Business Education Day last week.

AS Card Sales Drive Starts New Fund Raising Campaign

Scheduled for the latter part of the present semester is a second card sales campaign featuring more promotion through the medium of posters strategically placed about campus, Marilyn Middleton, Associated Student card sales chairman, declared last week.

Commencement and the Sophomore Ball will be the two functions highlighting the card sales campaign. An AS card is needed to attend the ball free of additional charge. An AS card will also provide for the free use of caps and gowns by the graduates.

The card sales chairman declared, "This semester's sales didn't approach expectations, but I hope that the second campaign will improve this outlook."

A single drawback to the fund-raising drive, Miss Middleton said, is that students cannot use the glass-enclosed office adjacent to the entrance of Science Hall; instead, all interested in buying an AS card must do so from the student bank in Smith Hall.

Additional information pertaining to card sales and finance was obtained at the annual student government conference in San Diego, Miss Middleton claimed.

An idea new to the two-year colleges in Northern California but used exclusively in the South is to print the Association Card in booklet form, containing a page to punch or tear out for various sports events, dances and other functions.

"The college may try this new system if additional funds are allocated next semester," Miss Middleton said.

"In Southern California the colleges are more united in spirit and therefore are closer to 100 per cent card sale than a college located in this section of the state," she stated.

AMS Sets Smoker Next Wednesday

An action-packed evening is in store for everyone who attends the Associated Men Student semi-annual smoker, to be held next Wednesday in the men's gymnasium.

Bill Keane, AMS president, announced that the championship intramural basketball game will get the night's action underway, with tip-off set for 7:30 p.m., and the champion of the Inter-Fraternity league battling the champion of the Independent loop.

A trophy will be awarded to the winning team and medals will go to members of the winning aggregation.

Following the cage battle there will be 10 boxing matches, which will decide the intramural boxing championships of the college. A medal will be awarded to all participants.

At the end of the evening's contests there will be two trophies awarded, one to the "fightingest fighter" and the other to the outstanding fighter of the night.

Everyone is invited to attend, both men and women. There will be no admission charge for Associated Student card holders, while 50 cents will be charged to all others.

Royalty Contest Highlights Soph Ball On June 3

As the Sophomore Class prepares to graduate, its officers are making plans for a king and queen contest to be climaxed with the Sophomore Ball, the theme of which is Sayonara.

Students interested in entering the king and queen contest are expected to obtain the sponsorship of any organization on campus, and the deadline for entries is May 25.

The king and queen will be chosen on a penny-a-vote basis, the money going into the sophomore scholarship fund.

Paperbox containers displaying each candidate's picture will be placed around campus for voting purposes.

The Sophomore Ball will be held June 3 from 9 to 1 p.m. in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel. Dancing will be to the music of Bob Emerson and his band.

Proper attire for the occasion, class spokesmen said, is dark suits and ties for the men and cocktail dresses for the women. Admission will be free to holders of Spring semester AS and registration cards. Those having only a registration card will be charged $2.50.

The first Sophomore Ball was held during the Fall 1936 semester, and in 1940 a "sweetheart" was elected to reign over the affair.

In the Fall of 1945, the first Sophomore king was elected, thereby giving the men a share in the honor. The dance was given a theme for the first time in May of 1955.

Officers of the Sophomore Class are President Jack Verga, Vice President Bob Edwards, Secretary Sharon Lebovitz, Treasurer Kathy Sanborn and Publicity Chairman Carolyn Vukasin. Faculty sponsors are Mary Perry and Edward Rogers.

Sophomores expecting to receive their Associate in Arts degrees in June are currently being polled in an effort to determine their preferences as to time and place of the annual commencement ceremonies.

Recruitment Day Set For May 10

Discussion centering around the theme "less jobs and less pay," will be a major part of the fifth annual Business Recruitment Day, to be held at the college next Tuesday, Joseph A. Amori, director of the college's placement center, disclosed.

Approximately 100 Bay Area businessmen will come to the college to interview prospective employees from the college's business and graphic arts classes.

After a morning breakfast in Smith Hall for the businessmen, interviews will take place in Cloud Hall offices between business representatives and hopeful students.

In all, 45 business firms were asked to send representatives to the interviews, but so far only 30 have accepted the invitation.

Amori said fewer jobs are expected for men, simply because business firms did not show a need for employees. He added, however, that women would find it somewhat easier to find employment.

In Indramayu, Indonesia, town officials announced a new price for marriage licenses—25 rat tails.

Unidentified Vespa Waits For Owner To Take Possession

After discovering a black Vespa motor scooter with no license nor registration on campus, Richard Wernecke, chief of the Campus Police, requested last week that anyone having information concerning this scooter inform his office in C-120 immediately.

Wernecke commented on the large number of students who have been issued moving violations during the early morning hours on Phelan Avenue and in the vicinity of Cloud Circle and the Ramp.

He warned drivers to take extra precautions because of the heavy concentration of pedestrians arriving at the college.

Even though the Sharpshooter team and the two Marksman teams failed to capture a trophy at the Oakland pistol matches on April 3, Jim Olson brought home one gold, two silver and one bronze medal and a trophy for his shooting in the individual expert class competition.

Olson was awarded a first place gold medal in the center fire, rapid fire match, a second place silver medal in the .45 caliber national match, a second place silver medal in the center fire national match and a third place bronze medal in the .22 caliber rapid fire match.

Shooting 810 points out of a possible 900, Olson took the second place trophy in the aggregate match.

Shooting in the individual marksman class competition, Ed Sarsfield took the third place bronze medal.

Boat Picture On Tap This Friday C-Hour

An outstanding film, Gateways To Playgrounds, will be shown this Friday during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., in S-136 as part of the college film series.

Boats of all sizes and shapes will be covered in this film, Madison Devlin, audio-visual instructor here, announced last week.

All on-campus organizations will be meeting in their assigned rooms during College Hour.

National Doughnut Month is celebrated in October.

College Hour Schedule
8 o'clock classes— 8:10 to 9:00
9 o'clock classes— 9:10 to 9:50

Top Comedian, Jazz Pianist To Entertain At Blood Drive Rally Friday During C-Hour

Following the opening tomorrow of Tau Chi Sigma's annual two-day campus blood drive, Ronnie Schell, one of the nation's foremost young comedians, and jazz pianist Oscar Peterson will give the event the emphasis of big name entertainment when they appear at the drive's rally this Friday, during a double College Hour, in the men's gymnasium.

Mike Haskell, chairman of the drive, along with members of his committee, arranged for Schell, currently at the Purple Onion, and Peterson, presently at the Black Hawk, to perform at the event along with the Virgil Gonsalves jazz group, who opened last year's drive.

During both days of the drive an Irwin Memorial Blood Bank team will be housed in C-249, the photo lab, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. to receive donations.

Haskell has set a 500-pint goal for this Friday at 1 p.m. If the donations surpass that mark, Haskell and Bill Keane, also of Tau Chi Sigma, will "eat their hats" . . . literally. The hoast was made last week before reputable witnesses.

A trophy will be awarded to the club or organization whose members give the most blood.

Students, Haskell emphasized, who are under 21 years of age must have a written release from their parents before they may donate. Release forms are currently being distributed throughout the campus.

Each donor will receive credit with Irwin Memorial for a year's unlimited supply of blood for himself if the situation arises, or for a member of his immediate family, or up to eight pints to someone else.

Haskell cautioned that in order to avoid a run on the bank, only one of the three choices is offered.

Fraternity Cancels This Friday's Blue Light Dance

Because of a lack of funds, Tau Chi Sigma's annual dance, the House of Blue Lights, which had been scheduled for this Friday night following the blood drive rally, has been cancelled, Mike Haskell, fraternity president, announced today.

Tau Chi Sigma was first organized here in 1946 by a group of veterans. As sponsors of the campus blood drives since their inception here, they were instrumental in leading last year's drive to a statewide high in donations.

College Hour Movie Presents Alpine Trip

Switzerland is one of the two films which will be shown in S-136 this Friday during College Hour.

Audio-visual aids director Madison Devlin said the film is a travelogue showing lakes, countryside, people and various cities of the country nestled in the heart of the Alps.

The other film, River Of No Return, shows an adventurous trip down the Snake river in rubber boats.

31 High School Leaders Visit Campus For Prep Day Thursday

By Jo Ann Griffin

Thirty-one student leaders representing seven San Francisco public high schools and their principals will take part in the annual Prep Day to be held here tomorrow.

Highlighting the day's activities, under the direction of Bill Keane, Associated Student vice president, will be an orientation breakfast, a tour of the campus and a lunch.

The students will be conducted on a tour including the library, Cloud Hall and Science Hall. Representative classes of each of the various departments will be visited with an opportunity for the students to ask questions.

Each of the six groups will carry placards bearing the school and team name on each side. The placards are being prepared by William G. Eckert's advertising arts classes. A photograph will be taken of each group near the Redwood Ram.

Next on the agenda is a lunch starting about 12 noon in the faculty dining room to which 15 faculty members have been invited.

Guest speaker will be Louise von Emster, a former City College student who was AS vice president in the spring semester 1956 and who will be graduated with a secondary credential from the University of California in June. The subject of her talk will be what City College means to her.

Schools represented will be Polytechnic, George Washington, Lowell, Mission, Lincoln, Galileo and Balboa. Five students will attend from each except for Lowell, which will send only one.

Keane, Jack Verga, Joe Egri, Stevie Tissier and Bobbie Keane make up the official 25th Anniversary Prep Day Committee, while guides are Bob Basso, Jim Bush, Egri, Keane, Verga, Miss Tissier, Diane Beeson, Carol Hinkson, Miss Keane, Diane Luhr and Mary Comerford.

LOUISE VON EMSTER, Prep Day speaker.

To promote good will between the public high schools and City College students and faculty is the purpose of Prep Day, Keane stated.

Joe Egri

"EVERY DEMOCRATIC form of government should have two or more participating political parties. This spirit of competition is the only way to insure that candidates for office will be of the best quality and that party platforms will be expressive of the ideals of good government.

"The Students' Representative Party was formed with this idea of good government in mind. We stand for better government for the benefit of more students.

"We are responsible to the college, the student body, the interest group, and the individual, in that order.

"We are offering what we feel is a slate of candidates who are mature, justified people who want very much, with your vote, to represent you, the Associated Students of City College."

Fall Guardsman Wins First Class Rating From ACP

Marking the ninth award of its kind, a rating of first class for its Fall 1959 volume was awarded to The Guardsman this week by the Associated Collegiate Press, whose headquarters are at the University of Minnesota.

The Guardsman has also earned 28 All-American ratings in its 37 semesters of membership in the ACP since Fall 1939. Other ACP ratings are Second Class, Third Class and Fourth Class.

Categories in which last semester's Guardsman excelled, according to the ACP's newspaper guidebook, including creativeness, news stories, news sources, style, copyreading, editorials, editorial page features, headline schedule and typography.

Among the weaknesses in The Guardsman were sports display, headlines and photography.

Members of the award-winning editorial staff were William Forshay, editor-in-chief; Jim Clifford, managing editor; Elmer Milligan, news editor; Pat O'Shaughnessy, sports editor; Vicky Aumann, feature editor; Geneva Warner, staff editor, and Don Seratti, staff writer.

The awards, presented each semester to college and university newspapers entered in ACP competition, are based on general content, style, writing and coverage. The ACP's board of judges is comprised of journalistic authorities from various newspapers and academic staffs.

Duane Andrews, public relations staff, Minneapolis-Honeywell, and former staff member of The Minneapolis Star and Tribune, judged The Guardsman. His final comment on The Guardsman was, "I was particularly impressed by your editorials—while not carrying a chip on your shoulders, you certainly aren't afraid to speak out when necessary."

The Guardsman was rated in the category of two-year colleges throughout the country which publish weekly newspapers.

Keane, Egri Bid For Presidency In AS Election

By Rich Shields

Vigorous campaigns and their dominance of politics in campus life will end this week as the college prepares for the Associated Student elections on Monday and Tuesday.

Posters and promises have flooded the campus for more than a week now, a minute example of what will take place on a national scale this fall.

Getting off to a late start in overseeing the campaigns because of a delay in his appointment, the new Election Commissioner, Jerry Griffin, announced that voting machines will be open from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day of the election.

At the deadline May 4 for filing petitions, two parties had entered candidates in this semester's race—the United Students Party and the Students Representative Party. The SRP was formerly called the Associated Students Party until Student Council ordered a change in the name.

Voters will give the top office of Associated Student President to Bill Keane (USP) or Joe Egri (SRP).

Seeking the office of Vice President are Jack Verga (USP) and Georgene Peterson (SRP).

Associated Men Student Presidential hopefuls are Jerry Kucserka (USP) and Bob Kelley (SRP).

For the Associated Women Student Presidency, Diane Beeson (USP) is opposed by Margaret Lindstrom (SRP).

Candidates for the Presidency of the Sophomore Class are John Azzaro (USP) and Jim Bush (SRP).

Freshman Class Presidential aspirants are Bob Rogers (USP) and Gary Wilkening (SRP).

Twelve candidates are in the race for seven Sophomore seats on Council. They are Charles Hanks (USP), Viek Eakert (USP), Billy Threadgill (USP), Carolyn Vucasin (USP), Paul Plansky (USP), Bob Ross (SRP), "Skip" Schwartz (SRP), Russell Merritt (SRP), Sam Webb (SRP), Barbara Lerman (SRP), Elena Mirabella (SRP) and Judy Schwarz (SRP).

The USP has five candidates for the seven Freshman seats on Council: Carol Hinkson, Diane Luhr, Mary Comerford, Judy Barkann and Sherm Booth. The SRP has six candidates: Bob Perkins, Roger Labataille, Norm Kaiman, Ray Ferreira, Kathy Henderson and Pat Crone.

Eligible voters will also decide the fate of four constitutional amendments proposed by Student Council.

The first amendment proposes that the AMS President shall be a member of the President's Cabinet and Social Committee and will be required to attend all meetings of the Cabinet and Social Committee. A second amendment proposes the same thing for the AWS President.

The third and fourth amendments propose that Freshman and Sophomore members of council shall be required to attend all meetings of the Freshman and Sophomore Classes which are called by the Presidents of the classes.

Voting machines will be located at the silver pole in Science Hall, the near-west library entrance, next to the fountain in Smith Hall, in the area between the men's and women's gymnasium, and in the refreshment center in the basement at the south end of Science Hall.

Griffin said he hopes to see a large percentage of the 1680 eligible voters exercise their privilege of voting. Only 20 per cent of the students who were eligible to vote did so in the last election.

Bill Keane

"WE OF THE United Students have proved, in our two years of existence, that we are capable of leading City College efficiently. We point with pride to our progress in this, our 25th anniversary, and welcome this opportunity to present our four-point program:

"1. Better spirit, through a student grievance committee.

"2. A parking permit will be made available without an Associated Student card.

"3. The library will definitely be opened at night.

"4. The wishes of the students will be fulfilled.

"Remember, our past record proves, with the United Students, experience promotes action!"

Nominees Air Political Views In May 13 Rally

An election rally is scheduled for College Hour this Friday in Smith Hall to inspire student interest in the election next Monday and Tuesday.

Election Commissioner Jerry Griffin stated that candidates for 20 student government offices to be filled in the election will be introduced and will present their respective platforms.

Customarily, only candidates for top executive posts are expected to speak.

Symphony Forum Presents Special Concert Tonight

Honoring the 20th anniversary of the Symphony Forum, an organization of Bay Area colleges which makes available to students cut-rate tickets to concerts by the San Francisco Symphony, will be a special concert by this orchestra today at 8:30 p.m. at the Opera House.

Students here who have season tickets to the symphony will be allowed to attend the concert free of cost merely by presenting the ticket for the May 18 concert at the door tonight.

Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, has also been extended an invitation to attend the concert as have the presidents of the other member colleges of the Forum.

The program, to be led by the orchestra's permanent conductor and musical director, Enrique Jorda, includes two compositions of Beethoven. The concert will commence with his monumental 3rd Leonora Overture and the joyous Eighth Symphony.

The second half will feature a strikingly modern composition, the Unanswered Question, by the American composer, Charles Ives. This is to be followed by the popular Rhapsody Espagnole of Ravel.

The program will conclude with a performance of the Suite From The Love For Three Oranges by the 20th century Russian composer, Prokofieff.

New Stadium Could Be Site Of Anniversary Commencement

CANDIDATES for degrees in June are currently being polled to ascertain their opinions on the site, day and time of commencement exercises. One out of seven of the fourth-semester students are receiving, via mail, forms on which to indicate their preferences.

For several years the college has been using the Riordan High School Auditorium for a night-time exercise. Few, if any, other colleges hold night commencements. Afternoon functions seem far more traditional, with evening ceremonies favored by the high schools. And it hardly seems appropriate to hold the commencement anywhere but on campus.

Among the suggested sites was that of the college's new stadium, completion of which stands as a possible obstacle this year. In looking to the future, however, when the stadium will be seasoned by a year of athletic competition, why not plan (with safeguards against the weather) for a commencement ceremony there, and a dedicatory one at that.

Graduating students will be going out into the world and it seems poetic justice that the clear, blue sky be overhead when they receive their degrees. But what if there isn't any clear, blue sky that day? In that dismal case the event can easily be rescheduled to the neighboring Riordan Auditorium.

The unpredictability of the weather seems to be the only drawback to this proposal, and that is a slight one. If the rains come the auditorium is fairly close, placing the situation in an everything-to-gain and nothing-to-lose light.

For the Class of 1961, the Silver Anniversary class, we can see nothing more appropriate than graduating from their own, newly seasoned athletic field.

Chinatown Gives Old Touch To New Ideas

By Elmer Milligan

SAN FRANCISCO'S CHINATOWN, the West Coast's gaily decorated Oriental bazaar, is a new, modern and beautiful town truly Chinese in design and spirit.

With its strange expressions, spooky customs, exotic foods, fascinating atmosphere, industrial accomplishments and incomparable unity, Chinatown is a city within a city—located in the very heart of the City by the Golden Gate.

Approximately 42,000 of the 62,000 Chinese in the San Francisco Bay Area reside in Greater Chinatown, which includes the Oriental Colony and its adjacent residential sections.

In "Little China," every sight which greets the eyes is characteristic of the costumes, architecture and culture of age-old Cathay.

The energy and industry are so well known, it is not surprising that Chinatown contributes heavily to the prosperity of San Francisco.

It is estimated that Chinatown residents have about $40 million in savings accounts alone in the ten banks and savings associations in the Bay Area.

In the professions are lawyers, doctors, teachers, professors and engineers.

The Chinese business world includes office workers, sales people, management personnel and laundry proprietors. The colony has 35 restaurants and cafes, 90 gift shops, grocery stores, importers, exporters, insurance and travel offices and appliance firms.

Five theaters flourish with programs of Chinese movies and Cantonese opera presentations from Hong Kong.

Four Chinese daily newspapers and one weekly are published in the Oriental Colony; three radio stations broadcast Chinese programs.

When public school classes are finished for the day, 4000 Chinese children go to the eight schools in Chinatown, which supply instruction in Chinese reading, writing, history, geography, elocution and painting.

Chinese are proud of their culture and consider it a duty and privilege to pass it on to their children.

Only Hong Kong is more famous than this city for the variety and excellence of its exotic dishes.

Chop suey is the best known and favorite dish of people who patronize Chinese restaurants. Other favorites are chow mein, egg fooyung, lo-mein, gy-gwut, sui-mi, and dim sun.

Chinese women are most famous for their slender figures. Many of the Orientals believe that the secret of their slimness lies in the use of chopsticks. (Is that so?)

Chopsticks supposedly discourage hasty eating and foods eaten with them are prepared in small, easily-digested pieces.

In closing we would like to leave one little note with the men on campus:

If you're out on a date with one of those exotic dolls and she suddenly whispers, "Ngo oy nee. Nee hai ngo oy yan," don't be afraid. She is only saying, "I love you, you are my sweetheart." This may be a long way to speak of love, but that's the way the Chinese do it.

Next week: Chinese sayings, customs and holidays.

Red And White Pen Marks Anniversary

Red and white ballpoint pens, with the college's name imprinted on them, made their appearance on campus last month for the observance of the 25th Anniversary and played quite a role in the Silvery Year and the second midterm period.

Ordered for the occasion by Ronald Weiss, California Book Company manager, the pens sold for 39 cents and proved to be a successful commodity. They were made by Luckey Richards Company, Incorporated, on Grant Avenue.

Pens of this sort have not been sold at the Associated Student bookstore, the Ramporium, according to a bookstore employee, within the last five years.

Pick And Hammers Uncover Village

Trio Discovers Hidden Relics At Pomo Site

By Fumi Fowells

In the world of today, when most eyes are focused skyward upon outer space, many tend to forget the existence of students of science whose interest centers upon the ground on which they stand.

Twenty-two such dedicated individuals, students of geology and anthropology, comprise the membership of the college's Pick and Hammer Society.

Recently three members of the society, Bob Edwards, Blair Oram and Ronald Pickard, set out to uncover the site of a village inhabited by the Pomo Indians some 150 years ago.

The project, summed up by George Baffaco, club's sponsor and geology instructor, as having been "a rather remarkable achievement for college sophomores," got under way several weeks ago with the trio's visit to the Fort Ross Museum for additional study.

The museum curator, pleased by their interest in the area, granted permission for excavation of the Indian Village site.

Using small shovels, picks and even toothbrushes, the excavation proceeded with painstaking care. Each midden, excavated one by one, with its collection of bones, arrowheads, and shell materials, will assist in the reconstruction of the life and culture of the Pomo villagers, a tribe then numbering perhaps 8000 but now but a tenth of that number.

The Pomos, an unwarlike tribe, are best known for their remarkable basket weaving, perhaps the finest and most varied on the North American continent.

The excavation of Indian Village site is but one example of the work done by the members of the Pick and Hammer Society. Founded in 1936, the club serves to extend knowledge of geology and allied subjects, and to promote good fellowship among students of those sciences.

During each College Hour, from 10 to 10:40 a.m. in S-44, the club meets, coffee and refreshments vying with intellectually stimulating conversation for the members' attention.

Once a month the society meets at the home of the sponsor, and guest speakers from the National Park Service, from various universities and from the field of geology at large hold forth on aspects of the science and related fields.

The society's agenda also includes field trips to localities of geological interest as Death Valley, Lake County, Salinas and Marin County, combining the benefits of pleasure and education.

Instructor Plans To Devote Time To Language, Hobbies

By Anton Norris

Retirement is talked about as the weather is talked about. When it comes, in no matter what form, it will be tolerated. If it proves to be sunny, then we will have time to catch up on all those things we have been planning to do for years. If it is cloudy, then we must accept it and place the blame not upon ourselves but upon an unjust fate.

For many retirement means that looked-for, blessed freedom from work; it means that one can sleep in whenever he wishes, and it means that one doesn't have to adhere to a schedule.

These three reasons alone cause many persons to look forward wistfully to their retirement, yet there are those who find that giving up their work is one of the most difficult things they have had to do.

Such a person is Marjorie S. Bailhache, chairman of the language department here, who, upon retirement at the end of this semester, terminates 14 years of City College teaching.

Prior to coming here Mrs. Bailhache taught at Galileo High School and was also chairman of the language department there.

Talking about her coming retirement, Mrs. Bailhache made the statement typical of persons who like their work when she said that she couldn't imagine a field more self-rewarding than teaching.

"To be able to inspire a slothful student and watch him move forward and upward is only one of the many rewards teaching has to offer."

"It is difficult to explain such feeling to someone else," she continued, "but if you like what you do, then you must have had them." (Looking at his pencil and notepaper, the writer knew what she meant.)

Mrs. Bailhache has traveled throughout Europe and Mexico. While in Mexico she enrolled in the University of Mexico during summer sessions.

After retirement she plans to enroll in the University of San Francisco and study the Russian language. "Not for any monetary gain," she said, "but only for my own benefit.

"Writing has always been one of my hobbies," she added, "and I hope to be able to devote much more time to it after my retirement."

Retirement for many may mean an end to work, and it may mean a period of complete laziness, but happily we have those who consider it nothing more than another step of many steps in moving forward.

Mrs. Bailhache belongs to the latter group. For her retirement will not be a terminus but rather a transfer station. One merely gets off his present conveyer and boards another, always moving.

Perhaps this is the reason some retirements are sunny and some are cloudy. We make them whatever we want them to be.

H&R Routine Hectic, Tiring But Rewarding

All is quiet on the western front. It is 3:30 in the afternoon at City College.

The eastern frontier of the campus is active with the rhythm of athletic workouts; the northern frontier is noisy with the progress of construction workers; and at the southern front, the hotel and restaurant department cleans up the kitchen behind the scenes in Smith Hall.

An atmosphere imbued with nostril-tickling odors of delicious cuisine makes the lot of the reporter a blithe one. The busy woman of slender frame mops the kitchen floor free of scraps of food, leftovers, lettuce leaves and spilled soup.

Although it's clean-up time, the H&R secretarial office still resounds with plucking typewriter keys and ringing telephones. John Dunn, H&R instructor, scurries about frantically putting things in place—one wonders who wound him up. Chefs take orders for the next day from distributors, and everywhere there is planning, working and more working.

Yet, such is the routine of the restaurant business. The food force prepares for "tomorrow's" hoard of hungry students and the "coffee-break bunch."

Pierre Coste, one of the head chefs and former executive chef at the Mark Hopkins and St. Francis Hotels, explains that the students in

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob Pacini

RAPIDLY disappearing from the American entertainment scene is the good old parlor game, and if you're wondering why this mainstay of parties and family entertainment is sinking into its demise, take the following example of a typical, simple parlor game, and the reason—if nothing else—should become clear.

First of all six men and six women line up on opposite sides of the room. Three of the men are given even numbers, and three are given odd numbers. The six women are each given umbrellas which they hold closed—unless one of the women has any article of clothing which is red.

If she does, she opens her umbrella and stands in the middle of the room by herself.

Now with these basic moves, we can logically proceed. Each of the even-numbered men takes the name of a city, and each of the women take the name of any animal belonging to the phylum chodata.

The odd-numbered men then call out letters of the alphabet, and the lady in the center closes her umbrella and the others open theirs—that is, if none of the men is wearing striped ties.

The high point of the game is now approaching. With the three even- and odd-numbered men on one side, the five women holding closed (or open) umbrellas on the other side, and the lady wearing red in the center also holding her umbrella open (or closed), depending on whether one of the men has a striped tie, the ladies then call out the name of the animal they have taken and join the other woman, again, with open (or closed) umbrellas, in the middle of the room.

If, however, at least two of the men are over six feet tall, only two of the women go to the center of the room and the others remain where they are—unless two of the women are also over six feet tall.

Then all the women, including the original one in the center, put down their umbrellas and run around the room three times, while each of the men takes an umbrella and go to the center of the room.

After the women are through running around the room the men seat themselves in a circle on the floor, excluding, of course, the men with the striped ties—if there are any.

If there aren't, the women form another circle, opposite the men and now take the names of flowers. Then the men call out the names of the women, who, if their name is called, stand up and take the man's umbrella—unless, of course, she is either a daisy, a sunflower, a snapdragon or a petunia.

It has been suggested, though, that the step of seeing if there are any men with striped ties be eliminated. But, of course, the game wouldn't make any sense then.

Five Mermen Enter State Championship

Five Ram swimmers competed in last week's State swim championships in Bakersfield.

If one of the five representatives, Bill Sakovich, Bob Fewster, Dick Sullivan, Pete Urrea or Craig Schwartz, managed to place in the finals, it will be the first time a swimmer from the college has gone this far in state competition.

Last week in the Northern California championships, the last tune-up before the state finals, the college gained fourth place, an all-time best as the swimming fortunes for the college under Coach Roy Burkhead seem to be looking up.

With an abundance of Freshman talent this season, plus a few promising high school transfers, next year could prove the best in the college's history.

With the third smallest squad in a field of 13 teams, the college's placing of fourth and accumulation of 32 points must be considered an outstanding effort.

But for the lack of a medley relay team, the Rams might have squeezed ahead of Stockton for third place, as the Mustangs finished only three and one-half points ahead of the locals with a 35½ total.

The front runners were Oakland and Menlo with 109 and 96½, respectively.

The finalists in the Northern California championships for the locals were as follows:

Fewster, 50-yd. free style, 2nd; 100-yd. free style, 3rd.

Schwartz, 50-yd. free style, 5th; 100-yd. free style, 6th.

Sakovich, 200-yd. backstroke, 4th; 100-yd. backstroke, 2nd.

Al Stevens, 100-yd. breast stroke, 6th; 200-yd. breast stroke, 6th.

The 400-yd. free style relay, composed of Schwartz, Fewster, Urrea and Sullivan, finished second.

Probably the most exciting race of the meet was the 100-yd. free style.

Fewster trailed the leaders, William Clark of Menlo and Bill MacGregor of Sacramento, all the way. Coming off the final turn, he found new energy to close the gap with Bill Sakovich, only to be nosed out at the finish by four-tenths of a second.

Chinn, Draper Lead Local Netmen To Loop Championship

By Warren Downes

Upsetting the applecart in this year's Big Eight Conference race the Ram tennis squad walked off with the loop championship.

Two of the reasons for this upset of favored Modesto and Stockton were Vince Chinn, ace of the squad, and Larry Draper, who held down the second position.

Chinn, who has another season left with Roy Diederichsen's aggregation, was beaten only once in loop action and that was a dog-eat-dog affair to Tom Muench of Modesto which could have gone either way.

Chinn began his tennis career 10 years ago, but this year, under the watchful eye of Coach Diederichsen, he reached the peak of his career.

"Playing under Coach Diederichsen has been a great help to my game," Chinn stated.

For the past few years Chinn has reached the semi-finals of the National Chinese Tennis Championships, and he has great hopes of grabbing the title this year. Earlier this season Chinn won the California Chinese Students Intercollegiate Organization's tennis championships.

Chinn is looking forward to this weekend's Northern California Sectional championships slated for Friday and Saturday in Modesto.

"This should be the toughest competition Draper and I have faced all year," Chinn added.

Draper, a real stalwart for Coach Diederichsen this year, was unbeaten in Big Eight play. "Playing on last year's Ram team sure gave me some valuable experience," Draper commented.

Draper started his competitive tennis five years ago as a sophomore at Lowell High School. Winning the Academic Athletic Association doubles title was the highlight of his high school days.

"My comeback victory over Bob Atwood of Modesto this year was my greatest moment in tennis so far," Draper said. "Atwood won the first set and had me at match point 10 times in the second set, but I finally was able to break through and win the set and the match."

Hapless Rams Drop To Third Spot In Big Eight Standings Via 14-1 Loss To Bear Cubs

By Jesse Gonzalez

SANTA ROSA, May 3.—Backed by the fine five-hit pitching of John Trenam, the Bear Cubs went on to humiliate the Ram nine 14-1 here today.

The Rams thus dropped to third place in the Big Eight Conference with the loss, and now hold an eight-won, five-lost record.

It was one of those "so-what" types of games in which, from the start, the Red and White just couldn't do anything right.

The locals held a brief 1 to 0 lead in their initial at bats, as they scored their only tally of the game after two were out. Bob Farber's single through the middle, a walk to Jerry Gosland, and a line shot single to right by Don Leonardini brought Farber around.

But the Bear Cubs erased that quickly in their first at bats as three singles and a base on balls put two runs on the scoreboard for them.

Santa Rosa added three more in the second inning. Ram pitcher Don Lowpensky walked third baseman Graddy to lead off the second. Trenam sacrificed him, but an error by Gosland at third put both runners on. Left fielder Ray Kennedy doubled to right to score them both. Later on, he stole home to make it 5-1 after two innings.

The Timbermen exploded for five more runs in their fifth frame, highlighted by a grand slam home run by shortstop Gary Vice.

His drive carried deep into the right field bushes as a comical moment occurred when Ram right fielder Eric Lyons dove with ease in the bramble to try without success to come up with the ball.

Before he could find the horsehide, Vice had already crossed the plate with the 11th run for the Bears.

Reno DiBono replaced the tired and frustrated Lowpensky in the sixth, giving up the last three runs to the Santa Rosans. However, in the three-inning stint he was in, DiBono struck out four batsmen, and only allowed three safeties.

Lowpensky suffered his third loss, his second in a row, while chalking up four wins.

Block SF Dinner To Honor 90 Athletes

Approximately 90 athletes will be awarded championship and/or Block SF awards at the semi-annual athletic dinner scheduled Monday, June 6, to be held in Smith Hall, Block Society President Bob Ross stated yesterday.

The athletes attending the dinner are participants of the basketball, baseball, golf, swimming, tennis and track teams.

Basketball, tennis and track team members will receive the championship awards. The track team is the Big Eight and the Northern California Junior College champions.

Ross said there will be a revision of the Block Society's constitution which will be brought up before the Student Council this week.

Nominations of the new society officers was conducted at the last meeting. Coach Lou Vasquez will take over as sponsor next semester.

Trackmen Win Nor Cal Meet; Face Powerful Field In West Coast Relays Saturday Night

By Doug Cathcart

Rolling over all competition, the Red and White cindermen won the Northern California Junior College Relays recently at Modesto. The next big test for the determined Rams will be the West Coast Relays to be held at Fresno this Saturday at 7 p.m.

At Modesto the local tracksters racked up 46½ points to win out over all of the other 26 teams entered in the meet. College of Sequoias, with 41½ points, came in second, and Oakland with 29, placed third.

The distance medley relay mark of 10:46 was broken by the Rams by :18.6.

Action in the meet saw, in addition to the distance medley won by the Rams with San Jose coming in second and Oakland placing third, the 440-yard dash copped by Sequoias with a mark of 42.3 while the Rams and Sacramento placed second and third in that order.

Parker of Modesto won the shot-put with a throw of 49' 11¾" while Diablo and Coalinga followed.

The 120 high hurdles saw Stockton first, Modesto second, and San Francisco third. Shivers of Oakland won the 100-yard dash with a time of 10:0 with Jenkins of San Francisco second and Brinkworth of Coalinga third. Sacramento won the two-mile with a time of 8:02.0, while Modesto came in second, followed by San Francisco.

The Rams won the 880 with a time of 1:27.7, which, by the way, ties the meet record for that event. Edwards of Fresno won the discus event and the shuttle hurdles were won by Sequoia.

Palmer of Monterey, with a leap of 23¾, won the broad jump followed by Sirles and Holland, both of the local squad. Stockton with a time of 3:29.3 won the sprint relay, with Sequoia second and Fresno third.

The pole vault was won by Shaeffer of Sequoia with a jump of 13'10".

Locals Coast To Big 8 Title; Top 3 League Records

Shattering three Big Eight Conference records the powerful Red and White cindermen downed all adversaries to take first place in the conference meet at Santa Rosa last Saturday.

The locals led the scoring with a total of 135½ with Modesto coming in a pitiful second with only 61 points.

Next in line were Sacramento with 58, Stockton 58, Oakland 47¾, San Mateo 36, Contra Costa 21 and finally Santa Rosa with 15.

The first of the broken records was the mile run. Star Ram miler Ray Batz clocked in at 4:20.3 to break the old mark of 4:22.9 set by Rogers of Oakland in 1958. Next, Jess Sirles smashed the old broad jump record set by Stockton when he sailed to a mark of 23'7".

The third mark broken was the high jump. The old record was set by several league jumpers when they leapt to a mark of 6'4". Ralph Mathis of the Red and White, however, now stands alone with his new mark of 6'7¼".

The Rams took six first places out of the 14 events at the affair. Other Ram winners were Lon Colbert in the 100-yard dash, also the winner of the 220-yard dash, and Batz in the two-mile run.

The Red and White were the favorites at the meet last Saturday but their excellent performance was far above the highest expectations.

This meet marks the end of the Big Eight season, which has been one of the most competitive in years.

A surprising development at the meet was the showing of Oakland, the Big Eight dual competition co-champion, who was expected to give the locals the most trouble at the meet.

Invaders, Gammas Lead Intramural Cage Action

The reason for the darkness around the usually illuminated men's and women's gymnasiums last week can be attributed to midterm examinations, and during that week the Intramural cage loop was dormant.

A short resume of play as it now stands sees the powerful and determined Invaders in first place in the Independent league and the Inter-Fraternity Council league led by Gamma Phi Ypsilon. The Invaders have never forfeited a game as have numerous other teams in the league. This aversion to forfeits, by the squad in question, is perhaps why they are on top.

READERS of a recent Sunday magazine section of a San Francisco daily spotted a picture of a gentleman identified as "Track Coach Lou Vasquez," but with neither team nor institution named. The story, centered about Johnny Mathis, referred to Mathis' attendance at another college in San Francisco. For the edification of the readers who didn't know anyway, track coach Lou Vasquez is City College's Lou Vasquez (above) who led the Rams to a tie for the Big Eight dual-meet championship with Oakland's Thunderbirds.

Ballplayers Respect Varying Superstitions

Players Refuse Break With Jinx Tradition

WHY do baseball players chew gum, toothpicks or tobacco?

What makes a sportscaster refrain from mentioning that a pitcher is hurling a perfect game during a ball game?

How come a batter will place a piece of gum inside his hat when he faces the pitcher? Are they receiving "payola," purposely withholding valuable information, or are they just trying to hold their hats on?

Maybe, but most likely they are respecting the old baseball bromides of the Whammy, the Jinx and the Hex.

Some persons call this pure superstition, but tell that to a ballplayer and he will point out many instances to back up the existence of the W., J. or H., or he may simply laugh at you. He may not say he believes in them, but he won't try to provoke them either. To the batsmen, the less said about the secret three the better for all concerned.

But what are these secret forces that guide the fate of the great American pastime? Why do the players deny belief in them, while pointing to curious incidents that seem to substantiate them? And why do the players refuse to break with the traditions that kept these gremlins "alive" through the years?

The Jinx usually involves the players themselves. They will chew gum or tobacco or toothpicks throughout a game to relieve the tensions of the contest, so they say, but they also believe this will bring them good luck or make them play better.

They claim they can stop these practices anytime, but it will make them feel uncomfortable and why bother . . . just in case!

The Hex includes the outside influences that affect the game. These are less noticeable to the public, but the players are very aware of them. A Hex may be the weather or the date or just catching sight of a man with a white flower in his lapel. These Hexes can, supposedly, forecast the outcome of the game.

The Whammy deals mainly with discussion of a game while it is in progress. When a person mentions that a pitcher has a perfect game going for him in the eighth inning, he is certainly not rooting for the hurler. For as odd as it may seem, as soon as something like this is talked about, the pitcher feeds the next four batters home run pitches.

Conjecture still rules the matter of the Whammies, Hexes and Jinxes, and it will do so as long as baseball exists, or until a new system comes along. Will they ever disprove them? They already have, by pure logic. But prove that to a ballplayer!

Judges Select Beauty Finalists In Photo Contest

By Lester On

Twelve finalists have been selected in the preliminary judging of the Miss Photo Queen of Ctiy College contest, conducted by Emmett Smith, photography instructor here.

Finalists for the contest are Juanita Schaeffer, Barbara Fisher, Jane Johnson, Leanne Watkins, Nancy Hom, Dale Record, Elve Vilebald, Diana Robinson, Patricia Gow, Merle Bulatao, Vicky Aumann and Geri Gibson.

Chosen from 22 entrants, the judging was held April 29 in the photo studio, C-249, during College Hour. The judges were Laurine Bergin, Gertrude Norgard, Bev Pasqualetti; Madison Devlin, instructors of the college, and Walter Stevenson, photography student.

Final eliminations of the contest will provide the college with three Silver Anniversary representatives for this year's Photography Day on Sunday, May 22, an event annually sponsored by the San Francisco Park and Recreation Department at Sigmund Stern Grove.

Miss Photo Queen of City College or her two attendants, however, will not be competing with contestants in the Northern California Photo Queen contest unless each is individually sponsored by a member of the Northern California Council of Camera Clubs, Smith said.

Of the 12 finalists chosen, he explained, Miss Shaeffer and Miss Fisher have sponsors and therefore will compete in the finals on Photography Day.

In addition to the Northern California Photo Queen contest, Smith added, the California Beauty Pageant, Inc. (sponsor of the Miss Universe Beauty Pageant), will select, on that same day, a representative from San Francisco for the California Beauty Pageant which will take place at Santa Monica from June 15 through June 19.

A possibility exists, Smith declared, in which the winner of the Photo Queen contest also may be the one chosen to represent San Francisco at Santa Monica.

Awards and prizes for Miss Photo Queen include House of Charm modeling courses, gift orders, dancing lessons and various merchandise and donations which amount to more than $2000.

San Francisco's representative to Santa Monica will have her expenses paid in addition to miscellaneous gifts and prizes.

AS Honors 29 Pioneers

COLLEGE PRESIDENT LOUIS G. CONLAN (center above), was presented with a beautiful gold plaque by Associated Student President Wally Hayes (right) and Sophomore President Jack Verga in honor of the college's 29 pioneer faculty members. The award is in the shape of the pages of a book and was presented during the student-faculty coffee hour on April 29.

Honored faculty members are Conlan, Joseph A. Amori, Flossita Badger, Thomas J. Base, Laurine Bergin, Louis Berman, Annemarie Delfs, M. Evans Ecke, Leland Elsan, Miriam Escher, David Everall, Margaret Flournoy, John Gaddy, John Gerstung, James Hughes, Mary Jane Learnard, Lloyd Luckmann, Gladys Luhman, Dorothy Mercer, Manfred Mueller, Joan Nourse, Mary Perry, Milton Polissar, John Rose, Franklin Sawell, Edward Sandys, Yvonne Stoupe, Verral Weber and Thomas Wilson.

Summer Session Registration Here Slated To Start Monday

Students who wish to make up grade deficiencies or accumulate extra units are encouraged to enroll in the 1960 summer session here, from June 27 to August 5, Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction, declared today.

The six-week period of classes is open to students currently enrolled in the college or graduates of any San Francisco high school who want to begin their higher education early, Luckmann stated. Seventy courses are scheduled for the summer session.

Counselors have already made out programs for interested students, but there is still time to inquire about openings. Veterans must file a copy of their program in the Veterans Affairs office.

Students are to report to the registrar's office starting next Monday until June 9 to fill out a registration book. Registration must be confirmed on June 23, and registration will be closed on the same day that classes begin, Monday, June 27.

Six units in addition to physical education is the maximum load permitted in a summer session. The registrar's office has a complete schedule of courses, hours taught, instructors, room numbers, and units available to all students.

AMS Smoker Schedules 2 Sporting Events May 18

Championship basketball followed by championship boxing promises an exciting evening for all who attend the May 18 Associated Men Student semi-annual smoker.

The events will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will be held in the men's gymnasium. Basketball is first on the program with the Inter-Fraternity league winners playing the Independent loop winners for the championship of the intramural basketball league, AMS officers announced. The winning team will be awarded a trophy and each of the team members will receive a medal.

Next on the program will be the boxing matches for the championship of the intramural boxing league. There will be ten matches, after which the trophies will be given out to the "fightingest" boxer and to the outstanding fighter of the evening. Each fighter who participates in a match will receive a medal.

Green Thumbs Nab First Place At Oakland Show With Patio Display

The horticulture department came through with a first place in the annual Oakland Spring Garden Show, displaying a 350 square foot scene of a floral-covered patio and pond, designed by Alex Woolworth, with the help of Roy Silva.

Harry E. Nelson of the horticulture department said that in the student organization class of the amateur division, City College took first place and Oakland City College was second.

The retail floristry students of the floriculture department also entered the Oakland show with an exhibit featuring the theme, From Kew to Kyoto.

It consisted of displays typifying different gardens around the world. The name Kew from the theme refers to the formal gardens of Victorian England. The name Kyoto refers to the natural gardens of Japan.

The pieces represented included England, with a Victorian arrangement in a silver pitcher; New York, with a vase of white chrysanthemums surrounded by theater tickets, opera glasses and long, white gloves, and San Francisco harbor, a decorated ship's wheel. Maryhope Jacks, instructor, was in charge of the constructing and directing of the exhibit.

The next show, Nelson said, will be the Marin Art and Garden Show, which will take place in the latter part of June.

The college's display in this show will be a model garden with the use of garden art form such as mural, scultpure, or ceramic piece.

Another project which will soon get under way in the horticulture department will be the grafting of local trees to root stocks from England in order to create dwarf trees, six to eight feet high.

Band Plans Campus Concert May 20

The Man Who Invented Music, presented by the band with an accompanying narration by Jordy Cooney, a drama student here, will highlight a band concert to be given Friday, May 20, during College Hour in the library.

The concert, sponsored by Meyer M. Cahn, music instructor, will also feature a string ensemble directed by Hilda M. W. Tsoi, music student, playing a Trio Sonata In C Major by Corelli.

The performance will also include Bach Prelude And Fugue, the third movement of Symphony Three by Mendelssohn, Debussy's Golliwog Cakewalk, Italian Polka by Rachmaninoff, and the Emperor Waltz.

The dance band will again attend the Marin Jazz Festival, which was initiated last year, this Friday at College of Marin. The three-day festival, which will take place tomorrow through Saturday, is for Northern California four and two-year colleges.

Masters of ceremony for the program will be radio announcers Wally Ray of KPFA and Jerry Dean and Pat Henry of KJAZ.

Forum Selects 2 Coeds As Editors

As the final judging of the literary material submitted to Forum magazine took place last week, Maureen Mills and Rose Poppiti were selected to head the June publication.

The new co-editors were chosen on the basis of the quality and quantity of the work they have contributed to the magazine. Regulations provide that the editor must be a member of the Associated Students.

Miss Mills, a fourth semester English literature major at the college, became interested in Forum as a result of seeing posters about the club in the halls.

A South San Francisco High School graduate, Miss Mills' plans include attending the University of California. Her contribution to Forum was a descriptive composition entitled, Night On The Embarcadero.

Visiting Hours is the title of the dramatic monologue written by Miss Poppiti. Miss Poppiti is a history major at the college. She previously attended school in Hudson, New York. After graduation here she plans to attend U.C.

Others who aided in preparing Forum for publication are John Sullivan, Jo An Griffin, Maurice Lemus and Jane Shamamian. All are members of Forum Club, under the sponsorship of Catherine Connolly.

Council Okays 26 Budgets Totaling $16,600 In AS Funds; Resignations Cause Shuffle In Student Offices

By Paul Plansky

Positions of Associated Student officers were shuffled like a deck of cards at Student Council last week, and the stack of blue chips, representing 26 budgets, was swept from the council's table as they passed a total of $16,600 from AS funds.

All budget allotments have now been brought before council and passed; only "supplement" budgets remain—extra allocations which were unforeseen at the beginning of the semester. The Spring 1960 budget is segregated as follows:

Co-Educational Activities:
A Cappella Choir	$217.25
Drama	1717.00
Freshman Class	729.00
Rally Committee	419.30
Social Committee	85.00
Sophomore Class	714.50
Publications:
Forum	$500.00
Guardsman	3975.26
Handbook	750.00
Women's Activities:
Associated Women Students	$675.50
Recreation Association	565.70
Men's Activities:
Associated Men Students	$48.00
Baseball	1664.50
Basketball	546.34
Golf	593.60
Intramural	369.50
Men's Glee Club	190.10
Physical Edueation	450.00
Tennis	595.14
Track	2185.50
Miscellaneous:
Administration	$300.00
Campus Police	1918.75
Club Activities Board	591.31
Commencement	562.00
Controller	979.00
Dean of Men	30.00
Dean of Women	30.00
Executive Council	3417.64
Injury Fund	500.00
Insurance	173.37
KCSF Broadcasters	138.29
Publicity Committee	1168.50
Student-Faculty Relations	180.00

The shuffling of AS officers included the switching of council and cabinet members, and made it necessary to fill in positions vacated by the new appointments.

The toppling totem pole started when Margi Hill's resignation of the AS Vice Presidency pulled out the foundation. This led to the appointment of Bill Keane as Vice President. His post of Associated Men Student President now belongs to Fred Lobenstein, the sophomore who received the most votes during his election.

This appointment left an open seat on sophomore council, AS President Wally Hayes then had Bud Andress, who relinquished his office of State Information Chairman, take Lobenstein's empty council seat.

Andress' vacant position was given to Judy Day, who will also continue her job as AS Publicity Chairman.

Spring Trip Tops H&R Curriculum

H&R are worked very hard from 8 in the morning until 1 in the afternoon.

"They don't get much rest," says Coste, "but this prepares them with good working experience." Coste added that students fill the same positions offered in commercial hotel and restaurant establishments, giving them extra experience.

Is there any reward for all this hard work—the answer is definitely, yes!! Eight outstanding students from the department were chosen by the faculty and department students to go on the Spring Trip last month, from April 19 to 25.

This trip is literally seven days in hotel and restaurant heaven. The tour covered famous California hotels and restaurants in Monterey, Los Angeles, Hollywood, Laguna Beach, Pasadena, Bakersfield and Fresno, where the students were guests of various hotel managers and restaurant owners.

The lucky H&R majors feasted free of charge at such well-known "hangouts" as the Beverly Wilshire Hotel in Beverly Hills, the Statler Hotel in Los Angeles and the Hollywood Plaza in Hollywood. Overnight accommodations were provided and tours of the kitchens and executive offices were taken.

The financial sponsors who made this possible represent most of the renowned hotels of San Francisco: the Mark Hopkins, St. Francis, Fairmont and Whitcomb, to name a few.

Organizations Plan Meetings, Socials For May Calendar

By Maria Gonsalves

FOURTEEN members of the Newman Club attended the 1960 Central Pacific Province convention held in Stockton. They are Jackie Arees, Michael Browne, Paul Butler, Jerb Chapman, Joanmarie Derenzo, Clair Maloney, Marian Olken, John Palmer, Marian Panattoni, David Powell, John Rodriguez, Judy and Skip Schwarz and George Zaitz.

The convention, co-hosted by Stockton College and College of the Pacific Newman Clubs, opened with registration, dinner and a dance at the Ambassador Motor Hotel. The Newman Club won a trophy for best attendance at the convention. The club meets during College Hour in S-204.

An on-campus organization, Le Cercle Francais, meets every College Hour in S-312. The club, sponsored by Dorie E. Hernried, instructor, also holds its meetings every other Monday either at the home of a member, or at the home of Miss Hernreid, 154 - 21st Avenue. All interested in French and who speak the language are invited to attend the meetings.

Students who attended a special display by the Merchandising Club received valuable tips about proper display techniques from Sylvan Cohen of Sylvan Cohen Displays. At the College Hour meeting, Cohen analyzed several window displays prepared by club members Beverly Chaney, Diane Devlin, Charlene Glidden and Juanita Schaeffer.

According to Herb Luke, president of the Chinese Students Club, a picnic at the Marin Town and Country Club is scheduled for Saturday, May 21. The following Saturday, May 28, a joint social with the University of California will be held at Tilden Park, Berkeley.

Officers for the Chinese Students Club are Luke, president; Celia Wong, vice president; Jerry Jue, treasurer; Clarice Lee, recording secretary, and Sophie Kwong, corresponding secretary.

The Christian Science Organization holds its meetings on the first and third Thursdays of every month at 124 Eastwood Drive. All interested students are invited to attend. Anyone desiring further information concerning the organization and its functions may consult Nina Tucker in the hotel and restaurant department.

Books collected by Delta Psi sorority will be sent to the University in Korea. Any books, classics or otherwise, dated from 1945 onward are acceptable. A box by the silver pole in Science Hall is the location for book deposit. This campaign will continue throughout the semester.

Spring pledges of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority were presented May 6 at the ISC Ball. They are Karen White, pledge captain; Betty Buckley, Karen Gama, Twila Meyer, Betty Rice, Paula Wonderley and Virginia Zane.

UMOC Penny Votes Net $200 For Scholarships

Alpha Phi Omega's recently concluded Ugly Man On Campus Contest garnered a total of $200 toward its scholarship fund, as Jim Arlin captured first place from a field of 13 to receive the dubious UMOC title.

Canisters, with the contestants' photos attached, were placed about the campus and penny ballots were cast for favorite sons.

Arlin received a total of $83.80 to edge his closest rival, Bob Kelly, who had $24.52.

John Rosenberg was next in line with $22.82.

Arthur Curry found the competition too keen, coming out low man with $0.96.

Intramural Basketball, Boxing Finals Highlight AMS Smoker Tonight

An action-packed night is promised spectators at the Associated Men Student semi-annual smoker at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the men's gymnasium.

The first event on tonight's program, new AMS President Fred Loebenstein said, is the intramural basketball championship game between the winners of the two intramural leagues.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon, top team in the Inter-Fraternity league, will clash with the best of the Independent loop, the Invaders, to decide top honors in intramural play. Bill Keane, Associated Student vice president, will announce the night's program.

Eusebio Joves and James Noda will touch gloves at 8:30 p.m., in the first of 10 intramural boxing championship fights scheduled for the evening. They will be fighting in the 120-pound division. Dave DeMartini will referee the bouts.

Featherweight battlers Fred Cherniss and Carlo Middione square off next. Frank Batmale and Fred Randall will go for the lightweight crown.

Climbing into the ring to contest the 140-pound division will be Melvin Watari and Miguel Cuevas. Following this bout Al Johnson and Bobby Harrell slug it out for the 147-pound title.

Veterans Leon Price and Bill Wheeler trade punches in the 155-pound division, and the best of the 162-pounders will be decided by Al White and Jim Dennis.

The next to last fight of the evening will be in the 170-pound class with Jack Gudeman battling Al McCauley. The final bout features Bob Pollitt and Martin Anzelc for the heavyweight title.

All participants in the boxing events receive medals, and trophies are awarded to the outstanding boxer and the "fightingest fighter."

Dr. Robert Durand is the ringside physician, and judges are Coaches Alex Schwarz, Lou Vasquez and Grover Kiemmer. Other ringside attendants are timekeeper, Coach Lee Elsan, and trainers Ron Grannucci and John Azzaro. Roy Diederichsen, college boxing instructor, coached the fighters.

President Loebenstein invited all students to attend, both men and women. Admission will be free with an Associated Student card and 50 cents without. Refreshments are slated.

Blood Drive Nets 214 Pints; Fails To Top '59 Record

Failing to meet last year's record-breaking collection of 297 pints, Tau Chi Sigma's annual spring blood drive last week netted, nevertheless, 214 pints of blood, Mike Haskell, chairman of the drive, revealed.

The goal for this year's drive had been 500 pints.

Last year's effort which surpassed its 250-pint goal was the largest amount of blood donated by any Northern California organization during a two-day drive in peacetime conditions.

A trophy will be awarded to the fraternity, sorority and Club Activities Board organization which had the highest per cent of its total membership contributing blood.

At the conclusion of the blood drive last Friday afternoon the leading fraternity was Zeta Phi Sigma, which donated 10 pints.

Two sororities were neck and neck for honors. Delta Psi had donated 13 pints of blood, but Phi Beta Rho was right behind with a total of 12 pints.

Of the CAB groups, the Veterans Club was leading with eight pints, followed by the Block SF with seven pints.

Appropriately enough, Tau Chi Sigma, sponsor of the drive, had contributed the most of any campus organization, 20 pints, although it has only a total membership of 13.

Haskell explained that seven alumni of the fraternity had come to donate blood in its name. It is not in the running for the trophy, however.

In all, 235 students of the college volunteered to give blood but 21 had to be denied the privilege because of various medical reasons. The 214 who did give, contributed blood, which in monetary terms, was a little over $6000.

Haskell stated that the large number of students who gave blood is a sign of "the responsibility young people take." He added that it refutes much of the derogatory and adverse publicity a minor few attach to all young people through foolish stunts which magazines and other publications are all too quick to publicize.

The giving was not without its rewards, for the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, which collected the blood, gave each donor credit for either a year's supply of blood for himself or a member of his immediate family, or up to eight pints for someone else the donor may select.

New York Gallery Buys Roy Walker's Pottery

Five pieces of pottery designed and fired by Roy H. Walker, art and ceramics instructor here, were recently chosen by the Georg Jensen Corp. for display in its May exhibit at the Jensen Galleries in New York City.

The five pieces consist of compotes, bowls and bottles. They are the result of recent experimental work in reduction firing, Walker said.

At the present time he has a piece of pottery on display at the Legion of Honor in the exhibit of prize awards of past years.

The five pieces of pottery now on display in New York are the first potteries Walker has submitted to the Jensen Corp.

IN THE MISS PHOTO QUEEN of City College contest finals, experience and youth were hand in glove in determining the eventual three winners.

At right, auburn-haired Leanne Watkins, 19, the college's Photo Queen, was Miss Sacramento Metropolitan and Miss Yolo Park last year. A native of Sacramento, she also was graduated from a House of Charm modeling course in that city.

Miss Watkins stands 5 feet and 4½ inches and has green eyes. She is a business major at the college.

As one of the attendants, blonde Juanita Schaeffer, 19, center, likewise took a modeling course but at Coronet here in San Francisco. Miss Shaeffer is also 5 feet 4½ inches tall but has brown eyes. A native San Franciscan, she is majoring in merchandising.

The other attendant, Jane Johnson, 18, left, is also blonde but with blue eyes. A House of Charm graduate, Miss Johnson stands 5 feet 8 inches. Originally from Omaha, Nebraska, she is majoring in dental hygiene.

Leanne Watkins, Attendants Join In Lens Festival

Three attractive coeds, two blondes and an auburn-haired beauty, were selected last week as the college's Silver Anniversary representatives to Photography Day.

Chosen as Miss Photo Queen of City College was Leanne Watkins. Her attendants, as determined at the final judging conducted by Emmett Smith, photography instructor, in the studio, C-249, last Monday, are Juanita Schaeffer and Jane Johnson.

The judges, who arrived at their choices after much deliberation and discussion, were Ruth Bernhard, fine arts photographer; Fran Mercer, advertising photographer, and Wayne Mayfield, art director of the L. C. Cole Advertising Agency.

All judges were unanimous, after making their decisions, in saying that all the contestants were well-qualified for the title and that any of the 12 finalists could have been selected.

Two of the finalists, Diana Robinson and Merle Bulatao, were so impressive that they were asked by one of the judges, Miss Mercer, to try out as models at her studio.

Also present at the final judging was Frederick M. Levy, supervising director of photography of the San Francisco Park and Recreation Department, which is sponsoring this year's Photography Day next Sunday. It is an annual affair at Sigmund Stern Grove.

On that day, the winners from the college will be presented on stage. They will model and pose before a booth especially decorated to honor the college on its 25th anniversary.

Finals of the Northern California Photo Queen contest also will be held. At the same time, eliminations will be run to determine a representative from San Francisco to Santa Monica for the California Beauty Pageant.

Sponsorship by members of the Northern California Council of Camera Clubs is essential for competition in these events.

Finalists of the Miss Photo Queen of City College contest who have acquired sponsors and, therefore, are eligible to compete are Miss Schaeffer, Miss Johnson and Barbara Fisher.

Prizes for Miss Watkins as the college's Photo Queen, according to Beverly Pasqualetti, photography instructor, include a cup donated by Brooks Cameras, photography supplies store at 45 Kearny Street, while the Campus Fountain at 1425 Ocean Avenue will donate a dress.

Thespians Slate Country Girl For Eight Weekend Showings

The curtain will rise this Friday on the drama department's latest production, Country Girl. The play is scheduled to run through four Friday and Saturday weekend performances, with all performances starting at 8 p.m. at the Little Theater in S-28.

According to Michael Griffin, drama director, the show now in rehearsal is beginning to assume opening night shape.

The play's story centers around a show being prepared for Broadway. Four persons are primarily concerned with the show's progress, Frank Elgin, the leading actor; Georgie, his wife; Bernie Dodd, the director, and Phil Cooke, the producer.

The drama develops, as it becomes increasingly doubtful whether Elgin will be able to handle his role.

Tense scenes occur when Cooke, fearing for his investment, makes it known that he doesn't want Elgin in the show.

Griffin declared that the role of Elgin is a particularly difficult one to portray, since it calls for an actor to portray an actor.

Country Girl's cast includes only seven actors. However, in the Little Theater's presentation, two actresses will alternate in each of the play's two female roles.

Griffin claims that, technically, Country Girl is a hard play to present, since it requires four different sets. This technical problem has been solved, however, with the construction of two sets which can easily be rolled on and off the stage.

At present rehearsals are also in progress for The Romanceers, a comedy to be presented during a future College Hour this semester at the Little Theater.

Slides Of Famed Brundage Art On Tap This C-Hour

Slides of the famed Avery Brundage Oriental art collection, one of the most extensive in the world, will be shown this Friday in S-136 during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m.

San Franciseans will vote on a $2.7 million bond issue in the June 7 elections to enlarge the de Young Museum to accommodate the collection, valued at $18 million. Brundage has offered the collection to the city, provided the treasure is assured a suitable home.

The slides will feature highlights from the collection, which includes Persian pottery and bronzes, sculpture from China, India and Indonesia, ranging from ancient to modern.

Although strongest in these fields, it also includes Greek and Roman vases, bronzes, and examples of African and pre-Colombian American art.

Library To Open At Night In Fall

Permission was granted for night use next semester of the college's library by the Board of Education two weeks ago, Edward Sandys, dean of instruction, announced today.

The board passed a resolution to allocate funds to operate the library all the time and permit its use three hours, three nights a week.

A survey will be made of students in the extended-day class to determine library hours of operation.

The library hours are to be determined from the most frequent requests made on the student survey.

Opening of the library at night eliminaxes a year-long struggle started by the Associated Women Students, under the leadership of former president Arlene Kordoules, in Spring of 1959.

Election Results In; Griffin To Announce New Officers Today

Official results of the Associated Student election held here Monday and Tuesday will be released this morning.

Election Commissioner Jerry Griffin said that the use of machines for voting would enable him to obtain an early count of the votes.

One striking feature of the campaigns was the sudden appearance of posters in conspicuous places all over the campus. Something new was added with the use of advertising balloons by one party to support their candidates.

At an election rally during College Hour last Friday, most of the candidates spoke to the students and outlined their platforms.

Griffin said his late appointment as Election Commissioner had hindered efforts to publicize the election.

Complete election results will appear in The Guardsman next week.

Yes On Proposition A Gives SF Title To Brundage Collection

AT THE JUNE 7 ELECTIONS the people of San Francisco will, by voting Yes on Proposition A, make San Francisco the home of one of the finest art collections in the world.

Avery Brundage, chairman of the International Olympic Committee, has offered this city his famed collection of Oriental art, an irreplacable treasure, recognized as the finest and largest collection of its kind in the world—provided San Francisco erects a building suitable for its display.

The Brundage collection has been valued at 18 million dollars, and Proposition A asks that the city construct a two million dollar wing to the de Young Museum to house this gift.

Money can not truly measure the worth of this collection—it must be thought of in terms of its cultural value to our city. If Proposition A is affirmed, San Francisco will become one of the world's foremost centers of Oriental art.

The collection will have unfathomable value to the institutions of learning in the area, and the city will become a mecca for scholars and visitors throughout the world.

This may be San Francisco's only chance to gain this wonderful treasure. Many museums—including the Art Institute of Chicago—are anxious to obtain all or part of Brundage's collection. Mr. Brundage feels it only fitting that San Francisco, the gateway to the Orient, should have the initial opportunity of housing it.

San Franciscans saw fit, and rightly so, to build a new home for the Giants. We can think of no other venture that would make San Francisco live up to its reputation as "The Cosmopolitan City" than to balance Candlestick with a home for the greatest Oriental art collection in the world.

The bond issue has already received the support of a number of civic organizations and prominent individuals, including the Mayor and the President of this college; we feel that this is an indication of tremendous interest on the part of the people of San Francisco, who will not pass up this opportunity.

Course In Space Biology Goes Into Intellectual Orbit Next Semester

By Bob O'Lear

Preparing for the conquest of the newest frontier, that of outer space, the college is supplementing its curriculum to meet the demanding challenge.

Beginning with the Fall semester, 1960, the biology division will offer biological science 30, a course designed to give the student further insight into the secrets of space biology.

Under the instruction of James Runner, the class will meet for one hour a week on Tuesday at 9 a.m. for one unit. The course is designed to be helpful to those students interested in air navigation, astronautics, and space exploration.

The idea for the course sprang from a recent conversation between Louis Berman of the physical sciegce department and Jules Fraden, head of the life science department. Berman, in teaching astronomy, has been presenting some of this information.

He felt it would be good to have more intensified study on the rapidly growing subject. Fraden concurred and discussed the possibility with Runner because of his avid interest in the topic.

Runner who, in his biology courses, has been offering some of this type of material since shortly before the ominous warnings of Russia's progress with the launching of "Sputnik I," was quite willing.

Since this chain of events, Runner has been busily preparing for the presentation of the new subject. His feelings are, "For us to realize space travel, we will be required to bring together the aspects of all the sciences."

He states that he first became interested through a cousin who was studying flight physiology for crews of B-52's at Castle Air Force Base.

Since then he has familiarized himself with the more than 25 publications offered in this area, ". . . many of which are too technical for the layman to comprehend properly," Runner commented.

The actual preparation is rather complex as newly-found knowledge is making any type of permanent text obsolete. "At the moment, I am still somewhat undecided on just what to use," Runner stated.

Although he has several recordings of lectures by prominent men in the field, and some films and slides, because of the lack of time he is busily eliminating the ones he feels aren't necessary to the course as he wants to present it.

According to the bulletin listing the expectations of the course, are the following:

1. Flight in present day aircraft. This phase will deal mainly with the bodily effects on the flyer.

2. Life in the space craft and space stations of the future. This will deal with the problems and dangers of maintaining a man in space.

3. Life in other worlds. What are the chances of finding life on other planets? And the conditions necessary for life on these planets.

In meeting the expanding needs of students, the college in general, and the life science department in particular are to be congratulated for this progressive attitude in presenting this course, one of the first of its kind in Northern California's colleges.

Mat Champ Turns Student, Combines Brain And Brawn

"Papa" Hemingway is renowned for three things—his literary endeavors, his beard and his spasmodic displays of vitality in the prize and bull rings.

Jack Laskin, creative writing student here, may never match Hemingway's beard or literary stature, but he's well ahead of the "Papa" in the ring.

JACK LASKIN, creative writing student here, who is also known in the wrestling world.

But Laskin doesn't throw punches or bulls in his ring encounters—he throws other men around. Having completed a wrestling exhibition in Northern California, he sets sail soon for Australia to trade grunts and groans with the men down under.

Laskin, a native of Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, has grappled with some of the biggest names in the mat world —Leo Nomellini, Donley Johnathan, and Gorgeous George.

Weighing in at 225 pounds on a six-foot frame, he's pretty small—as pro wrestlers go, that is. His main weapon doesn't reside in strength. Laskin's what the sports scribes label a "heady" athlete, relying primarily on his knowledge of the art.

And he has titles to back up that intellectual boast, He's the Spanish heavyweight champion, and holder of the Belgrade and Vienna International Tournament crowns.

The YMCA introduced him to wrestling when he was a lad in Hamilton. Having a tremendous wanderlust, Laskin turned pro in order to satisfy his travel urge. His matches have taken him to most of the continents, but San Francisco seems to "be the place."

Following the Australian tour, he'll return to the Bay Area and continue his creative writing—studies at the college.

Oriental Astrologers Foretell The Destinies Of Persons Born In The Years Of Animals

By Elmer Milligan

RESIDENTS of Chinatown, one of the most united groups of people in the country, have probably the lowest juvenile delinquency rate in San Francisco.

The answer lies in the rearing of Chinese children. Fear, scolding and threats play no part in the Chinese disciplinary procedure. The most forceful lesson, Oriental parents believe, is kind but cool politeness.

Duty to their parents is a life-time virtue. Responsibility, initiative, obedience and respect are taught to children early in life in hopes that they will fulfill their obligation as being honorable citizens of the community.

Chinese festivals, always celebrated in a grand manner, are either connected with the seasons or are occasions for paying respect to their ancestors.

The greatest of the celebrations is New Year. Oriental custom requires Chinese to pay all their debts before the New Year, assuring happiness in a care-free manner. The holiday comes in late January or early February, determined by the rotation of the moon.

The Chinese year usually begins in January or February of the Gregorian calendar and each year is represented by an animal. The animals are the rat, ox, tiger, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, sheep, monkey, rooster, dog and pig.

Old Chinese astrologers claim the year in which one is born will have a definite effect on his destiny because the person will reflect some of the characteristics of the animal representing his year of birth.

The years of the rat, for instance, are 1924, 1936, 1948 and 1960; persons born in the daytime of those years are supposed to live on "Easy Street" because rats supposedly rest during the day and search for food at night.

Therefore, those persons born at night in the Year of the Rat may expect to work hard for a living. This is an interesting belief and perhaps was prophetic about 10 years ago, and today, because of their plus $40 million in Bay Area banks we might say that all Chinese were—oops!—we mean, born in the Year of the Rat.

According to the old Chinese horoscope, persons born in the Year of the Tiger (1938) and Year of the Sheep (1931) will not make good mates.

So, if a man is born in 1938 and married to a woman born in 1942 (Year of the Horse), the marriage might work out. But if things turn sour, he had better get hip because, chances are, his little filly is prancing out on him.

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob Pacini

TAKING one of those tugboat tours around the bay can be a pretty informative and amusing experience — informative by finding out things about the bay you never knew before, and amusing if your guide happens to be a comedian.

This one was.

The bay was unusually rough as the aging boat edged slowly from its pier and headed for deeper waters.

"Welcome aboard, mates," a voice from the loudspeaker boomed. "As you might have noticed, the water's a bit choppy today, but don't let that worry you. At this point we're only 200 feet from land—straight down."

Of course, all the passengers laughed, but they still occasionally glanced back at the pier while holding firmly to the rail.

The boat circled a large island clustered with several groups of gaunt, simple buildings. "That, folks," continued the guide from the bridge of the ship, "is Alcatraz Acres, a very exclusive residential area. Although there's no rent to pay, the terms of the leases are binding, usually for life.

"Oh, by the way," he added, "those birds flying about overhead are not, as you might think, sea gulls. Around these parts they're called stool pigeons because . . ."

The passengers, en masse, made a dash for the safety of the cabin, but later, regaining courage, but still with a leery eye, ventured out once more and heard more of the guide's remarks.

"San Francisco is an extremely active port," he said. "Each day hundreds of marines and sailors returning from foreign shores land at our fair town. And, of course, they are anxious to get into the city where they can visit our fine libraries, museums and churches."

An immense, dark shadow fell over us and the guide remarked, "We are now passing under the Bay Bridge, longest such structure in the world. Those three mammoth towers hold up thousands of tons of concrete and steel, and keep the thing from falling on us."

Clancing up, he added as an afterthought, "Of course, though, you can never tell about them things."

As the boat headed back to the pier the guide pointed out, "That orange structure in the distance is the famous Golden Gate Bridge. It's such a pretty thing, it seems a shame that 196 people have leaped to their deaths from there and . . . well, I'll be darned, make that 197."

The boat nudged back into its berth and the guide said, "I'd like to thank you folks for helping me prove a point. The insurance man the other day said the boat was unsafe and would sink next time I took her out, but as you can see, we made it back safe and sound."

H&R Instructor Gerstacker To Retire In June

Retiring at the end of this semester after 14 years of teaching is Fritz Gerstacker, chef instructor of the hotel and restaurant department here, who describes the field of education "as one of the most exasperating and yet rewarding of jobs"—a field which he entered almost accidentally.

He explained the manner in which he entered the teaching field by relating a story which took place more than 14 years ago.

"One day," he relates, "I was dissatisfied with the work I was doing when a friend told me that I should teach because I enjoy lecturing so much. The friend added that I would be paid for it.

"This sounded like an excellent idea. Although I was qualified, I had never considered a teaching career. I submitted an application and I was accepted," he added.

Born in Munich, Germany, at the turn of the century, Gerstacker took his apprenticeship at the Park Hotel there and graduated in 1914.

During 1926 he traveled from his homeland to San Francisco. His first few years in this city he worked within his field at various hotels.

For ten years prior to teaching, Gerstacker, in partnership with Monk Young, originator of the 365 Club, owned the old Monk Young's restaurant on Mission Street near First.

After the restaurant was sold and the partnership dissolved Gerstacker, not wishing to reopen another eating establishment, worked at a variety of jobs, one of which was selling books in a bookstore.

Ram Cindermen Battle Strong Field In Northern California Meet At Salinas This Weekend

Facing one of their sternest tests of the season, the Red and White cindermen travel to Salinas this Saturday for the Northern California Junior College meet.

The locals have already won the Northern California Junior College Relays, the Big Eight dual competition championship, and also the Big Eight over-all championship. A win this Saturday would put them just that much closer to the state championship.

Recently the Rams won the Big Eight Conference over-all championship at Santa Rosa. They racked up 135½ points while the second place team, the Modesto Pirates, could only muster 61.

At this affair the mile was won by Ram Ray Batz with a time of 4:20.5, which was a new conference record, with Frank James, also of the locals, coming in second, and Fishback of San Mateo placing third.

The broad jump was captured by Ram ace Jess Sirles with a new conference record leap of 23'7", with George Holland, San Francisco, second, and Lovett of Contra Costa third.

The 440-yard dash was won by Sullivan of Stockton with his teammate Craig placing second, and Palmore of Oakland third. Lon Colbert of the Rams won the 100-yard dash with a time of 10.0 with Alex Jenkins, also of the Rams, placing second and Holaman of Sacramento third.

The 120 high hurdles was won by Fritz of Stockton, while the shot-put was copped by Parker of Modesto with a heave of 47'8". The 880-yard dash saw Sullivan, Stockton, first with a time of 1:55.4; Andrews, Sacramento, second, and Gonzales, Sacramento, third.

Colbert of the Rams won the 220-yard dash event with a time of 22.4, while Holaman of Sacramento came in second, and Palmore of Oakland took third. Walker of Modesto took the pole vault and his teammate Guilder won the 220 -low hurdles.

Batz of the Red and White won the two-mile run with Fishbeck of San Mateo second, and James of the locals third. Ralph Mathis of the Rams took the high jump to set a new conference record of 6'7¼", while Hynding of San Mateo captured the javelin throw and Modesto took the mile relay.

Baseballers End Season With 4-1 Santa Rosa Win

The Ram baseballers ended their season here May 6 as they breezed by the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs 4-1, backed by the fine pitching of ace pitcher Bill Flanagan.

The victory gave the Red and White third position in the Big Eight behind Oakland (12-2), and Sacramento (9-4-1).

The reason for the Panthers' tie is that their game with Santa Rosa was called off after extra innings because of darkness and wasn't to be played off unless it meant the loop flag.

The Santa Rosa Bear Cubs claimed the fourth spot with an eight-won five-lost and one-tie record.

The San Mateo Bulldogs finished fifth with a six-won eight-lost record.

Behind them were the West Contra Costa Comets at five wins, nine losses to their credit.

Modesto, the hard-luck team of the conference, finished seventh, winning only four while losing 10.

But the big surprise of the year was the last place finish of the Stockton Mustangs, who were the conference champions last year. However, they ended their season this year with a dismal three wins and 11 losses.

Ram Coach Lee Elsan recently commented on his team's showing in the just-concluded season saying that he feels that his team should have given Oakland a run for their money, as many of the games should have been easy victories.

The 4-1 win over the Bear Cubs was a revenge for the disastrous showing the Elsanmen displayed the previous week in Santa Rosa, losing by a wide margin, 14-1.

The final Big Eight standings:

	W	L
Oakland	12	2
Sacramento	9	4	1*
San Francisco	9	5
Santa Rosa	7	5	1*
San Mateo	6	8
West Contra Costa	5	9
Modesto	4	10
Stockton	3	11

RAMblings

By Frank Dunne

WHEN a layman goes to his first baseball game he is awed by the method in which a player knows when to bunt or to hit (try to hit) or to steal a base.

Most newcomers believe the players do these things of their own accord. But there is a vast science involved in the art of diamond-communication. This is the science of signals. The next time you go to a ball game notice the third base or the first base coach. He is constantly moving his arms, tipping his hat, scraping the dirt or slapping his hands.

He is not having a fit, nor is he trying to keep warm; he is telling his men at the plate or on base what to do. This is what makes a ball game run smoothly—sometimes.

When a man comes to bat he will first look to the base coach for a signal. It is then up to him to follow through. Of course, this does not always happen. If the man reaches base he also has to watch the coach for his sign to steal a base or stay there.

The coaches are constantly giving motions from the coaching box, but only a few of them have any real meaning.

Many of the opposing coaches try to steal these signs, and if they do, they gain a decided advantage. But with all the motion involved, stealing signals is a very hard job.

Golden Gate Courts To Host State Net Championship Play

The top 16 tennis players in California's two-year colleges will converge on San Francisco's Golden Gate Park court this Friday and Saturday for the state net championships.

Out of this action the top singles player and the top doubles team will be crowned. Chris Crawford, Menlo College, is favored to win the singles title for the second year in succession. Crawford was a member of last year's Davis Cup team and is rated high in national rankings.

In the recent Big Eight Conference championships at Sacramento Tom Muench of Modesto was crowned the top singles player in the league, and Richard Gill and Muench won the doubles title, upsetting Vince Chinn and Larry Draper, who were ranked number one in pre-tournament ratings.

Besides Muench those who qualified were Chinn and Draper of Coach Diederichsen's squad; Gill and Bob Atwood, Modesto; Bob Harrison and Dave Hinckley, Stockton, and Dave Smith, Santa Rosa.

In the playoff for the loop crown Draper reached the semi-finals and drew Muench as his opponent. This match turned out to be one of the best matches of the tennis season as Draper battled his top seeded opponent right down to the wire before dropping the match, 8-6, 7-5.

Chinn of the Ram squad defeated Hinckley of Stockton in his semi-finals match and earned the right to battle Muench in the finals. Muench won the first set, 8-6, and the second set with the score tied, 9-9.

The sectional qualifiers in the doubles competition were Muench-Gill, Modesto; Chinn-Draper, Lynn Mattison and Paul Barth of the local aggregation; Harrison - Hinckley, Kaye Won-Pat Yarman, Stockton; Tony DeCoulade-Dean Hammer, San Mateo; John Estes-Smith and Norm Moore and Mike Doyle, Santa Rosa.

Distance Medley Relay Team Leaves Trail Of Broken Records

One of the most outstanding athletic groups on campus is a four-man relay on the track team.

This relay is the distance medley, holder of the college, Big Eight conference, and Northern California records.

The distance medley is a relay in which each man runs a different length. This means that each man must be strong in his event, as any weakness in the different distances will result in an almost insurmountable position in the hinterlands.

Since they run the longest distance, the 1320 and mile runners comprise the "heart" of a distance relay. Weakness here will spell instant disaster. And it is here the college is the strongest.

Frank James is the 1320 man, while Ray Batz runs the mile. As an indication of their strength, Batz and James finished one-two in the mile event in the recent Big Eight championships.

Homer Chaney, an immigrant from the sovereign territory of Texas, is the 440 man. Chaney is a converted sprinter, and was also a member of the 880 relay that broke the Big Eight Conference standard while winning that event.

During the year, Coach Louis Vasquez has used two men, Tom Jennings and Tony Vance, at the 880 with equal success. As Coach Vasquez puts it, Jennings is a "frustrated decathlon man who makes a good half-miler."

Before coming to the college, Jennings was a member of the Berkeley High track squad that won the State Championships.

Vance, a graduate of Balboa, is one of the only two sophomores on the relay, Batz being the other. One of the most versatile men on the team, he has run the 880, mile, and the two-mile events this past season.

Batz, only a fourth placer in the All-City mile event in high school, has been an extremely hard worker this season and it has paid dividends.

"A perfect example of what hard work can do." This is Coach Vasquez' summary of Batz, the man who broke the Big Eight mile record this season.

James, also from Balboa, withdrew from the college in 1957 to get married, have children, and work. He returned this year, and intends to complete his education at San Francisco State.

The relay has broken the old Northern California record of 10:49.0 by 22 seconds. Their time of 10:27.0 also eclipses the old national two-year college mark of 10:27.5. Unfortunately, southern California has produced two teams this year with times better than this.

Mathis Scores Lone Ram Points In Fresno Relays

By Doug Cathcart

The Ram cindermen, after a highly successful conference season, met their Waterloo last Saturday at the West Coast Relays in Fresno where they placed a paltry 23rd in junior college competition.

The locals' lone 3/7 point score was contributed by Ralph Mathis, who leaped 6-2 in the high jump event. Mathis was slightly off his usual stride at the meet as he set a Big Eight conference record of 6-7½ May 7.

The winner, Los Angeles City College, placed in eight of the 16 events. The powerful and proven Los Angeles 120 high hurdles runners finished first, second and third in this event.

The Bakersfield Junior College 440 relay squad set a national two-year college record for that event with the time of 41 seconds flat. Anchor man on the winning 440 team, Dennis Johnson, also unofficially tied the U.S. record in the 100-yard dash with a time of :09.4.

Harry Edwards of Fresno City College also starred as he broke the discus mark with a throw of 171-8½.

The scoring at the affair was extremely lopsided as the second place squad, Glendale, had only 23 points compared with the 50 3/7 point winning score of Los Angeles.

The really close competition showed up farther down the line. An example of this close "down under" competition is in the fact that San Francisco was in a four-way tie for 23rd place.

Popular opinion had the Red and White trackstars destined for a higher total tabulation at the relays. However, the intelligent observation was made at the start of the season. Ram Track Coach Lou Vasquez at that time stated that the Big Eight conference was weaker this year and such should not be taken too seriously when considering state competition.

Hall Of Fame Honors Grant, Shields

Two more former Ram athletes, L. C. Shields and Don Grant, were elected today to the college's sports Hall of Fame.

The voting was very close as Shields led Grant by only one vote. Fifteen were nominated and on the ballot, and from these 15 the two new members were chosen.

Shields was the All-Conference tackle for the Rams during the 1957-58 season. He led the Rams both years by his inspirational play, teamwork and just plain hard football.

Grant played both football and baseball for the locals during the latter years of World War II. He quarterbacked the grid squad and held down the hot spot on the diamond, third base, for the Ram nine.

His determination, inspiration and quality of play won him this honor, but the awe-inspiring fact about this man is that he is crippled in both legs and had to support himself with braces whenever he entered the field play.

Preparations are now being made to honor the two men at the Block Society dinner in June. At this time they will be presented with their awards and their names will be added to the perpetual trophy of the college's sports Hall of Fame.

Forfeits Cause Dropping Of Six Mural Squads

Five teams were excluded last week from further competition in the Associated Men Student-sponsored intramural play for repeated failure to appear at game time.

The teams, all in the Independent league of competition, are the Lyons, the Rinners, the Block SF, last semester's champions, The Guardsman and the Retail Floristry Club.

The action, taken by Jack Gaddy, men's physical education director and intramural co-ordinator, developed May 10 when eight teams were scheduled for competition.

Both gymnasiums were in readiness, student timekeepers, custodians and paid referees were on hand, but only three of the eight teams scheduled to play put in an appearance.

This was not the first incident of forfeiture of a game by a team failing to arrive on schedule. All semester the intramural competition has been plagued by a rash of forfeitures without warning after all other arrangements had been completed.

Of the three teams present, the Invaders, leaders of the league, won another game through forfeiture, and is the inevitable champion of the independent segment of the league.

The two other teams, the Recreation Association and the Pachyderms, staged the only game of the evening, with the Recreation Association team downing the Pachyderms, 67-32. (The Invaders have already defeated the Recreation Association.)

The finals of the intramural season will be staged at the AMS smoker tonight, when the winners of the Independent league and the Inter-Fraternity loop will battle for the over-all championship of the mural loop.

The two teams slated for this match are the contingents from Gamma Phi Ypsilon and the Invaders. Both of these teams have played top basketball all season and, coupled with the easy wins over the other forgetful aggregations in the league, they should provide a top-flight basketball game.

Gaddy and the members of the AMS expressed disappointment over the apathetic showing by most of the teams in the league. The mural program was initiated for the enjoyment of the students who could not participate nor excel in the varsity sports offered by the college.

H&R-2 Leads RA Bowling League With 7-2 Record

In the six-team intramural bowling league sponsored by the Recreation Association the number two team of the Hotel and Restaurant contingent is currently leading the league with a 7-2 record.

The H&R department has two teams entered in the league as do the Hi-Fives. The other two teams in the league are the Newman Club and the Filipino Club.

The individual leaders in the league are as follows:

Men's single game, Ray Ferriera, 195 (Hi-Fives No. 1) and Ed Gormley, 192 (H&R No. 1).

Women's single game, Carolyn Vukasin, 154 (Hi-Fives No. 1) and Pat Perkins, 151 (Hi-Fives No. 1).

For a three-game series, the men's high score is held by Ferriera, 511, and Gormley, 460, while the women's high scorers are Judy Webb, 397 (H&R No. 2), and Miss Vukasin, 393.

The teams with the highest total of pins for the nine games played are the number two H&R team with 5588 and the Filipino Club with 5276.

The matches are held at the Sports Center Bowl and all interested are invited to come and see the teams in action.

Graduates Pick Riordan Auditorium For Evening Commencement June 10; Students Compete For Speech Honors

Commencement exercises will be held on Friday, June 10, at 8 p.m. in the Riordan High School auditorium, John J. Brady, coordinator, division of student welfare, and commencement committee chairman, announced last week.

Student speaker tryouts for the exercises were held last Friday in C-245 during the double College Hour.

All prospective graduates with at least a 3.5 grade-point average were notified by letter of their eligibility to try out, William E. Culver, English instructor and student speaker tryout committee chairman, disclosed. Two speakers will be selected, he said.

The students notified were Mary Blair, Diane Christofferson, May Chun, Marie Dextro, Mary Didenko, Pamela Gardello, Norma Hazen, Virginia Hyde, Beatrice Mauch, Jean McKaye, Mary Ellen McSweeney, Sally Nagase, Rose Poppiti, Robert Spencer, Harry Suzuki, Jeng Tang, Florence Torbs, Jean Toso, Vera Usanoff, Arlan Wong and Beatrice Wong.

Results of a poll recently concluded among prospective graduates of the class of 1959-60 indicated a preference for the June 10 date at the Riordan auditorium, Brady disclosed. Five invitations will be allowed each participating graduate, he said, to accommodate the 1241 seating capacity of the auditorium.

On hand to present the traditional awards will be Harold Spears, superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools, Brady added. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will confer degrees to approximately 475 graduates from the summer and fall sessions of 1959 and the spring semester of 1960, he said.

The awards to be presented at the commencement exercises are the President's Award Plaque, a highlight of the evening, and a Scholastic Cup to be awarded to the student with the highest grade-point average, Brady continued. Elmer Skinner, president of the Board of Education, has been invited to attend, he stated.

Music will be furnished by the college's music department and its instructors, Brady declared.

The concert band, conducted by Meyer Cahn, will provide instrumental music while Robert Morton will direct the A Cappella Choir in vocal selections along with soloists, students in Flossita Badger's voice class.

Members of the student speaker tryout committee, besides Culver, are Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction; Mary Golding, dean of women; Ralph Hillsman, dean of men; Mary Jane Learnard, registrar; Marcelline McDermott, English instructor, and John French, business education instructor.

Pre-Graduation Award Assembly Set For June 3

As a prelude to commencement exercises, an assembly will be held in the library on Friday, June 3, during College Hour, Mary F. Golding, dean of women, announced last week.

A greeting by Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will begin a program which will include a talk probably by Donald F. Snepp, English instructor, and selections sung by the Men's Glee Club.

The following scholarships will be awarded, Miss Golding said:

Academy of Art Scholarship, Alpha Phi Omega Scholarships, Bank of America Awards, Chinese Students Club Scholarships, Dr. A. J. Cloud Scholarships, Alice Eastwood Scholarship, Criminology Scholarship, Florence Louis Scholarship.

Others include Graduating Class of 1959 Scholarships, Hotel and Restaurant Scholarships, Margaret Dougherty Scholarship, San Francisco Flower Industry Scholarships, Square and Circle Scholarships, and the Wall Street Journal Award in Finance.

Band Concert Friday To Honor Retiring Music Instructor

The sixth annual spring band concert, dedicated to Flossita Badger, who is retiring after 25 years as a music instructor at this college, will be held this Friday during College Hour at the library.

The band, directed by Meyer H. Cahn, will be joined by five performers from the Sixth Army Band, adding to the group a flute, trombone, two clarinets and drums.

Presentation of The Man Who Invented Music with an accompanying narrative by drama student Jordy Cooney will highlight the concert. The program will also feature a string ensemble directed by Hilda M. W. Tsoi, associate conductor, playing a Trio Sonata In C Major by Corelli.

Other numbers included in the performance are a Bach Prelude and Fugue, Debussy's Goliywog Cakewalk, Italian Polka by Rachmaninoff, the Emperor Waltz, and the third movement of Symphony Three by Mendelssohn with clarinet soloist Joseph Putrae, music education major here.

Forum Distribution Set For Ramporium June 6

Distribution of Forum magazine will begin June 6 at the Ramporium. The magazine will be available at no charge to Associated Student members. A fee of 50 cents will be charged to non-members.

Co-editors of the publication are Maureen Mills and Rose Poppiti. Others who rendered services are Jo Ann Griffin, Maurice Lemus, Jane Shamanian and John Sullivan, with the cover designed by Richard Chin.

IRC Hosts 'UN' Conference

120 Delegates To Discuss Current World Problems

Sponsored by the International Relations Club, delegates representing 22 Northern California two-year colleges will meet in Smith Hall Saturday to discuss five major European topics, Joseph Jacobson, foreign student advisor here, stated.

Scheduled forum topics are the trade problems of Europe, the neutrality and political affiliations of several countries, the effect of Switzerland's neutrality and laws on European affairs, the problem of whether Germany should be reunited, and which countries are the leaders in the world of fine arts.

Separate discussions will be headed respectively by Dr. Tom Wilson, professor of business at San Francisco State; Dr. Nejat Somnez, director of the Turkish information office; Rolph Quist, president of the Finlandia Foundation; Claude Silva, history instructor at the college, and Dr. Jan Popper, director of the Opera Workshop located at the University of California.

The conference, labeled the Annual World Affairs Conference, will simulate a Model United Nations in its discussions, Jacobson said.

Beginning shortly after 9 a.m., the representatives will register in the conference. No charge will be asked of the students for registration or refreshments.

Speeches will be given by the five leaders to the expected 120 delegates during the general assembly in the morning and during the lunch hour.

In the afternoon the representatives will divide themselves into several groups, with each group choosing one of the topics offered. Voting by the students will take place during the committee discussions.

Climaxing the day will be the World Affairs Ball, a dance sponsored jointly by the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the World Trade Council. An open invitation will be extended to the delegates attending the conference.

CAB Silverado Roundup Hits Trail With College Hour Jam Session; Western Dress Dance Friday Night

Approval of western dress by the dean of men and dean of women has the Club Activities Board grinding all wagon wheels toward Smith Hall for CAB's dance this Friday, from 9 to 12 p.m., as Silverado Roundup hits the trail.

CAB President Delmer Rose explained that the western theme and dress of the dance will be complemented by western music.

Steve Paul's 15-piece band will also play jazz and popular dance music.

His group will entertain interested students at a "jam session" rally at the Redwood Ram Friday morning during College Hour. Paul's band will be the main attraction, but he will have extra entertainers and comedians along for the show.

Any type of western outfits conceivable, from levis and chaps for men to full skirts and scarfs for women are allowed, Rose stated, and the cafeteria will be decorated in the same atmosphere.

There will be a prize for the "best dressed cowboy" and "cowgirl," and also a reward for three lucky "balloon breakers." During an intermission balloons will be sent floating down on all the "Wild Bills" and "Sweet Sues," whereupon the popping will begin.

Three numbers will be inside the barrage of balloons, and the prizes will be awarded to the contestants who find them first, Rose declared.

This dance, along with its College Hour "warm-up," is taking the place of the cancelled Spring Festival sponsored by CAB. The proceeds will benefit all on-campus organizations, just as the festival does.

Admission is free with an Associated Student card and registration card; with the latter alone, cost to the student is 75 cents. Students not attending the college may obtain guest bids from Dean Mary Golding in S-150, for $1.00, Rose said.

Four Horticulture Students Receive Eastwood Award

The Alice Eastwood Award, given annually by the San Francisco Garden Club, has raised its prize from last year's $200 to $300 this year.

Interviews for the prize, which took place May 6, resulted in the awarding of $300 to four Horticulture students here.

Richard Brown received $100, Sherwood Frische received $100, Richard Dobkowitz and Alex Woolworth $50 each. Richard Wilson was given a book on the life of Alice Eastwood.

The award committee was composed of Mrs. Carlton Gray, Mrs. Curtis Knowles, and Mrs. William Newmen, all of the San Francisco Garden Club.

Alice Eastwood was a world famous botanist who was born in 1859 and died at the age of 94 in 1953. She received the journalist's Theta Sigma Phi Honor Scroll at their Matrix banquet, and her name was placed on the Honor Roll of the Native Daughters of the Golden West.

Chatman Heads Regional Newman Club Activities

Herb Chatman, a Sophomore student and membership chairman for the college's Newman Club, was voted chairman of Region Two of the Central Pacific Province at the recent district convention in Stockton.

Region Two covers Nevada and Northern California. At the convention were 400 delegates from Hawaii, Nevada and California.

Chatman attended a meeting at the University of California last Saturday where he received orientation in his new duties.

Future plans call for his attendance at the national convention in Cleveland this August. Chatman reported that next year both the district and national conventions will be in the Bay Area.

Council Debates Finance Question

Because of Prop Day last Thursday, an orientative tour for San Francisco high school student leaders, Student Council met only for its Tuesday session last week.

Although no significant action was taken, there was some constructive, healthy discussion carried on.

Most of the deliberation centered around the subject of getting more from Associated Student card sales. The consensus brought forth the following recommendations:

(1) Allow only AS card holders the privilege of being first in line during pre-registration day, thereby increasing the demand for the cards.

(2) Make the AS card free to all students of the college; they would have to pay for dances, games and other activities out of their own pockets. Often the initial fee of $5 scares away many prospective buyers.

To replenish the shortage of funds, $2 would be charged for a parking permit, and profits from the bookstore and vending machines would be a safe cushion.

(3) Keep the price of the card status quo but offer more benefits for its purchase: better discounts, more activities, and extra privileges.

Deadline For Summer Class Signups June 9

Registration for the 1960 summer session here, which began this Monday and terminates June 9, will have definite enrollment limitations for each scheduled class, the registrar's office announced last week.

Students applying for entrance should report to the registrar's office and fill out IBM cards for each class. The classes will be determined by size according to a "first-come, first-served" basis.

Each IBM card represents a seat in a particular class, and once a class is filled, a student seeking enrollment in that class must be placed on the "reserve list."

In case one doesn't confirm his registration on June 23 because of a last-minute summer job or other reasons, a student on the reserve list, is then entitled to enroll in his place.

The Nile, the longest river in the world, is approximately 4,000 miles long.

'Fling' Slated For Smith Hall June 1

Hawaiian Holiday is the theme chosen for Feminine Fling, now scheduled for Wednesday, June 1, instead of June 3 as previously announced, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in Smith Hall.

The program, according to Stevie Tissier, Associated Women Student president, will start with a buffet supper served from a fruit bar.

Later in the evening, following the entertainment, incoming Presidents of the AWS, Inter-Sorority Council and Recreation Association, joint sponsors of the affair, will be introduced to those in attendance.

Presentation of trophies to top women athletes of this semester will also be featured.

All women students are invited, Miss Tissier said, and this is the only campus event they are allowed to attend in informal attire such as capris or pedal pushers.

2 Pistol Teams Capture Trophies

Placing first in both the Sharpshooter and Marksman classes, both of the Campus Police pistol teams brought home two trophies from the Oakland pistol matches on May 1, according to Jim Oison, team captain.

The sharpshooter team captured the first place trophy after shooting 1044 points out of a possible 1200. The four-man team included Richard Gamble, John Murphy, Oison and Jim Tedesco.

The marksman team, shooting 1035 points out of a possible 1200, was composed of Reno Angiolini, Larry Miles, Ed Sarsfield and Richard Wernecke.

Oison took the first place gold medal in the individual time fire match, while Miles captured a second place silver medal and a third place bronze medal in the .22 caliber matches.

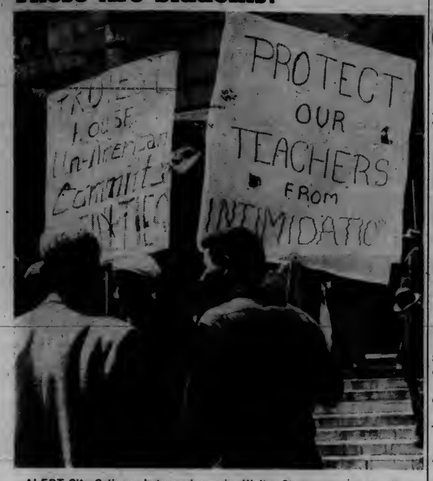
3 Events Spell Busy Week For Soph Class

During the week of May 31 the Sophomore Class will climax the current semester's activities with voting for a class king and queen, a basketball game against the Freshman Class and the Soph Ball.

The Soph Class king and queen will be selected during this time, and sophomores who wish to enter the contest must be sponsored by an organization on campus.

Each contestant is expected to submit a photograph of himself to Soph Class President Jack Verga in the Associated Student office, S-140. Forms will be distributed there and must be returned by May 25.

Paperbox containers displaying each candidate's picture will be placed at the silver pole in Science Hall and in the cafeteria for voting purposes.



On Friday, June 3, a basketball game between the Freshman and Sophomore Classes will take place in the men's gymnasium during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m. Students interested can participate in the game, either by playing or rooting.

The Soph Ball will be held June 3 from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel. The music will be provided by Bob Emerson and his band.

Sophomore Class officers working with Verga are Vice President Bob Edwards, Secretary Sharon Lebovitz, Treasurer Kathy Sanborn, and Publicity Chairman Carolyn Vukasin. Faculty sponsors are Mary Perry and Edward Rogers.

The king and queen will be chosen on a penny-a-vote basis. The money will go into the class scholarship fund.

These Are Students?

ALERT City College photography major Walter Stevenson was peacefully lugging his camera through the heart of the city on Friday, May 13, when he came upon the picketing of the Un-American Activities Committee before the Black Friday rioting broke loose. Stevenson went into camera action. College men and women drew the major amount of criticism for the incident, but the man in center is hardly dressed in Joe College garb.

Editorial

Violent Demonstrations Kill What Reason Can Accomplish

THE CITY HALL RIOTS were like some pro boxing matches. Not that any Queensberry rules were observed, but that everybody got a cut of the purse except the fighters—the "purse" in this case being a propaganda victory.

The police didn't gain anything. They've been blasted by many civic groups for "brutality." It's a sure bet the students from leading Bay Area institutions didn't either. Pictures of water-enveloped coeds sliding down the stairs of the Hall in very unbecoming positions can hardly be called good publicity.

BOTH CAN USE INCIDENT

But the Communists and the House Un-American Activities Committee can make adequate use of the incident.

Pravda can state that "the rich capitalists of Wall Street attempted to investigate the party—only to be met by the outraged youths of San Francisco in a valiant show of force."

The Committee, the very group the students were protesting, now has an example of the dangers of Red infiltration into college life.

PICKETING DISPLAY RATIONAL

The picketing of the Committee was a rational display of protestation. It's too bad that reason had to end there.

From eye witness accounts, the whole sad affair was the result of two mistakes—the students (?) didn't keep quiet and didn't clear the area. Not only was this bad manners, but there's a law which, when broken, is called "disturbing the peace." They didn't move and the police played rough—and have been lambasted for it ever since.

RIOTERS NOT OUTNUMBERED

The contention that the rioters were outnumbered is absurd. There were fewer than 30 policemen in the area of the City Hall rotunda; hundreds of protestors.

The vast number of officers, arriving after the frenzy had broken loose, was called from all parts of San Francisco and can be labeled "reinforcements." The main job of dispersing the mob fell to the 30 police officers in the immediate vicinity.

If the people decrying the alleged "gestapo tactics" were in the same situation they might look at it in a different light . . . an impending riot, where you're outnumbered by a yelling mob. One can't reason with a mob; it's a get it before it gets you choice. The old tin star marshal had a solution. He'd level a shotgun and let the first wise guy have a blast. It's at the point where force is met with force.

VOTES THE SOURCE OF POWER

Violence certainly doesn't hit the Committee where it lives. Votes are the main source of power. If fellow congressmen received enough letters protesting the group's antics they'd react very quickly.

A suspected Communist was recently whisked out of the country with $1.50 in his pocket. A tremendous "stink" was made against the police-state move, and he was back in this country as soon as possible. The protest was by way of speech or letters to legislators—not one nose was broken.

Numerous labor troubles, the Montgomery bus boycott, all attest that reason, not violence, can adequately force submission. Violence should be the last resort—as it was in Korea.

We suggest that these so-called "enlightened" students use their reason when protesting or go to a rock and roll show where their actions are accepted.

Landslide Victory Sweeps 15 SRP Candidates Into Fall AS Offices

Egri Wallops Keane Two-One As Peterson Edges Verga In Veep Race

By Rich Shields

The newly formed Students' Representative Party won a landslide victory in the Associated Student elections here last week, capturing five of six executive offices and ten of 14 council seats.

Joe Egri (SRP) won the top office of AS President with 240 votes over Bill Keane (United Student Party) who had 124 votes.

Egri, speaking for the SRP, expressed appreciation to students for their confidence in him and his party and for the opportunity which they now have "to prove that student government can be effective."

Georgine Peterson (SRP) topped Jack Verga (USP) with 192 votes to 162 to win the AS Vice Presidential race.

Bob Kelley (SRP) polled 168 votes to 117 for Jerry Kueserka (USP) and 69 for Al Sehorn (Independent), winning the Associated Men Student Presidency. Schorn was the only Independent candidate in the election.

The Presidency of the Associated Women Students went to Marge Lindstrom (SRP), who had 183 votes to 160 for Diane Beeson (USP).

John Azzaro (USP) won the Sophomore Class Presidency with 177 votes to 173 for Jim Bush (SRP), in the closest race in the election.

Gary Wilkening (SRP) was elected President of the Freshman Class with 197 votes over 149 for Bob Rogers (USP).

The seven Sophomore seats on council were filled by SRP candidates Bob Ross (253), Barbara Lerman (246), Skip Schwartz (244), Pat Crone (241), Russell Merritt (223) and Elena Mirabella (211). Paul Plansky (USP) won the seventh seat with 202 votes over Charles Hanks (USP) with 192 and Carol Vukasin (USP) with 189.

The seven Freshman seats on council went to Bob Perkins (SRP) with 276 votes, Kathy Henderson (SRP) 274, Ray Ferreira (SRP) 266, Diane Luhr (USP) 251, Mary Comerford (SRP) 243, Roger Labataille (USP) 241, and Carol Hinkson (USP) 236.

Voters also approved five constitutional amendments. Proposition A requires that the AMS President attend all meetings of the President's Cabinet and Social Committee. The amendment passed 200 to 50.

Proposition B requires the same for the AWS President. It passed 196 to 53.

Propositions C and D require the Freshman and Sophomore members of council to attend all meetings of the Freshman and Sophomore classes which are called by the Presidents of the classes. C passed 174 to 69 and D passed 186 to 53.

Proposition E provides that the Rally Committee rather than the AS President shall appoint the Yell Leader. It was passed 191 to 47.

Proposition F was the only amendment which failed to win the necessary two-thirds majority vote of approval. It failed with 103 votes yes and 61 votes no.

Election Commissioner Jerry Griffin said that only 379 of the 1680 eligible voters had voted in the election. He added that the poor turnout would seem to indicate a lack of interest in student government on the part of many students.

(Last semester 486 Associated Students voted out of 2375 AS card holders, representing only 19 per cent of the card holders. This poor turnout was attributed to the fact that the parties began their campaigning too late in the semester to arouse suffieient student interest, and led to the earlier election dates this year.)

As an afterthought, Griffin said that the turnover vietory of the SRP might mean that some students want a change in the way that student government is being handled. This election marked the USP's first major defeat since the party was organized two semesters ago.

Griffin eritieized the amount of publieity given to the proposed constitutional amendments before the election and said that they might be deciared invalid because of "certain requirements which were not met" in the eampaign.

JOE EGRI, AS President for Fall 1960, who swept into office on the Students Representative Party ticket.

Library Concert Honors Retiring Flossita Badger

Another special concert dedicated to Flossita Badger, who is retiring as music instructor this semester after 25 years of teaching here, will be staged this Friday, May 27, during College Hour in the library.

The A Cappella Choir and the Men's Glee Club will perform in the reserve reading room section for all interested students, according to Robert Morton, music instructor here.

The A Cappella Choir will premier a new arrangement of Ave Maria, composed by Morton, the choir's director, while the contribution of the Men's Glee Club will be songs from popular musical comedies.

Among the featured selections will be excerpts from the opera Dido and Aeneas of Henry Purcell, English Renaissance composer.

Soloists for the lead parts of the opera are Jose Barredo as the singing sailor and Virginia Freeman, singing the role of Dido.

The sixth annual spring band concert, held last Friday under the direction of Meyer M. Cahn, was also dedicated to Miss Badger.

Classes Resume Tuesday After Memorial Holiday

College students will observe their last holiday of the semester this Monday with the national commemoration of Memorial Day, Mary Jane Learnard, college registrar, announced recently.

The regular class schedule will resume on May 31. The only holiday slated for the college's summer session is Monday, July 4.

May 30 was originally a holiday in honor of those soldiers killed in the Civil War, but it now honors all soldiers killed on the battlefield.

Slavoy Discusses Life Under Reds

Speaking on his experiences under Communist rule in Czechoslovakia, D. Gene Slavoy, engineering instructor here, will preside at the Alpha Gamma Sigma meeting during College Hour this Friday in C-232.

Slavoy, who has toured Europe, Asia, Australia, and the South Seas, taught at the University of Melbourne and attended the world convention in Stockholm in 1946, will answer questions to be posed by students attending.

William G. Richardson, sponsor of the honor society here, asserted that all students are welcome to attend the meeting, which is the last one for the Spring semester.

Richardson urged that students planning to attend San Francisco State College next semester consult him regarding registration procedures. All questions on this or queries regarding the society can be directed to Richardson in S-143G.

Three Honor Students To Speak At Commencement Exercises

Mary Blair, Beatrice Mauch and Arlan Wong will be the student speakers at the commencement exercises Friday, June 10, William E. Culver, student speaker committee chairman, announced last week.

Chosen at the tryouts held during the double College Hour May 13 in C-245, the students will highlight the program, scheduled for the Riordan High School auditorium, Culver stated.

Miss Blair is a native of Irwin, Pennsylvania, where she was graduated from Norwin High School. Previously employed in advertising and public relations, she majored in social science here. After transferring to the University of California in Berkeley, she plans to major in English.

In her four semesters here, Miss Blair said the college "offers tremendous opportunities because of its variety of courses" and emphasized that its free tuition enables many students like her "to return to college who otherwise would not have been able to."

Another future University of California enrollee, Miss Mauch, plans to continue her public health major at that institution. After her graduation there she hopes to do research in that field.

An accomplished pianist as well as an avid outdoor sports fan, Miss Mauch attributes her success to "being able to mix business and pleasure in the right amounts at the right time." She is a graduate of Star of the Sea High School.

Third among the student speakers, Wong is an accounting major who credits his success to "study, study, study."

Also bound for the University of California in Berkeley, Wong is a Lowell High School graduate.

A special feature of commencement is the presentation of the President's Award Plaque and the Scholastic Cup.

The President's Award Plaque is awarded to the man and woman graduates who, during their enrollment here, have disinguished themselves in service to the college.

The Scholastic Cup is awarded to graduates with the highest grade point averages.

Foresight — Six Sensational Acts Hit City Night Clubs

By Elmer Milligan

CONTINUING its big name-top quality entertainment policy, San Francisco will feature six sensational acts for public enjoyment during the next 11 weeks.

The star-studded shows, to be presented in the Fairmont Hotel's Venetian Room, Fack's II and Bimbo's 365, will spotlight three members of the music kingdom, television's number one comedian, a Las Vegas revue and the nation's most enchanting singing beauty.

The Fairmont's million dollar entertainment offering includes the incomparable Errol Garner, Shelley Berman, lovely Lena Horne and Earl Grant.

Garner began his three-week engagement last Thursday night and will occupy the Venetian Room spotlight until June 8.

The talented pianist reportedly can't read a note of music but is acclaimed as one of the world's most original players. His Fairmont appearance marks the first time Garner has performed at a hotel in this country.

That famous "telephone man" Shelley Berman comes to the Fairmont for a three-week stand starting June 9 and ending June 29.

He will be followed by Miss Horne (June 30 to July 20) who made famous such songs as From This Moment On, It's All Right With Me and It's Love.

From July 31 to August 13 the Venetian Room will spotlight Earl Grant, singing past hits, The End and Ole Man River plus other favorites.

The management at usually-cool Fack's II is experiencing a most welcomed heat wave brought on by the dubious entertainment value of Tempest Storm in her new show.

According to Manager George Andros, Miss Storm will probably break another attendance record. The exotic dancer and Mark Murphy, Capitol recording artist, will appear at the nightclub until May 29.

On May 30, popular singer Tommy Edwards comes to Fack's along with exotic dancer Beverly Hills and comedian Mel Young. The next bill, Andros said, features the funniest comedian in the world, Don Rickles.

His act opens on June 17 and closes on July 7, after which "musical royalty" steps into the Bush Street nightclub in the form of Duke Ellington, opening on July 8 with orchestra and entire revue.

Barry Ashton's Show Girls of 1960 is the current show-stopper at Bimbo's.

Johnny Mathis successfully completed recently a four-week engagement at New York's Copacabana and is currently preparing a big Fall show which he'll bring to San Francisco in September. According to a family spokesman, the show will be held in either the Curran or Geary theater.

Curtain Falls For Last Time

Actors To Leave Theater To Memories Of Dramas Past

By Anton Norris

There is a small but significant room hidden in the basement of Science Hall. Inside this room is a raised platform, 25 by 25 feet.

Within this room there is quietness except for occasional hammering and sawing, and a voice reading lines with another voice giving encouragement.

Many persons have sat in this room. They have pondered over the lines from The Cherry Orchard. They have laughed at lines from The Man Who Came To Dinner. They have worried over lines from Inherit The Wind, and perhaps they will weep over lines from the present, but last, production, The Country Girl.

This small room is the Little Theater. Small in dimensions but large in the enjoyment it has given. For pleasure plus instruction is a primary concern of the theater.

On the 25 by 25-foot stage, men and women have acted, played their roles, and for a few hours lost their own identities and assumed that of a character.

Some have been good and others have been bad. Yet each, looking across the lights at faces watching them act, must have felt a thrill. The thrill only those intoxicated with greasepaint, props, the hundreds of wonderful problems the theater gives can understand. Even if the actor had no talent he surely must have experienced some spark of feeling for the stage he stood upon.

That make-believe place where small men can appear huge. Where an unattractive girl can become beautiful. The magic, the mystery, the fears. That prop which accidentally dropped, or the door which wouldn't open, or that awful sneeze during a most dramatic line.

Soon these persons with their accentuated gestures, their laughter, will be silenced forever, their terribly controlled voices, their laughter, will leave this small room and move into the new arts building.

After they have gone, the room will remain small. It cannot grow. The 25 by 25-foot stage will probably stay as it is. Perhaps the room's door will be locked from the outside and the room will know a darkness it has never known before. A darkness devoid of expectation.

The room will be like the old dowager who reflects upon her past. Perhaps if it is lucky, during the darkness it will see the stage light up again and ghost-like figures re-enact one of its favorite plays. It will see a vapor audience engrossed with the spoken lines. And as the last line is read, the darkness will return, the ghost-like figures will disappear, and the room will once again know loneliness.

Recent Poll Of Grads Uncovers 'Thinking Men'

By Jim Clifford

"Hello. That's a pretty mean guitar you're pickin' there, Buddy. Must take a lot of training to play one of those things."

"Actually, I'm an architect by training. I just play this for a living."

Sounds like the key lines in a well-known TV commercial all right, but it's really one of the highlights in a recent "where-are-they-now" type poll of former architecture students from the college.

Of the 50 former students polled, the "thinking man" was undoubtedly the most non-conforming, currently studying the classical guitar in Spain and expecting to make around-the-world concerts within a year.

Most of them had stuck to the straight and narrow, now boasting such titles as architectural designer, senior draftsman, associate planner, facilities engineer and other impressive nomers that even included some gold ol' fashioned, easy to remember architects.

There was one more blacksheep—an assistant manager of a beach service, who'll no doubt have to readjust his theories of stress and strain to lovely structures in bikinis.

"What course was the most beneficial to you at City College?" was one of the questions asked.

Architectural design received the most votes, with freehand sketching and drawing a close second. Engineering, watercolor, descriptive geometry all got a nod or two.

The vast majority of the students went on to the University of California to complete their education.

Flossita Badger Retires After 25 Years Here

Music Instructor Proves Melody Is Global Language

By Bob Pacini

Music has been called the speech of angels and, more importantly to us, the international language.

Capturing this angelic quality of music, bringing right down to earth and making it a truly international means of communication is Flossita Badger, music instructor here since 1935, who will end a quarter of a century of teaching at the college with her retirement at the end of this semester.

Coming from a musical family, Miss Badger describes herself as a person who has lived with music all her life.

"Music is my life," she declared.

Miss Badger's life-long association with music has manifested itself in two ways, for not only has she taught her subject, but she has also taken an active part in the performance of it. She has sung with the San Francisco Opera, has appeared on Italian opera stages and has also travelled through England and France.

FLOSSITA BADGER, music instructor here since 1935, will end a quarter of a century of teaching at the college at the close of the semester.

These were the years that Miss Badger led a double life, performing artist and instructor. Eventually, however, the performing aspect yielded to the strong and time-consuming demands of teaching.

Having had first hand experience with opera production, Miss Badger was more than qualified to direct the opera workshop which flourished at the college from 1948 to 1953.

During these five years Miss Badger became something of an impresario and directed such productions as Vagabond King, Naughty Marietta and even Mozart's Marriage Of Figaro. She made it clear, though, that also instrumental in making the productions successful were the college's band, art department and drama department.

The year 1953 was an important one for at that time Miss Badger, under an exchange program, traveled to Hawaii to teach at the University of Hawaii. She came and saw, but she was the one who was conquered, for the islands have ever since been one of her loves.

Though retiring, Miss Badger is not leaving the teaching profession entirely, for she plans to go into private voice teaching. She also hinted that a return to Hawaii is also under consideration.

As an instructor of this kind leaves the college one is tempted to try and select appropriate music to say goodbye. Will it be on a wave of Wagnerian grandeur? Will it be with the solemnity of Beethoven or the gayety and wit of Mozart?

The question, though answered by Miss Badger herself, remains unanswered for she considers it impossible trying to select one composer out of the many she has known.

It is a finale in one sense, but in another it is only a beginning.

Engineers Take Course In Do-It-Yourself TV Sets

By Bob O'Lear

Have you considered taking Nonsinusoidal Circuitry before leaving the college. You haven't!

Well, a total of 19 students have, and did. This is electronics 81 for the less technically-minded. It is an advanced course in electrical engineering offered by the college to fourth semester electronics students.

As an example of the complexity of this course, the semester project is the construction of a "workable" television set.

Under the instruction of Haroid R. Edmison, students have been designing and constructing sets for more than five years.

The semester begins with deceptive ease with a discussion of the types of circuit designs.

Then, after an explanation of the different circuit designs, depending on what deflection oscillators the individual students intend to use, they begin the actual construction. Everyone is allowed to work at his own pace, as long as the project is completed before the end of the semester.

An indication of the hazards involved is that in building their high voltage power supply deflectors, the students work with 2000 volts. The shock from an ordinary light bulb is only 110 volts! A wrong step here and a student could easily pass for a neon sign.

The complete process is written down in experimental form and this report is turned in to be graded. The sets are checked for intenaity (that's brightness), linearity control, and the height and width of the picture. It is also considered essential that the sets receive a picture from a standard television station.

At the end of the semester the students regretfully must tear down their creations so that the parts can be used the next semester.

In order to finish their products, the class meets for six laboratory hours and three lectures a week in the five unit course.

Police Put Damper On Climbing Student

If you can't beat 'em, join 'em.

This might very well have been the maxim followed by a student here who journeyed to City Hall last May 13 to pay a traffic fine. Each time he attempted to climb the stairs—along with some rioting bystanders—he found himself washed down with the douse of a water hose.

Police really washed out his plans to pay the fine.

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob Pacini

(Today's Shots at RAMdom is by Bob O'Lear.)

WOMEN the world is better off because of:

Anne Bancroft . . . Cyd Charisse . . . May Britt . . . Katharine Hepburn . . . Simone Signoret! . . . It's tough, but we'll see if we can come up with more, if we're ever allowed another column.

Women the world wouldn't miss: Barbara Hutton . . . Louella Parsons . . . Hedda Hopper, of course . . . Dinah Shore . . . Barbara Britton (you know, the one with Revlon) . . .

We're undecided on a category for Eleanor Roosevelt and Dear Abby.

WHAT PERCENTAGE of students voted in last week's Associated Student elections? Not very many? That's quite right. Even the prize of a transistor radio was needed to lure the voters. But why condemn this lackadaisical attitude? It shows the college's students are learning to fit into the society in which they will later earn a living.

This is a society full of apathy, and one that places a great deal of emphasis on a lack of concern for anything, with the possible exception of how the Giants are doing; a society where non-conformity immediately calls for the beatnik label. A society where an opinion contrary to majority "thought" (for lack of a weaker word) is the stamp of a subversive.

But let us hope that those who did vote didn't investigate the two factions opposing each other in this election. That might have taken some time from viewing Colt .45.

JUST WONDERING—

What's wrong with: our foreign policy . . . the college's system of registration . . . people who don't dig Sinatra . . . women drivers . . . our domestic policy . . . the campus radio station . . . the people who plan the Detroit "monsters" . . . our missile program . . . radio's "top 40" stations . . . the cafeteria problem . . . our government?

BY THE WAY if you haven't seen Oscar Peterson's excellent trio either at the Black Hawk or on campus at the Blood Drive, you have just one more week to do yourself a favor. And if you're under 21, don't worry; there's a special section at the 'Hawk just for that purpose.

But if you're under 21, you can't get into the Jazz Workshop, and that's unfortunate because you have to miss hearing the exciting Cannonball Adderley Quintet, also volunteers at the recent drive. However, he has an album on Riverside—Cannonball in San Francisco—that will compensate.

Recreation Program Continues Wide Variety Of Activities For Students

By Jo Ann Griffin

In the past 25 years the college's recreation program has evolved from the original Women's Athletic Association to the present coeducational Recreation Association to offer students a wide variety of sporting events.

Appearing as the first extra-curricular activities on campus, the WAA along with the Men's Athletic Association was quickly followed by other clubs.

With the invasion of some men students who became interested in some sports WAA offered, the name Women's Athletic Association became inappropriate and was changed to the Recreation Association. This change also allowed men to hold office in the organization.

First of six major types of events making up the agenda each semester is four large sports days which encompass 12 Bay Area two-year colleges. From 100 to 200 students take part in team competition at each meet.

Once a week the RA hosts different high school athletic teams in friendly competition. These meetings promote good will and give high school students a chance to know the college and become acquainted with its activities, Elizabeth K. Wirth, present sponsor of the organization, explains.

Following tradition, the association meets with San Mateo once a semester to hold a sports night complete with a dinner, followed by a few rounds of volleyball.

At the end of each semester the winning teams and participants are honored at an awards social. These awards are based on participation, a C grade average and possession of an Associated Student card.

Another activity is an alumni night when former students come back for a potluck dinner both in the spring and in the fall semesters.

In spring, a conference is held in Assilomar or Los Angeles, which delegates from the college attend to discuss problems confronting athletic organizations.

This fall the RA is sponsoring the coeducational bowling league and an intramural basketball team.

Some of the sports offered are fencing, volleyball, modern and folk dancing, badminton, tennis, golf, bowling, archery, basketball and ice-skating. All are coeducational with the exception of basketball.

Officers this semester are Sandy Hayden, president; Bob Kelley, vice president; Gladys Grassini, secretary; Les Adams, treasurer; Barbara Azzaro, historian, and Pat Crone, delegate-at-large.

Four Ram Track Men Face Big Test In State Meet Saturday

With a season full of the usual ups and downs behind them, the Red and White cindermen will face their biggest test this Saturday when they encounter the top team in California at the State Junior College meet in Modesto.

This meet, the biggest of the season, will boast the stiffest competition the Rams have faced. Only the top men in each event from the state are allowed to compete in the classic. Individualism is stressed during the meet, and team scores are only an added honor for the group which scores the most points in the meet.

The Ram entries, on the basis of season and post season performances, are expected to be Ray Batz, Lon Colbert, Ralph Mathis and Jess Sirles.

Batz was the Big Eight Conference champ in the mile run as he set a new league record of 4:20.3, and he also won the two-mile grind. His time in the mile should place him among the leaders in the state meet.

Colbert, improving with every meet, won the sprints at the Big Eight meet beating a strong field of dashmen. His time for the 100-yard dash was a respectable 10 seconds flat, while in the 220 his was a splendid 22.4, pacing the pack all the way.

Mathis, plagued by a pole vaulting injury all year, returned to the active list only a few days before the conference meet, and with a tremendous effort copped the high jump title with an outstanding leap of 6-1¼. This set a new conference record for this event.

Sirles broke the broad jump record this year with a jump of 23-7. Having come of age this year in varsity competition, he is expected to turn in a good performance at the state meet.

JESS SIRLES, contemplating future record-smashing broad jump efforts, sits on the edge of the pit that has become so familiar to him after many hours of practice in his chosen event. Sirles has been a standout for the past two years on the Ram track squad.

84 Athletes Get Awards At Block Society Dinner

Eighty-four athletes will receive letters or block awards at the Block SF society dinner to be held Monday, June 6, according to society President Bob Ross.

Guest speaker for the event will be George Wolfman, head baseball coach at the University of California.

All athletes receiving awards are invited to the dinner and are urged to notify Alex Schwarz, Block SF sponsor, or Ross by this Friday at the latest, of their acceptance.

Members of the administration who will be in attendance are Louis G. Conlan, president; Louis F. Batmale, dean of instruction; Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of men; Lloyd Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction; Edward E. Sandys, dean of instruction, and Thomas Nesbitt, director of testing and research.

Coaches from ten San Francisco high schools will also be in attendance.

Grid Meeting To Plot Season Tactics C-Hour

All prospective football players for next semester's varsity are invited to a pre-season meeting this Friday during College Hour at the men's gymnasium.

Coach Grover Klemmer will outline the plans for the 1960 version of the Ram grid squad. He hopes for a large turnout so the strength of each position can be estimated.

Films of last year's Junior Rose Bowl game will also be shown.

Individualism Lost In Today's Olympics

RAMBLINGS — Win-Or-Else Maxim Ruins Games' Spirit

By Frank Dunne

WITH the Olympics in Rome this year all the eyes in the sports world will be turned toward the Eternal City. The contest itself is shaping up as a two-team race, with the popular concensus giving the Russians an edge over the United States.

However, this poll is not always accurate and the American contingent has an excellent chance of pulverizing the Russians. But this is not the point; over the years the idea of individual competition has been demoted and the team effort has been promoted.

The idea of personal achievement was the real purpose of the first games, but today the person is lost in the crowd. He becomes only a small part in the vast machine of a country's Olympics squad.

In the first games it was person against person; not city-state against city-state. Each man competed for himself, and he alone felt the joy of winning or the pain of losing.

Today this ideal is lost and a country thinks it a great diplomatic victory if it takes the most awards at the games. It has almost reached the stage where a tiny war is waged between the teams for the honor of winning. And the team that loses suffers a great loss of face and has practically committed political suicide.

In years to come maybe all the world's problems will be settled at the games—which would be far less dreadful than war, but just as silly.

Even Madison Avenue has caught the fever and is spreading the hue and cry hither and yon for physical fitness for the youth of America. This is a good idea, but according to the admen, you can only arrive at this end by eating their sponsors' products.

So the kids of America eat the sponsors' products at breakfast, then Mother drives them to school, and after school Mom safely delivers them to the TV set. After a few weeks of this diet, the little woman notices a vast change in her children. They're fat. Maybe the product gave him his needed energy, but how much can you use in front of a TV set?

With an America all afire with the urge toward physical fitness, as it should be, this zeal might well be diverted from the TV set to the playground, and thus the more practical end of developing America's representatives as individuals might be realized.

The odds against pitching a perfect game—no runs, no hits, and no player reaching first base—are 16,500 to 1.

Honor Goes To Bill Sakovich, Freestyle Relay Team Quartet

For the first time since 1952, the college has placed swimmers, five in all, on the two-year college All-American team.

Those selected for the national honor are Bill Sakovich, the Rams' backstroker, and the outstanding 400-yard free style relay team of Bob Fewster, Dick Sullivan, Pete Urrea and Craig Schwarz.

The only other Big Eight Conference team to place a man on the All-American roster is the league champion from Oakland with three members.

Rod Lundquist was the only other previous swimmer from the college to be so honored.

In addition, Sakovich's placing in the 100-yard backstroke at the recent state meet represents the first finalist from the college in this meet.

During the Big Eight Conference season the Rams finished a strong third behind powerful Oakland and Stockton. Oakland with one of the strongest teams in the state annexed its second Big Eight swimming title in as many years.

The Rams found themselves trailing Stockton all through the season, losing to the Mustangs in the Big Eight meet when the relay team was disqualified for missing a turn. In the Northern California championships the local squad was edged by the Mustangs by a slim margin of 3½ points.

This was the Rams' second year in Big Eight swimming action, and with the abundance of freshman swimmers returning next year, plus any additional high school swimmers, the local mermen should be stronger next season.

HEAD SWIMMING Coach Roy Burkhead beams with pride after learning that five of his charges are on the All-American Junior College swimming team.

Price Belts Way To Top Award At AMS Boxing Fest

The intramural boxing championships were held before an enthusiastic crowd last Wednesday in the men's gymnasium.

Besides the 10 championship bouts there were two trophies awarded, one for the "fightingest fighter" and another for the best boxer.

The 155-pound championship found Leon Price battling Billy Wheeler, with Price winning the title on a knockout in the third round. On the strength of his knockout win Price was awarded the best boxer trophy.

The first bout of the evening was the 120-pound tussle between Eusebio Joves and James Noda with Joves being awarded the decision. In the 127-pound division, Fred Cherniss and Carlo Middione fought to a draw.

In the 133-pound match, Frank Batmale, a scrappy little battler, was a split decision winner over Fred Randall. Batmale was the recipient of the "fightingest fighter" trophy at the end of the evening.

Miguel Cuevas won over Melvin Wataral to garner the 140-pound title. In an action-packed bout Al Johnson was crowned champion of the 147-pound division over Bobby Harrell.

Al White and Jim Dennis fought to a draw in the 162-pound division. The 162-pound laurels went to Al McCauley, a victor over Jack Gudeman. Martin Anzel had his hand raised in victory over Bob Pollitt in the 180-pound division. The 190-pound battle was a draw between Lloyd Kearns and Dennis Beyma.

The winner of every bout was awarded a gold medal shaped like a boxing glove, while the loser received a silver medal.

Local Ace Wins Consolation Spot At State Meet

By Warren Downes

Vince Chinn, Ram net ace, won the consolation singles title at the California State Junior College Tennis Championships held last weekend on the Golden Gate Park courts.

Chinn, displaying an array of power that helped the Red and White netmen garner the Big Eight tennis title this year, overwhelmed Lee Brown of Santa Monica City College, who won the team title, in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4.

In the championship singles bracket Chris Crawford of Menlo College smashed his way to his second straight singles title. In the title match Crawford faced a powerful netter in George Conway, Santa Monica City College. Conway, the champion of Southern California, fought Crawford all the way before losing.

Larry Draper, the only entry from the college in singles, was beaten in the first round by Al Harris of Los Angeles City College.

The Ram netmen had two teams entered in the championship doubles play, but the duo of Lyn Matteson and Paul Barth had to drop out when Barth sprained his ankle the day before the start of the tournament. The other team composed of Chinn and Draper won their first round match easily, but were beaten by a strong duo from Los Angeles, Gil Stone and Harris, 7-9, 6-4, 6-4.

The championship doubles match turned out to be the best battle of the two-day tournament. Yoshi Minegishi and Crawford, Menlo, the top doubles combination from the northern half of the state and number one seeded in pre-tournament seedings locked horns with Wayne Collett and Conway, Santa Monica, top doubles aggregation in the southland.

Minegishi-Crawford won the first set with ease, 6-2, but in the second set Conway and Collett fought from behind to grab the set and extend the match to the third set.

Invaders Win Mural Championship

The Invaders, exhibiting a display of power and teamwork that is almost unprecedented in intfamural history, rolled over Gamam Phi Ypsilon at the recent Associated Men Student smoker by a score of 50-35 to capture the Spring 1960 cage loop crown.

The men from Gamma Phi didn't stop driving and fighting all night, but the speed and height of the Invaders were just too much for them. Probably one of the biggest factors in the game was the Invaders' dominance of the boards by men like big Tom Valento.

The driving force of the Gammas was Rudy Vasquez, who racked up 20 points to become high point man of the game. Oddly enough, 17 of those were scored in the second half. Dave Tonner of the Invaders also had a big second half as he made 14 of his 16 points in that period.

Even at the beginning of the fray the outcome was obvious, and at the half the score was 23-12 in favor of the Invaders. At the beginning of the second half the fraternity men really put on the steam and at about mid-point in the second stanza they had brought the scoring to only a seven-point difference. After that, however, the Invaders pulled way ahead once more.

Smith Hall Set In Island Motif For Feminine Fling

Professional dancers and musicians from Hawaii will highlight the entertainment billing of the Feminine Fling to be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. next Wednesday, June 1, under the co-sponsorship of the Associated Women Students, the Inter-Sorority Council and the Recreation Association.

The theme of the affair is Hawaiian Holiday, Stevie Tissier, AWS president, stated, and Smith Hall, arranged partially in Luau style and decorated in an island motif, will provide the setting.

The program will start with a buffet supper, each guest making up her own salad plate from the assortment of fresh spring fruit arranged at the fruit bar, a feature of de luxe restaurants in Hawaii.

A fashion show featuring Hawaiian costumes, hula lessons given by Melia Furgis, physical education instructor here, and a number of short travelogues, have been designed to lend fun and color to the evening.

Later in the evening following the entertainment, newly elected Presidents of AWS, ISC and RA will be introduced to those in attendance.

Presentation of trophies from RA to leading woman athletes, of the Margaret Dougherty Award to the sorority which achieved the highest scholastic average, and of a Service Award from AWS to the executive board member who rendered the outstanding service, will round out the program of the Feminine Fling of Spring, 1960.

All women students are invited, Miss Tissier said, adding that this is the only campus event which students will be permitted to attend in informal capri pants or pedal pushers.

The Feminine Fling, originally known as the Award Party, first was introduced to the campus by Barbara Batmale, AWS president, during the Fall semester of 1955 and ISC president in the Spring semester of 1956.

Miss Batmale had learned of the existence of similar parties at four-year colleges when she attended the Inter-Collegiate AWS meeting held at the College of the Pacific and at the Davis campus of the University of California.

Her suggestion that a party of similar nature and purpose be held at City College each semester was adopted, and the first such award party, christened the Feminine Fling by a Chinese student then serving on the board, was held in June, 1956.

Five Dental Students Receive Caps In Ceremony Tomorrow

A new status will be conferred upon five dental assisting students who have completed their third semester's training here in a capping ceremony scheduled to take place in Smith Hall at 8 p.m. tomorrow.

Names of students scheduled to receive white caps are as follows: Takako Ekusa, Geraldine Gibson, Linda Jaillite, Catherine Martinez and Esperanza Rivera.

Dr. Wendell L. Wylie, assistant dean of the University of California's School of Dentistry, will give a talk entitled "Partnership Ahead." Dr. Edmund V. Street, former faculty member of City College, in the dental assisting department, will introduce the speaker.

Virginia Meagher, president of San Francisco Dental Society, will present the white caps to the students. The welcoming speech will be given by Louis P. Batmale, dean of semi-professional courses.

Music will be furnished by William Richardson, counselor here.

Graduating students of the class of 1960 will act as Big Sisters to the students receiving caps; second-semester students will serve refreshments to the guests.

All faculty members and students are invited to attend, Ruth Inskipp, dental assisting instructor presiding over the capping ceremony, stated.

The students who have received their white caps will wear them while taking the training course at the U.C. Medical Center, assisting student dentists and can, thus be distinguished from second-semester students, who are permitted to wear only the white coat and not the cap.

The white cap, Mrs. Inskipp explained, symbolizes both completion of preliminary training and the beginning of the students' actual careers.

Student Places In KCBS Contest

Arthur Muskovitz, one of the four semi-finalists chosen by Robert Morton and Flossita Badger, music instructors here, to appear on the Dave McElhatton Show in a KCBS-sponsored contest for young Bay Area vocalists, took second place in the contest.

Enrolling here in Spring 1959, Muskovitz is currently completing his third semester of college work.

After graduating from Sir Francis Drake High School, San Anselmo, in June 1954, Muskovitz enlisted in the Air Force. Discharged in 1958, he promptly began his college work.

Top award in the contest in which Muskovitz placed was a possible recording contract. First place winner also received a portable stereo phonograph, second place winner received $25 worth of Capitol records, and third place $15 of Capitol recordings.

CORRECTION

A dress, one of the prizes in the Miss Photo Queen of City College contest won by Leanne Watkins, was donated by King's Campus Shop, 1500 Ocean Avenue.

Former Student Wins Press Honor

Ron Bergman, former student here, was awarded a $100 scholarship last Wednesday by the Northern California chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity.

Bergman completed two years at the college before entering the Navy in 1954. After receiving his discharge he entered the University of California where he is presently majoring in journalism and is president of the U. C. undergraduate Sigma Delta Chi chapter.

Among those present at the meeting was Harry Bergman, the student's father, and a member of the editorial staff of The Examiner.

Two other City College graduates won the award while at Stanford. Both former editors of The Guardsman, Bob Rezak, 1953 winner, is with the telephone company's public relations department, and Dick Meister, 1955 winner, is with the Sacramento bureau of Associated Press.

Summer Class Sign-ups Reach Record Number

During the first three days of pre-registration for summer session last week, 834 students had registered, bettering last year's record sum by 88, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, announced recently.

The first day netted 575 students, but the number began to level off on the following days. Miss Learnard disclosed that 90 per cent of the classes scheduled were closed last summer, and only 10 students were accepted from the waiting list.

Last year's total registration was 1471. This year's total should be about the same, Miss Learnard said.

Council Posts Nominations For Spring Semester's Outstanding Student, Instructor AS Service

By Paul Plansky

Recollecting the multitude of unsung Instructors and students who have given their unselfish time to the Associated Students this semester, usually working behind the scenes, Student Council opened nominations for the Service Award, both faculty and student, last week.

Nominated for the faculty honor were William Eckert, art department; Robert Morton, music department; Emmett Smith, photography department, and Sid Phelan, physical education department and coach of the championship basketball team.

Students up for the most valuable student award nominated at the first meeting of council last week were Bobbie Beber, Mike Haskell and Stan Rosenberg.

At the second session Associated Student President Wally Hayes reopened nominations, and the student nominees were supplemented with the names of Gerald Kucserka and Pam Kurrell.

Winners of both the faculty and student service awards will be announced at the Student Council dinner next Tuesday.

Open discussion followed with council and cabinet members speaking for each nominated student and citing attributes and accomplishments of the nominees.

Visiting council as a guest, Ted Keller, former Associated Men Student President and past Tau Chi Sigma fraternity president, spoke for Haskell.

He pointed out his thoroughness and responsible character, but since he isn't attending the college now, he hesitated to describe Haskell's role as the chairman of the recently held blood drive.

Sophomore Councilman Bud Andress praised Rosenberg for his contribution to the college. He explained that Rosenberg, who helps Sherman Elworthy patrol the cafeteria, has been an indispensible member of Elworthy's "food enforcement corps."

Andress also supported Miss Kurrell for the honor, whom he nominated. "She is the only woman representing the Bay Area in track and field events in the coming Rome Olympics this summer."

Miss Beber was singled out for her general willingness of service and her inexhaustible desire to perform innumerable tasks without due recognition.

An officer of the Inter-Fraternity Council, temporary posts of AMS president and election commissioner, and a staff photographer for The Guardsman were the bases for Kucserka's nomination.

Soph Activities Enter Final Lap As Dance Nears

Sophomore Class activities are near their final stage with the voting for the class king and queen scheduled for next week and the Soph Ball planned for Friday, June 3.

The deadline for king and queen entries is today. Voting will begin Monday on a penny-a-vote basis, with the money going into the sophomore scholarship fund.

Paperbox containers displaying each candidate's picture will be placed at the silver pole in Science Hall and in the cafeteria for voting purposes.

The king and queen will be crowned the night of June 3 at the Sophomore Ball, which will be held in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Dancing will be to the music of Bob Emerson and his band.

Proper attire for the occasion, Jack Verga, class president, said, is dark suits and ties for the men and cocktail dresses for the women.

Admission will be free to holders of Spring semester AS and registration cards. Those having only a registration card will be charged $2.50. The theme of the affair is Sayonara.

The first Sophomore Ball was held during the Fall 1936 semester, and in 1940 a "sweetheart" was chosen to reign over the affair.

In Fall 1945, the first Sophomore king was elected, thereby giving the men a share in the honor. The dance was given a theme for the first time in May 1955.

June 6 Date Set For Forum Sales

Original compositions by student writers at the college will be available for reading in Forum Magazine beginning June 6, Copies of the magazine may be picked up at the Rampotium.

Published each spring, Forum is available without additional cost to Associated Student members. Non-members may purchase the magazine for 50 cents.

Editorial staff members said the publication contains short plays, poetry, essays and short stories, and is work representative of the entire student body.

From its first publication in 1937 in mimeograph form, Forum evolved to its present printed form. The magazine was started for the purpose of giving students a chance to express their literary ability in various forms of writing.

Those responsible for this year's Forum are co-editors Maureen Milis and Rose Poppiti, Jo Ann Griffin, Maurice Lemus, Jane Shamamian, John Sullivan and Catherine Connolly, Forum faculty adviser. The cover was designed by Richard Chin.

Students View Satellite Salvaging Techniques In C-Hour Film This Friday

Two films, Down To Earth, and Jeep Frolics, will be shown this Friday during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., in S-136 as part of the college film series.

Down To Earth is concerned with the problems of getting the nose cones of man-made satellites back to earth, while Frolics is a film of races and contests with jeeps in and around the Sierra.

On-campus organizations will also be meeting in their assigned rooms during College Hour.

Placement Offers Jobs For Prospective Grads

All prospective graduates who were interviewed during the fifth annual Business Recruitment Day and are experiencing difficulty in obtaining employment are urged to visit the placement office in S-187, Joseph Amori, college placement director, announced.

Assistance will also be given to any graduating student who seeks placement in part or full-time positions.

Fewer job opportunities are being offered in the San Francisco Bay Area this year, Amori explained, but there are many openings for graduates as camp directors, swimming instructors and counselors.

Last Thursday, Internal Revenue directors visited the college and interviewed 13 secretarial majors for civil service positions.

Country Girl Drama Of Human Conflicts

By Frank Dunne

On the must-see list of every serious theater advocate should be the enlightening and power-packed drama, The Country Girl, now being staged at the Little Theater, S-26.

The production will run for three more weekend performances.

Clifford Odet's drama strips naked the unfortunate problems many persons encounter in their lifetime. He pulls no punches in his portraying life in cold, stark and vivid realism. The almost sympathetic, but powerful interplay of the characters combines a violent mixture of hatred and sympathy.

The main theme of the play centers around an old actor, who once was on top of the heap, but has since fallen to the depths of oblivion. The director of a new production, played by Jim Robinson, resurrects the old relic and casts him as the lead of his new production. Remembering the old actor as his idol in the past, the director attempts to reinstate him to his former stature.

This desire is complicated by the fact that the actor, Frank Elgin, played by William Henderson, has become an alcoholic.

His wife Georgia, alternately portrayed by Leah Pashoian and Maren Randrup, has stuck by him through all his trials and even straightened him out temporarily.

During the first scenes of the play, the dominant tempo is the director's blindness to the actor's real personality. He accuses Georgia of deliberately lying about Elgin's character. She is forced to act as a liaison between the two, because Elgin is stifled by Dodd's dominance. This forms the crux of the difficulties.

A sudden switch in the play and the violent expose of the actor's real self will shock those who attend this brilliant play.

The scene where Elgin finally submits to his liquor-wish exhibits pure emotion, stripped of any pretext. It tears away the shroud that clouds Elgin and belies the proud director, who is proved wrong in his estimation of the actor.

Michael Griffin, drama director, has picked his actors well, and each plays his part to the hilt yet is lost in the power of the play. This effect creates a true story with no up-staging to ruin the message of the drama.

William W. Henderson as Frank Elgin treats his part with frank realism, bringing compassion from the spectators. His talent is shown by the different dialects employed and the job of playing an actor in the play.

James B. Robinson, as Dodd, demonstrates complete dominance in portraying the conceited director.

Journal Awards Silver Medal To Accounting Grad

For the third year in a row a woman student here is winner of the annual Wall Street Journal Award given in 750 colleges and universities in the Western Hemisphere.

She is Beatrice Wong, the 12th winner of the award at the college, who completed her work in February with a major in accounting and is now working to become a Certified Public Accountant at the San Francisco firm of Webb and Webb.

The award consists of a silver medal embedded in clear plastic with the winner's name engraved on the back, and a year's subscription to the Wall Street Journal, Edward Larson, business instructor, stated.

Miss Wong was chosen from many competitors by a committee of instructors and administrators. The award is given to graduating students who show the most promise in the field of investment and finance by high scholarship attainment.

Pacini Heads Fall Guardsman Staff

The editorial board of The Guardsman last week elected Bob Pacini Editor-in-Chief of The Guardsman for the Fall semester, 1960. Pacini succeeds Jim Clifford, this semester's editor.

Other members of the editorial board for the coming semester include Paul Plansky, managing editor; Bob O'Lear, news editor; Fumi Fowell, feature editor, and Frank Dunne, sports editor. Warren Downes has been selected as staff editor.

Pacini is currently The Guardsman feature editor. Plansky, O'Lear and Miss Fowells are on the reportorial staff. Downes is an editorial assistant, while Dunne is the current semester's sports editor.

Graduating members of the editorial board include, in addition to Clifford, Elmer Milligan, managing editor; Vicky Aumann, news editor, and Geneva Warner, staff editor. Others from The Guardsman who will graduate are Jo Ann Griffin and Anton Norris, editorial assistants.

The new editorial board for the Fall was selected unusually early this semester in order to make the current issue which will be the last publication of The Guardsman for the Spring semester.

Two more issues were scheduled but had to be cancelled because of financial problems in Associated Student funds.

Chairman Urges Election Changes

Election Commissioner Jerry Griffin yesterday denounced the complacent attitude shown by many candidates for student government offices toward campaign publicity as this semester's election returns seemed to indicate a lack of student interest in campus politics.

"You can't blame the students," Griffin said tersely. "They can't be expected to vote just because a candidate hangs a poster on the wall. They want to know that campaign promises mean something."

Only 370 of the 1680 students eligible voted in the election, representing 23 per cent of those eligible and a mere fraction of the college's total enrollment.

Griffin also said that a drastic shortage of help in operating the voting machines had forced him to close two of them much of the time.

Commenting on the Election Commissioner position next semester, Griffin suggested that he make a month of campaigning mandatory before the election, and that the candidates take a more active part in the campaigns.

PRESIDENT LOUIS G. CONLAN will confer certificates on graduates at commencement exercises Friday night, June 10.

Conlan To Confer Certificates In Riordan Night Ceremonies; Student Speakers Top Program

Commencement ceremonies Friday, June 10, mark another milestone for more than 800 graduates of the college of whom approximately 475 plan to attend the program scheduled at 8 p.m. in the Riordan High School auditorium, John J. Brady, commencement committee chairman, announced today.

Presenting the traditional awards on that night will be Harold Spears, superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will confer certificates on the graduates after their introduction by Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction.

Presentation of the awards is the major event of the evening. It includes the President's Award Plaque, awarded to two students for meritorious service to the college, and the Scholastic Cup, given to the student or students for distinguished scholastic efforts as demonstrated by the highest grade-point average.

Three honor students, Mary Blair, Beatrice Mauch and Arlan Wong, will speak on various aspects of college education.

Expected to attend is Elmer Skinner, president of the Board of Education. The marshals will be Oscar Anderson, co-ordinator, educational management, and Ralph Hillsman, dean of men.

Music will be provided by soloists and groups of the college's music department.

The concert band, conducted by Meyer Cahn, will play instrumental selections while Robert Morton will direct the A Cappella Choir in vocal selections.

Soloists Virginia Freeman, soprano; Jose Barredo, tenor, and Glen Angus, baritone, under the direction of Fiesta Badger will add distinctive classical selections.

Graduates who have Associated Student cards are entitled to free use of caps and gowns while non-AS cardholders may rent them for $1.

Rehearsals on the morning of the exercises will precede the formal event at night.

Three Groups Sponsor 'Fling' Tonight In Smith Hall; AWS To Present Service Award

The spotlight will be on the winners of the Margaret Dougherty Award, the Top Woman Athlete Award and the newly created Associated Women Student Achievement Award at the Feminine Fling today at 6:30 p.m.

In keeping with the theme of Hawaiian Holiday, Smith Hall, arranged partially in luau style and decorated in an Island motif, will be the setting for this semi-annual awards party, co-sponsored by AWS, the Inter-Sorority Council and the Recreation Association.

Designed to entertain guests in true Hawaiian fashion, the program will begin with a buffet supper, served from a fruit bar. This innovation in food service, with each guest making up her own salad plate from an assortment of fresh fruit, is an idea adapted from similar serving methods found in the more luxurious restaurants in Hawaii.

Entertainment, designed to lend fun and color to the evening, will include professional dancers and musicians from Hawaii, a fashion show featuring Hawaiian costumes, hula lessons given by physical education instructor Melia Furgis, and short films dealing with campus life at the University of Hawaii and Hawaii's various scenic attractions.

Following the entertainment, incoming presidents of AWS, ISC and RA will be introduced to those in attendance.

Presentation of trophies from RA to leading women athletes, of the Margaret Dougherty Award to the sorority which has achieved the highest scholastic average, and of the AWS Achievement Award to the Executive Board member with the outstanding service record will round out the program.

Names of the award winners are well-guarded secrets, and should surprise everyone, Stevie Tissier, AWS president, stated.

All women students are invited to attend the affair, the only campus event students are permitted to attend in capri prints or pedal pushers, Miss Tissier stated, adding, "I hope many will be able to attend, for this will be the last AWS affair for this semester."

In completing her term as AWS president, Miss Tissier expressed appreciation for the splendid co-operation she had been accorded by the board members, who have contributed substantially to the success of every one of the AWS affairs.

The films to be shown tonight are made available by the David Adler Travel Service, 2275 Mission Street, San Francisco, a sponsor of tours to Hawaii.

Matson Lines menus and napkins, United Airlines posters, booklets on the University of Hawaii, and baby orchids to be presented to those in attendance tonight have also been secured through the travel service.

Three Coeds In Tie For Scholastic Cup

Three coeds whose overall grade-point averages are in the 3.90 bracket were named today as winners of the college's Scholastic Cup, commencement award for highest scholastic record.

They are Marie B. Dextre, Mary Ellen McSweeney and one of this semester's student commencement speakers, Beatrice R. Mauch.

The trio, together with Robert W. Spencer, are slated to be graduated With Highest Honors at the June 10 commencement ceremonies in Riordan High School auditorium.

Minimum grade point average of 3.75 must be achieved for graduation With Highest Honors, according to William G. Richardson, sponsor of the college's chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, statewide scholastic honor society.

Of a total of 31 honor graduates, those who completed their work here in February are Diane Christoffersen, May Chun, Eugene Kosel, Joseph Ramian, Robert Ramstad, Harry Suzuki, Jeng Tang, Kayoko Toyooka, Vera Usanoff, Arlan Wong, Beatrice Wong and Kwong Yee.

Graduates with honors who completed their work here this semester are Victoria Aumann, Mary Blair, Rolando Castelion, Diane DeLisle, Mary Didenko, Pamela Gardella, Charlene Glidden, Virginia Hyde, Jean McKaye, Sallie Nagase, Rose Poppiti, Barbara Robinson, Calvin Taam, Florence Torba and Jean Toso.

College Hour Film Features Europe Tour

A Grand Tour Of Europe is the name of the film being shown this Friday during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m. in S-136, Madison Devlin, audio-visual director, announced.

The film takes the viewer by plane on a trip from the United States to Europe, making stops at Paris, London, Vienna, Rome and various Scandinavian countries.

Students In The News Headlines Show Responsible Side—Mostly

IT WAS an exciting semester for college men and women. Sit-in strikes and riots at City Hall captured interest among the domestic news, while in Korea and Turkey students led the way in pressing for government changes.

There were some other students attracting attention, too. Maybe not on such a sensational, world-wide basis, but nevertheless "attention getters." That adjective certainly fits one of the college's coeds who went into the cruel, cold world and found it most lucrative.

Some others found the more primitive aspects of the world to their liking and are currently preparing themselves for a stint with the SPCA.

Other news didn't center around such individual performances. The college's Silver Anniversary was highlighted by an Open House which, even against heavy rains, drew many San Franciscans to the college's halls. Productive art students and fraternity members printed posters honoring the Alumni's reunion for the Silver Year and posted them in buses and street cars.

Herold Miller, English instructor, fashioned a brochure for the open house that featured a pictorial history of the college from its very beginning to its present status.

The start of the semester was hampered with inadequate seating in Smith Hall, but Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser, and a squad of burly helpers, including Little All-American football guard Willie Hudson, soon had things well in hand—following fine cooperation from students. The opening of the new Smith Hall addition later ended the battle of the bottleneck, for a time anyway.

It became a lively six months for student politics, with donnybrooks over the abilities of representatives to the California Junior College Student Government Association meet in San Diego and the nomers of student political parties landing most of the headlines.

The political activities climaxed in a heated election that saw the ousting of the entrenched United Students Party by the newly formed Students' Representative Party, led by new President Joe Egri.

Big news on the sports front was the cage squad's winning of the Big Eight basketball crown, climaxing the season with a see-saw game against Oakland's Thunderbirds, which the Rams won, capping a 13-2 league season.

The track team's distance medley relay team of Tom Jennings, Frank James, Ray Batz and Homer Chaney smashed the college, Big Eight and Northern California records.

The criminology department's pistol teams, led by Captain Jim Olson, came back laurel-laden from numerous encounters in the Oakland pistol matches.

Little Theater productions included The Man Who Came To Dinner and The Country Girl. The thespians attempted College Hour presentations when they lifted the curtain on Tennessee Williams' Auto Da Fe. The event, the first College Hour play, was well-received by a packed house.

Dances highlighted weekend campus functions; besides the usual Frosh and Soph Balls there were April Fantasy and the successful Club Activities Board's Silverado Roundup, among others.

However, sororities and fraternities didn't limit themselves to dancing. Tau Chi Sigma's President Mike Haskell, commenting on the group's blood drive, said, "This is an indication of the responsibility of young people, and it refutes much of the adverse publicity a minor few attach to all young people because of foolish stunts."

Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority held an Easter Basket drive for children in the County Hospital, while Alpha Phi Omega conducted the Ugly Man On Campus contest, the proceeds of which went to their scholarship fund.

These were the campus headlines, hardly sensational enough to catch the eye of the city's daily press, but nevertheless showing a responsible side of college life—something that seldom appears in print these days.

Ken Stone Realizes 7-Year Dream

Former Student Skates To Ice Follies Success

Climaxing a seven-year dream for Ken Stone, a former student here, was a message he received last April from Roy Shipstad of Ice Follies fame. The message read, "Call me in Minneapolis."

Ever since Stone began skating lessons at the Phyllis and Harris Legg School of Ice at the age of 12, he wanted someday to be a member of Shipstad and Johnson's Ice Follies.

Under the tutelage of Gorman Garry, an instructor at the school, Stone developed rapidly to the point that he was giving solo performances by the time he was 15.

As with any successful endeavor he put a great deal of practice and time into his ambition. When he had a chance he would skate every day after school, during breaks in classes, and at 5:30 in the morning if he couldn't make it after classes.

Finally his opportunity came last summer when the ice show held auditions at Winterland. At that time he was told no openings existed, but they were sufficiently impressed to ask him to keep in touch.

He received a letter from Shipstad as recent as April 4 informing him there still was no vacancy. Then two days later, while Stone was at the college rehearsing The Man Who Came To Dinner, he received a telephone call telling him he had a telegram from Minneapolis.

Rehearsal was held up while he hurried home. After phoning Shipstad, he was told that a position was open. Was he interested? Action speaks louder than words and Stone was on the plane to Minneapolis the next day.

His routines include being a member of the chorus in the jazz number. And he is a feature clown in the children's number.

"I had always wanted to join the Ice Follies rather than the Icecapades because it is a more closely-knit show. In fact, it's just like one big family, with everyone helping each other," Stone commented.

FLASHING SKATES are exhibited by Ken Stone, former student here, who is currently appearing with the Ice Follies.

Unfortunately, a pulled tendon suffered on May 8 will keep him out of the opening in his home town June 22. "But they'll be here until September, and I'll be skating in San Francisco within two months," the determined cast-ridden skater vows.

"By the way, I missed that rehearsal completely," Stone remembers about the excitement-filled evening back in April—a long time ago.

Women Utter Strange Words As Evil-Looking Instruments Whirl

By Jo Ann Griffin

Foreboding and mysterious to those not imbued with the sense of the unknown is a small room just at the end of the hall of the third floor in the science building. As the uninitiated student walks by, he can hear the murmur of women's voices uttering strange and unusual words over evil-looking equipment.

A small amount of investigation should reveal that these coded conversations and strange incantations are not the visual evidence of any kind of conspiracy but are actually the proof of skilled learning in progress.

Reassured by this bit of information, the student's questions should lead to the knowledge that the young women are dental assisting students attending one of Ruth Inskipp's classes.

Upon venturing forward into the room one might glimpse a little monster spurting fire next to a number of glowing hot ovens. This is not a pyromaniac haven but a sort of trial by fire as every dental office uses procedures involving fire.

Another class of dental equipment consists of instruments run by electricity. On a busy day these can be seen in a violent orgy of vibrating, lathing and polishing, all of which are part of the routine.

Various other instruments are presses, copper plating machines, sterilizers run by steam pressure, coal or boiling water to clean the instruments and a fascinating thing dubbed the Wig-L-Bug. The Wig-L-Bug does not wiggle and is not a bug but it does electrically take over the duties of an old-fashioned pestle and mortar.

An interesting facet of practice in dental techniques is the use of molds to fashion various untoothy objects. The students make rings for their fingers and toys which they bestow upon children.

Writing The Blues

Blue Rules The College Scene

By Anton Norris

Blue is the color of the sky on a bright, warm day. Blue is the flashing color of a bird singing its song. Blue is the color of robins' eggs lying in a nest, unopened waiting expectantly for the moment of birth. Blue is synonymous with depression. And finally, there are blue books.

These books, so adroitly named blue books, are manufactured in one size only. They generally have an equal number of pages, always too many.

The ink used in a frantic attempt to prove to the instructor that all his lectures were not in vain is blue. Many times even the color of the pens used is blue, and generally the mood all this blueness creates is blue. One suddenly, after giving it some thought, feels cloaked in blue.

There are two kinds of blue books. One is sold in the student bookstore and the other is sold in the California Bookstore. It makes little difference which one is bought; they are both blue.

The number of blue books which can be bought at one time is almost unlimited. Some people take advantage of the surplus and report to class with pockets filled with blue books. They are proving something. No one else knows what has been proved, but as long as the student, himself, does it is all right.

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob Pacini

WAY BACK in the second half of the twentieth century there was some kind of competition going on between two countries, the United States and the Soviet Union, that was referred to by people of the time as the "race for space."

Things really got started one day in October when the Soviets made the first move by placing in orbit the first artificial earth satellite and quickly followed this with another, much heavier, vehicle.

The Americans were concerned, for they hadn't yet done anything as spectacular as the Soviets, and here it was, almost the end of the baseball season, too.

Their first attempt to launch a satellite failed dismally. The Americans groaned. Not only did their satellite flop, but also two games had been rained out that very same day, throwing the league into a real jam.

As time passed, however, the Americans also succeeded in launching space vehicles. The Soviets did too, with each country putting heavier and heavier objects in space.

At one point the Soviets had a four and one half ton space ship in orbit, but the Americans quickly followed this by placing two four and one half ton space ships in orbit.

The satellites grew heavier and still heavier, with tons and tons of metal being hurled into space, until some people asked themselves:

"Are the satellites circling the earth, or the earth circling the satellites?"

One year 10 tons were launched, then 15 tons, 20 tons, 40 tons until finally the Soviets outdid everything up to that time by placing in orbit the entire city of Moscow.

Immediately Americans announced plans to counter this move by sending the state of Rhode Island into orbit, but a congressman from Texas demanded an investigation to find out why the United States didn't have enough power to launch his state, instead.

After all, the congressman argued, Texas was the lone star state.

The Americans, however, decided to wait at least until the football season was over. How could anyone concentrate on outer space with the Western Division championship still in doubt?

The Soviets sent a man up to the moon, but the only thing the Americans could raise was a furore over something called payola.

Anyway, the race, if it still was a race, continues with the Americans following that hallowed motto. "It does not matter whether you win or lose, but how well you play the game."

One day, though, they realized that they had been scored upon too many times, and when they came up to bat, they struck out, as would any player who has not paid attention to the game and is not in condition.

All they had left now was that rather comforting motto.

And really! What a time for it to happen! Why it was outrageous, with the Kentucky Derby and two golf tournaments about to commence!

THE INEVITABLE HAS HAPPENED! Last week a group of mice, lizards, spiders and weasels were seen on the third floor of Science Hall observing a group of students on display in the biology showcases.

Public Support Boosts Student Here Into Second Place Spot Of KCBS Vocal Contest

By Elmer Milligan

VETERAN Arthur Muskovitz, the college's second-place winner in the KCBS Northern California singing contest, is next in line for a spot on the City College of San Francisco famous student list.

Winning second prize in college talent competition, the 24-year-old sophomore was awarded $25 in long-playing records and is currently being considered by Capitol Records Company, Hollywood, for a possible recording contract.

Fools Rush In is the name of the song that Muskovitz sang in competition with students from 15 Northern California colleges and universities, including Stanford, University of California, College of Pacific and University of San Francisco.

Winners of the contest were selected by public vote and the generous support of students here helped Muskovitz win second place, the blond tenor gratefully stated in an interview last week.

"A great deal of the support I received came from my girl, Juanita," he said, meaning Juanita Schaeffer, one of the college's Silver Anniversary representatives to Photography Day, held two weeks ago at Sigmund Stern Grove.

(After helping Muskovitz obtain votes in the contest, Miss Schaeffer, a pretty merchandising major, tripped to Sacramento and won an honor for herself—second place in the Junior Miss America contest.)

Muskovitz began his singing at Sir Francis Drake High School. In 1956 he represented Lincoln Air Force Base, Nebraska, in Tops 'N Blue, a nation-wide military singing contest featuring the top entertainers in uniform.

Upon entering the college, Muskovitz enrolled in music G10, a special voice course under the instruction of Flossita Badger, whom he credits for "cultivating the real qualities of my voice."

Like most young singing hopefuls, Muskovitz' ambition is to become a professional in the music field. Unlike scores of talentless singers already under contract to major record companies, this popular tenor soloist, we believe, has the REAL qualities of a good singer:

(1) An original singing style, (2) a true, magnificent voice, (3) stability, (4) personality, (5) good diction and (6) technique.

Once again the fabulous team of Muskovitz and Schaeffer are attempting to capture collegiate honors. This week, the popular twosome entered the Sophomore king-queen contest in hopes of winning and sharing an award together.

LA Chargers Offer Fans Chance To Play Pro Ball

By Frank Dunne

THE LOS ANGELES CHARGERS of the newly formed American Football League conducted one of the most unusual talent searches in the annals of professional football, or for that matter any other sport, when they opened the positions on the squad to any person who was able to hobble onto the field.

Inviting any fan who thought he had a chance to make the team to a public tryout, the club got more than 100 acceptances. Included in this sturdy crew were bartenders, painters, students and stunt men. All shared in the common desire to make a pro-grid squad.

With their varied background and amount of physical ability they presented a fairly dismal picture. But the optimistic owners held a four-day meet for the crew and out of the hearty-hundred, three fearless souls were asked to report to the Chargers' regular camp.

Not only did the Angelenos satisfy the thirst for combat in these men and instill in them a memory that they can pass down to their grandchildren, but they also accomplished a tremendous public relations task that many of the other pro clubs should follow.

During the season all football teams are plagued with information from loyal fans who explain, in their opinion, how the club should be run. Now these grandstand quarterbacks have had a chance to see how the teams really operate. And we are sure many of them went away from the camp much sorer, but much wiser men.

They found out that even football players are mortal and can't score a touchdown on every play. With this idea in mind they can see better the real workings of the team and understand the "shortcomings" of the players.

When more of the fans realize this fact, the coaches and players will be able to concentrate more on football and less on trying to please the audience in the Frank Merriwell style of football.

The other end accomplished by this workout was the closer relation of the club with the public in general. When a football organization opens its doors to any and all comers, the fans are bound to be interested in it.

When a team shows an interest of this nature in the public, the fans will in turn show an interest in them. And this act may well prove the needed shot in the arm the new team needs to push it over the top.

Golfers End Loop In Fifth Position

Improving with every match, the Ram golfers ended their Big Eight Conference season with a fifth place finish in the league championship tournament held recently at Richmond Golf and Country Club.

The team was quite inexperienced at the start of the season, but with every match it improved remarkably, Coach Grover Klemmer stated, but the loop was stronger this year. The college's team was composed entirely of freshmen, which should result in a strong squad next season.

Dennis Clark, number one golfer on the squad, placed fifth in the conference match with a 36-hole total of 158. His single round scores were 77 and 81. Number two man, Sandy Loube, had rounds of 82 and 81 for a total of 163, good enough for fifth place in the second flight.

Bill Shaw had rounds of 86-80-166, which placed him fifth in the third flight of the title action. Skip Jordan's 36-hole score was 177, with rounds of 95 and 82. Two good rounds were turned in by Len Feld, number five man on the squad. A 168 total (86-82) earned Feld third place in the fifth flight.

Stockton won the Big Eight title edging out San Mateo by a slim margin of six strokes. In the State Junior College championships, San Mateo avenged this loss and captured the State title while Stockton grabbed third place.

Nine Ram Cindermen Qualify For California Championships

By Doug Cathcart

Nine members of the Ram track team turned in outstanding performances in the Northern California Junior College meet which earned them berths in the state finals held at Modesto last weekend.

Those qualified to participate in the state meet were Ray Batz, Frank James, Alex and Ellis Jenkins, Roy Williams, George Holland, Dennis Lawyer, Jess Sirles and Ralph Mathis.

The Northern California meet had an extra meaning for Mathis as it was at this fray last season that he incurred his leg injury. The extent of the torn cartilage and ligaments were expected to keep them from further competition in the jumping events. Of course, with his showing here and his participation on the squad since the Big Eight meet, this prediction was proved wrong.

Winner of the Northern Cal meet was College of Sequoias, who racked up a point score of 74 to top second place score of 58 held by the Rams. The third place position at the meet went to San Jose, who scored 44½ points.

This year's Red and White showing at the meet was a great improvement over last season when the Rams placed a humble seventh. Another sidelight should include the fact that College of Sequoias also won the affair last year.

The results of the Northern California meet saw the mile run won by Ray Batz of the local squad with a time of 4:27.3. James, also of the Rams, placed third in that event.

Craig of Stockton clinched the 440-yard dash with a time of 48.8, followed by Palmore, Oakland, and Petrinovich and Brown of College of Sequoias, in that order.

The 100-yard dash blue ribbon was taken by Ernst of San Jose who clocked in at 9.8. Puckett of College of Sequoias finished second in that event while Alex Jenkins of the locals placed third and Ellis Jenkins, the second man of the potent duet, finished fourth.

Rotters of Fresno won the shot-put with a heave of 50-1½. Guider of Modesto took the 120 high hurdles with a time of 15.2, followed by Wilson, College of Sequoias; Williams, San Francisco, and Carilleo of San Jose.

Sullivan of Stockton with a time of 1:56.8 took the 880-yard event, followed by Andrews of Sacramento; Laird, Diablo Valley, and Montevez of Fresno.

Oakland, led by Palmore, took the 220-yard dash while Alex Jenkins of the Rams captured a second place spot. Jenkins was followed by Campbell of Monterey Peninsula and Hoiman of Sacramento.

Fishback of San Mateo won the two-mile run with a final clocking of 10.02.2 followed by Lee, San Jose; Bowman, Taft, and Friend of Hartnell.

The time of 3:24.6 was good enough to take the one-mile relay for College of Sequoias, followed by Modesto, San Jose and Stockton. Edwards of Fresno broke the old Northern California discus record of 158-10½ when he threw the disc 161-2.

Palmer of Monterey Peninsula also shattered an old Northern California record when he leaped 23-11½ in the broad jump to top the former mark of 23-8½.

Shafer of College of Sequoias took the pole vault when he sailed to 13-6. He was followed by Favor of San Jose, while Allan, Hartnell; Lawyer, San Francisco, and Walker of Modesto tied for fourth.

The high jump wound up in a tie for first place between Johnson of Fresno and Nickeberry of Marin, who both leaped 6-5. Glyer, Sacramento; Sirles and Mathis, San Francisco, followed in that order.

College of Sequoias really had a field day, qualifying 14 men for the State Junior College meet.

Farber, Flanagan Lead Ram Nine Batting Averages

By Jesse Gonzalez

Two Ram veterans, Bob Farber and Bill Flanagan, last month closed out fine careers under Coach Lee Eisan, and led in team batting, with .422 and .409 bat averages, respectively.

Farber, a product out of George Washington high school, topped his teammates in batting for the second straight year. He's an almost certain cinch to capture all-Big Eight Conference honors for his second straight year.

Flanagan, absent for three years from the campus, returned this year to give the squad a big shot in the arm.

The former Galileo ace pounded out 18 hits for 44 times at bat to boast a .409 average. He was equally tough on the mound, and registered four victories against but one defeat.

Third baseman Jerry Gosland followed close behind Flanagan, clubbing also 18 hits, but for 47 appearances at the plate for .383. Gosland led the club in runs-batted-in, driving across nine.

Outfielder Eric Lyons was the big surprise in the Ram camp.

He started the season on the bench, but in the pinch-hitting role, he proved his worth and finished out as a starter with a .308 average which included 16 hits for 52 trips to the plate. Lyons is also counted on to add extra depth next year for the locals.

Concluding their careers for City College are Farber, Flanagan, third baseman John Dunham, shortstop Byron Beckes, and second baseman Virgil Hutchins.

The Rams' batting averages:

	AB	R	H	RBI	Avg.
Bob Farber	45	17	19	6	.422
Bill Flanagan	44	10	18	7	.409
Jerry Gosland	47	9	18	9	.383

78 Athletes Receive Awards At Block SF Dinner Monday Night

With George Wolfman, head baseball coach at the University of California, as guest speaker, 78 athletes will receive block awards at the Block SF dinner next Monday night in Smith Hall, President and master of ceremonies Bob Ross announced today.

All athletes receiving awards this semester are invited to the banquet, but they are urged to notify Alex Schwarz, Block SF sponsor, or Ross by Friday. The entire physical education department has been invited to the dinner.

Along with the coaches, guests and athletes the members of the administration of the college who will be in attendance are Louis G. Conlan, president of the college; Louis F. Batmale, dean of instruction.

Dean Ralph Hillsman, Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction; Dean Edward E. Sandys and Thomas Nesbitt, director of testing and research, will also attend.

Coaches from ten San Francisco high schools will be in attendance at Monday night's dinner, Ross said.

Athletes who won their letters in the championship basketball team are Dennis Bates, Will Camp, Mike Carson, Bob Grayson, Nate Jackson, John Lewis, Will Rickmore, Tom Wishom, Manager, Cleo Cofield, Vern Coleman and Mel Wilson. The last three men listed are receiving their letters for the second year.

Letters for the golf team will go to Dennis Clark, Len Feld, Skip Jordan, Sandy Loube and Bill Shaw.

Swimmers who earned their blocks are Mike Buckley, Robert Corsiglia, Robert Fewster, Bill Sakovich, Al Stevens, Rich Sullivan, Pete Urrea, Bob Urrea, Gene Gaynor and Craig Schwarz, the last two students winning their letters for the second year.

Members of the championship track team receiving their letters are Ray Batz, Herbert Briscoe, James Bush, Homer Chaney, Lon Colbert, Coleman, Al Fehn, Jeff Graff, George Holland, Bill Hotchkiss.

Frank James, Alex Jenkins, Ellis Jenkins, Tom Jennings, Dennis Lawyer, Ralph Mathis, Leonard Mentzer, Ed Molise, Jess Neal, James Nichols, Jess Sirles, Robert Taylor, Tony Vance and Roy Williams.

The members of the championship tennis team who will receive their blocks at the dinner are Paul Barth, Vincent Chinn, Larry Draper, Lynn Matteson and Gary Robinson.

Fifteen baseball players eligible for blocks are Byron Beckes, Ed Coit, Mel Canevaro, Reno DiBono, John Donham, Bob Farber, Bill Flanagan, Gerry Gosland, Ray Greggains, Bob Lane, Don Leonardini, Don Lowpenski, Ed Lyons, Bob Ruggierro and Manager George Des Meules.

The JV basketball team had a great deal of fine varsity prospects and the men won their letters, Briscoe, Vince Courtney, Pete Riddy, Bob Posey, Bill Richardson, Al Richardson, Jim Soper, Bill Waight, Bob Porter and Jerry Del Secco.

A special feature of the night's program will be the introduction of the 1960 winners of the college sports Hall of Fame. This year's winners are L. C. Shields and Donald Grant. Shields was a standout on the gridiron for the locals during the 1957-58 season, and Grant played both baseball and football in the latter years of the war.

Newly appointed Block SF sponsor Lou Vasquez expressed concern with the athlete's participation in Block meetings during the next semester. Vasquez expects, however, that the entire physical education department will help to instill greater interest in the society's activities.

ALEX SCHWARZ, adviser of the Block SF Society, will oversee the activities at the annual block awards banquet Monday night.

Fall Sked Lists Ten Grid Scuffles

A strong 10-game schedule is slated for the 1960 Ram football team, Coach Grover Klemmer announced today.

The season will get under way on September 1, with two practices a day scheduled for the first two weeks.

The Rams will open their season on Friday, September 23, against Los Angeles Valley in the college's new stadium, game time 2:30 p.m. The traditional Los Angeles City College game is slated for September 30 in Los Angeles.

The Big Eight Conference opens on October 7 against San Mateo, here, at 2:30 p.m. Contra Costa College battles the Rams on October 14, here, with kickoff at 2:30 p.m.

The college's first road game is on Saturday, October 22, against Santa Rosa, with game time 7:30 p.m. Stockton hosts the Red and White gridders on Friday, October 28, at 8 p.m.

The Rams return home on November 4 to battle Oakland, the action set to start at 2:30 p.m. The local grid forces close out their home season on Friday, November 11, against Sacramento, game time 2:30 p.m. The college's final league encounter is scheduled for Friday night, November 18, in Modesto, kickoff at 8 p.m.

RON McDONALD AND STU BETZ, fourth semester students in the Hotel and Restaurant department, were named recipients of the Statler Foundation award recently.

Presented by Paul Handlery (above, right), vice president of the Handlery Hotel chain, this was the second year of presenting the new scholarship at the college. Last year's winner, Lynn Godfrey, is presently attending Cornell University.

McDonald, at left in the above picture, received $1500 of the $2500 award. Betz, in the center, was presented with the other $1000.

Both students intend to enroll at Denver University this Fall.

Forum Hits Ramporium Stand June 6, Features 30 Articles

Spring 1960 semester copies of Forum magazine may be picked up beginning Monday, June 6, at the Ramporium without cost to Associated Student members. Non-members may purchase the magazine for 50 cents.

Representative of student writing throughout the year, this edition of Forum contains approximately 30 original compositions chosen from 165 short stories, poems, essays, and short-short stories originally submitted by student writers on the campus.

Placing a great emphasis on literature and its enjoyment, the Forum Club's weekly College Hour meetings have featured recordings, tapes, poetry, readings of individual student compositions, lectures and discussions.

While Forum gives students a chance to have their work published, it also gives many other students experience in editing and working on a magazine.

The magazine was published by Rose Poppiti and Maureen Mills, editors, and editorial staff members under the sponsorship of Catherine Connolly, English instructor.

Special credits, according to the editors, are due Richard Chin, who designed the magazine's cover, and staff members Jo Ann Griffin, Maurice Lemus, Jane Shamamian and John Sullivan.

Numerous past editors and contributors to the magazine have now achieved success in various professional fields of writing.

Forum had its start as a mimeographed sheet in 1939. Since then it has had many abstract and modern art covers.

As AS Activities Go, Council Ends

By Paul Plansky

As Maine goes, so goes the nation.

As this semester's Associated Student activities terminate here, so does its representative body, Student Council.

With June 5 to 10 designated as "Dead Week," council, after holding its award dinner last night, will pick up its student-sized politics and turn to their TV sets this summer to witness some professional political maneuvers.

Approval of the Inter-Fraternity Council's new officers and an allotment of $100 given to the Rally Committee to wrap up this semester's activities brought council closer to the end of its political rope and allowed its members to adjourn early.

Council unanimously approved IFC's new regime, President Jerry Kucserka, Beta Tau; Vice President Gary Torres, Gamma Phi Ypsilon; Secretary Bob Rodgers, Zeta Phi Sigma; Treasurer Bill Threadgill, Alpha Phi Epsilon, and Rushing Chairman Lee Bertolone, Alpha Kappa Rho.

RA Wraps Up Semester With Semi-Annual Awards Social Tomorrow Night In Smith Hall

Winding up a busy Spring schedule of activities, the Recreation Association will hold its semi-annual Awards Social in Smith Hall tomorrow from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m.

Highlighting the evening will be the presentation of awards to members of the association, as well as the announcement and installation of new officers for the Fall semester.

Receiving the managers' medals will be Bob Loving, archery; Tim Dunn, basketball; Mary Ann Taylor, modern dance, and Phyllis Tomlinson, volleyball.

Block awards for first semester participation will be presented to Jim Bradford, John Falabella, Jerry Kruse, basketball; Jadin Gee, Pat Hudson, Nancy Parraga and Leonora Smith, volleyball; Jan White, modern dance; Joyce Rolando, Bill Rasco and Margaret Jensen, folk dance; Irene Prezel, secretarial, and Judy Webb, bowling.

Awarded shields for second semester participation are Mike Jacobson, Tim Dunn, Bob Kelley and Gary Romriell, basketball; Les Adams, fencing; Phyllis Tomlinson, volleyball; Paulette Petit, modern dance; Barbara Jensen, fencing; Pat Crone, bowling, and Judy Day, golf.

Third semester award of a star goes to Gladys Grassini, volleyball.

The team trophy will also be awarded to the winning team in the RA bowling league, as well as individual medals to the man and woman with high series.

King, Queen Reign At Soph Ball In Mural Room June 3

Sayonara is the theme of this semester's Sophomore Ball which will be held this Friday evening from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel.

Proper attire for the occasion, Jack Verga, class president, said, is dark suits and ties for the men and cocktail dresses for the women. Music for the evening will be provided by Bob Emerson and his band.

Highlight of the ball will be the crowning of the Soph king and queen, to be chosen this week. Voting began last Monday on a penny-a-vote basis and will continue through this Friday. The money raised from the contest will go into the sophomore scholarship fund.

Paperbox containers displaying each candidate's picture are placed at the silver pole in Science Hall and in the cafeteria for voting purposes.

A window display featuring the robes and other attire to be worn by the king and queen are currently in a display window in Science Hall.

Another feature of Soph Week is the semi-annual Frosh-Soph basketball game to be held during this Friday's College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., in the men's gymnasium. All prospective players and rooters are invited to attend, Verga emphasized.

Last semester the Soph class lost to the Frosh by one point.

Mike Haskell and Joanna Geary reigned as king and queen last semester.

Council Honors Two With Service Award

Robert Morton, A Cappella Choir director, was presented with the faculty service award, and Roberta Beber received the student service award at the Student Council dinner last night in Smith Hall.

Both were honored because of their work here for the benefit of the Associated Students.

AS President and Vice President Wally Hayes and Bill Keane, respectively, were awarded gavels and lifetime Associated Student cards; council members and cabinet members were awarded pins and guards.

Also on the council dinner's agenda was the swearing in of the new AS officers for the Fall semester. Joe Egri, AS president, and Georgene Petersen, vice president, were installed before the assembly.

Parties, Dinners Close Semester

By Maria Gonsalves

THE CONCLUSION of another semester is at hand, and all that remains are finals, which begin Friday, June 10. For most of the organizations on campus, this is a quiet "dead week," to be climaxed with installation banquets, parties and outings.

The Newman Club has planned a Day of Recollection to be held Sunday at the College of the Holy Names. The group will leave St. Emydius at 10:30 a.m. to spend the day in Oakland.

A farewell dinner dance is scheduled for Saturday, June 18, at St. Emydius Parish Hall. New officers will be installed. Plans for the summer and next semester's very active and interesting schedule will be announced.

The results of the final games in the Recreation Association intramural bowling league, played May 24 at the Sportscenter Bowling Alley, were Hotel and Restaurant No. 2 with 11 wins, first place; the Newman Club with nine wins, Gamma Kappa Beta Hi-Five No. 1 with eight wins, Filipino Club with seven wins, Hi-Five No. 2 with seven wins, and Hotel and Restaurant No. 1, two wins.

The pledges of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority recently gave the sisters a luncheon at the home of Betty Rice. This is a semi-annual affair. A mother-daughter tea is given in the Fall instead of the luncheon.

AWS Calls Big Sister Registration On Friday

The Associated Women Student Big Sister signup meeting, under direction of the new chairman, Pat Crone, will be held this Friday in C-104 during College Hour from 10 to 10:40 a.m.

Among matters to be discussed are the development of groups, each composed of 25 big and 25 little sisters, and the selection of leaders for each group. Plans for the orientation coketail party for entering freshmen also will be discussed.

Under present plans, the party will be given on September 5, with Helen Huffman, counselor here, the featured speaker.

Two Instructors To Study With NSF

Two faculty members here will take part in this year's Summer Institute Program of the National Science Foundation.

Charles Stewart and Jules Fraden, science instructors at the college, will study this summer at two of the nation's outstanding schools. Stewart will study animal ecology at University of Colorado, while Fraden will attend classes in the recent advances in the biological sciences at Oregon State.

This summer institute program was created in recognition of the role of high school and college teachers in developing the nation's scientific manpower potential.

College Grants Degrees To 428 Spring Students

Approximately 428 Spring semester students will receive certificates leading to Associate in Arts degrees during commencement ceremonies at 8 p.m. in the Riordan High School auditorium on Friday, June 10, according to Olga Perkins of the registrar's office.

The prospective Spring graduates are as follows:

8 Campus Fraternities Host Semi-Annual Smoker In Men's Gymnasium Tonight

By Paul Piansky

Hesitating fraternity rushees have a chance to convert curiosity into confirmation when they become guests of the Inter-Fraternity Council tonight at its 15th consecutive semi-annual smoker from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

IFC President Jerry Kucserka announced recently that the eight on-campus fraternities will host and participate in this traditional, informal get-together.

Each organization will be represented by a display table with pictures, trophies and paraphernalia to depict its achievements and activities. Fraternity members will be at hand to answer any questions of new or interested students.

"This smoker is not given for the fraternity men," Kucserka said, "but is for the sole benefit of its visitors, whether they be prospective members or not."

This evening's program will include welcoming addresses by Kucserka and Ralph Hillsman, dean of men here. Then each of the eight fraternity presidents will give a short speech explaining the group's past and present records, its aims and activities.

After individual fraternity members present some entertainment, two semi-annual awards will be given: a scholarship trophy for the fraternity attaining the highest grade-point average last semester and a service award for last semester's outstanding "team effort" of service.

"An interested student has the opportunity to sign up for as many fraternities as he wishes," Kucserka stated, "and this will give the prospective members a chance to attend their first rushing affairs and choose the group of men that best fits his personality."

Refreshments will be served, and after everyone has chatted, exchanged questions and answers around each fraternity table, '49er football highlights of the 1959 season will be shown to all.

An IFC rushing fee of $1 is mandatory of all students who attend any fraternity rushing affairs. Alpha Phi Epsilon will have two tables set up in a section of the gymnasium to collect the fee for those who haven't already paid. If a person paid the fee last semester but didn't pledge a fraternity, his receipt is good for this semester, Kucserka explained.

Large Enrollment Jams Cafeteria; H&R Plans More Efficient Service

Starting with breakfast service at 7:45 a.m. until closing time at 1:15 p.m., 114 students and employees in the hotel and restaurant department here are now catering to more than 3000 students daily.

Times officially set by John Dunn, faculty manager of the Smith Hall cafeteria, are 7:30 to 10 a.m. for breakfast, and from then to the 1:15 closing time for luncheon.

Although the staff has no real problem in waiting on the diners there are still only 534 seats in Smith Hall to accommodate the 800 or so who run through the food lines each hour at lunchtime.

The present rate of flow through the food lines is 40 people per minute, and Dunn plans to increase this to 80 per minute with the opening in the next 90 days of the fountain section and four additional cashier stations.

There is no real problem in keeping up with the number of people being served at the present rate of efficiency. As the rate increases so does the number of customers.

Dunn, whose main concern in the cafeteria is the serving of food and the training of hotel and restaurant students, is worried that the increase in the serving rate may jam up the seating arrangements. No matter how fast he turns students out of the serving lines, there will still be only 534 places for them to sit.

He reapproved last year's suggestion that those who are not in a great hurry should hold back from the cafeteria for a while and try not to arrive there on the hour.

Although the serving lines are closed at 1:15, students may remain in the dining room until they are finished eating. This is expected to accommodate the group of almost 800 which arrives in the building for lunch at 1 p.m.

Present plans call for the fountain to be located in the south end of the new dining room which opened last semester. It is here that the four new cash registers will be located.

The main business of this section will be to dispense milk shakes, hamburgers and so forth. Hot lunches will still be served at the present location from the steam tables. Dunn does not look for this new facility to be open in anything less than 90 days.

The staff, which presently includes 17 civil service employees, intends to keep up with the rush and to continue serving the students and the faculty as fast and efficiently as possible.

Enrollment Soars To Record Heights As 7503 Register

Enrollment for the Fall 1960 semester reached record heights as more than 7500 students registered at the college starting September 6.

By September 12, Registrar Mary Jane Learnard was able to release a figure of 7503 students already enrolled with a few more still coming in.

Of the total, 6090 are day students and 1413 are registered to take night courses.

Pointing up the enormous growth in the size of the student body is the fact that daytime registrants alone outnumber the total enrollees of the Spring of 1955 by 50.

Daytime registration shows a gain of 6 per cent over last Fall and an 11 per cent increase above the figure reached last semester.

A total of 2561 students enrolled for the first time, the highest number on record. This is a reflection of World War II's extremely high birth rate.

Although the previous high was 6013 in the Fall of 1958 the biggest jump in one year was scored in 1947 when Fall registrations reached 5516, being boosted by the end of the war and the advent of the GI Bill.

Any of the 1938 women students currently registered who are seeking MRS degrees will find the day classes stocked with 4152 men.

Pre-Registration Set For Oct. 7

Counseling appointments and registration numbers for next semester will be given Friday, October 7, in the library from 7:45 to 8:45 a.m., according to Walter McCloud of the college's counseling staff.

Students will be required to pick up an open hour form before pre-registration and have it filled out before entering the library. Only one form will be accepted from each student in line. This eliminates the practice of students obtaining a registration number for several of their friends.

Forms will be available next Monday in the library, and at entrances to Smith Hall and Science Hall.

In the library students will be given postcards to be self-addressed and returned along with the open hour forms. The postcards will be mailed to the students one week before they are to meet with their counselors for program planning.

Three Day 'Help Week' Due For IFC Pledges

Because last semester's three-day pledging activity was executed with less confusion and trouble than the previous five-day-pledge-week, the three-day week will be status quo, and a redirection from a "Hell Week" to a "Help Week" will be emphasized this semester, Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, announced last week.

Already three definite steps have been taken in this direction:

1. Brothers will be helping the pledges by keeping to a "work schedule," designating Tuesday and Thursday as compulsory study time.

2. Fraternities have been assisting the medical examiners in the registration line.

3. Plans are under way to have the college's fraternities help the counseling department for pre-registration for next semester.

Council Debates Cafe Crush, Acts On 1st Budgets

By Richard Shields

Student Council began the new semester with a discussion of the seating problem in the cafeteria during the rush hours but reached no conclusion which would alleviate the daily crush.

Council members discussed various means of removing the pressure from the single serving line. Because of a delay in the completion of the new fountain, all students have to go through the hot-lunch line.

Student government adviser Sherm Elworthy stated that the members of council and the cabinet should set an example to other students by leaving the cafeteria as soon as they are finished eating. He added that until the fountain is completed, no one could do much about the congestion.

Associated Student President Joe Egri reminded council of the approaching Northern Regional Conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association which will be held in San Mateo on Saturday, October 15. Egri said that 20 students will be needed to represent from eight to ten workshops in the conference.

It was also suggested that students who are interested in the State Conference plan to attend the San Mateo preview so that they will have an idea of what is going on.

Council voted last week to change the prizes for the students who sell the most AS cards from credit at the Ramporium to a transistor radio for first prize, two tickets for a roadshow for second, and an LP record for third. Also, students who have sold more than 15 cards are to be Elworthy's guests on Saturday, October 1, for an afternoon swim.

Geraldine Steers was given a free AS card for the winning design. Miss Steers is a third semester Advertising Art student. A motion to restrict free cards in the future only to the designer was defeated.

Two budgets, totaling $60, were passed. Finance Chairman Bill Keane asked that Dean of Women Mary Golding and Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman each be given a $30 emergency fund. The fund is for the benefit of students who have forgotten their lunch money or carfare.

Many students avail themselves of this fund and all but a few dollars of what is borrowed is always paid back by the end of the semester. Keane said that the first of the major budgets would be submitted to council at the next meeting. He advised the council to meet with the heads of various departments to discuss the destination of requested funds.

Egri congratulated the students who were responsible for designing the float which the college entered in the Pacific Festival Parade. The float carried the banner of the International Relations Club. Its placement in the voting is not known at this time.

Displays, Dance Highlight Friday Inauguration Of Fall Calendar Of CAB Activities

By Pat Perkins

Social affairs and club activities for the Fall semester will be officially ushered in this Friday, September 30, Club Activities Board Day, according to Jim Bush, CAB president.

During College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., all on-campus organizations will have tables, displaying different interests and activities, set up in the main courtyard, between Science Hall and Cloud Hall.

The purpose of these exhibits is to acquaint new students with the various clubs the college has to offer and to attract new members.

In case of poor weather the tables will be moved to the second floor of Cloud Hall. Bob Kelley, CAB Day chairman, requested that all petitions for club tables be in by tomorrow, September 29, by 1 p.m. Table locations are given on a strict first-come first-served basis, he warned.

Fall Frolic, the CAB dance to be held in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to midnight, will make up the social portion of Friday's festivities, John Palmer, dance chairman, urged everyone to attend the first dance of the semester as this is a good way of meeting new friends.

Admission will be free with an Associated Student card or it will be 75 cents with a registration card only. Those students wishing to bring a guest must obtain a guest bid from Dean Mary Golding, S-151, for $1.00, Bush said.

The dance attire will be sport, he added, coat and tie for the men and campus wear and heels for the women.

During one of the intermissions, the three top winners of student card sales will be announced. Carolyn Vukasin, AS card sales chairman, hopes to include a transistor radio, two tickets to a road show, and a gift certificate for a long playing record as prizes for the winners.

64 Campus Clubs Offer Students Varied Choice

Sixty-four on-campus clubs and organizations are open to all students who are interested in becoming active in the planning of as well as the participation in college affairs.

These service, educational, and social groups have large varieties of interests and activities and most of them meet each College Hour.

The special interest clubs include the California Student Teachers Association, the Canterbury Club, the Chess Club, the Chinese Students Club, the Christian Science Organization, the Collegiate Christian Fellowship, the Filipino Club, the Folk Dancing Group, the Hawaiian Club, the Hillel Foundation, the Home Economics Club, the Horticulture Society, the International Relations Club, the Lutheran Club, the Acacia (Masonic) Society, the Newman Club, the Veterans Association, the Wesley Fellowship, and the Westminster Student Fellowship.

Three of the college's associations are honor groups, Alpha Gamma Sigma, the scholastic honor society; Alpha Phi Omega, the men's service fraternity, and Gamma Sigma Sigma, the women's service sorority.

Among the professional organizations are the Broadcasters' Club, the Campus Police, the Drama Club, the Engineering Society, the Forum (the campus literary magazine), the Hotel and Restaurant Society, Le Cercle Francais, the Merchandising Club, the A Cappella Choir, the Band Association, the Men's Glee Club, the Women's Treble Clef, the Pick and Hammer Society, the Retail Floristry Club and Sigma Tau Sigma.

There are 15 sororities and fraternities on campus which strive to promote good fellowship, social functions and service to the college.

They are Delta Psi, Delta Sigma Tau, Gamma Kappa Beta, Kappa Phi, Phi Beta Rho, Theta Tau, and Zeta Chi sororities.

Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Phi Beta Delta, Tau Chi Sigma and Zeta Phi Sigma make up the campus fraternities.

Let's Give Messrs. K And C That Cold Feeling—Not The VIP

COMPLICATED and controversial international affairs should be of concern to everyone, especially to college students who will, not too long from now, take their places in society as working men and women with opinions and ideas and a desire to express their views.

Therefore, we feel it not inappropriate to comment occasionally through the medium of The Guardsman editorial page on world affairs and problems, not with the aim of directing student thinking toward certain ends, but merely to arouse in students thoughts and opinions on vital issues of the day.

One such event which we feel rightly subject to comment was the historic opening of the United Nations last week and the appearance there of Messrs Khrushchev, Castro and other rosy red leaders before the world organization.

The visit of Premier Khrushchev to this country seems completely odious and even contemptible on his part. It shows the Kremlin boss to possess an extraordinary amount of audacity, while being entirely devoid of common sense and tact.

Even more distasteful and utterly ill-timed was the arrival of Fidel Castro, who immediately heaped abuses on those making an effort to protect him from personal injury or even worse.

We can see not a single justification for the stay of Mr. K. and his Caribbean pal in the very country and among the very people they have both slandered, threatened and insulted.

We can see no reason why they should be extended special courtesies, services and privileges.

Rather than become over-emotional about the matter, however, and give expression to our views in violent, disorderly and destructive demonstrations, we can more effectively show these two gentlemen how repugnant their policies are by completely ignoring their presence and turning America into a real "ice palace."

The good old cold shoulder might convince Khrushchev that the "divided American people" are more united than he wishes, and that his hypocritical ravings on peace and disarmament are viewed in this country for what they are: Propaganda schemes that contain nothing but loopholes and ways out.

Voting Here Should Top Nation's Average

CITY COLLEGE is expected to have a higher than average number of voters casting ballots in the coming Presidential election.

Of the 7500 students enrolled here, according to Registrar Mary Jane Learnard, about 2000 meet the requirements for voting and should be registered to vote.

With the national average at a poor 38 per cent of the eligibles voting, the college hopes to send at least 70 per cent of its registered voters to the polls in November.

Relief From TV Westerns; New Series Indicts Villains Of History

By Paul Plansky

TOMORROW night television's "smoke screen" will lift momentarily. After the week's last bloodcurdling cries fade and the TV screen clears itself of fumes from Gunsmoke, Rifleman, Restless Gun and Colt 45, the viewer may relax and enjoy a rare treat—a worthwhile program.

The Witness, a fresh, new series, has its debut this Thursday at 7:30 p.m. on CBS (KPIX, Channel 5).

David Susskind produces the show which is concerned with congressional hearings at which the villains of history must answer for their acts.

A better known "badman" who will take the stand in the imaginary trial series is the Kingfish himself—Huey Long. Assassinated by a political enemy in 1935, Louisiana's former governor still haunted the country folk in the hills of northern Louisiana in the person of his younger brother Earl.

"Ole Earl" managed to capture the governorship three times and was on his way to Congress when a heart attack on September 5, 1960, ended his own political career and a "Long political clan."

Both brothers were flamboyant, both had fanatic followings, and both manipulated people like puppets. Despite some of the material monuments they left to the state, their controversial dynasty of despotism within democracy was truly a malign tumor in the heart of American pride.

This TV trial will diagnose and operate on the disease; time will heal the wound, but the scar will always remain. Yet, neither a journalist, historian, or a mock trial like The Witness can reconstruct Huey Long's life as well as the prize-winning novel, which, in fictional disguise, is his life.

For the novel, All the King's Men, Robert Penn Warren won the Pulitzer Prize in 1946. Mr. Warren depicts the phenomenal rise to political power of Willie Stark, who possesses a seemingly unrealistic behavior, being both reticent and recalcitrant. His solemn, pensive moods often explode into fiery anger.

Of course, no one is born good or evil. Willie wasn't always a brutal man. As a young man he was ambitious and broad-minded.

Nevertheless, his commendable qualities were twisted by circumstance, molded into madness, and ossified through revenge until he stood alone on his podium of isolation and rebellion.

There, in his world apart, Willie remained until the end, a testy, thwarted iconoclast. Warren characterizes perfectly the transformation of the nice guy who becomes the most perfidious person imaginable.

Ripping out all of the book's interwoven symbolism, one can decipher the main theme, which centers around political corruption. Even in our great democracy there have been sordid stains on America's political banners: President Grant's corrupt administration, the Tammany Hall era, the Teapot Dome scandal, and the more recent Adams-Goldfine incident.

But weren't these just drops in the pond compared to the splash Huey Long made? Surely there's a missing element—the element of human ignorance, for where there is ignorance, political indoctrination of any denomination is possible.

The Communists are successful where there is illiteracy and poverty. Albania fell under the engulfing shadow of Soviet satellites because it was the most backward country in Europe; its ignorant people were easily susceptible to Red propaganda. Similarly, this college has become one on the same note. He preyed upon ignorance.

Most television columnists agree that The Witness promises to be one of the most interesting series of the year. The technique employed is similar in one respect to The Invisible Voree Court, wherein witnesses are actors, the defense real-life attorneys.

It's a crime that The Witness couldn't really bring Huey Long back to life and not only interrogate his diseased mind, but with him after the end sentence him to rehabilitate his damaged, degraded administration. No, it's more than a crime, it's a damn shame.

In YOUR Easter Bonnet?

Cloud Hall Office Doubles As Lost-Found Headquarters

From orientation day at the beginning of each semester until that last examination of finals week, students and faculty alike start losing—and Cloud Hall-303 starts gaining.

Now C-303, which gains what is lost, is the office of the Coordinator of Educational Management, but because of its central location and the graciousness of the coordinator and his secretary, it doubles as the college's lost and found headquarters.

The office, whose coordinator is Oscar E. Anderson, is a vital nerve center in the physical operation of this vast campus and is not intended solely or even primarily to be a haven for lost articles.

Ruth Hoburg, management secretary, admits to conversation pieces growing out of the found-lost articles although there is a full share of headaches, too.

Actually, although few persons are fully aware of the possibilities, the case of the missing article follows a fairly simple pattern.

Something lost is found. It may be a pair of glasses, baby doll pajamas, a slide rule, a book, a coat, a key, an umbrella, a raincoat, a physical education class uniform, beads, jewelry, a sweatshirt—and sometimes a hat straight from last Sunday's Maverick.

The finder, being honest even if interested, turns the loot into one of three offices: S-49, the Smith Hall finance office, or, where they eventually wind up anyway, C-303.

Meanwhile, the loser, who sometimes seems to be surprisingly unaware of his loss, can file a missing-property-report with Mrs. Hoburg, who, if the article is found, informs the claimant by postcard—and, of course, there is the happy ending.

Naturally, Mrs. Hoburg hopes that finders will turn what they find into one of the three L-and-F centers, but she is more concerned with clearing C-303 of excess baggage by way of claimants meeting happily with their own.

Actually, her chief worry is over the number of persons who are locked out of something and never seek the keys that pile up in her office. Any number of fascinating possibilities hide with each key.

The Bait Is Education . . . You Want Some . . . You Enter

Seven Thousand Stalwarts Charge Gates To Knowledge

By Christopher Wise

It looks like a trap. There is a tiny entrance burrowing in under Science Hall. The bait is education. You want some, as do some 7000 others, and so you enter.

The gatekeeper, a perfect stranger, asks if you have a pen. You would like to tell him to mind his own business, but this semester you are determined to get along with people, so you say yes.

He stamps your yellow slip and sends you into the maze, telling you to follow the arrows. You go on and through and up. No sign of the promised bait yet.

You begin to get frightened. You were in a labyrinth like this once before when you joined the army. You roll up your sleeve as you walk along waiting for the man with the needle.

There is no man with a needle, only people handing you cards to fill out and then hurrying you along to follow the arrows.

If you are a girl you are waiting for the blast of air from a hole in the floor which will send your skirt up around your waist. You know where you are now. You have been in the fun house before.

The person behind you looks confident. He is an old Monopoly player and he has brought along a stack of cards which read, "Get out of jail free" and "Do not pass—go."

There is a glimpse of sunlight as you run out of Science Hall, but you are swallowed immediately by Cloud Hall. You scurry along, a slave to the arrows that guide you, you know not where.

You follow the signs all the way up the stairs to the library. The man at the door smiles and tells you to get back down the stairs and see your adviser.

You tumble back down to the adviser's lair. They give you a bingo card. It's pink. You fill it out. You win. You win a white bingo card.

You fill out your white bingo card and it is a magic pass. This time they let you in to the library. The sign says library, but it looks more like a market place in ancient Persia.

There are lines at the tables where the merchants have stacked their wares. No rugs or vases in sight, just a lot of cards with funny holes in them. Square holes. You wait for the man to hand you some round pegs and put you to work.

You must haggle with these wily merchants. Finally, you have some of their cards and you haven't paid a dime. You escape into the next room past the policeman.

(Why the policeman? Are they going to tell us to take off our clothes and get ready for a shower and then fill the room with deadly gas?)

You must write your name on each of the cards. You write it. You write it over and over and over. You are beginning to forget how it is spelled. You curse your name for being too long. You get jealous of the fellow next to you. He writes away happily. His name is Uk On.

Answer a few questions in the proper spaces. What do they mean semester? That's all it says, semester and then a blank space. You write, "Yes."

Wearily you lug all of the cards and all of the papers to the instructor at the last desk. He corrects your work. Either you get an A or you flunk. On the twelfth try he gives you your A and takes all of the papers, the cards. He takes the brown envelope, the only friend you really had with you on that crazy journey.

He gives you a registration card and you run for the door. You burst out into the sunshine. Your lungs scream for a breath of fresh air. Back you rode, one of the 7503.

You have made it. You are beaten, tired, demoralized and confused but you have made it. You have registered at City College!

Rams Top Monarchs 14-8 In Opener

Summer Pranks Cause Delay In Stadium Opening

Summer vandalism caused delay in the unveiling of the college's new 2,300-seat capacity football and track stadium. College officials hope, however, that the new athletic field will be ready by next week.

Vandals, who broke into the new stadium one night during August when fences were not erected, rolled an air compressor being used by contractors over one section of seats. This incident caused extensive damage, and, along with considerable time needed for repair, has been the main reason for delay in the long-awaited use of the new plant for athletic competition.

One other item concerned in the delay is the revamping of the facilities for track and field competition. This involves the extension of the runways for the pole vault and broad jump events.

The extensions are being made so that athletes competing in these two events will have a better area for jumping.

When completed, the new stadium will, besides a 2300 seating capacity, be able to offer exceptional press facilities with a new press box overlooking the new spacious stadium.

The stadium also will offer excellent playing conditions, along with very good seating for the viewing of the college's football and track and field competition.

Coach Grover Klemmer's football eleven, because of the delay in the completion, opened their 1960 football campaign at Balboa Field. Their October 7 home game encounter against San Mateo will also be switched to Balboa in the event that the new stadium is not yet completed.

Booters Face Tough Schedule; First Contest October 8

Coach Roy Diederichsen's soccer squad, the defending league titlists, will once again attempt to parlay the role of the rambunctious Ram into the top spot of a nine team conference which boasts this college as its sole two-year college member.

The opening tilt against Santa Clara is slated for Saturday, October 8.

The 1959 eleven, which handed the University of San Francisco its second league loss in six years but found itself unable to go to the nationals because of its two-year status, may find the situation remedied soon since Coach Diederichsen, the western representative for the national two-year college All-American selections, reveals that a national junior college league is in the making.

Every team in the Northern California circuit will be pointing for the potent local crew this year, thus disengaging them from the "sleeper" role which they used in overcoming all opposition last year, but the Ram mentor still maintains that "we should finish in the top three."

The booters, who are slated to battle California, Stanford, and perennially powerful USF for laurels in an ever-improving league, will be fielding a solid outfit headed by six first-string returnees including co-captains center-forward Jim Lynch and left-halfback Emil Ruiz, along with Ken Wright, Flavio Valinte, Dave Kingsley and Yacob Dudum.

Invaluable service is also expected from other veterans, Ed Zumot, Vincent Liu, Bill Moslem and Bill Valinte, and newcomers Al Korbus, Gary DeLong, Bogdan Papara and Ivan Amador, the latter from Nicaragua.

The boosters also play a full junior varsity schedule with the contests immediately preceding the varsity tilts which begin at 11 a.m.

VETERAN GUARD BOB URREA prepares to cut down the opposition as quarterback Gary Lewis, All-American from Polytechnic, flings the pigskin for the Rams. With such newcomers as Lewis and the Rubin twins, the locals pose a major threat for the league crown.

Football Squad Counts On New Faces; Only 12 Vets Return

With only 12 veterans returning from last year's squad, the Rams' football hopes for 1960 rest with the first year men.

Coach Grover Klemmer's first eleven is made up of nine veterans and two newcomers. Larry Pedrodalasol and Bob Streltzoff, the starting ends on the squad, both saw considerable action last year. At tackle the Rams have two hard-charging men in Andy Citizen and Leamond McGriff.

The guards are Ed Johnson and Angelo Crudo. Crudo is a newcomer from Riordan High School. The starting center is Jack Hickey, a valuable man from last year's Red and White eleven.

Klemmer's big problem in the lines is the shortage of reserves. The shortage is especially noticeable at tackle. The guards are small but fast, and only time will tell whether this lack of beef will prove a weakness.

Quarterback has been a big headache to Coach Klemmer, but the problem may be solved with the switching of Gary Lewis from fullback to number one signal caller. Lewis was an All-Northern California fullback last season at Polytechnic High School.

At fullback the Rams will have Wayne Stribling, a starter on last season's squad. Charlie Smith, a sterling performer for the Red and White eleven last year, has returned for another season. The other halfback slot will be manned by returnee Tim Moffett.

The backs are the strongest part of the local squad. Coach Klemmer has two fullbacks on the bench who are capable of playing first club on most organizations. Among the top reserve halfbacks are the Rubin twins, Stan and Steve, who proved to be real tough during their high school careers.

San Mateo, with an abundance of returnees and a few top rookies, are favored in the Big Eight Conference along with the perennial powerhouse, Stockton.

Applications Due For Mural Loop

With the hustle and bustle of registration a thing of the past, the Intramural Basketball League, one of the many extra-curricular activities sponsored by the college, is in the process of being formed.

The league, under the direction of Jack Gaddy, director of athletics, is comprised of three separate divisions, the Club Activities Board League, the Independent League, and the Inter-Fraternity Council League. Games are scheduled for various week nights at 7 and 8 p.m. in the men's and women's gymnasiums.

In order to be eligible for the league a player must have a Fall '60 Associated Student card and in turn he must write his card number on his team's respective application. A team must have at least eight signed players in order to enter.

Application for the loop may be obtained at either the men's gymnasium or in Dean Ralph Hilisman's office in Science Hall. After they are completed, applications must be submitted either to Dean Hilisman or to Associated Men Student President Bob Kelley, in his mailbox in S-140.

A deadline for entering has not been decided at this time, but it is urged that applications be submitted as soon as possible in order to avoid ineligibility for the league because of lateness in performing this duty.

Complete Schedule Of Activities Forecasts Full Block SF Season

New ideas and the anticipation of coming athletic events present an unique foundation for an eventful year for the Block SF Society, under the direction of Track Coach Lou Vasquez, who is planning a complete schedule for this semester. Newly elected officers are Emilee Ruiz, president; Jim Burk, vice president; Pete Roddy, secretary-treasurer, and Bill Richardson, athletic commissioner.

Coach Vasquez stated that "he hoped for a greater response from the lettermen than in previous semesters." He also said, "To get this response, we must have our own sports facilities."

Many observers believe that there would be greater attendance at the games if there were concession stands. This year the Block SF Society hopes to operate such a concession.

The club has had experience with concessions at high school basketball games and now believes that it can accept the responsibility for college games.

It is now up to school department authorities to determine whether the concession is permissible.

Harriers Open Season At Diablo Valley Today

The Ram harriers, 16 strong, meet Diablo Valley and Sierra at Diablo Valley this afternoon for their first meet of the season.

Tom Jennings, Bill Hotchkiss and Frank James are returning to the cross-country team, coached by Lou Vasquez.

These three veterans will be backed by 13 new striders: Charles Cobb, Robert Ely, Anthony Ferringno, Peter Giachetti, Jack Kyle, Melvin Kramer, Robert Mannheimer, James Nigra, Don Nelson, Leon Stroughter, Alvin Waxman and Weldinger.

Lewis' Final Quarter Score Averts Loss; Defense Sparkles

By Frank Dunne

Mel Canavero's strong arm and Gary Lewis' powerful legs led the Rams to a 14-8 victory over the Los Angeles Valley Monarchs in the locals' debut at Balboa Stadium last Friday.

Lewis started the game at the quarterback spot, but was moved to fullback after the Monarchs scored early in the first quarter. Canavero came on to engineer the first Ram score.

Gridders Battle Southland Foes In Sore-Eye City

Vying for their first victory against Los Angeles City College since 1955, the Ram grid forces are slated to meet the Cub eleven at sore-eyed Los Angeles this Friday at 8 p.m.

Last season the Klemmermen came closer to victory than they had in a long time when they were edged out 7-6 by a determined LA squad. This season, with the addition of many newcomers, hopes are that the tables will be turned in favor of the Rams. One of the rookies is Gary Lewis, ace fullback for the championship Poly High squad.

This season's squad will have 11 returning vets such as rough and tough Andy Citizen and Wayne Stribling. The probable starting lineup will contain nine veterans.

This will be the 23rd time that Ram elevens have pitted themselves against the Cubs. Of the previous 22 frays the Rams have won nine while drawing only one, and the southland squad has won 12. This victory, to say the least, would be a moral boosting one for the Red and White.

With their contest with Los Angeles Valley behind them, the Rams have gained a little more experience and know-how, and it is hoped that the knowledge gained by this encounter will be of benefit to them.

Coed Activity Program Gets Underway

Sign-up sheets are posted in the women's gymnasium for the Fall semester array of coed sports. Highlighting this semester's schedule of events will be an all-college sports day to be held at the college on Saturday, October 29, and San Mateo Sports Day on Saturday, December 3.

Sports sponsored by the Recreation Association, the official name for the coed sports organization, include badminton, folk dancing, modern dance, fencing, volleyball, archery and bowling, to be offered later.

Canavero passed to Tim Moffett for the extra points and the Rams had the edge, 14-8.

With ten minutes till the end of the game the Rams were content to defend their lead—and defend they did. They allowed the Monarchs to have the ball for only ten plays in the remaining minutes and the smogmen netted a grand total of minus seven yards for their efforts. But this was nothing new for the Monarchs for they were held to a minus 21 yards for the entire second half.

Not content with just driving the visitors back the locals racked up some yardage of their own. Ram backs Rex Childs and Piggee gained 36 and 48 yards respectively in the fourth quarter.

The smog-men's score was set up by a costly Red and White fumble on their own 37. Five plays later the Monarchs went ahead on a 16-yard pass from quarterback Denny Paul to end Jim Zar. Paul ran across the extra points to give the Southlanders an 8-0 bulge.

After the kick-off to the Rams on their own 28, they charged back up the field in three plays to score. Two running plays gained only five yards, so Canavero chose to gamble on a long pass. He sent flanker Ed Piggee sprinting down field and hit him between three Monarch defenders. Piggee spun free from his pursuers and raced in for the counter.

The try for the two extra points failed so the Rams trailed at the end of the first quarter 8-6.

Both teams spent the second and third quarter in the middle of the field, neither one getting inside the other 20-yard line. The only serious threat came in the second quarter when a hard-charging Monarch lineman was able to block a Ram punt on the locals' 44.

But the Red and White made up for the error by stopping the Southlanders cold on the 29.

During the third quarter the Rams controlled the ball for a majority of the time but a few costly penalties prevented any point scoring.

Early in the fourth quarter, however, the Rams' luck changed. From his 43, Canavero tossed a two-yard swing pass to the hard-running Lewis who hauled it in and drove over everything in sight for the next 45-6 yards and scored the Rams go-ahead touchdown.

Space Age Olympics Need Modern Flavor

By Frank Dunne

THE QUADRENNIAL World-Wide Propaganda and Athletic Festival has just ended in Rome. Participating countries laid their reputations on the straining bodies of their entrants. Those who won their events increased the status of the homeland, while those who failed received a gush of bad publicity for themselves.

Increased pressure has been placed on the International Olympic Committee to modernize the games and replace some of the old events with newer more realistic endeavors. The result would not only give the Olympics a modern flavor, but a higher degree of drama and intrigue.

Suggestions have been pouring in from around the world with proposed new events. But it's felt that if the games are to be up-dated why not go all the way, with such events as:

BULLET DODGE, 440 yard: Each entrant crawls down the track under heavy machine gun fire aimed about 12 inches above the runway. The first man to cross the finish line unscathed wins; in case of a tie there will be a rematch with the guns lowered and the judges supplied with tape-measures.

SKY-DIVING: This sport has advanced far in recent years and has now become an international sport, and with a few minor changes it could be adopted by the Olympics. Instead of the usual low level jump it could be increased to a high altitude event in which the longest jump wins.

RADIATION HURDLES, 180 yard: This event would give a novel approach to the method employed in the hurdles today. The race is run over the standard course but the hurdles would contain exposed amounts of U-235. The idea is to clear the obstacles as fast as possible, and the winner is determined by the lowest radiation count.

INTERCONTINENTAL ROCKET SHOT: Teams of scientists and gunnery men from each country would compete in this pyrotechnic event, with each country trying to send its missile the farthest. The launching site would be Vandenberg Air Force Base and the projectiles would be shot over the Pacific.

Negotiations are proposed with the Japanese and Chinese governments to send their people on a two-week holiday. The only obstacle to the plan is a place to send them.

COBALT BOMB DROP: This event will be held on the last day of the games, by necessity. It should add the final touch to the event that will long be remembered in the hearts of the survivors.

Egri Nears Completion Of Cabinet Appointments With Keane, Vukasin In Key Posts

Associated Student President Joe Egri reported today that all AS cabinet posts but two have been filled as the student government organization embarked upon the business of the new semester.

The offices of Parliamentarian and Election Commissioner are the ones remaining to be filled. Egri said he believed that this was one of the most qualified and most capable cabinets the college has had in a long time.

Egri pointed out that the appointive offices have been filled with a cross section of experienced and new students.

These officials are Secretary of the Associated Students Donna O'Leary, Finance Committee Chairman Bill Keane, Corresponding Secretary Rosemarie Haas, Information Service Chairman Judy Day, Alumni Liaison Officer Judy Webb, Student Card Sales Chairman Carolyn Vukasin, Campus Affairs Coordinator Ginger Chin, Men's Athletic Commissioner Bill Richardson, Rally Commissioner Maralyn Santos, Club Activities Board Chairman Jim Bush, Inter-Fraternity Council President Gerald Kucserka, Publications Board Chairman Bob Pacini, Publicity Chairman Herb Batz, Campus Police Chief Mike Hancock, Recreation Association Commissioner Jan White, and Inter-Sorority President Joann Costello.

Speaking for his cabinet, Egri welcomed both old students and new students to the college and invited them to attend council meetings on Tuesdays and Thursdays in Bungalow 3 at 12 noon to participate in the student government.

AS Card Merits Special Student Rate To Can-Can

Special low student rates are now being offered for admission to Cole Porter's Can-Can, currently playing at the Alexandria theater, Geary Boulevard and 18th Avenue.

Upon presentation of an Associated Student card, students will be admitted for $1.00 (compared to regular prices of $1.80 to $2.50) to any matinee performance.

Matinees are at 2:30 p.m. today, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday.

Can-Can, a musical comedy, stars Frank Sinatra, Shirley MacLaine, Louis Jordan, Maurice Chevalier and Juliet Prowse. The film features such songs as I Love Paris, Maidens Typical Of France, C'est Magnifique and many others. The Todd-AO production will end its run at the Alexandria this Sunday, October 2.

The White Headed Boy Opens Little Theater Season Oct. 7

Thespians Plan Four Weekend Showings Of Sparkling Comedy

The first production of this semester's drama department will be The White Headed Boy, by Lennox Robinson, Michael Griffin, drama director, said today.

Beginning Friday, October 7, at 8 p.m., the play will also be shown on the following dates: October 8, 14, 15, 21, 22, 28 and 29.

The plot involves Dennis, portrayed by Wayne Elbe, the baby of a large family, who has failed his examinations at the University of Dublin for three consecutive times. Disturbed at his conduct, the family plans to send Dennis to Canada.

Complications set in—the boy has promised to marry Delia—which tend to liven up the already delightful comedy.

The remainder of the cast includes Martha Ross as Mrs. Geoghegan, Fred Fisher as George, Michael Coran as Peter, Ann Vallerga as Kate, Janet Carter as Baby, Robert Rosenblatt as Dongough, Randy Jones as John Duffy, Leah Pashoian as Aunt Ellen and Pat Brosnan as Delia.

Although there will be a few additions later this semester, the production staff has been set up as follows: technical director will be Chuck Huntley, the job of assistant director will be filled by Steve Dorian, Cave DeMartini and Dave Arrow will take charge of the lighting, and costume design and props will be directed by Martha Ross and Marge Rabie.

College Hours Feature Variety Of Activities

Rallies and lectures are major activities on this semester's schedule of College Hours, 10 to 10:40 a.m. each Friday between 9 and 10 o'clock classes. Other college activities and the meeting of clubs and organizations also are held at this time.

College Hour activities for the semester are as follows: October 7, early College Hour for pre-registration; October 14, rally; October 21, lecture series; October 28, club meetings.

November 4, rally - Homecoming Day, lecture series; November 11, holiday; November 18, pledge week games; November 25, holiday.

December 2, Club Activities Board rally, lecture series; December 9, double College Hour, Christmas Concert; December 16, 23, 30, holidays.

January 6, election rally, lecture series; January 13, club meetings; January 20 and 27, finals week.

Honor Society Boasts Fifty-Five Scholars

Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college's scholastic honor society, has a current enrollment of 55 students thus far in the semester, William Richardson, AGS sponsor, announced today.

To qualify for membership, students must have no final grade below a C in the previous semester while completing at least 12 units with at least 42 grade-points or 15 to 17 or more units with at least 45 grade-points.

Special activities for this semester included a speech by Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, on September 16 in C-232 during College Hour, and one by Alan Johnson, associate dean of students at San Francisco State College, scheduled for Friday, October 28.

Officers of Alpha Gamma Sigma are Juanita Schaeffer, president; Max Savin, vice president, and Catherine Martinez, secretary and treasurer.

Club Cavalcade

Organizations Hold Elections, Plan Activities

By Pat Perkins

MANY of the campus clubs already have begun to plan new and exciting activities for the Fall semester. Under the leadership of crops of new officers these organizations hope for a successful harvest of fall activities.

As Inter-Sorority Council rushing is rapidly approaching, the sisters of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority are looking forward to their fireside, luncheon and coffee preference hour.

In a recent election, Carolyn Vukasin was voted president of the sorority, followed by Mary Ann Grandemange, vice president; Karen Ballard, pledge mistress; Barbara Lerman, treasurer; Kathy Henderson, recording secretary; Karen 'Gama, corresponding secretary; Paula Wonderley, historian; Betty Rice, sergeant-at-arms, and Twila Meyer, custodian.

The college's Newman Club will host this semester's province leadership school, to be held October 8 and 9 in Smith Hall. The purpose of this gathering is to develop leaders within the various California Newman Clubs. Discussion groups, guest speakers and a dinner-dance will highlight the weekend. There will be a special meeting tonight at St. Emydius Parish at 7:30. All interested students are welcome to attend.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity is looking forward to an active semester under the guidance of its newly elected president, Rich Latreille. The fraternity's social and service program was kicked off with the painting of Sammy the Ram and plans for the annual Bluebook Blues dance.

The other officers include Rich Cate, vice president; Bob Mulhall, treasurer; Rudy Hornung, recording secretary; Carlos Hernandez, corresponding secretary; Dave Tullus, historian, and Jerry Herrmann, parliamentarian.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity has also had its elections. Charlie Hanks holds the presidency, Bob Walsh is vice president, John Azzaro the pledge master, and Terry Alciati is the new treasurer.

The other officers are Sherm Booth, corresponding secretary; Alex Bobroff, recording secretary; Frank Ternullo, sergeant-at-arms; Joe Moreno, alumni liaison; Norm Kalman, historian, and Bob Robertson, custodian.

The Fall semester officers of Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity are T. S. Sicilc, president; Hoit Scott, vice president; Dick Trauner, treasurer; Pete Pedrotti, Jr., social secretary; Roland LaPelle, chapter secretary; Rodger Lapartti, historian, and Kymond Gee, sergeant-at-arms.

Club news must be submitted to The Guardsman office, S-304, by noon Wednesdays.

More Applicants Than Jobs'—Amori

Job applicants far outnumber the number of job opportunities reaching the office of Joseph A. Amori, director of placement here.

Amori has handled over 500 applications since the start of the current semester.

Employees are setting high standards for the people they will accept, especially for office work. Minimum speed for typists is 50 words per minute.

Anyone seeking a position taking shorthand is expected to have a speed of at least 90 words per minute. Jobs that require work with office machines or bookkeeping and accounting procedures cannot be filled by unskilled applicants.

There are some service station openings, but the employment market is not expected to break until the last two weeks of October when some businesses should begin hiring and training personnel in anticipation of the Christmas rush.

As in the past, one of the major factors in student placement is hours. Most jobs require the student to report for work by 1 p.m. and stay on the job until 5 or 6 p.m.

Stricter union contracts and overtime regulations have pretty well ruled out the 4 p.m. to midnight shift of the past few years.

Campus Police Crack Down On Student Parking Violators

A crackdown on students who are parking their cars in the wrong areas is currently being carried out under the direction of Mike Hancock, Campus Police chief.

Students are parking in the dirt areas and along the rails in the parking lot below the cafeteria and the lot below Cloud Hall, Hancock announced. Students are also warned not to park along the curb next to the horticulture area.

"If the students are not sure of where to park they should remember that only the marked stalls are acceptable to park in," Hancock explained.

18 Card Sellers Vie For Top Slot

Sales of Associated Student membership cards are past the half-way mark and continue to be brisk, according to Carolyn Vukasin, card sales chairman.

While AS cards continue to be sold, approximately 18 salesmen are vying for top honors in the number of sales. Prizes to the top salesmen selling the most cards will be awarded at the CAB dance to be held in Smith Hall Friday night.

To date more than 2200 cards have been sold, Miss Vukasin said, bringing the goal of 4000 closer to reality. Card sales for all of last semester totaled only 1800.

Mindful of the fact that many students are here for their first semester, Miss Vukasin stated, "The people who buy the cards are the ones who will benefit from them."

The benefits, she noted, pertain to reduction of prices to games and dances as well as discounts on many items. A major advantage, Miss Vukasin added, is the use of various parking areas near the college.

Additional reasons concern the college's sororities, fraternities and other organizations that wish to be budgeted or allowed representation on the Club Activities Board, the Inter-Sorority Council or the Inter-Fraternity Council.

For each organization to receive a budget allotment from the Student Council, all its members are required to buy an AS card. Representation on the CAB, ISC or IFC requires that 51 per cent of its members be cardholders.

GI Report Due At Vet Office By October 4

All veterans attending City College under the Korean GI Bill may file their monthly reports in the Veterans Administration office, S-134, starting this Friday, September 30.

Robin L. Dunn, Veterans Affairs counselor, said that the men will have from September 30 to October 4 to sign their IBM punch cards, which have replaced the printed forms.

Cards should be filled out completely, including any change in marriage status, address, or such.

Judo Kai Invites Enthusiasts To Join

Regardless of previous experience all men are invited to attend a meeting of the Judo Kai (Society) in S-113 during College Hour this Friday.

At first the club will hold orientation meetings, but later the organizers of the society expect that the sport itself will be taught and practiced. The two main instructors will probably be William Paul and Rod Sinclair, both of whom hold black belts in this sport.

The judo presented will not be the familiar combat judo as taught in the armed forces, but Kadokan (sport) judo practiced in Japan.

New Stenographic System Set Up To Aid Students In Manuscript, Theme Typing

City College students will be among the very first in the country to use a revolutionary new stenographic system started October 1.

Probably the greatest innovation in writing since the invention of the typewriter, it is known as the Dialatheme Club.

It is a system, practically automatic, by which a student (or instructor) dictates his work into his own telephone and receives a finished manuscript by hand delivery.

This system, combining all of the advantages of having a secretary and a dictaphone, also contains a most unusual feature which is quite unique and makes it invaluable to students.

It does not correct the spelling, grammar or word usage of the author. The student gets a finished product that is just as much his own as if he had typed it himself.

The mechanics of the operation are fairly simple and quite foolproof.

A Dialatheme Club member simply calls a specified phone number any day before 4 o'clock in the afternoon. After giving his name and membership number he starts his dictation.

At 8 o'clock the following morning a draft of the dictated material is delivered to the writer here at the college. He has the morning to make corrections in the copy.

At noon the corrected draft is picked up and whisked back to the Club where a final copy of the work is typed on the latest model electric machines.

On the second morning, the final manuscript is delivered to the college at 8 a.m. Two copies are given to the writer.

The club keeps on file in its offices both the original recording that was dictated over the telephone and the first draft with the original corrections made by the writer. This, of course, protects both the club and the student from any future accusation that the club is doing the student's work.

For example, if the student writing dictates an "ain't," and leaves it uncorrected when he sends the draft back for typing, he will have an "ain't" typed out in the final work.

Use of this unique service is restricted to a membership in the club. The charge for membership is $5 per semester. For the actual work done the member pays 90 cents for a 350 to 400 word page. (Title pages and less than half of second pages are on the house.)

Any member who uses $10 worth of the service in a semester is refunded his membership fee.

Handling memberships here at the college is John F. Sullivan, a student in elementary education for the handicapped. He may be reached on the campus or by calling SKyline 2-8505.

Village Site Of Oct. 21 Frosh Ball; 2 Bands To Play

Plans for the semi-annual Frosh Ball to be held at the Village, Columbus Avenue and Lombard Street, on Friday, October 21, include two separate dancing areas, each with its own band. Dick Reinhart and his orchestra will provide the music upstairs, while the Dixieland Five play jazz downstairs.

Admission is free to students with Associated Student membership cards and $2.50 for those without. With the ball open to the entire college, Gary Wilkening, Freshman Class president, expects to see The Village filled to capacity with 850 couples.

Dress is semi-formal with suits for the men and cocktail dresses for the women. Corsages, which were once discouraged in the past, are now left to the gentleman's discretion, Wilkening said.

The Freshman Class officers responsible for the ball and working with Wilkening are Denise Plamenatz, Dianne Hardesty and Carolee Fromm, vice president, secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Contra Costa Game Rally Set For C-Hour, Oct. 14

Preceding the afternoon home football game against Contra Costa will be a rally, scheduled during College Hour Friday, October 14, in front of the Redwood Ram, according to Marilyn Santos, Rally Commissioner.

Other Rally Committee officers are John Rosenberg, Sue Brill, Marcia McNelly and Virginia Zane.

Pre-Reg. Friday Shifts Time For Special C-Hour

Counseling appointments and registration numbers for students planning to return to the college next semester will be given this Friday in a special College Hour from 7:45 to 8:45 a.m. in the library, Counselor Walter McCloud announced last week.

The students earliest to register for counseling appointments will receive top priority when they register for the spring semester. Later numbers will be treated accordingly. Students will receive confirmation of their registration numbers from their counselors when they keep their appointments, McCloud explained.

A pre-requisite to this registration requirement is that each participating student must have obtained and filled out an open-hour form before entering the library. To avoid the former practice of students obtaining counseling appointments for their sleepy or lazy friends, only one form will be accepted from each applicant.

These forms are obtainable in the library, and at the entrances to Smith and Science Halls.

Applicants will then be given postcards which are to be self-addressed by the student and returned with the open-hour form. Students will receive these cards in the mail approximately one week before their appointment.

On pre-registration day, a special College Hour schedule will be in effect, and no other activities will be scheduled.

Following pre-registration, the 8 o'clock classes will meet from 9:10 to 9:50, 9 o'clock classes from 10 to 10:40, 10 o'clock classes will meet from 10:50 to 11:30, 11 o'clock classes from 11:40 to 12:20, 12 o'clock classes from 12:30 to 1:10, and 1 o'clock classes from 1:20 to 2 p.m. Beginning with the 2 o'clock classes, the regular schedule will once again be in effect.

In the past the prime criticism aimed at pre-registration has been the practice of latecomers cutting into the line. McCloud stressed emphatically that a student who permits someone to enter illegally the line is just as guilty as the aggresor.

"There is no way to control cutting in line, but the administration is taking every precaution against such actions," he added.

Students who fail to attend pre-registration will have to report to S-160 in order to obtain their number before the end of the semester, and McCloud warned that the later they report the later they register in February.

Long Lines, Fast Vanishing Books Show Record Sales For Ramporium

The Ramporium, student bookstore, is running ahead in sales this year, although final tabulations are not as yet available. All indications, however—the lines have been longer, the books are disappearing faster, according to Dick Main, store manager—lead to this conclusion.

For the first time in history, the lines have had to be temporarily halted at times to prevent congestion inside the store. The apparent reason is a six per cent increase in enrollment, Main said. Another significant point is that students were buying more heavily during registration week.

When asked how many books he actually expected to sell, Main said, "Everyone will not purchase books, regardless of what the instructors say; therefore, it is impossible to say.

"There is no way of knowing how many students will get their texts from others who have finished the course."

As an example, Main said that where the college had 525 students enrolled in Math. 51 last year, it now has 626. This would tend to explain why students have had difficulty in securing some of their texts. Main assured students, however, that they are being reordered and delivered as fast as is humanly possible.

One particular shipment, for example, was ordered last Wednesday and delivery was made Monday morning. Orders for shipments are wired for special handling, thus providing for delivery twice as fast.

All of the profits over and above operational expenses go to the Associated Students, so that in patronizing the bookstore, students are ultimately helping themselves. Main also said he believes that students here benefit more from the operation of the bookstore than those in any other college in California.

Main also explained the procedure to be followed by students returning books. He said it consists of three steps. Students must have a drop slip for the courses being eliminated. In addition, they must also have the sales slip, and if possible, the Ramporium tag on the cover of the books.

Official Publication of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco

VOLUME 51 SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA — WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1960 NUMBER 2

"SOUTHWARD HO!" exclaims Associated Student President Joe Egri to Georgine Peterson, AS vice president, as the two discuss plans for the forthcoming California Junior College Student Government Association regional conference at San Mateo. — Guardsman photo by Bob Martyn.

Egri Appoints Top Delegates To Northern Regional Conference

Associated Student President Joe Egri disclosed last week that plans are nearing completion for the college's participation in the Northern Regional Conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association.

Headed by Egri, the delegation will leave here early in the morning for the day-long conference on Saturday, October 15, in San Mateo. This meet will be a preview for the State Conference later in the semester.

Representing the college in the various workshops will be Egri and Gary Wilkening in Student Government, Jim Bush and Bob Kelley in Associated Men Students, Margaret Lindstrom and Carol Hinkson in Associated Women Students, Bob Ross in Athletics, Judy Webb and Herb Batz in Public Relations, Bill Keane and Bob Perkins in Finance, Georgene Peterson and Carolyn Vukasin in Campus Activities, Donna O'Leary and Rosemary Haas in Secretarial, Judy Day in Resolutions and Recommendations, and Bob Pacini in Publications.

In addition to the regular workshops, an evaluation team of two members will go to the meet in an attempt to determine the value of the contributions of delegates of the college.

Egri will fill the position of chairman as well as delegate in the Student Government Workshop. A chairman for each of the workshops will come from different colleges throughout the northern region.

Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser at the college, will act as adviser to the same workshop.

The delegates will discuss problems which are common to all the colleges in an effort to find satisfactory solutions and be sent to the state conference. There, in the form of resolutions, the problems will again be discussed and acted upon.

Egri said that after the state conference, resolutions could become policy decided upon by the Board of Education or, if important enough, even state laws.

Coed Recovers Hat, Sets New Fashion?

The owner of the "unusual" hat pictured in last week's issue of The Guardsman claimed her lost possession before noon of publication day.

Judy Barkan, second semester student, lost the hat last semester. Her mother had made it for a special party and then lent it to Miss Barkan for a sorority rush and lost it. The hat found its way into the lost-and-found office, C-303.

Ruth Hoburg, secretary in charge of the office, was so "intrigued" with its bizarre appearance that she kept it all summer.

The search finally ended when Miss Barkan rushed in to Mrs. Hoburg's office Wednesday and exclaimed, "That's my hat!"

Usher Opportunities Open To 100 Students

Opera ushering opportunities are open until October 27 for 100 full time students of the college.

Four ushers will be sent to each evening and matinee performance, but to meet the necessary requirements for ushering it is necessary to obtain a pass from Dean Mary Golding in S-150, where instructions as to proper attire and duties are also available.

Dean Golding urged students who "love the opera or just enjoy the music," to get their passes now.

Desert Isle Motif Set For Friday Shipwreck Dance

Smith Hall will be converted into a desert island, complete with swaying palm leaves, fish nets and a sunken boat, to accommodate Phi Beta Delta fraternity's 11th annual Shipwreck Dance, set for this Friday night from 8:30 to midnight.

Tickets, at $1.50 per couple, can now be purchased from any Phi Beta Delta fraternity member on the campus, or at the door Friday night. Music will be supplied by Sol Vance and his orchestra.

"Grub" attire—shorts, sweat-shirts, and the like—will be acceptable for this, "the swingingest affair going," according to Tom Kreps, Fall semester president of the fraternity.

Thomas Dutcher, who has been faculty sponsor of the 13-year-old fraternity for the past three years, and Elmer Patterson will be among the faculty patrons of the dance.

In President Kreps' cabinet this semester are Mike Smith, vice president; Jerry O'Brien, recording secretary; John Rojas, corresponding secretary; Dan Borst, treasurer; Noel Murray, pledge-master; Nick Allen, sergeant-at-arms; Lyne Lemdolla, eastretian, and Ross Rellas, parliamentarian.

In addition to sponsoring this annual dance, the fraternity, represented by the president, faculty sponsor and dean of men, presents a service award at the end of each semester to the organization which contributed the most to the college and community.

White Headed Boy Opens Little Theater Season

Ballycolman, a tiny town in Ireland, will be temporarily transplanted to the basement of Science Hall on Friday night when the drama department presents The White Headed Boy, Lennex Robinson's sparkling Irish comedy.

October 7 begins the first performance of the semester, which will continue through October 8, 14, 15, 21, 22, 28 and 29. Curtain rises at 8 p.m. on every performance.

Admission is free with an Associated Student card or $1 otherwise.

Comprising the cast, with only 16 days of rehearsal, are Wayne Elbe as Dennis, Martha Ross as Mrs. Geoghegan, Fred Fisher as George, Michael Coran as Peter, Ann Vallerga as Kate, Janet Carter as Baby, Robert Rosenblatt as Dongough, Randy Jones as John Duffy, Leah Pashoian as Aunt Ellen and Pat Brosnan as Delia.

The play opens as Dennis, the baby of a large family, has failed his third consecutive semester at The University of Dublin. As punishment, his relatives try to send Dennis to Canada as a ditch digger. Comedy skyrockets as Dennis, using his relatives' pride, completely twists the situation around.

In the end, Dennis neither goes to Canada as a ditch digger nor gets punished; instead, he lives happily ever after—on his relatives' money!

Ross Hits 800 Mark In AS Student Card Sales

Bob Ross, Pat Crone and Judy Day were awarded the top three prizes in the Associated Student card sales contest at the Club Activities Board dance last Friday.

First prize for Ross, who sold 800 cards, was a transistor radio. The second prize, given to Miss Crone for 182 sales, was a pair of tickets to Sunrise At Campobello.

Judy Day received a long-playing record certificate from the El Rey Music Shop on Ocean Avenue as the third prize for selling 166 cards.

As of last week, Carolyn Vukasin, card sales chairman, disclosed that approximately 2600 cards had been sold.

Columnist's Insults Misfire, Fizzle Out On Launching Pad

IN A RECENT COLUMN titled, of all things, The Neutral Corner, which appeared in the publication of the other public college located in the city, there appeared a claim for the football championship of the City and County of San Francisco.

Aside from the fact that no such title exists and even though the writer of the column seems to be declaring himself ahead of the new "league," we do not object to his staking a claim on such a title and would welcome a comparison of past records in football and other athletics.

What we do object to, however, are other remarks in the column which might be considered by students here as entirely uncalled for, in bad taste, and even a bit insulting.

In addition to being extremely ambiguous and muddled in parts, the column asserts that this college, a rival for the "title," is something less than an institution of higher education, and the writer declares that this allows us to produce a better football team because we have more time to "hit the bags than crack the books."

Of course, these rather amusing conclusions are erroneous and absurd.

Inasmuch as students of the college have compiled an extraordinarily fine record at many four-year institutions, including the other public college located in San Francisco, we can maintain that the writer is not only making some pretty petty remarks about this college, its students and its faculty, but is also taking a slap at his own school.

If we may borrow a few lines from Shakespeare, the whole piece may be aptly described as "a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, and signifying nothing."

Proper Planning Key To Future

THE MUCH TALKED ABOUT problem of mushrooming enrollments in our schools and especially in our institutions of higher education certainly seems evident at the college this semester with the combined day time and night time attendance greatly surpassing the 7000 mark.

With an enrollment as large and as diverse as ours, competition is certain to be keen, even fierce; therefore, it is important and vital that each student knows exactly where he stands in regard to his plans, his hopes and his goals in college.

It is good to plan for the future, but more practical, however, to concentrate on the present.

Because the semester is still comparatively young, then, it is still not too late for the constructively critical student to take a realisic look at his abilities, his strong points, his weaknesses.

The often-used expression condemning the use of flattery as a means of advancement applies most severely here, for unless the student is completely honest and objective with himself, he simply is not facing the academic facts of life.

He has nothing to gain by fooling himself but disillusion and disappointment in the future.

To avoid this he should ask himself now if his current program has been planned prudently and practically in relation to his interests, in relation to requirements for upper division studies, and most important of all, in relation to his abilities.

To put it bluntly, will the current course of study pay off a year from now at a four-year university or ten years from now in business or labor?

Thoreau, whose name is certainly familiar about any campus, once said something to the effect that if a man marches to the step of a different tune it is because he hears the beat of a different drummer.

March to the tune you hear, and step lively, but don't be afraid to slow down occasionally to determine if that beat is as loud and clear as ever.

Now there's a thought to sleep on—but not in class!

Students In Real 'Jam' Session

Jammed. That's the word for it. Just plain jammed.

You know, like crowded; like no room, like too many kids; like, well, like jammed.

The buses and streetcars stopping at the City College station, they're, that's right—you guessed it, jammed. They're jammed with lunches, mostly squashed. They're jammed with tennis rackets, with purses, with books and with kids, kids and more kids.

Tramp! Tramp! Tramp! They're all marching. They're marching to class. They're marching to zoology, to psychology, to sociology and to every other "ology."

They march between classes, too. And the halls and stairways are—can you guess?—jammed. You don't go where you want to go; you go where the greatest percentage of the mob wishes to go.

Where do they go?

They go mostly to the cafeteria, and that's really jammed. Every chair, every table, every foot of open space gone. Just kids. So you eat lunch standing up in the middle of the floor, or you eat lunch wandering about trying to find a clearing in the human forest.

(Pass the bicarbonate, please.)

They jam the bookstore. It's now the jamporium. They jam the library. Move over Dante, Plato, Shakespeare and make room.

They jam the reservoir parking lot; they jam the counseling offices and, of course, they jam the gymnasiums.

Everything is rush, rush. Kids don't even finish talking; they leave off right in the middle of.

When fruit is "jammed" it's whipped into a thick, sticky mass that doesn't preserve its shape.

Do you feel like a strawberry right now?

The College Big Four

Division Of Instruction Here Benefits Every Student

By Richard Shields

Several thousand students pour through the doors of City College twice a year with one thought in mind—registration. All but a few accomplish their aim and look forward to a few months of study; for most, the semester goes by without a hitch.

A little-lauded organization, housed in Cloud Hall and responsible only to the president, resolves the chaos that would be college life without systematic planning.

The Division of Instruction, headed by Co-ordinator Lloyd D. Luckmann and Deans of Instruction Louis F. Batmale, William K. Mayo and Edward E. Sandys, initiates, directs and maintains an administerial service which benefits every student, every instructor, and every other organization in the college—that of order.

Everything having to do with instruction, good or bad, can be traced through the small office on the second floor of Cloud Hall. There, owing to intensive study and preparation, plans are made for the propagation of the good and the removal of the bad.

Among the many duties of the Division of Instruction are development of curriculums, evaluation of instruction, maintenance of academic standards, placement of graduates through liaison with business, approval of textbooks, supervision of the library, preparation of the schedule of classes, scheduling of final examinations, participation in the selection of the teaching staff, assignment of instructors to departments and courses, and supervision of the publication of the College Catalogue.

Luckmann has been with the college since its opening in 1935, rising from a position as an instructor to his present job as co-ordinator. He has been an instructor at the University of San Francisco, State University of Iowa, San Mateo Junior College, State College, and the University of California.

Since coming to the college, Luckmann has been an instructor, the assistant to the president, and dean of instruction. He is the author of Elements Of Public Speaking and has been a partner in a management consultants firm since 1950.

Batmale came to the college in 1948. He has been an instructor, assistant dean of student activities, and dean of instruction successively. He was also an intercollegiate basketball referee for 20 years.

Sandys has been with the college since 1935. Before that he was an instructor at Santa Monica Junior College. He has been an instructor, dean of men, and dean of instruction, his present position, since coming to the college.

Mayo began his career at the college in 1936. Experience at the University of California and the University of San Francisco helped to prepare him for his present job as dean of instruction. He has been an instructor here as well as departmental

Foresight

By Paul Plansky

ALTHOUGH the shrinking Giants aren't in the spotlight today, an inescapable fever grips the city with anticipation. It's the same injection that is stimulating America's sixth sense (sports) and is attracting millions to the opening of baseball's big week of the year—the colorful, classic climax of the season. God bless the World Series!

The Bues and Bombers battle for the world crown of diamond renown. Pittsburgh's Pirates are tyros in this Series business, but aren't pushovers; the Yankees, with "previous" experience and a veteran line-up, take on the favored role.

Now a strange enigma creeps into our belfry and is taking batting practice at the feeble brain within: It echoes loudly, where was that familiar Stengelese Steamroller last year? What happened to the Yanks? The team itself, which is living on its "pennant pensions," must be wondering, too . . .

1959—The New York Yankees weren't playing in the World Series! The complete collapse of the seemingly invincible Stengel dynasty shook the baseball world to its fixed foundations. At least the pattern seemed to be fixed in the Yankee-monopolized American League.

Except for the '48 and '54 upsets by the Cleveland Indians, no challenging club had hitherto knocked the "champs" off their pennant pinnacle more than once in the past 19 years. The Yankee record since 1949 reads: nine pennants in ten tries.

What caused this absolute turnabout? Well, the sports scribes and avid fanatics of the national pastime claimed that (1) the spark plugs of the team (Mantle, Skowron and Turley) didn't ignite whatsoever, (2) the perennial favorites just had too much confidence, and (3) the rejuvenated Chicago White Sox, sporting a rock-hard defense and steady pitching staff, had enough not only to turn the tide, but create a tidal wave. Chicago had won its first pennant since 1919.

In 1955 Douglass Wallop wrote his best-selling novel, The Year The Yankees Lost The Pennant. The fact that its title connoted such a timely impossibility increased its selling success.

It tells the tale of a die-hard Washington Senator fan, Joe Boyd, who, by selling his soul to the devil (Mr. Applegate), can be transformed into Joe Hardy (baseball star first class) and lead the Senators out of the American League cellar to a pennant victory.

Naturally, the Nats do dethrone the Yankees, and even more dramatically. Joe Boyd is saved from Satan. As a consequence, though, he is barred from playing in the World Series against the Dodgers as the phenomenal Joe Hardy; nevertheless, Mr. Applegate finds another Hardy, because as he discloses, "I-hate the Bums."

The amazing connection between Wallop's book and the '59 season seems more than coincidental. The author used 1958 for his story's setting—ONLY ONE YEAR TOO SOON!

Jules Verne's predictions set forth in Around The World In Eighty Days, 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea, and From The Earth To The Moon are either reality or will be in the future. Now, if Mr. Wallop could have not only "predicted" the right year of the Yankee plunge but also named the Kentucky Derby winner, we could have had a modern Verne among us. But, also, he failed.

Ram Striders Win Four-Way Meet

Ram harriers passed by Diablo Valley, Oakland and Sierra Colleges last Wednesday, as Frank James led them to victory in their first meet of the season.

James came in second with a time of 18:04 right behind Larry Pavellones of Diablo Valley, who ran a respectable 17:56 and first place.

Other striders turning in good performances were Leon Stroughter, fourth, with a time of 18:15; Alvin Waxman, seventh at 18:43, and John Weidinger, ninth, timed at 18:49.

Other men competing were Bill Hotchkiss, 13th; Anthony Ferringno, 14th; Jaek Kyle, 16th; Pete Giachetti, 22nd, and Jim Gallon, 23rd.

The final score was the Rams 35. Close behind was Diablo Valley with 41, then Oakland with 70 and Sierra with 79.

Rams Open Title Quest With Bulldog Encounter

By Warren Downes

An aggressive and fiery Ram football squad opens its 1960 Big Eight Conference season this Friday at 2:30 p.m. on their home gridiron against a rough and tough San Mateo eleven.

The Ram squad, remembering last season's 56-14 massacre at the hands of the Bulldogs, will be out to regain the Tom-Tom trophy, which goes to the winner of the football game every year.

Coach Grover Klemmer's crew proved to be quite strong, in their first two contests. In need of a quarterback at the start of the season, Klemmer found a good signal caller and a fine passer in Mel Canevaro.

Gary Lewis, Wayne Stribling, Charlie Smith, Rex Child, Tim Moffett and Ed Piggee showed well in the Ram backfield in the two preseason games.

The Ram line, anchored around veteran center Jack Hickey, is tough but not too large. Guards Angelo Crudo and Ed Johnson are small but make up for this with aggressiveness and speed.

Andy Citizen and Leamond McGriff are a pair of strong tackles. Larry Pedrodalasol and Bob Streltzoff received valuable experience during the practice contests and are set to play some fine football at their end positions.

Coach Doug Scovil's Bulldog forward wall is huge, anchored by a pair of 245-pound tackles, John Campion and George Burrows. The guards, not as large as the tackles, all weigh under 185 pounds.

The Matean center is Bob Ellingson, a returnee from last year's squad, which finished second in the Big Eight race. The tight end spot is the big problem facing Coach Scovil and his line coach, Cliff Griffin.

The San Mateo backfield, loaded with talent, is led by quarterback Tom Smythe, a transfer from University of Oregon. The halfback spot has been a bright one for Scovil with four men currently fighting it out for the starting berth. A bruising 200-pounder, Mark Dawson, is the Bulldogs' top fullback.

Mike Carboni and veteran Phil Pruski, a pair of speed burners with the size of interior linemen, are fighting for the starting berth at the split end position.

Both squads are loaded with backfield strength, but while the Bulldog line has the edge in size, the Ram forward wall, outweighed in both preseason encounters, is aggressive and scrappy.

Prized Tom-Tom Up For Grabs In Friday's Tilt

San Mateo's Bulldogs will lay their most prized possession on the line when they come here for Friday's game.

The treasure is the "tom-tom" trophy, awarded each season to the winner of the annual San Francisco-San Mateo grid tilt.

The tom-tom's history dates back to 1946 when Sonny Lewis, the Bulldog yell leader, put the drum up for grabs as a symbol of rivalry between the two colleges. Since that time it has been Ram property for nine seasons and Bulldog property for five.

From 1946 to 1948 the Rams held the drum. Then, by the virtue of a 13-0 win, the Bulldogs took it back and kept it for three straight years.

The Rams, however, can boast of having the tom-tom for the longest time, that being from 1952 through 1957, after which the Mateans held it up to the present time.

Last year the Bulldogs tore the Rams apart as they rolled to an overpowering 56-14 victory.

The drum is red and white on one side representing the Rams, and blue and white on the opposite side representing the Bulldogs. Each year the college in possession decorates the drum with a symbol of its own college.

Booters Battle Weak Broncos In Opener Saturday

The defending league champion soccer squad from the college will attempt to begin a successful reign as titleholders when it locks horns with Santa Clara in the home opener at Balboa soccer stadium Saturday at 11 a.m.

The Broncos, lacking first-rate personnel, once again appear destined for the lower depths of the league and will apparently be bucking more than they can handle when they try to buck a Ram eleven which boasts six first-string returnees.

However, the local squad, hurt by the loss of Art Fisher, Giovanni Halstead, John Fouladi and Emilio Dergan, will have to plug several gaps if they are to match the skill and prowess of last season's surprising team.

The present outfit, paced by center-forward Jim Lynch, left-half Emil Ruiz, and center-half Dave Kingsley, still has managed to look impressive in exhibition contests, using a tough defense as their forte.

Coach Roy Diederichsen admits that the Rams are lucky to open the campaign with so-called "breathers" against Santa Clara and San Francisco State before running into their first real opposition in the California Bears.

The team which really has the local mentor fretting is the always powerful aggregation from the University of San Francisco. Though the Dons fell to the Rams last year 3-0, the Hilltoppers once again seem to have come up with one of the strong all-around teams for which they are renowned.

The league is tougher all over this year, but if the Ram newcomers can combine with the veterans to come through in the clutch, another soccer crown is a possibility for the squad.

This year's soccer schedule is as follows:

Santa Clara, October 8, Balboa Field.
San Francisco State, October 15, Balboa Field.
California, October 22, Balboa Field.
Cal Aggies, October 29, there.
Stanford, November 5, Balboa Field.
University of San Francisco, November 12, there.
San Jose State, November 19, there.

RAMBLINGS

Team Spirit Shines In US Sports Scene

By Frank Dunne

IT'S ALL IN THE GAME . . . Having viewed a couple of the new American Football league's games, it's a wonder that they have managed to stay in business for as long as they have. Most of the major college teams in the nation play a better brand of football and at a cheaper price.

• • •

Who would have dreamed that at the beginning of the current major league baseball campaign the Pittsburgh Pirates would win the National League pennant? Just goes to show what a group of good, hustling ballplayers, who believe in team work, can do in a league where the rest of the teams are composed of "stars and prima donnas."

• • •

Notice how the newspapers and the public are refraining from making any wild guesses about the chances for the 49ers to run away with the league crown this season. Maybe they learned their lesson after the Giants' nose-dive?

• • •

Don't be surprised if the Giant outfielders next season scamper after those windblown flies with a radar tracking device strapped to their backs. It could be the only way they might win a few games in their home park next season.

• • •

Some of the students may wonder why the college has such a large number of cheerleaders and song-girls, but when they go to one of the Rams' home games, they will see who makes the noise. It seems just a little bit funny that with several hundred spectators in the stands, the cheerleaders and song-girls have to do all the yelling.

• • •

The Ram soccer squad will have its work cut out for it this year, after the surprise the team pulled off last year in taking the crown away from the rest of the league, all composed of four-year colleges.

• • •

It almost seems pathetic the interest shown by the public in trying to guess who the new Giants' manager will be in '61. If they would only show as much enthusiasm in the coming election they would be much better off.

Recreation Association Posts Activity Schedule

Co-educational sports will begin this week as the Recreation Association has placed the various activities on a definite schedule.

Students who are interested in signing up for one or more of the sports offered may attend meetings in the women's gymnasium this week at 3 p.m.

Folk daneing and badminton are scheduled to meet on Monday afternoons, and the modern dance group on Tuesdays. Fencing will meet on Wednesdays and volleyball on Thursdays. Fridays have been reserved for archery, which will meet during College Hour on the archery field behind the women's gymnasium.

The All-College Sports Day will be held here on Saturday, October 29, according to Jan White, RA president. There will also be a sports day at College of San Mateo on December 3.

Lewis, Piggee Lead Rams To 13-6 Win Over Los Angeles

By Frank Dunne

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30:—Remembering last year's 7-6 loss, the Rams defeated the Los Angeles City College Cubs, 13-6, on the southlanders' home field tonight.

Gary Lewis and Tom Piggee led the locals in the offensive department, while the entire Red and White defense contained the Cubs.

On the first play after the Rams' kick-off, the southerners uncorked a 50-yard pass play that put them on the Ram 25. The stunned northerners gave ground until the Cubs had reached the 6. But then the Ram defense dug in and drove the invaders back to the 18, where the locals took over.

Unable to get their offense in gear the Rams were forced to punt. The Cubs received the ball on their own 38 and proceeded to march toward pay dirt again. But this time they would not be derailed and Quarterback Art Merrill dove the final yard into the promised land to put the Cubs on top, 6-0. The try for extra points failed.

In the second quarter the Rams held the Cubs in cheek but were unable to do any scoring until Lewis intercepted a Los Angeles pass on his own 40 and returned it to the Cubs 39.

From this point it took the Rams just six plays to score with Piggee carrying the final nine yards for the counter. Wayne Stribling booted the extra point that proved the margin of victory. The first half ended with the Rams on top, 7-6.

In the third quarter the locals drove inside the Cubs' five-yard line twice but each time were repelled by untimely penalties and errors.

The first drive was stopped on the one-yard line after the Rams had marched from their own 25. A costly fumble in the Red and White backfield caused the delay.

Late in the same quarter the Rams again drove goalward, this time from their own 32. But an untimely penalty stopped the drive and gave the ball to the Cubs.

In the fourth stanza the Ram defense stopped a Los Angeles scoring drive and forced the Cubs to give up the ball on the locals' 32.

It took the Rams nine plays to cover the needed distance for the score with Chuck Oushani running the last five yards for the points. Stribling's boot failed, so with 2:55 remaining in the game the Rams led 13-6.

Los Angeles attempted four pass plays in the last moments of the game, two of them never left the quarterback's hand and the other two were never caught. The two times the quarterback was forced to eat the ball he was thrown for 12-yard losses.

This was just one example of the fine performance turned in by the local defense. They only faltered once in the beginning of the contest and from then on they were immovable.

For the entire game the Cubs collected only 61 yards rushing while the Rams rolled up 202. Pass-happy Los Angeles was able to top the Rams in total yards passing 114-54.

But the real story was told in the total yards gained for the game, the Rams leading in this category 256-175.

Each team collected 60 yards in penalties, but the Rams' errors proved more costly, even though they won, because without a few of these penances the locals could have won by a wider margin.

Angelo Crudo, first string guard, was the only Ram who didn't suit up for the game, but he should be ready for the San Mateo fray Friday. Aside from the usual bumps and bruises there were no costly injuries on the squad during the game.

Signups Heavy As 98 Enroll In New College Judo Club

Five women and 93 men have enrolled in the newly formed Judo Kai (Society) which meets during College Hour in S-113.

The organizers of the society were surprised at the big turnout as it was twice as large as they had previously expected to attend the first meeting. Twenty-four of the new members have previous experience in the sport and eight of these have earned brown belts in the ancient game.

This Friday a live demonstration of judo will be presented in the men's gymnasium. The exhibition will consist of a demonstration of sport-judo, which is the type to be taught in the club, and for an added attraction a short demonstration of combat judo will be shown.

Combat judo is intended to stop the aggressor at all costs, even to the point of killing him. Sport judo, on the other hand, is just what the name implies. It is intended to be practiced just as a sport and to in no way injure the opponent.

The participants in this exhibition will be Noel O'Bryan, Rod Sinclair and William Paul. All of these men hold black belts in the sport.

At present Judo Kai is just a club, but the founders of the society hope that in the future it will be recognized as a sport at the college. If things shape up as planned, the white belt holders expect to challenge San Jose State College to a contest.

The main problem facing the club is the absence of faculty sponsorship, but spokesmen hope that this will be corrected in the near future.

A person with a white belt is strictly a beginner. After a man or woman has acquired one, he tries to earn a brown then a black belt of which there are ten degrees. Only two men in the world, both of whom reside in Japan, hold tenth degree black belts.

Mural Captains Meet, Condemn Forfeitures

The problem of repeated forfeiture was the main point stressed at a recent meeting of the current semester's Intramural League team captains.

The meeting held last Thursday was primarily meant for discussion of the loop rules and regulations. Forfeiture is the most prevalent problem and was given more time for discussion. This problem reached its peak last semester and severe measures were taken to curb it. The action taken last semester was the dropping of numerous squads from the loop.

The deadline for signups is already past with one exception. This pertains to fraternity pledges. They will be allowed to sign up in the league during and after pledge week, scheduled for the third week in November.

Student Council Passes Two Budgets, Investigates Error; Nov. 1 Last Fund Filing Day

By Richard Shields

Two budgets totaling $8749.34 were passed last week by Student Council before it was discovered that one of them contained a possible error of $129.00

In addition to its regular expenses of $4530.30, the football team was allocated $129.00 for hotel expenses for one of the game with Los Angeles.

A council member noticed the mistake after the budget had been passed when Men's Athletic Commissioner Bill Richardson reported that the team would not stay overnight after the Los Angeles City College game last Friday.

Associated Student President Joe Egri appointed Sophomore Councilman Bob Ross to investigate the budget and report on whether or not the money is needed.

Student Government Adviser Sherm Elworthy stated that the team would probably use the hotel rooms to rest and change clothes after the game.

The other budget passed was for a total of $4219.04 for the Publications Board. This money will be used to pay for the 12 issues of The Guardsman to be published during the semester.

Finance Chairman Bill Keane warned council and people who have to submit budgets that all legislation dealing with budget requests must be completed by Tuesday, November 1.

Keane also strongly objected to council members who vote against budgets without reason. Since inquiry into the purpose of budget requests is a duty of council, members should be able to state exactly why they feel a budget should not be passed.

Friday Deadline For New Student Health Insurance

Starting this semester, Associated Student card holders may obtain health insurance through the California Physicians Service by applying at the AS office or at the student bank.

The Student Health Plan is sponsored by Blue Shield and costs $10 for the first semester and $15.10 for the second. Second semester coverage includes the summer session.

Deadline for applications is this Friday, October 7. Only eligible new students may purchase insurance at the beginning of the spring semester.

Beta Tau, Tau Chi Sigma Cop Scholarship, Service Awards At IFC Smoker

Beta Tau and Tau Chi Sigma fraternities copped the traditional scholarship and service awards, respectively. Presented to the most deserving fraternities during the Spring semester 1960, these awards were presented at last week's Inter-Fraternity Council smoker in the men's gymnasium.

More than 300 students, including some 43 fathers, attended the semi-annual affair, which is held to provide interested students a chance to meet the members of the eight on-campus fraternities and sign up for their rushing affairs.

Challenging Beta Tau for the scholarship honors was Zeta Phi Sigma, taking second place, while Gamma Phi Ypsilon's over-all grade point average placed them third.

Finishing second and third under Tau Chi's blood drive effort were Alpha Sigma Delta and Alpha Phi Epsilon, in that order.

Display Cases Open To Departmental Exhibits

Instructors desiring a departmental display will be accorded the use of the display case at the south end of Science Hall and the assistance of advertising art students, William Eckert of the art department said recently.

Such displays will be exhibited for approximately four weeks and are subject to the discretion of the department head and of Eckert, who will supervise the work of his students.

Instructors desiring booking and dates can get in touch with Eckert in S-347.

Organizations Fill Semester Schedule With Activities

By Pat Perkins

AS THE semester progresses, the various college organizations are busily planning dances and several other activities to fill out the campus social schedule.

Sorority rushing officially gets underway October 16 with the Inter-Sorority Council tea. The tea offers an opportunity to meet new friends.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority will hold its fireside on October 23 at the home of Joan and Jean Giannini. The Gammas are now planning their service project for the semester.

The new officers of the Merchandising Club are Phyllis Bouman, president; Albert Gonzalez, vice president; Cecile Farbman, secretary-treasurer; John Petuya, historian; John Lopez, CAB representative, and Suzanne Murphy, AWS representative.

Beta Tau fraternity's new fall officers are Jerry Kucserka, president; Herb Lebherz, vice president; Jack Harrison, treasurer; Dave Diamond, secretary, and Ken Belfer, morale booster.

All students are welcome to attend the first meeting of the Christian Science Organization on October 6 at 7:45 p.m., in the Sunday School Room of Third Church at 1250 Haight Street.

Newman Club Hosts Convention Here, Sponsors Talk By Posner

By Tom Kennedy

Playing host for the first time to the club's leadership school this Saturday and Sunday, October 8 and 9, the Newman Club of City College will sponsor a talk during College Hour on Friday, October 14, by Russell Posner, history instructor here, on his recent trip behind the Iron Curtain.

Newman Club adviser Raymond R. Early estimates than 150 to 200 leaders from other campus Newman Clubs in the western states will attend the two-day session. The meeting will feature guest speakers, a dinner-dance, and roundtable discussions for both students and faculty members.

The purpose of the school, which meets each semester, is to develop leadership within the various province Newman Clubs.

A faculty roundtable discussion in Smith Hall, 9 a.m. Saturday, will start the convention, followed by luncheon. In the afternoon, there will be a student discussion.

That night guests will hold a dinner-dance in St. Emydius Parish Hall. Sunday morning they will end the convention with a Communion Breakfast at St. Emydius.

Dr. Posner completed a three-week tour of Russia, Poland and East Berlin at the time of the Francis Powers trial in August.

The talk will be given in S-204 and all students are invited.

This was the second tour through the satellite countries for Posner in the last 10 years. Previously he had visited Poland and Czechoslovakia.

He spent two months in Europe this past summer, then embarked on a 1500-mile bus trip through Finland, Russia, Poland, and finally to the Communist sector of the German capital.

ISC Tea Set For October 16

MARY GOLDING, dean of women here, is the over-all sponsor of the Inter-Sorority Council. She also advises Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority.

Guardsman Lists Publication Dates

Because next Wednesday, Columbus Day, is a college holiday, there will be no issue of The Guardsman. Bob Pacini, Editor-in-chief of the paper and chairman of the Publications Board, stated, however, that publication of The Guardsman will resume as usual on Wednesday, October 19.

At a recent Publications Board meeting a total of 12 issues of The Guardsman was scheduled for the semester. Included in the schedule may be a special election issue on January 6.

Publication schedule as decided by the board provides for the remaining ten on October 19 and 26; November 2, 9, 16, 23; December 7; January 6 (election issue); 11 and 18.

Copies of The Guardsman can be obtained on the above listed publication dates in the lobby of Science Hall, in the library, or at the bookstore exit of Smith Hall.

Firesides Follow Formal Start Of Rushing Activities

Kicking off the Inter-Sorority Council's merry-go-round of activities, the ISC formal tea to welcome prospective rushees is scheduled for Sunday, October 16, in Laurel Hall, 2676 California Street.

Joanne Costello, ISC president, announced that all women students who have registered for rushing this semester will receive invitations to the tea, and added that appropriate attire is the suit and dress category.

Fall floral arrangements will form the backdrop against which the semi-annual event will be staged, and sorority presidents and sponsors will form the receiving line to greet the prospective rushees.

A main feature of the party will be the distribution of invitations to the forthcoming firesides, held in the homes of sorority members, are scheduled to follow the end of the first midterm period.

Rushees hoping to be accepted must maintain a C average, Miss Costello emphasized.

After the series of firesides, individual sororities entertain at a series of luncheons and dinners, which are held on the campus.

Final event of the rushing season, Miss Costello explained, is the coffee preference hour given by each sorority.

On this occasion, rushees are given an opportunity to voice their choice of sorority which choice is limited to two.

Final invitations to pledge, Miss Costello said, will be available in Dean Mary Golding's office Thursday, November 10.

Sororities and their presidents and sponsors respectively are for Delta Psi, Alberta Giannini and Martha Scott; for Delta Sigma Tau, Mimi Young and Olga Perkins; for Gamma Kappa Beta, Carolyn Vukasin and Dale Forbes; for Kappa Phi, Marlene Bobrow and Katherine Hondius; Phi Beta Rho, Miss Costello and Melin Furgis; Theta Tau, Mary Comefford and Vivian Ward; Zeta Chi, Mary Elleard and Ruth Inskipp, and Gamma Sigma Sigma, Brigitta Bergman and Dean Golding.

Transfers To State Colleges May Face Entrance Exams

All students at the college who plan to transfer to any state college next semester may have to take an examination through the American College Testing Program, Walter E. McCloud, counselor, announced today.

As requirements vary at different state colleges, McCloud advised students with such plans to see their counselors at once. Should the examination prove necessary for those students, registration applications must be received by Friday, October 14. The examination itself is scheduled for Saturday, November 5.

Transfers to San Francisco State College with more than 60 units do not have to take the examination while San Jose State College does not require it of students who transfer with more than 30 units.

Alameda State College, however, requires it of all transfers.

New Policy Sees Library Open At Night For Study

For the first time in many years, the college library is now open at night, Edward E. Sandys, dean of instruction, announced last week.

Hours of operation, set at the beginning of this semester, he said, will remain at 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays.

Through the efforts of Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, Sandys added, the Board of Education granted permission in May of this year and has allocated sufficient funds for its operation for this and the following semester.

Statistics compiled by librarians Amerigo T. Ciani, Betty Lundgren and Irene Mensing reflect a pattern of increasing patronage, although it is apparent that the opening of the library at night is not yet known to all students.

After weeks of operation which began with the first day of instruction, it is evident that more and more students are settling down to their studies and have found the additional hours of the library convenient to their schedules, the statistics show.

The request by President Conlan was made in answer to a student petition initiated by the Associated Women Students under its former president, Arlene Kordoules, in 1959.

Before this semester, the library, then on the old west campus, was previously opened at night for a year beginning in Fall of 1946 to accommodate the return of World War II veterans.

Politics, Education At C-Hour Lectures

Politics and education will be the main topics to be discussed at this semester's College Hour Lecture Series, Irving Witt, faculty sponsor of the program, announced last week.

The first in a series of four lectures will be given during College Hour on Friday, October 21, in S-100. Although the speaker has not as yet been determined, the subject matter of the talk will be Politics.

Charles Hanks, student chairman of the series, will introduce each speaker to the City College students attending.

In the past, according to Witt, instructors from San Francisco State College, Stanford University and the University of California have addressed students here.

A student question-and-answer period will follow each lecture if time permits.

The three other lectures in the series will be given on November 4, December 2 and January 6, all during the Friday College Hour.

AGS Hosts SF State Dean October 28

WILLIAM RICHARDSON is the sponsor of Alpha Gamma Sigma.

San Francisco State's Alan Johnson, associate dean of students, will be introduced by Alpha Gamma Sigma President Juanita Schaeffer, as guest speaker at the honor society's College Hour meeting Friday, October 28, AGS sponsor William Richardson declared today. The meeting will take place in C-232.

Qualifications for membership in AGS include no final grade below C in the preceding semester and completion of 12 units with 42 or more grade points, or 15 to 17 units with at least 45 grade points.

There is an urgent need for student coaches, Richardson said, particularly in the fields of English grammar, arithmetic and all other math, high school chemistry and chemistry 1A, and foreign languages. If a person is good in any one of these fields, he need not be an honor society member to get a coaching job, but can apply to Richardson in S-143G. Pay is $1.50 an hour.

representative of the engineering department.

The division of instruction originated in 1949 under the leadership of Dr. Marcus Skarstedt, now retired. Since its origin, the organization has grown until it is now a vital influence in the college administration. Every course which the college offers is governed by the co-ordinator or one of the deans of instruction. Able assistance and the viewpoint of the various departments is supplied by departmental representatives.

However, with all its many responsibilities, the division of instruction is operated on the basis of aid to the individual student. Numerous students passing through the office make it apparent that the division of instruction is one of the most beneficial organizations in the college.

New Stadium Here To Stay; Opening Delay Unimportant

THERE has been a lot of questioning and uncertainty among the students here concerning the college's new athletic field, for it has been just about a year since construction began, and the Fall semester was to mark the completion date, with the first game of the 1960 season to be played on the new field.

The Fall semester arrived, and the first two home games were played, but the stadium still remained empty.

Most students, who certainly have a right to know the facts concerning the delay in the stadium construction, would be quick to ask "why?" "whose fault was it?" and "what was being done about it?" Someone must be blamed.

THE HUMAN ELEMENT

It is impossible, however, to try to "pin" the blame on any person or group of persons. It is true that a series of minor setbacks had plagued the construction of the stadium, and if one must choose a single element to blame for the delay, it will have to be the human element.

Whenever a group of persons joins forces to construct something as large and as complex as a multi-purpose athletic field, there are always certain to be misunderstandings, miscalculations and errors of judgment.

COMBINATION OF MINOR DELAYS

If it must be known what mishaps caused the delay, we can cite three examples, which, though not major setbacks in themselves, combined to make it extremely unwise to use the new stadium until last Friday.

One of these was a difference of opinion between the city and the contractor on the quality of the materials used for the bleachers. Fortunately, that difference is in the process of being ironed out to a satisfactory solution for all concerned.

Another cause for delay was the broad jump pit at the east end of the field, for it was discovered that the runway was much closer to the playing field than desired. If left in that area, it would have presented a constant danger to footballers running close to the edge of the field. Result: scratch one football player.

The possibility is far from humorous, however, and it was decided to move the runway farther away from the football playing area.

Still another reason for delay was the gridiron, which to all appearances seemed perfect for playing, but close inspection revealed grass sprinkled here and there with loose dirt, a gridiron not entirely filled in. If it had been played upon in that condition, the field would have been ruined for the entire semester. Of course, this is too high a price to pay for a single game.

WHO CAN ASK FOR MORE?

We also feel that students should be aware of the fact that the contractor building the new stadium, as well as the new arts building, was under no obligation to have the stadium ready any sooner than the building, which is set for completion in February, 1961.

However, we have learned that the contractor did all humanly possible to have the stadium ready for the current football season. Surely, we could have asked no more of him or his men.

Rather than express disapproval and dissatisfaction over the slight delay, students should recall that the new stadium is a permanent addition to the college and, therefore, the insignificant delay of a month or two in its completion didn't have to appear as such a major blow, after all.

We congratulate all those concerned with the construction of the stadium and extend to them a grateful word of thanks. The opening, though delayed, can be considered a victory for cool heads and level thinking. We add a hearty, "Well done."

THE COLLEGE'S NEW ATHLETIC FIELD, which, through a series of minor setbacks was delayed in its opening. Last week's Contra Costa game initiated use of the stadium.

Builders Slice Red Tape To Open New Stadium

Cutting through red tape and bucking heavy rains that soaked its field and tied up its construction, contractors surprised students here by having the new athletic stadium ready for its unofficial dedication at last Friday's conference game with Contra Costa. The Rams won 46-8.

Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management, discussing the delay in the use of the stadium, explained last week that all current campus construction is under a year contract which terminates February, 1961. The contractor could have left the stadium for the last project, but because of the fall football season, he worked for its completion.

The football field appeared thick and green from a distance. Anderson stated, but a close inspection revealed a sparse and seedy surface, which the saturating rains of two weeks ago practically submerged.

Besides the poor field conditions, unexpected delays concerning building materials and specifications had also arisen.

The core of the knotty problem lay in the quality of lumber used for the installation of the 3000 seat capacity stands.

Confusion as to what type of wood could best endure outdoor weather conditions arose between the San Francisco Unified School District and the contractor, Anderson related. Whether the bleachers will be replaced or will remain is as yet undecided.

OSCAR E. ANDERSON, co-ordinator, division of educational management.

Another hindrance, was the incorrect location of the football jump runway between the football field and the encircling track; it's too close to the field of play to permit adequate safety. A forward pass resulting in a sideline scramble for the ball might find one of the gridders a victim of the dangerous trench.

Construction of the arts building has been the most progressive, and its completion is expected on schedule.

Bad Seed Cast Rehearses For Nov. 11 Premiere

With its current production of Whiteheaded Boy at the half-way mark, the Little Theater group has begun preparation for presentation of The Bad Seed, by Maxwell Anderson, which will open Friday, November 11.

Tryouts for The Bad Seed began last week, according to Michael Griffin, drama director. This well-known plot centers around a seemingly innocent eight-year-old girl who is in reality a hardened Eloise, guilty of several well-planned murders. Its run will include the three weekends in November and December 2 and 3.

After its performance on October 8, the cast of The Whiteheaded Boy played host to a visiting group of entertainers, the Irish Players. The refreshments served featured tea and Irish bread. Upon invitation, the local drama club returned the visit last Sunday.

San Mateans On A "RAMpage"

REPRESENTATIVES FROM COLLEGE OF SAN MATEO roll up their sleeves and make a determined effort to clean the Redwood Ram, which had "mysteriously" acquired a coat of tar and feathers. The clean-up committee, members of the San Mateo Associated Student government, flatly declared that they had nothing to do with the "ram-page" that gave the ram a rather wooly coat.

At the far left taking in the scrubbing session are the Associated Student President and Vice President here, Joe Egri and Georgine Peterson. The San Mateans on the ladders are, left to right, George Sanz, faculty adviser; Paul Hoiman, AMS secretary-treasurer, and Marilyn Stiverson, corresponding secretary.

The ground crew includes, left to right, Ruth Rogers, student union co-ordinator; Burt Curyea, AS treasurer; Marilyn Mitchell, recording secretary, and Lyle Johnson, frosh president.

Noon Today Marks Opening Of Special Symphony Ticket Sales

Special cut-rate season tickets, offered by the Symphony Forum, to performances of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra will go on sale at noon today, according to Bob Pacini, chairman of the college's forum, who urged interested students to get their tickets immediately.

Last season the college completely sold out its supply of season tickets a few days after they went on sale here.

Tickets can be purchased here at the bank in Smith Hall.

The Symphony Forum is a group of northern California colleges which makes available to its students, through the San Francisco Symphony Association, discount tickets to 20 Wednesday evening concerts by the city's orchestra, which begins its performances December 7.

The prices for tickets to the 20 concerts are: orchestra, $15 and $30; grand tier, $30; dress circle, $30; balcony circle, $23; balcony circle, $15 and $23, and a box seat, $36.

In most cases the above prices average about a doliar a concert.

A varied and international list of guest artists is scheduled to appear with the symphony. Returning as guest conductor to lead the symphony in a pair of concerts as he did last year will be Pierre Monteux, one-time permanent conductor of the orchestra.

Also listed is a group of international pianists who will appear throughout the season, which will run until May 24.

They include England's Dame Myra Hess, France's Philippe Entremont, Canada's Glenn Gould and America's Byron Janis.

Two major choral works will highlight the season. During the Easter holidays the orchestra, joined by soloists and the University of California Chorus, will perform the Saint Matthew Passion of Bach.

Completing the schedule in May will be a performance of Berlioz's dramatic The Damnation Of Faust, again with soloists and choruses from Stanford University and San Jose State College.

Delegates from the member colleges of the Symphony Forum met last Saturday morning at the Opera House to distribute tickets and discuss plans for the forthcoming season.

Santa Rosa Bus Tickets On Sale

Football fans who might miss the game at Santa Rosa Junior College this Saturday, because of non-transportation, can still get seats on the bus chartered by the Rally Committee, according to recent information from Rally Commissioner Marilyn Santos. Game time is 8:30 p.m.

Students who wish to go should make the arrangements as soon as possible as bus tickets have been on sale in the cafeteria since Monday. The bus will leave from in front of the Redwood Ram at 6 p.m.

Miss Santos also said that homecoming plans for this college were underway for the game with Oakland City College.

Officers of the Rally Committee are John Rosenberg, assistant Rally Commissioner; Susan Brill, secretary; Virginia Zane, treasurer; Jeri Crivelli, historian; Marcia McNeely, CAB representative; Sandra Belcher, entertainment chairman; Robert Kelley, equipment chairman, and Joan Hillman, homecoming chairman.

3830 Rush Cloud Hall For Pre-Reg. Numbers

Approximately 3830 students were given registration numbers within one and one-half hours during the pre-registration held October 7, Walter McCloud of the counseling department, stated yesterday.

If it is not possible for a student to keep his appointment the counseling office must be notified ahead of time, McCloud warned, adding that failure to notify means a later registration date and a higher registration number.

Foresight

What's In Store For Year 2000?—Plenty!

By Paul Plansky

A FLASH OF LIGHT leaps through the night sky! An earsplitting explosion bursts into a spectrum of flaring fireworks, falling earthward in a scattering shower of brilliance. A new year is born —this is 2000.

Men and women the world over are voicing a hymn in harmony and rejoicing in Him for humanity. A turning point, a milestone, a gay celebration — this is 2000, the Genesis of the Twenty-first Century.

Tenaip Sram, the Martian Chancellor, views the frivolous festivities through his telescopiscreen with confident cynicism. As he sinks back into his transparent davenport, he recollects the blood-stained history of those selfish, irrational earthlings, scraping and clawing at each other in their false utopia.

He closes his eyes, and mankind's pestilent past unfolds before him . . .

The Greeks, the Romans, the Nazis, the Communists, all had sought eternal domination of their world. After innumerable, fruitless endeavors to make himself master of all races, man finally realized that nations are not divided politically, but geographically, and that no one select people could ever be overseer to mankind. Only the whole world could rule itself.

In realizing that the Earthman has been his own worst enemy, the Martian head of state recalls the rancor and ruin of World War III. At the cost of millions of lives, the hammer and sickle of the Soviets were buried in a nightmare of nuclear bombardments.

Yet, that neighboring planet, third from the run; has mended its wounds with time and is now embarking on a hopeful road to recovery.

The Earthman will cross many trenches of danger and crossroads of fear, but his biggest threat comes from the outside. Can he survive in the vastly inhabited universe of which he is a part? Will he subjugate aliens or fall prey to them?

The Red Planet's rival is a small threat indeed. Locked in their small shell of security, their obscure spinning sphere sails aimlessly through the spreading sea of space.

Within this shell is stored all human knowledge and power. If the quarrelsome earth-dwellers hadn't torn each other apart with greed and malice, they could have perfected their assets to complete control and hence could have conquered every star within their reach. But because they regard the individual above the state, their interstellar dream has been shattered.

For the first time in history, man's fear is not that he may be designing his own destruction, but rather resigning control of his planet to an outside force. The Supreme Martian chuckles inwardly.

Will thousandths of years of achievement and advancement in building up a great civilization disintegrate in a dozen days? Will the pillars of progress and prosperity tumble under the Samson strength of the Martian military machine?

The answer is inevitable. The newly emerging infant from Earth is no match fc. that merciless monster from Mars.

Tenaip Sram, the totalitarian strongman of the Martian World, is surfeiting in absolute aplomb. He muses to himself: It won't be much longer.

A flash of light flickers momentarily and then goes out. A black cloud hovers overhead. Man's ephemeral holiday celebrating his new century is over; he is at war once more.

A new era in universal time is born —the Martian Age.

Instructor Merits Halo For Good Deed

For centuries people have believed that only angels possessed halos. That is, until recently when a certain English instructor was observed strolling through the halls of the campus wearing, of all things, a halo—figuratively speaking.

It seems that this instructor had noticed one of his students busily writing a letter during the entire 50 minutes of instruction.

After dismissing the class, the instructor was preparing to leave the room when he caught sight of an object lying on the floor. Investigating his discovery he found it was a sealed and addressed envelope, classtime written letter inside.

The envelope, however, was without a stamp. Instructor X then proceeded to pick up the envelope, place a stamp on it, and mail it.

Golden Rule Or Iron Hand?

Bad Actors, Studiers Pose Biggest Threat To Good Neighbor Policy At Cafe

All sorts of parking problems plague the college this year. In the reservoir, there is hardly enough room to park your car. In the cafeteria, there is little or no room to park your carcass.

Any of the possible solutions that could be proposed to keep cafeteria crowding to a minimum are no more workable nor democratic than trying to solve the parking problem by requiring students to drive compact cars.

If you are wondering what might be labeled an undemocratic solution, consider the one that calls for any person who takes more than 10 minutes to eat lunch to be hauled out of the building and shot.

Another suggestion that will never see the light of day is the one which calls for cooperation from the library. A recent count showed the dining room harboring three studiers for every eater.

Since Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser, is playing host to the homework-doers it might be considered fair by some if the library would reciprocate and ease the cafeteria's burden by selling sandwiches and coffee.

Official figures released last week on feeding and seating in Smith Hall, show that the cafeteria lines are serving more than 800 persons in an hour and the seating capacity of the dining rooms is just short of 700.

We don't need Univac to tell us that any student who sits in one seat for one hour at lunchtime is taking up more than his share of time and space.

To get a more vivid picture of Elworthy's problem you might visualize him attempting to seat the entire population of Emeryville using only 700 chairs over a period of three hours.

And consider the poor brownbagger. The fellow brings his own sandwiches and only drops in to the cafeteria to use the salt and pepper. Don't get him wrong. He has as much right to eat there as the blue plate diner. Provided, of course, there are enough seats.

The fellow who packs his own lunch probably does more than any one else to ease the crush. He can always look in the window and, if the place looks packed, take to one of the grassy slopes.

Contrast him to the really bad actor, the guy who only drops in at lunchtime to sit at a table and greet his friends. He buys nothing. He eats nothing. He may use a little salt and pepper from time to time to make a mess on the table.

A good, healthy, undemocratic solution to the problem created by this guy would be snipers patrolling an overhead catwalk.

This bad actor is a first cousin to the character who comes in the exit, saves three chairs for a friend who might show up after the next bell, eats his lunch, uses his saucer for an ashtray, puts his dirty dishes as far as possible out of reach of the busslady and leaves by the entrance.

It's a good thing cafeteria manager John Dunn has cash registers instead of coin machines because that guy would be sure to have a pocketful of slugs.

College officials could solve the puzzle in a minute by the application of some strict rules and uncomfortable regimentation. They would, however, rather be optimistic and count on the good sense, good manners, and compatability of the student body.

People are supposed to know how to get along with each other and be good neighbors in crowded situations.

It looks, then, as though there are two very easy solutions to the problem in the cafeteria. The Golden Rule or The Iron Hand.—By C.W.

IBM Aids Man

Machine Assists Hectic Problem Of Registration

In 1947 the college registration process was blessed with a development of the "modern age" —the IBM machine. With these machines hours of human labor are saved and the possibility of error practically eliminated.

This semester's enrollment is more than 7500, including both day and night classes. With the old system of handling registration cards it would be virtually impossible to register this number of students in the three-day registration period.

With the IBM machines three copies of each student's registration card can be turned out in 48 hours.

IBM is also being used for the correction of test papers, which relieves instructors of some of the tedious work of correcting papers by hand.

World War II took a heavy toll on the enrollment of the college. Before the war, the total number of students was approximately 3200.

When the war ended, the GIs returned home. Many were eager to begin or continue their education, which caused a large increase in college attendance. By 1947 this college had an enrollment of 5500.

This presented a major problem to college administrators. Class lists emanating from registration had previously been compiled by a volunteer staff of 12 faculty members who spent hour after hour typing registration cards and lists and checking them for errors.

Thanks to the IBM; the overall registration process is completed faster and more efficiently.

Bay Area Labs Await First Dental Graduates

By Lester On

In a world of increasing specialization and automation, the skilled technician is fulfilling a vital need.

This accounts, in part, for the considerable percentage of students now enrolled in the college's vast array of semiprofessional programs. It is in answer to the needs of industry that these programs have been developed.

An example is the dental laboratory technology program now, in its third semester at the college. To prepare its prospective graduates better for a field of many opportunities, nine third-semester technology students have begun their first semester of work-experience as part of the curriculum characteristic of many of the college's semiprofessional programs.

Assuming the dual responsibilities of work and study are Julia Buckland, Maurice Elston, Hiro Inouye, Bill Kend, Winifred Lum, Sergio Martinez, Ernesto Sanchez, William Valiente and Steve White.

In essence, the program consists of 16 hours a week in commercial dental laboratories where techniques taught in the course are applied to actual practice under the guidance of experienced technicians. General education courses at the college comprise the remainder of the second-year program.

While the program approaches full stature with its first graduates, its instructor, Frank C. Szehner, Jr., is hoping for accommodations that will sufficiently handle 25 students after completion of the arts building.

Thus far, the program has been swamped with more applicants than can be accepted because of limited space.

Response and support from related parties in establishing this program have been generous in donations of helpful equipment. Among the contributors have been the Dentists' Supply Company of New York in York, Pa.

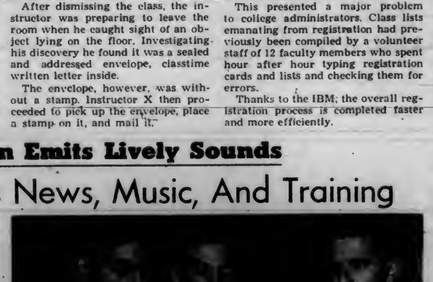
With more than 35 commercial dental laboratories in the Bay Area as possible employers, the program is how in high gear as it nears its first turnout of dental laboratory technology graduates.

Bright Little Den Emits Lively Sounds

KCSF Offers News, Music, And Training

By Sophie Hines

In Our Little Corner Of The World could very well be the theme song of the KCSF Broadcasters Club, whose small and somewhat congested, but orderly, quarters are located in Science Hall, 147.



Upon entering the broadcaster's den one is faced with a somewhat dark and gloomy little alcove which leads directly to the studio.

Inside the studio a bright array of colors lightens the atmosphere—the pale yellow which covers the soundproof walls and ceiling, the green carpet, worn from the constant pacing of feet, and the bright red banner with the white lettering, KCSF.

In the control room, a condensed version of that of a large station, are housed some 250 45-speed records and 500 albums, in addition to many 78-speed records. Any of the discs in the record library of the station may be borrowed by any club or organization on campus for dance or rally purposes.

Also from the control room, students of broadcasting relay campus news from 10 to 10:12 a.m. Mondays through Thursdays and at 8 a.m. on Fridays by way of the Campus Carrier. Jazz, classical and vocal recordings are heard daily in the cafeteria between the hours of 7:30 and 10 a.m. and noon and 1 p.m.

Anxiously awaiting the completion of the new arts building are the 25 members of the club, among whom are President Ken Jonah, Vice President George Heuga, Secretary Pam Klein, Demetre Lagios, record librarian, and faculty sponsor Henry Leff.

In the new building, scheduled for completion in 1961, the group will have a completely new, closed circuit television installation, which will benefit radio and television majors. Six TV sets will be located throughout the building so that students will be able to see the shows being televised.

KCSF, in addition to providing news and music for the enjoyment of faculty and students alike, offers an opportunity for interested students to acquire experience in the area of radio-television broadcasting, for a minimum of two years of training is required before going into the field.

Ram Gridders Thump Comets 46-8

Local Eleven Remains Unbeaten With Romp Over Contra Costa

By Warren Downes

A blistering attack, which rolled up 444 yards gained, led the unbeaten Rams to a 46-8 win over an outclassed Comet club last Friday in the opening game of City College's new football stadium.

Coach Grover Klemmer's crew piled up 378 yards on the ground with Tom Piggee picking up 129 yards, including a 62-yard run in the second quarter for a touchdown. Gary Lewis had another outstanding day, galloping for 76 yards and passing for an added 28 yards.

Lewis brought the spectators to their feet on the last play of the second quarter when he grabbed Gary Gliden's punt on his own 25-yard line and went 75 yards down the sidelines for the score, aided by a tremendous block by Piggee.

The Rams reached paydirt first in the contest going 63 yards in 11 plays with Lewis going over from three yards out.

Contra Costa was quick to strike back as Ted Green intercepted one of Lewis' passes on his own 43 and returned it to the locals' 35. The Comets took advantage of this break and scored in nine plays with Henry Pippen scoring from the one. Pippen ran over for the extra point.

The Ram wrecking crew struck twice more in the first half on Piggee's long gallop and Lewis' punt return and led at the half 20-8.

The Red and White forces took the second half kickoff and marched 74 yards for another score. Lewis engineered the drive, climaxing it on the 14th play with a nine-yard pass to Ray Greggains. Lewis hit Greggains again for the point after touchdown.

On the first play of the fourth period Charlie Smith romped 48 yards for another Ram score, which was set up by Lewis' pass interception on his own 31-yard line.

Herman McKee, one of Klemmer's outstanding fullbacks, made a one-man show the next time the locals got the ball, going 54 yards in two plays. The scoring run came from 41 yards out.

Vic Muzio recovered a Comet fumble on their 32-yard line to set up the Rams' last score, Charlie Clay going over from the two-yard line.

Santa Rosa Hosts Locals Saturday

With the Contra Costa and San Mateo contests now a thing of the past, the powerful Ram eleven is sharpening its horns for its next encounter with the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs at the Cubs' home grounds at 7:30 p.m. this Saturday.

The Santa Rosa club in its first conference game suffered defeat at the hands of a strong Stockton squad. The Cub grid forces, led by head coach Bill Archer, came in to this season sporting a paltry 1959 record. In the '59 season they finished on the bottom of the pile in the Big Eight Conference, winning not one game.

The Cub eleven is composed mainly of rookies with only three returning vets in the probable starting lineup. They have, however, won two non-conference games this season.

Signals for the men from Santa Rosa will be called by two quarterbacks, each sharing about equal time on the playing field. They are Jerry Gromer and Deno Verges. Each one is a freshman, is 6'1" tall and weighs 185.

The nucleus of the Rosa line is comprised of three men who have shown themselves to be the thoroughbreds of the Cub mules. They are Dan Libale, center; John Condon, tackle, and Clive Adams, end.

It is expected that the Red and White eleven, sparked by such men as Gary Lewis and Mel Canavaro, will make an excellent showing against Santa Rosa.

Rams Spot Bulldogs 2 TD's, Fight Back, Gain 14-14 Tie

Gary Lewis with two brilliant touchdown gallops and a pair of timely pass interceptions saved the Ram gridders from defeat and gained the local aggregation a 14-14 standoff with San Mateo in the Big Eight Conference opener, October 7, at Balboa High School stadium.

The 215-pound speedster ran 45 yards on a pass-run option in the second period and romped 37 yards in the third quarter after receiving a screen pass from quarterback Mel Canavaro. Lewis gained 85 yards in the six carries and passed for an additional 42 yards, completing four out of eight passes attempted.

Lewis also stood out on defense intercepting a Tom Smythe pass in the first period, and picking off one of Keith Mattos' tosses in the fourth quarter.

Coach Grover Klemmer's crew found themselves in hot water early in the contest as they were plagued by a bad case of "fumblitis." San Mateo received the opening kickoff and, unable to move, had to punt on fourth down. On the second play from scrimmage, Tom Piggee fumbled and Bulldog end Roger Dabney pounced on the ball on the locals' 30-yard line.

It took the Bulldogs eight plays to score; Rich Weiler going over from the two-yard line. The pass attempt for the point after touchdown fell incomplete, making the score 6-0.

After an exchange of downs the Peninsula foes were forced to kick, John Hedge booting from the Rams' 48-yard line. Guy Whitaker fielded the ball and then lost it, George Burrows falling on the pigskin on the locals' 13-yard line.

On first down, Ron Peters picked up six yards and on the next play Smythe ran over from the seven. Smythe's pass to Mark Dawson was good for the extra point, and the Rams found themselves trailing 14-0 with 1:18 left in the first period.

After Lewis' second period interception the Red and White gridders began to move, aided by two penalties against the Bulldogs. With fourth and 18 yards to go for the first down, the locals' drive seemed to be stopped, but Lewis changed that in a hurry.

Grabbing the snap from center, Lewis faded back to pass and then suddenly turned and headed downfield behind a wall of blockers. Ten yards beyond the line of scrimmage the powerful back cut toward the sidelines and outran the rest of the Bulldog defense for the score.

The extra point attempt failed, and Klemmer's crew trailed at the half, 14-6.

Late in the third quarter Alex Darnes intercepted one of Smythe's tosses and returned it to the Matean 44-yard line. After an illegal use of the hands penalty against Coach Doug Scovil's club placed the ball on the Blue and White 37-yard line, quarterback Canavaro tossed a strike to Lewis and the Ram streak outraced the defenders for the score.

Canavaro saved the day for the Rams on the extra point attempt when he picked up his own fumble and scrambled over for the two points, tying the score at 14-14.

The fourth quarter was a seesaw battle with both defenses turning in tremendous performances. Twice the Ram had fourth down and short yardage to go and were unable to make it.

Late in the game Weiler intercepted one of Canavaro's passes and returned it to the Ram eight-yard line. In four plays the Bulldogs lost 28 yards, thanks to the aggressive play of the Ram defensive line, and the locals took over the ball on their own 36-yard line.

The Ram pass defense saved the day with some fine defense on the last three plays of the game.—By W.D.

RAM END LARRY PEDRODALASOL, 84, leaps high into the air to grab a pass thrown by quarterback Gary Lewis. Bulldog defender Ron Peters, 21, smashed Pedrodalasol to the ground after the catch, aided by his teammate Mark Dawson, 36.—Guardsman photo by Ron Burnett.

Potent Ram Soccer Squad Vies For Victory Over Cal Saturday

Pointing for a possible second straight league title, the college's potent soccer squad, which annihilated Santa Clara by a 15-1 count in the season opener, renews its rivalry with the University of California in an early season crucial Saturday at Balboa Field at 11 a.m.

Roy Diederichsen's revenge-seeking Rams will be in quest of a victory over a Bear eleven which last year inflicted the sole marring scoreless deadlock upon the Red and White's record, but the talented Berkeley outfit is expected to wage a terrific battle in what rates as a do-or-die contest for them since they dropped an opening day 2-1 overtime thriller to the powerful University of San Francisco.

Though the Ram mentor rates his present team a shade above last season's booters, he also states that improvement is evidenced all over the circuit of which this college is the only two-year member.

Any one of a quartet of aggregations, including this Saturday's pair of combatants along with USF and Stanford, rates a chance of going all the way.

The home squad tried to hold down the lopsided score against Santa Clara, with the first-stringers playing less than a half, but this is one time Goliath really made David look like a midget. The feeble opposition made the Rams look exceptionally great, helped by the last-minute lineup switch putting Dave Kingsley, who tallied four times, at inside right and Bohdan Papara at center forward.

Goalkeeper Gary DeLong had little to do as he had to field but three Bronco scoring attempts all day. Veterans Jim Lynch with three goals, Emil Ruiz, Ed Zumot and vastly-improved Ken Wright with a pair of scores fared very well as did newcomer Al Korbus, a three-goal man.

Flavio Valiente, Charles Bowker, and Vince Liu booted across one point apiece in the lopsided encounter.

The contest with Santa Clara failed to give the college a true test of its ability, and only after the tilt against California will the Rams know where they stand in the league.

Opening game scores:

CCSF 15, Santa Clara 1
USF 2, California 1
Stanford 5, San Jose State 1
Cal Aggies 6, SF State 0

RAMBLINGS

By Frank Dunne

DURING the last couple of seasons the Associated Men Student intramural basketball league has been plagued by forfeitures. Many ideas have been brought forward in an effort to curb this problem, but no solid solution has been found to date.

The problem became so great last semester that a number of teams were dropped from further competition because of it. But such drastic measures would hardly seem necessary if all the members of the squads understood the problem.

Let's take a typical example:

Tonight is the night your team is scheduled to play in the 'mural loop. After rushing through home work and gobbling down dinner, you head for the campus. The game is set for 7 p.m., so you have to fight the tail-end of the rush-hour traffic on the way to the court.

After donning your uniform (Bermuda shorts, sweat-shirt and a pair of beat-up keds) you head upstairs to practice a bit before the game.

The other members of your team are present, so you work-up a few plays; nothing like a few plays to make you feel like a team. The thrill of the impending battle has overcome your senses and even the Lakers or the Celtics seem like fair game.

Soon the referees, the timekeeper and the scorekeeper arrive on the scene and the stage is now set. Visions of glory ramble through your head. "Tonight I'm going to score 90 points and save the victory for the team with a last second bucket."

But then you notice one vital factor is missing, the other team. The bubble of greatness bursts. No 90 points or last second bucket; only a shower and a long ride home. What's the use, what's the use?

* * *

This is the situation many of the teams faced last semester.

The league is for the enjoyment of all and should not be taken for granted by selfish individuals who show up only when the spirit moves them.

Hockey and lacrosse were originated by the American Indians.

Local Striders Lose Out To Bakersfield

A strong Bakersfield team copped first place October 8 to win the Sacramento State Invitational Meet and out-run both Sacramento and San Francisco.

Led by Leon Stroughter and Tom Jennings, the Ram harriers came in third behind Sacramento.

Next meet of the season will be against Sierra and San Jose City College at San Jose.

Intramural Loop Continues Tuesday With Club Clashes

The Intramural Basketball League, an integral part of the college activity program, is now in full swing. The league, under the direction of Jack Gaddy, director of athletics, plays on specified week nights.

Next Tuesday night in the club division the Recreation Association will pit their strength against the "mighty" Guardsman, the Hui Aloha Kawes against the Newman Club, and finally, the Hotel and Restaurant Society will meet Hui Aloha Allis Club.

BASKETBALL SIGNUP

All men who plan to turn out for the varsity basketball squad will meet in the men's gymnasium on Friday, October 28, during College Hour. Coach Sid Phelan warned that all men who desire to be considered for the team must attend this meeting.

The club this year will be dependent to a great extent on new rookie material as there is not a big number of veterans expected to return. This means that if a newcomer is good enough he stands a very good chance of playing ball on the first string.

The Ram cagers made a name for themselves last season when they fought their way into the top slot of the Big Eight Conference.

JUDO SPONSOR SOUGHT

The newly formed Judo Kai (society) is in desperate need of a faculty sponsor. The club, which meets during College Hour, has thus far been unable to find a faculty member to sponsor its activities.

The person who volunteers for the post would be under little real obligation in so far as time goes, club leaders emphasize. His primary task would be to oversee the club meeting during College Hour.

Until now the club, which boasts well over 140 members, has been allowed to meet without faculty sponsorship, and has provided such attractions as movies at the meeting on the ancient sport.

The generosity of the college administration in letting the club continue without a sponsor cannot be counted on indefinitely, however.

This is why the club is in dire need of faculty sponsorship if they are to continue. Any interested party is urged to inform Dean Ralph Hillsman as soon as possible.

R.A. DAY DUE

One of the main events held annually by the Recreation Association, the All-Bay Area College Sports Day, is scheduled this year for Saturday, October 29, from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. here.

Elizabeth Wirth, RA adviser, said that approximately 250 students are expected to attend. The colleges that have been invited are Monterey Peninsula, San Jose, San Mateo, Foothill, Santa Rosa, Hartnell, Cabrillo, Marin, Contra Costa, Diablo, Napa and Oakland.

The activities will probably include badminton, bowling, volleyball, tennis, archery and folk dancing. The competition is expected to be fierce but friendly in all sports.

Another sports day, to be held at the College of San Mateo, is scheduled for December 3.

BLOCKMEN PLAN AHEAD

At last Friday's meeting of the Block SF Society, Jack Hickey was appointed vice president of the club. Hickey replaced Jim Bush, who is the Club Activities Board president.

Also on the agenda was the discussion of the advisability of having a society historian. The idea was the subject of much discussion, and a decision is expected at the next meeting this Friday.

Adviser Lou Vasquez is awaiting permission from school department authorities on the club's proposed operation of a concession stand in the college's new stadium. If this plan is approved, the stand will be the club's project for the semester.

Friday Night's Frosh Ball To Feature Two Bands, Cutest Couple Contest

Most important event on the freshman social calendar is the Frosh Ball which is to be held from 9 p.m. to midnight this Friday at The Village, Columbus Avenue and Lombard Street.

With the ball open to all of the students of the college, Gary Wilkening, Freshman Class president, expects the Village to be filled to capacity.

Two bands will be on hand at the Village with Dick Reinhart and his orchestra providing the music upstairs and the Dixieland Five playing jazz downstairs.

Admission will be free with an Associated Student membership card or $2.50 otherwise. Dress is semi-formal with dark suits for the men and cocktail dresses for the women.

Four committees are planning the dance, Wilkening said; the publicity committee, which is advertising the dance; the bid committee, which is designing a different style of bid; the floor committee, which will assist the Campus Police in maintaining order; and the cutest couple committee, which is in charge of the cutest couple contest.

Judges of the cutest couple contest at the Village are Joe Egri, Associated Student president, Dean Mary Golding, Dean Ralph Hillsman and Mrs. Dick Reinhart, the wife of the ball's orchestra leader.

To be eligible for the contest, one of the couple must be a freshman and one must have an AS card. Phi Beta Rho is donating trophies to the cutest couple and Alpha Sigma Delta is supplying flowers for the two runners-up.

Corsages for the ball can be ordered from the college's Retail Floristry Club at the information booth in Science Hall through today. Dick Lendali, club vice president, said that corsages will be delivered at the dance on presentation of a receipt.

Three types of corsages are available with a discount of 20 per cent offered to members of the AS.

Campus Picture Changes

GI Enrollment Drops 20 Per Cent In Five Years; No Increase Due

By Hugh Philo

From a total of 25 per cent veteran enrollment in City College in 1955 to a five per cent veteran enrollment under the current GI Bill was the dramatic picture revealed today by Robin L. Dunn, Veterans Affairs counselor.

The above figures are even more impressive when it is remembered that the eligibility cut-off date for the Korean GI bill benefits was only a little more than five years ago.

From 1955 until 1958 the enrollment figures varied from 1500 to 800 a year. It is expected that the present figure of 400 will dwindle to about 150 by the Spring semester of 1962.

The advancing years and transfers are the reasons for the waning veteran enrollment. The average age of those now enrolled is in the mid-twenties although at least two are retired Navy men.

Despite the veterans being older than the average student, their grades are up with, and possibly a bit higher than the non-veteran.

A veteran at City College is permitted to earn up to 60 hours credit, while enrolled under the Korean GI Bill.

The important thing for all veterans to note is their individual deadline date. After this deadline date is reached, the veteran must pursue his program continuously, except that he may suspend his program for a period not to exceed 12 consecutive months without prior VA approval.

If the veteran should, for some reason, exceed this 12-month period, he must prove to the VA that the reasons were beyond his control, before he can continue his program.

Posner Sees Russian Threat In Major Educational Advances

By Tom Kennedy

Communist Russia's tremendous progress in the last 40 years, especially in the field of education, presents a real challenge to United States' world leadership, according to Dr. Russell Posner, social science and history instructor here.

Posner, who spent last summer touring the Iron Curtain countries, made his remarks in a College Hour lecture last Friday sponsored by the Newman Club.

He will talk again on the same subject this Friday, October 21, in the first of the Faculty-Student lecture series. It will be given during College Hour in Room S-100.

Posner was most impressed by the Russians' all-out attempt to wipe out illiteracy, which plagued the country such a short time ago.

Students spend only eight years in school before entering college and Moscow University's main building is the second tallest building in all Europe.

Posner said that Russia's claims that she publishes more books than any other nation are probably true.

Promising students from Asia and Africa who otherwise could not afford such a luxury are granted five years of college education in Moscow free from all expenses and later sent back to their home countries as exponents of Communism.

Christianity is apparently decreasing gradually after 43 years of oppression by the Soviets, according to Posner. He said that less than 10 per cent of the Russian churches have remained open and three-fourths of the worshippers were elderly men and women.

Council Approves Substantial Portion Of Proposed Budgets

With far greater dispatch than its federal counterpart, Student Council approved a total of more than 44 per cent of its $31,000 budget during the last two weeks.

The legislative body voted funds totaling $13,734.35 to various organizations for services during the semester, ranging from $18 for the Social Committee to $4240 in executive expenses supervised by Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management.

Other budget requests approved were $2035 for the Little Theater, $385 for the Associated Men Students, $679 for the Associated Women Students, $2781.21 for the Campus Police, $773 for the Freshman Class, $1609.76 for the Rally Commissioner, $1415.76 for the varsity basketball team, and $418 for KCSF.

Council was repeatedly confused by motions adding to or subtracting funds from the amounts proposed. At one point, the issue became so garbled that Associated Student President Joe Egri had to read the minutes to find the main motion on the floor.

Finance Chairman Bill Keane warmly congratulated council for its rapid-fire method of dealing with the budgets this semester.

He stated that never before had so much of the business been dispensed with in so short a time.

In its short respites from monetary problems, council dwelt with few other issues. Charles Hanks, chairman of the Student Faculty Relations Committee, announced that, after meeting with members of the faculty, the committee favored abolishing the Student-Faculty Coffee Hour held once during each semester.

Applicants File For Part Time, Christmas Work

Students planning to work during the Christmas period can begin now by filing their applications in the college placement center, Room 188, Science Hall.

While the Christmas season is three months away, many firms have initiated recruitment drives on college campuses for qualified applicants to carry the heavy load in sales, stock work, shipping, wrapping, and cashiering responsibilities.

Employers are willing to hire part-time workers now for training and polishing up for the holiday rush.

"It is advisable to be firmly set in a part-time position now in order to insure a full time assignment during the Christmas vacation," Joseph A. Amori, placement director, said, adding that there is little hiring during the vacation season as such.

Fifteen hundred students have registered for part-time jobs this semester setting a new high record for the local placement center. In addition, 100 students have applied for full-time employment.

Included among these applicants are several alumni members who have just completed their selective service requirements.

Engineering and business graduates formed the bulk of the alumni returning for job counseling, guidance and placement.

The part-time job market, Amori said, is excellent at this time for the applicant who possesses a marketable skill such as typing, shorthand, accounting, office machine operation, credit interviewing, and for those who are skilled as laboratory technicians, X-ray technicians, duplicating machine operators, NRC machine operators, and in hotel and restaurant skills.

Most jobs call for special hours of work, with many from 1 p.m. until the closing time of the particular establishment.

Deadline For Available Scholarships Nov. 21

Among scholarships available this semester will be those offered by the Chinese Students' Club and the International Relations Club.

Deadline for applications has been set for Wednesday, November 21, but student applicants may begin registering Thursday, November 15, in the deans' offices, S-149.

Students are considered on four major points, scholastic ability, personal need, character and activities.

The Chinese Club awards two scholarships, whereas the IRC gives as many as possible to foreign students only.

Last year's recipients of the CSC scholarships were May Chun, Jeng Jeng Tang, Graham Windridge and Thomas Murphy. The International Club scholarships were awarded to Fereldown Virdeh, Iran; Annop Assoratgoon, Thailand, and Bente Nielsen, Denmark.

More Discounts, Benefits Due For AS Card Holders

Associated Student cardholders may be able to receive additional discounts to those already awarded them, according to Carolyn Vukasin, AS card sales chairman.

Negotiations are in progress for discounts to the showings of Sunrise At Campobello.

Sales of AS cards totaled more than 2700 as of last week, Miss Vukasin said. With the coming of the Frosh Ball on Friday, October 21, she hopes the dance will further increase card sales.

When sales hit 2900, another thousand cards will be ordered.

Cardholders may attend football games in the new college stadium and City College games away from home without admission cost, Miss Vukasin stated. She added that those without a card must pay a dollar each.

Nursing Program Starts Fall '61

In accordance with a recent Board of Education authorization, the college will add to its curriculum a nursing education program in the Fall semester of 1961.

President Louis G. Conlan indicated that the new plan will lead to a Junior College Associate of Arts Degree and qualification as a registered nurse.

No additional laboratory facilities or equipment is anticipated for the new curriculum, and students will receive instruction in laboratories already established at the college.

Various hospitals in the Bay Area are expected to co-operate in the implementation of the new project at the college. Hospital co-operation will include the use of certain facilities and the utilization of some technical advice.

A unique arrangement of required courses will allow nursing students to complete a three-year requirement within two years and two summer sessions.

On October 11, Ganelle Griffin was appointed to the college's faculty as the first member of the newly formed department. Miss Griffin received her diploma in nursing in 1943 at Queen's Hospital School of Nursing in Hawaii. She is presently Director of the School of Nursing at Mt. Zion Hospital and President of the San Francisco League for Nursing.

Pledge Week Dance At Cal Club Nov. 18

The Inter-Fraternity Council will sponsor a semi-formal dance Friday, November 18, which will be the climax of Pledge Week, at the California Club, 1750 Clay Street, from 9 to 12 midnight.

Don Carl will supply the music for the dance, and the new pledges will furnish the entertainment in the form of a song fest.

Music, Art Wares, Dances Highlight Seventh Annual IRC Fair November 4

The International Relations Club's seventh annual International Fair will be held Friday, November 4, from 8 to 11 p.m. in the Marina Junior High School Auditorium, Fillmore and Bay Streets, Abdollah Ghaen Afshar, IRC president, announced recently.

Features of the fair will include music, art wares and dances representing many countries of the world, including Russia, Japan, China, the United States, and the Philippines. There will also be a special food display by students from the different countries.

More students of various nationalities are expected to participate in this year's fair than in previous years.

Admission price for the fair has been set at 50 cents for students and $1 for the general public. Proceeds will go toward scholarships for foreign students attending the college. Tickets are available in S-186.

Program planning are IRC officers, Gharib-Afshar, president, from Iran; Vice President Delfina Aldrete, from Panama; Secretary Catherine Norwood, from the United States; Treasurer Annis Shamiyeh, from Jordan, and Historian Ruth Salinas, from Nicaragua.

Held during each Fall semester, the fair is one of the largest for the college, as well as for the IRC.

IRC meetings are held each Friday during College Hour, in C-258.

Club Cavalcade: Exams Halt Affairs

By Pat Perkins

AS THE first midterm period has now enveloped the college, club activities and affairs have slowed for this week. Students are now busily studying for quizzes and are neglecting social plans.

Rushees are requested by the Inter-Sorority Council to attend the various firesides, which start this Sunday. By participating in all of the firesides, the students who are rushing may obtain a broader outlook on sororities. The dress for these events is casual campus clothes.

Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority will hold its fireside on October 26 at the home of Birgitta Bergman. The new officers for this semester are Miss Bergman, president; Norma Ottiniano, vice president; Mary Ellen Wheatly, secretary; Shirley Young, treasurer; and Margaret Lindstrom, historian.

The Retail Floristry Club will sell corsages for the Frosh Ball today with a 20 per cent discount given to AS cardholders. Students may order the flowers at the information booth, by the silver pole, in Science Hall. The club will offer three choices of flowers.

Bowling teams are now being formed for the Recreation Association league. The teams bowl on Monday nights at the Mission Bowling Alley at 6 p.m.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority will hold its rushing luncheon October 23 in Smith Hall. The sisters will dress according to the Roaring 20's theme. There will be outside entertainment featured, including the Hilltoppers from the University of San Francisco.

The brothers of Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity were hosts to a huge turnout of fraternity rushees at its first rushing affair and are now undergoing tedious planning for their traditional luau.

Coeds Plan Variety Of Events

Rush Dinners, Luncheons To Begin Sunday

Following a series of sorority firesides, individual rushing luncheons and dinners held on campus, will start next Sunday, Inter-Sorority Council President Joanne Costello said today.

The first luncheon, featuring a Roaring Twenties' theme, will be given by Gamma Kappa Beta sorority Sunday, followed by Delta Psi's Mardi Gras dinner that night.

Phi Beta Rho will have its Italian dinner Tuesday night, while Kappa Phi has reserved next Thursday as the date for its Chinese dinner.

Theta Tau's traditional luau will be held Sunday, November 6. Zeta Chi will follow that evening with a dinner.

Final event of the rushing season is the coffee preference hour Tuesday, November 8, given by each sorority. Rushees are requested to attend only two preference hours.

The following day rushees fill out sorority preference slips in the dean of women's office, S-150, and are permitted to list up to four choices.

On Thursday, November 10, rushees may pick up their invitations to pledge in the dean's office. That Sunday, sororities hold their pledge instruction.

This is the day the pledges are given their pledge outfits and are informed of pledge week activities. They are also given pledge names, pledge pins and demerit cards and the songs pledges must know by the next morning to kick off pledge week with music.

AWS Prepares Tea, Fashion Show, Nov. 16

On the fashion bandwagon this fall, Wednesday, November 16, will be the Associated Women Students with the Fall Tea and Fashion Show, to be held in Smith Hall, from 3 to 5 p.m.

In preparation for this show 30 women representing many organizations and varied interests were picked to attend the final selection scheduled Friday by Macy's fashion co-ordinator. Handling the first screening were Diane Beeson, Susan Murphy, Marlee Meharry and Melia Furgis, women's physical education instructor here.

A panorama of scenes representing San Francisco will be the setting and theme on which this affair will be centered. Previewing these fall fashions with the AWS and faculty are 30 senior high school students from the Bay Area. At the tea the newly appointed sorority pledges plan to serve. In keeping with the "fashion first" motto of the show, attire will be dressy dress.

Arranging this event is an impressive array of committees and chairmen, namely, Miss Beeson in charge of models, Jackie Young of publicity, Hope Vogel of decorations, Carol Hinkson of programs, Miss Costello of clean-up, Marlene Bobrow of serving, Nancy Paraga of registration, Grace Carbone of hospitality, Edi Huver of entertainment, Birgitta Bergman of coat check, Pat Murphy as clothes coordinator, Miss Meharry as commentator, Kathy Hallocks of invitations, Margaret Kriete of decoration clean-up, and Linda Compton of publicity.

Discount Tickets To S.F. Symphony Going Rapidly, Some Still Available

Rapidly disappearing are the special cut rate season tickets which went on sale here last week to 20 concerts by the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

Bob Pacini, chairman of the college's Symphony Forum, which makes available the discount tickets, urged interested students to purchase their tickets immediately.

Only a few tickets are left, Pacini said, in the $23 and $30 price range and added that students should act now in order to avoid disappointment.

Tickets can be purchased here at the bank in Smith Hall. Business hours for the bank are 8:45-11 a.m. and 12:01-2 p.m.

The quick sale of the tickets was a repeat of last year's sale, which saw the economical tickets grabbed up by students at a similar fast rate.

The forum chairman also said that if any student is unable to purchase tickets he should contact him in the office of The Guardsman, S-304, or should leave his name at the bank. They should also specify what price ticket they desire.

There is a possibility, Pacini said, that if needed more tickets can be gotten for students here, but they must submit their requests within the next two weeks.

Of the 20 concerts scheduled, 16 will feature guest artists, including both visiting conductors and soloists. Two of the concerts will be devoted to major choral works, Bach's St. Matthew Passion on March 29, and Berlioz's Damnation Of Faust on May 24. One concert will be purely orchestral and the other will be concert versions of two short operas.

The season opens in December and concludes with the Berlioz work May 24. The performances, all given on Wednesday evenings, are presented in the Opera House at 8:30 p.m.

Pacini also disclosed that the college's forum is planning to undertake a series of College Hour concerts here.

He stressed, however, that nothing definite can be said at this time, for the proposed series was still in the early planning stages, but hopes it will be launched next semester.

Pre-Registration Faces Overhaul

Editorial: Speak Now, Or...

IT'S NO SECRET that the student body has grown so that the present pre-registration system used here is outmoded. Recognizing this fact, Walter McCloud of the counseling department here has issued an invitation to students to turn in suggestions to his office, S-160, on how the system can be bettered.

The time to act is now.

This is a splendid opportunity for students to voice their opinions on an important matter, and we urge students make constructive suggestions on the problem.

You have two choices. Quit the moaning and groaning and take advantage of the opportunity to better the situation, or:

Keep your mouth shut.

Student, Faculty Aid Asked To Crack Dilemma

By Bob Hacker

That serious shortcomings are apparent in the pre-registration program currently used at the college was frankly admitted last week by Walter McCloud, counselor here.

He called on students and faculty alike to aid in solving this problem by submitting any suggestions they believe will be helpful.

These suggestions will be evaluated at a faculty and administrative meeting to be held next Wednesday at a place not yet decided upon.

McCloud hopes that all students interested will tell him their suggestions or write them on a piece of paper and bring them to his office in S-160.

The basic problem involved in pre-registration is to provide equal opportunity for some 3000 to 4000 students to secure registration numbers that will insure them of enrollment in the desired program at registration itself.

When talking of the latest pre-registration rush, he said, "The biggest problem was too many students."

He stated he arrived on pre-registration day at 6:30 a.m., expecting to find one to two hundred students who could be "run through" easily.

After finishing with this 200 he thought he would be able to take care of the rest of the students as they arrived. Instead, he found five to six hundred students, some of whom had stayed overnight or had arrived there at 3, 4 or 5 a.m.

When he had finished with these five to six hundred students he observed that 1000 to 1500 had come to take their places.

With only eight persons to keep students in line and give instructions there was considerable cutting in line and occasionally the line, which was supposed to be two or three abreast, was eight to nine abreast.

Many suggestions have already been offered by students and faculty to find a solution for this problem. One of them is to have the student get his registration number when he consults his counselor.

Another is to have many different points around the college where a student may get a registration number. Both of these solutions have their drawbacks. McCloud, speaking of a solution, said, "There isn't a perfect plan because you just can't please everyone."

In reviewing the subject, McCloud said that the administration is open to suggestions and any and all would be appreciated.

All students who are still in need of a registration number and plan to attend City College next semester can obtain a number at the counseling offices.

CJCSGA Adopts 3 Major Proposals For State Action

By Frank Dunne

Although parliamentary entanglements marred the recent Northern Region meeting of the California Junior College Student Government Association, held at College of San Mateo, out of the confusion three important resolutions were passed.

Receiving the unanimous vote of the assembly was the resolution giving the CJCSGA's support to the Junior College Foreign Relations Conference to be held at Santa Rosa next semester.

At this conference many of the problems encountered by the foreign students in this country will be discussed.

The second resolution passed concerned a play-off game between the Northern California football champion and the Southern champion. This game would be played in either part of the state.

This resolution has been brought before the state convention of the CJCSGA in previous years but the southern delegation has always defeated it.

Bob Ross, one of the college's delegates, placed a resolution before the assembly. His statement concerned the selection of officials for the State Basketball Tournament. If his motion passes the state convention, the CJCSGA will recommend to the State Athletic Commission that Chapter 12, Section 12.02 of the Junior College Athletic Code be amended.

This change would mean that the commission would pick the officials for the tournament, thus providing for a more impartial choice.

All these resolutions must pass the state convention of the CJCSGA before they can be formally adopted.

Joe Egri, Associated Student president here, who led the college's delegation to the convention, repeatedly called for order in the meeting but the other delegations would not cooperate.

Egri was pleased, however, by the business-like attitude shown by the local delegation, and commented that in every workshop their influence was strongly felt.

Newmanites Host Halloween Dance

A Halloween dance entitled Tiptoe Through The Tombstone, sponsored by the City College Newman Club, will highlight social activities this Friday night.

Dancing will be from 9 p.m. to midnight at St. Emydius Parish Hall, 251 Jules off Ocean Avenue. All students at the college are invited, and may wear either casual dress or costumes.

Admission is 50 cents, and it will not be necessary to bring a date.

Special feature of the evening will be the presentation of the tombstone of Three-Fingered Jack, a famous outlaw, as the door prize. Three-Fingered Jack was murdered a century ago on October 28, 1860, and buried on Boot Hill, according to club officials.

Class Drop Out Slips Due By November 2

Students wishing to drop courses must see their counselors, obtain the required forms and necessary signatures, and file the completed forms in the registrar's office on or before Wednesday, November 2, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, said today.

The counseling department and the registrar's office joined in urging that students obtain their drop-out forms as early as possible to assure completion before the deadline.

Miss Learnard added that 4656 courses have already been added or dropped.

Election 1960: Men, Issues Place Heavy Demand On Voter

(Editor's Note: This is the first of two editorials dealing with the American presidential election of 1960—the men and issues involved and the responsibilities facing the voter in this crucial contest.)

THERE can be no doubt about it—this is an election year. More than that, it is a presidential election year. The stakes are high, and time is running short for the candidates seeking what is perhaps the most demanding and brutal job in the world—the presidency of the United States of America.

Everywhere about us these days we see evidence of the contest, the campaign buttons, the ads urging everyone to "get out the vote," and the numerous slogans from "Don't pass the buck; give it to the party of your choice," to "It's Kennedy for me."

This promises to be one of the tightest and closest election duels ever fought, and it should be. The selection of a president by the voter will indeed be a difficult decision to make, for in John Kennedy and Richard Nixon the country has two gifted, intelligent and extraordinary young men.

Often these days the word "young" is stressed. It is either denounced or praised. We believe it should be the latter. It is foolish to assume that a man in the comparatively young age bracket of Nixon and Kennedy would not be able to assume the task of the presidency.

In fact, youth might be an asset rather than a liability, for the vigor and strength and the necessary bit of daring that accompanies youth would be beneficial to meet the enormous and awesome decisions that await the new chief executive.

We believe that in the future youth will be stressed even more, perhaps even demanded.

Another issue involved in the current campaign is the question of religion. Supposedly, however, religion is not an issue in this contest.

Who says so?

Religion, though probably not to the extent and proportion it was in the 1928 election, seems to be very much of an issue with a group of small-headed, narrow-minded persons who show themselves to be rabble-rousers of the vilest sort.

The term, in much use today, describing them is bigots. They're nothing of the kind. They're SMALL-ots in every conceivable connotation of the word.

The manner in which a man chooses to worship—or not to worship—whatever he may or may not believe, is no one's business but the individual's. Period. We believe, however, that the majority of voting Americans have progressed past the stage where they would judge a candidate for the presidency on the basis of his religious beliefs.

What we have before us, then, are two strong and clever young men, both believing themselves to be the right man to assume command of the White House, two men differing little in what they think are the best goals for the nation, but two men widely separated on what they believe to be the best method for attaining those goals.

Most Americans, confronted by two such evenly divided candidates, are still undecided in their selection, and this is good. Each voter should take time to study the candidates, their stands on various matters and their past records. These alone should be the standards on which to base a choice.

But study the candidates one must, for only after careful and long surveillance of the men and issues can one intelligently come to a decision in this most important election.

Students Seek Odd Jobs In Pursuit Of Education; New Positions Offer Challenge

Everyone knows that students are able to work their way through college doing odd jobs. But does everyone know how odd some of the jobs can be?

City College students hold, or have held, every type of job known and some that were thought to be non-existent. They have been everything from administrative assistants to zookeepers.

Shots At RAMdom

By Christopher Wise

THERE is more than one way to solve a difficult problem. Sometimes the double negative approach must be used.

Witness the parking lot at the far north end of the campus by the construction area. Many students were disregarding the "Parking by Permit Only" sign and parking unstickered cars. The Campus Police could not cope with the problem. Then someone tore down the sign and now it looks like illegal parking has become legal.

• • •

SOME OF THE other papers in town have been shifting their help around of late. Columnists have become editors and reporters have become columnists.

That type of change is all right for papers which think they must resort to such a thing, but The Guardsman doesn't need it. Notice there is never any improvement in this column.

• • •

THE COUNTRY is flooded with the results of public opinion polls. There is the Gallup Poll, the Roper Poll, and even the Popcorn Poll.

A poll was taken recently in the reservoir parking area. Signs in car windows were counted to see who was for whom. In one row of cars the results were: five for Nixon, three for Kennedy, one for sale.

• • •

STUDENTS OF various courses sometimes cannot see the forest for the trees because they are overtrained and have studied too hard.

One industrious student of French, who carries a book all over the place and studies like a little demon, walked into the cafeteria the other noon, walked up to the sign that says, "a la carte only," and asked for the complete luncheon.

• • •

INSTRUCTORS never know what kind of answers they will get to their questions. Some are foolish, some are funny, some are classics.

A classic: In a communications class the instructor asked for an example of a figure of speech. One answer: "One hundred and seventy-five words per minute."

• • •

ONE YOUNG LADY about the campus asked another if her physical education class was coeducational. "Oh yes," said young lady number two, "we have all nationalities."

This semester a young Italian student here is working as a French waiter. Last semester saw the son of an airline executive hard at work for a bus company.

"There's no business like show business," would make a good motto for some people who are working part-time. To mention only a few, one student here is an assistant manager at the Haight, another at the Rio, and a third is doorman at the St. Francis among jobholders who have gone into the theater.

Probably the oddest jobs that have ever been offered to students are a couple that recently crossed the desk of the placement director, Joseph A. Amori. One sounded like hard work; the other sounded fairly easy. Both sounded pretty strange.

The first opening was for a young man to dig graves for pets in the afternoon. He had to love animals and had to be skilled enough to make the coffins himself.

The second sounded easy and looked like a good opportunity to study while working and vice versa. An elderly gentleman was looking for a young male student who would chauffeur him out to the race track every afternoon.

While the boss was inside improving the breed, the student could sit in the car and study. For that matter he could do whatever he wished so long as he was in the car and waiting after the last race to drive the boss home (or to the bank).

One young man got a job selling magazines from door to door and was hired as a houseboy by the occupant of the first home he approached.

Another found a job with a messenger service and was hired as an office boy by one of the companies to which he made deliveries.

Occasionally, after-class jobs make strange bedfellows. One student who thinks that the Taft-Hartley Law is the greatest thing since the Ten Commandments got himself a night job as a janitor and, after joining the union, found himself walking a picket line.

Most students try to get jobs that are in line with their major course of study. But, paradoxically, there are chemistry majors selling newspapers and a journalism major delivering prescriptions.

There is a business major doing odd jobs in a printing house and a graphic arts student working for a stockbroker.

So far, there have been no reports of day students teaching night classes, but then we haven't asked everybody yet.—By C.W.

Foresight

By Paul Plansky

ON AMERICA'S political stage the eight-year smash hit, The Democrats' Dilemma, continues its sellout performances but will end its Boston run in two weeks. Whether the play moves into Washington's White House Theater on January 20 depends largely upon the strength of the current bill, Grand Old Party At Ike's.

The former play is a moving melodrama, accented by Dixie appeal, farm reform, love of labor, and the flavor of the new frontier. The latter production, although more conservative in nature, offers a liberal in the leading role; its message is prosperity at home, stability abroad.

The Democrats' Dilemma is a Stevenson Special, and Grand Old Party At Ike's is produced by the Dewey Die-Hard Co. (Both two-time losers are still fighting it out backstage.)

Regardless of which presentation appeals to one's taste, the play is the thing. Each of these shows is only one-half of a larger production—The 1960 Presidential Election, perhaps the most meaningful and magnanimous in our country's history.

Yes, the play is the thing. The music, the sets, the costumes, even the actors are merely a means to an end. That end is either to stimulate the spirit with a cause or elevate the mind with an ideal. Only the comedy is an exception—more light-hearted and entertaining, less dramatic and didactic.

Yet, this campaign is a far cry from comedy. No matter which cause your spirit may follow or which ideals win your favor, it still isn't difficult to be overwhelmed by the fanfare of bombastic campaigning.

Those jubilant bands ringing out with California Here I Come for Nixon or Anchors Away for Kennedy are the musical score supplementing the main show. The remote mines, the prairie whistle-stop, the industrial metropolis, the valley farms scattered among 50 states provide the sets for each ensuing scene.

The colorful buttons, hats, and banners—the Indian head-dress and the American Legion caps—all these are merely props and costumes. Well, what about the men, the party standard-bearers; aren't these great men important? Are they merely fixtures in this great play?

Of course not, but they're certainly not as indispensable to the production as they seem. Each candidate can be thought of as an actor cast by his respective political party to memorize the lines of its party platform and undermine the planks of its opponent's.

Americans should keep in mind that from the flamboyant, tumultuous aspect of the campaign can be elicited the essence of the election—the ISSUES. For it is the ISSUES, not the accessories that present a plot, a moral, a message. The play is the thing!

Realizing this cardinal rule of election campaigns, one can relax and view the political stage in its two remaining weeks with both authority and clairvoyance.

Before the curtain goes up for the final act of this "democratic drama," let's pause for an intermission.

Please pass the popcorn.

Coffee Kicks Cash Into AS Coffers

Although many problems arise from the increasing number of students enrolled at the college, one important advantage is that much needed funds are being poured into the coffers of the Associated Students.

As enrollment increases, so do congestion in the cafeteria, sales in the Ramporium, and returns from the vending machines in the Science Hall basement.

Proceeds from machines are expected to exceed $3000 this semester, the third largest source of income for the AS treasury.

The basement where the machines are located has no special name; most students refer to it as "down for coffee."

The "coffee break" on the job has become a traditional part of American life. Profits are ample proof that vending machines play an important part in many students' college life.

The coffee machine alone issues around $12 a day in nickels as change. It holds a total of 900 cups and is emptied and refilled at least once during each day.

The milk and ice cream machines each have a capacity of 210 cartons and bars. The candy machine holds 344 bars.

Even though the space is small, hundreds of students use the machines daily. The problem of finding a safe place to stand or put books or find change may seem small compared to the crowds in the cafeteria but any "machine addict" would agree that they are big enough.

Blue Books, Texts Sell Like Hotcakes At Test Time

Students Burn Midnight Oil To Cross Midterm Hurdles

By Lester On

Blue books and textbooks were selling like hotcakes last week as a record enrollment went through the semester's first midterm examinations.

Although the purchase of blue books is customary and understandable, the number of textbooks sold was enough to raise eyebrows if not enough to raise grades.

Other means, however, were resorted to as "how-to" and "refresher" books paced the bestsellers in this first of the two traditional Great Debates between instructors and students each semester.

While, in some cases, there actually was nothing to refresh, attempts were made far into the night as notes and texts were hurriedly reviewed—some for the first time.

For some students, however, midterm week was just another week. Their exams were taken the week before because some of their instructors, in trying to stagger the student's exam schedule, only succeeded in staggering the students themselves by unwittingly moving up the midterm period by a week.

There was the other extreme, too, as some students managed to take their exams in lumps of two or three a day in addition to other expected lumps after the grades are in.

Despite these unusual circumstances, however, the majority of students took their exams on schedule and the unpleasant task of last-minute studying as best they could.

Because of the record enrollment this semester, John J. Brady, coordinator of student welfare, anticipates the equally unpleasant task of sending out 850 warnings to students whose midterm results reveal them to be in precarious positions.

Last week was the week of rude awakening for many who do not seem to realize that summer is over.

Next midterm will find blue books selling as hot as ever and perhaps some of the books sold last week will be back on the shelves.

Gridders Buck Mustangs In Friday Crucial

By Tom Kennedy

PACIFIC MEMORIAL STADIUM, STOCKTON, Oct. 25—A head-to-head clash between two of the front-runners of the Big Eight Conference takes place here Friday night, October 28, at 8 p.m. when the City College of San Francisco Rams encounter the Stockton College Mustangs.

The home town Hayburners are campaigning for their sixth consecutive league title, and the second under young head coach Larry Kentera. Only 35 years of age, Kentera has already amassed an impressive record of 57 wins, 29 losses, and 1 tie.

Legendary Amos Alonzo Stagg, the "grand old man" of American football, served as one of Kentera's advisers. Then in his eighth year at the college, Stagg, 98 years old, exerted a steadying influence upon the young coaching staff.

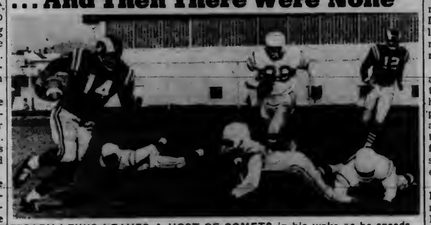
Stockton suffered heavy graduation losses from last season's team, but apparently has enough strength left to make the 1960 race a four-way struggle. Oakland and San Mateo are expected to be the other colleges in championship contention.

The Mustangs won their league opener against Santa Rosa 26-12, three weeks ago. A week later, the Santa Rosa crew lost a narrow 14-8 decision to the Thunderbirds from Oakland.

Veteran quarterbacks Bob Mattos and Bob Mingram direct Stockton's "Multiple T" offense, which includes an interesting variation known as the "Box T."

Swift freshman halfbacks Mike Noack, John Skaggs and Carl Agbulos, plus veterans Lee Quigley and George Cohen give the Hayburners plenty of "horses."

Kentera's interior line averages nearly 215 pounds per man, while four returnees, including starters Jim Barber and Mike Northeimer, supply ample material at the end positions.



San Francisco has some fine backs of its own in Tom Piggee and Gary Lewis. These two played major roles in the victory over Contra Costa two weeks ago when the Rams rolled up an amazing 378 yards rushing.

Ram quarterback Mel Canavaro, who never quite makes the starting lineup but always seems to come through when most needed, will also play a big role.

Coach Kentera said before the season started that his team's success this year would depend on how much experience his squad could gather quickly before stepping into the Big Eight Conference battle. Judging from early results, it looks as though San Francisco is in for a real crucial this Friday night.

Probable starting lineups:

STOCKTON		CITY COLLEGE
Northeimer (186)	LER	(198) Peterson
Keasy (240)	LTR	(226) McGriff
Lincoln (195)	LGR	(200) Cyrdo

Kelley (212)	RGL	(191) Johnson
Robledo (225)	RTL	(210) Chiten
Barker (183)	REL	(181) Petrolanzol
Mattos (152)	QB	(175) Canavaro
Cohen (170)	RHR	(175) Piggee
Agbulos (178)	RHL	(160) Moffett
Quigley (187)	FB	(215) Lewis

Powerful Ram Soccer Squad Crushes Gator Eleven 12-1

By Ivan Temes

Once again the booters from the college looked the part of the powerhouse as they ran roughshod over the meager opposition offered by an inferior San Francisco State eleven to win easily 12-1.

The defending titlist Rams thus increased their offensive output to 27 goals in two games, but from here on in the going gets tough as they run head-on into the Cal Aggies at Davis Saturday. The Rams follow that tilt with a home contest against surprising Stanford, conquerors of the University of San Francisco, the following week.

In the "scrimmage" against SF State, as was the case the previous week with Santa Clara, the Rams jumped off to a quick lead which was not contested the rest of the game.

Dave Kingsley booted home three goals to lead the Red and White's scoring, and Ed Zumot, Vince Liu and Charles Bowker, playing in place of injured Al Korbus, continued to show a steady improvement.

Other standouts, such as Jim Lynch, Emil Ruiz, Bogdan Papara and Ken Wright, played their usually fine game but were relieved early as the reserves saw a good deal of action.

The Aggies have Coach Roy Diedericksen a bit worried as they are a step above the calibre of the opposition the Rams opened the season against. They should prove to be a genuine test of the college's ability and the outcome of this crucial encounter will mean a great deal in determining the Rams' position in the final standings.

The locals, the sole two-year college member in the conference, have done surprisingly well in the past against the larger schools, but they still have a big hurdle to surpass if they expect to defend the championship which they now hold.

After Saturday's clash and the big game the following week with Stanford, the Rams run head-on into always strong USF in a game which may be aired via radio.

Cagers Base Strength On Rookies; John Lewis Only First String Vet

Coach Sid Phelan's Ram basketballers this year find themselves faced with a strong rebuilding task if they are to match the record of last year's squad, which topped Oakland in a playoff contest to cop the Big Eight title.

All-Conference star Cleo Cofield has graduated along with Vern Coleman, Mel Wilson, Mike Carson and Dennis Bates. Phelan, who has piloted the Red and White to three titles in his five-year tenure here, named John Lewis as the lone first-string returnee.

Even so, the Rams find themselves with a good crop of returnees in Bobby Grayson, Will Rockmore, Otis Phillips, Nate Jackson and Vince Rocei, along with a bright crop of newcomers.

The college's mentor is unsure of how far his team can actually go, but still feels that they will mold into a formidable outfit. Oakland rates a preseason edge since they have two All-Conference starters.

A tough exhibition schedule opening against State champion San Jose City College is ahead for the local club.

The college will participate in the Modesto tournament the first week in January with the league schedule opening a week later. When the league competition gets underway, the Rams will probably have to rely heavily on such rookies as Charlie Williams from Berkeley, Gary Lewis, Chuck Currington, Dave Roberts, Rich Mercurio, Brad Dugan and Eli Horn.

250 Students To Attend Sports Day Saturday

Scheduled Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., the All Bay Area College Sports Day, sponsored annually by the Recreation Association, is expected to have approximately 250 students attending, according to Elizabeth K. Wirth, RA adviser.

The colleges invited are Diablo, Marin, San Jose, Napa, Oakland, Monterey Peninsula, San Mateo, Contra Costa, Sagtneli, Santa Rosa, Foothill and Cabrillo.

Activities are expected to include badminton, volleyball, folk daneing.

All activities, Mrs. Wirth said, will begin at 9 a.m.

Ram Aerial Combo, Running Attack Lead Victory March

By Harvey Hall

SANTA ROSA, Oct. 22.—Unleashing a powerful running attack, the Rams' high scoring machine defeated the win starved Santa Rosa Bear Cubs here tonight, 50-6, before an estimated homecoming crowd of 5000 fans.

Tuning up for next week's "crucial" at Stockton's Memorial Stadium against the Stockton Junior College Mustangs, the Rams rushed for a total of 288 yards. Gary Lewis, Tom Piggee and Charlie Clay led the individual ball carriers with net yards gained of 66, 62 and 30, respectively.

On the sixth play from scrimmage after the Rams had kicked off to Santa Rosa and the Bear Cubs' first drive had failed, Lewis, on a roll out pass pattern, kept the ball and scooted around right end for 66 yards and a touchdown. Lewis attempted a pass for the PAT which failed, and the score was 6-0. This Ram drive covered 83 yards in six plays.

A pass interception by Herman McKee on the Rams' 23-yard line and a return of 15 yards set up the second Ram score. After short gains by Tim Moffett and McKee, Piggee then slanted off right tackle for 44 yards and the score. Lewis passed to end Ray Greggains for the PAT and the score was 14-0.

After a strong Ram defensive unit sustained a Bear Cub drive early in the second quarter, Lewis again passed to Greggains for 38 yards and the score. The PAT kick try by Wayne Stribling was no good. Then late in the second stanza the Rams again hit pay dirt, this time from four yards out by Guy Whitaker. Mel Canavaro passed to Whitaker for the PAT. The score at half time was 28-0.

Santa Rosa kicked off to the Rams to open the second half, and on the kickoff return Lewis ran it back 87 yards for the touchdown. Lewis once more hit Greggains for the PAT. With Canavaro at the Ram controls Stribling scored after end Jere Driscoll recovered a Santa Rosa fumble on the one-yard line. Canavaro passed to Charley Smith for the PAT.

Mike Peterson scored the Rams' last score on a 32-yard pass interception. The PAT try failed. Then, on the last play of the game Santa Rosa hit the scoreboard with a Ernst Merrifield to Bill Steadman pass. The PAT was no good. All 45 men on the Rams traveling squad saw action in the contest.

The Rams suffered little on the injury list as they came out of the contest with only the usual bumps and bruises. This means that the locals will face Stockton with a healthy team.

Guardsman Tops H&R 54-11 In Surprise Victory

By some strange twist of fate the only really lopsided score in recent Intramural play was one of the biggest upsets in league history.

This statement refers to the "long overdue" victory by The Guardsman over the Hotel and Restaurant Society or any team for that matter.

The Guardsman cagers, better known as the "perennial patsies," were without words after the big game as they were literally overwhelmed with joy.

This 54-11 victory is probably the only time the "men from The G" have won a game when the other team showed up for the contest. The rest of their "wins" were nothing more than the result of forfeit.

Other action in the club division of the league saw the Recreation Association down the Hui Aloha Kawes 53-40, and the Hui Aloha Alils overcome the Newman Club by a score of 45-27.

In the independent division the Indians really put on the war paint as they topped the Harriers 37-22, and the Untouchables won over the Bachelors by forfeit.

The fraternity division doesn't begin play until tonight when the men from Phi Beta Delta will meet the Beta Tau club. Also tonight, Zeta Phi Sigma will meet Gamma Phi Ypsilon.

Tomorrow night in the independent division the Indians will play the Bachelors, and the Harriers will try to break down the "aloofness" of the Untouchables.

Judo Club Seeks Faculty Sponsor

Members of Judo Kai (society) at a recent College Hour meeting were advised by guest speaker Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, not to be discouraged because they do not as yet have a sponsor.

William Paul, one of the founders of the organization, also spoke at the meeting. The main body of his talk dealt with some of the basic phases of judo with which the club will be concerned. Paul, by the way, is a black belt holder in the sport and also belongs to various outside judo clubs.

The club, since its inception earlier in the semester, has had tremendous success insofar as student participation is concerned. The latest figure reveals that the total membership in Judo Kai exceeds the 140 mark.

Five of this number are members of the fairer sex. Incidentally, one of this brave quintet even holds a brown (intermediate) belt in the ancient sport.

There are two Kodokan (sport) schools in San Francisco. The first is the San Francisco Judo Institute.

The Koyukan Judo Club, the second school, is mainly concerned with recreation and self defense.

Champions: Many Try But Few Make It

By Frank Dunne

ONE of the greatest misconceptions in the sports world today is the old bromide: Champions are made, not born. But, by simple observation of this expression a more realistic statement is reached: Champions are born, then made.

To see the truth in this proposition just examine the facts. How many men try out for football every spring, and of this number how many make the team? Then to go on even further: how many make All-American honors in the fall?

If the bromide were true every squad in the country would be composed of All-Americans, and the public would be treated to football perfection. But this is not the case, never has been and never will be.

In a track meet many men start a race, but only one wins. The same holds true in a horse race, but that is not the point.

What makes a man stand out among many in his chosen sport? This is the main question involved, and there is not one answer but a number.

First, of course, is the physical aspect. A man must be born with the physical assets to be a winner. This is his basic equipment and if he does not possess these he is licked before he starts.

Some people say that many men are born with what looks to be great physical prowess, but they do not become champions. This is true, of course, but these specimens often lack the right combination of characteristics to become great.

Maybe his timing is off and he is awkward or he is slow of foot, or any one of a thousand things that make up a champion is missing in him. This is not to say that a champion is perfect, but it means his assets greatly outweigh his liabilities.

Second is the mental attitude or desire. A person may have the most perfect body ever created and not have the inborn desire to do his best and he will suffer from mediocrity all his life.

No amount of pep-talks or half-time speeches can give this to a person. It must be in him or the talk will mean nothing.

Many cases can be pointed to of a person who lacks great physical prowess but has tremendous desire. This person has brief moments of glory, but the true champion has both the physical and mental working for him at all times.

If these two qualifications have been met then the coaches can mold the individual into a champion. But if any one of these basic requirements is missing, even the greatest coach in the world can't make a champion of the individual. This is why in any sport there are a lot of adequate players, but few great ones. Therefore, champions are born, then made.

James Leads Runners To Meet Victory

The local harriers, once again led by Frank James, won a four-way meet with San Jose, Santa Clara and Sierra at San Jose on October 12.

James covered the three-mile course in a fast 16:00 to lead the meet. Third was Leon Stroughter with a time of 16:26, Anthony Ferrigno was fifth at 16:28, and Bill Hotchkiss was tenth at 16:47.

The final score was San Francisco 25, San Jose City College 62, Sierra close behind with 64, and Santa Clara last with 75.

Busy Fraternity, Sorority Rushing Tops Club Events

By Pat Perkins

AMONG the more pertinent campus social events this week is sorority and fraternity rushing. The various sororities are having firesides and are planning for their luncheons and dinners, while fraternities are engaged with stag smokers and dinners.

Delta Psi sorority is planning a variety of social affairs for this semester under the leadership of its newly elected officers, Alberta Giannini, president; Dinna Ingram, vice president; Sue Whiting, pledge mistress; Carol Torres, recording secretary; Carol Letsche, treasurer; Judy Borkan, historian, and Diane Levin, publicity chairman. The sisters will have a Mardi Gras rushing dinner, featuring the Smothers Brothers and other entertainment.

Rumors have been heard that the Hawaiian Club will be sponsoring a surprise social event in the near future.

A smoker was held by Alpha Phi Omega fraternity on October 15 for interested rushees. The fraternity will hold another smoker soon. The time, place and date will be posted on the college's bulletin boards.

The members of the Merchandising Club had a relaxing coffee break last Friday during College Hour, while a guest speaker from the Emporium informed them of the advantages of the store's training department.

Final plans for Gamma Kappa Beta sorority's October 30 rushing luncheon were discussed at a meeting last week at the home of Carolyn Vukasin, president. The sisters are looking forward to their coffee preference hour and November pledge days.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity will hold its second rushing affair October 29. The brothers will give their traditional luau, and will decorate with fish nets and palm leaves, as well as attending the affair in Hawaiian attire. The entertainment will blend with the mood of the Island theme.

AGS Honor Society Seeks Qualified Scholars As Tutors

Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society here, is in need of qualified members to tutor students, William Richardson, faculty adviser for the society, stated today.

Students who qualify will be paid $1.50 per hour. Any interested students may see Richardson in S-143 during class hours.

At the next Alpha Gamma Sigma meeting to be held in College Hour this Friday in C-232, Dean Alan W. Johnson of San Francisco State will be the speaker. Richardson invited all students hoping to attend San Francisco State to attend the meeting.

This year's AGS officers are Juanita Schaeffer, president; Max Savin, vice president, and Catherine Martinez, secretary-treasurer.

Members thus far as as follows:

Marlon Anderson, Lloyd Anderson, Verna Barnett, Joan Bertolina, Bill Bonderud, Elizabeth Boudrout, David Borrelli, Helen Borrone, John Brady and Ronald Burnett.

Linda Carvajal, Carolyn Carver, Stanley Chapman, Vincent Chin, Loretta Ching, Shirley Clayton, Joann Comerford, Lawrence Condou, James Conlan, Harry Cordellos, Maureen Corrigan, Thomas Craighead.

Council Passes Seven Budgets In Tense Session

By Richard Shields

In a gavel-pounding session last week, Student Council met, prepared for a budget marathon in an effort to complete the allocation of Associated Student funds.

AS President Joe Egri used his gavel with increasing force last Thursday, first to bring order for the roll call and second to end an unplanned extension of a 60-second caucas.

A third time Egri struck the table repeatedly to restore order when Finance Chairman Bill Keane attempted to evade a question posed by Sophomore Councilman Bob Ross.

Laying other business aside, council passed seven budgets totaling $4424.78; this is the greatest number of budgets yet passed in a single meeting.

Only five budgets now remain to be approved by council. Keane announced that these would be presented this week.

Council voted $365.25 to the Club Activities Board, $976.60 to the soccer team, and $545 to the men's physical education department in rapid succession Thursday.

Also passed was $518.25 for cross-country, $625 for the Recreation Association, $655.25 for the Men's Glee Club, and $739.43 for the junior varsity basketball team.

After the basketball budget was passed, Ross demanded to know why budgets were not presented to council in the order in which they were turned in to the Finance Chairman.

Council rocked with laughter at Keane's attempts to evade the question until President Egri sharply brought the meeting back to order.

The A Cappella Choir budget of $232 was tabled until the next meeting when a question arose over the destination of $50 marked for publicity since all AS events are publicized by regularly designated funds.

The Student Faculty Relations Committee and Publicity budgets are also due to be voted on this week.

Egri stated that this week's meetings should be the last devoted to budgets. He expressed a desire that council should move immediately into discussions of the major problems on campus which hinder the routine of college life.

Paramount among these, he added, are the situation in the cafeteria, constitutional revision, and revision of the bank system. Other problems which plague the campus will be presented to council and discussed later on in the semester.

Top AS Card Seller

BOB ROSS, successful seller of more than 800 Associated Student cards this semester, was awarded a Zenith transistor radio at a recent Student Council meeting.

Ross, who broke all existing records for card salesmanship, worked around the clock selling the pasteboards. Camping in the Science Hall information booth from morning to night until he had enticed enough buyers to score a sales mark which is expected to stand for some time.

He said that his goal was to sell as many cards as possible and then a few more; not to set a record.

A previous record, set in 1953, which was only a few cards less than Ross' figure, was never expected to be broken, said AS Finance Office officials.

Ross, who was also recently awarded a jacket for football, is currently studying physical education with an eye toward teaching and coaching.

He is also a sophomore member of Student Council.

Buffie Goes Home

THE END OF AN ERA came last week as Buffie moved to her new home in Los Gatos with her owners, the Edwin C. Brownes, after their return from a six-month stay in Europe. Brown's formerly was dean of men at the college.

For many years, the golden-haired cocker spaniel served above and beyond the call of duty in running the mail and performing other tasks without a single complaint. The dean's office, S-149, won't be quite the same without her.

Stockton Game Bus Tickets At Cafeteria

The bus schedule for football fans who plan on attending the game at Stockton College was disclosed last week by Marilyn Santos, rally commissioner.

Tickets for the trip may be purchased at the cafeteria. The bus will get under way promptly at 5:45 p.m. Friday at the Redwood Ram. The price of the tickets is 50 cents for Associated Student cardholders and $2 for those without. Game time is at 8 p.m.

Whiteheaded Boy Closes Run This Weekend

Final performances of The Whiteheaded Boy will be given this Friday and Saturday, October 28 and 29, beginning at 8 p.m., Michael Griffin, drama director, announced last week.

An Irish comedy by Lennox Robinson, the production has been fairly well attended since its opening October 7, Griffin said. He added that Lois Haurat has taken over Ingrid Gruenwald's role of Hannah because of the latter's illness.

The play, performed by a cast of 12, takes place in Ballycolman, a small town in Ireland, where Dennis, portrayed by Wayne Elbe as the baby of a large family, has failed his third consecutive semester at the University of Dubiln.

As chastisement, the family tries to send Dennis to Canada as a ditch-digger, but its efforts are thwarted by his engagement to Delia, played by Patricia Brosnan.

After the close of The Whiteheaded Boy this weekend, The Bad Seed will open on Friday, November 11, as the second of three productions scheduled this semester by the drama department.

A drama by Maxwell Anderson, performances of this production will be given on Fridays and Saturdays beginning at 8 p.m. on successive weekends until its last performance on Saturday, December 3. Rehearsals for the cast of 13 currently are in progress.

Admission to all performances of Little Theater productions is free with Associated Student cards. Those without will be charged a dollar for each admission.

Brady Tightens Controls On Students With Excess Cuts

By Christopher Wise

John J. Brady, co-ordinator of student welfare, and his department intend to pursue a strict course of action in dealing with excess absence from classes in the future.

Brady reminded all students that good attendance records are required not only by college policies but also by the laws of the State of California.

Absences fall into two categories, he explained, those that are excused and those classified as unexcused.

Instructors need not accept any total of excused and unexcused absences which is more than twice the number of weekly meetings of the class. An instructor may advise a student to drop a course without penalty if he, the instructor, thinks the student is in danger of failing.

Three times late to one class will be counted the same as one absence.

Students absent because of illness may gain readmission to classes by reporting either to the dean of men in S-149 or the dean of women in S-150.

After receiving an official excuse from the dean, Brady emphasized that the student must present it to the instructor at the next scheduled meeting of the class.

Students are never excused from keeping track of and making up all classroom work, Brady declared emphatically.

A final, disqualifying grade of "F" is given to any student who exceeds the allowable number of excused and unexcused absences.

No student, Brady warned, will ever be allowed to withdraw from a class or course in order to avoid drawing an "F" due to excessive absences.

Brady has been riding hard on student absences since he followed the retiring F. Grant Marsh as co-ordinator in 1954. Prior to that he was dean of semiprofessional courses.

Holding a B.S. from the University of San Francisco and an M.A. from the University of California, he has been a dean since he became dean of student activities and adviser to the Student Council after World War II.

JOHN BRADY, co-ordinator of student welfare and also referred to as "dean of grade-point averages."

Brady is the same Jack Brady who played first base for Mission High School and was president of his high senior class in 1933.

He was a member of the University of San Francisco nine when he was picked to play against the all-star Tokyo Giants team in 1937.

Pitching against the Japanese professionals, he won a 2 to 0 no-hitter.

Joining the City College faculty in 1939, Brady started as a physical education instructor and went on to teach mathematics, English and hygiene, and coach intramural sports as he rose steadily toward his present position.

Queen Entries Due At Friday Festival Rally

Presentation of the Fall Festival queen candidates will be the feature attraction of the pregame rally during College Hour this Friday, Marilyn Santos, rally commissioner, declared last week. The football game at Stockton College begins at 8 p.m. that night.

Exchange entertainment from the Univcrsity of California will also be featured at the rally, which will take place in front of the Redwood Ram.

Fall Festival events, in addition to the queen contest, include tentative plans for a gala car parade and an outdoor evening rally.

Deadline for entering the queen contest is tomorrow at 3 p.m., Miss Santos said, with election of the queen by the students scheduled Wedpesday, November 2, and a coronation rally the following Friday, November 4.

Fraternities, sororities and clubs will be invited to sponsor decorated cars and floats in the gala car parade tentatively scheduled for Thursday night, November 3, and Miss Santos added that prizes will be awarded for the best decorated entries.

The coronation rally during College Hour will include the crowning of the queen, the awarding of the car parade trophies, and the introduction of the football team. Miss Santos said this rally may possibly be held in the new stadium.

Further details on all events will be released by the Fall Festival Committee which includes Miss Santos as chairman; Bob Kelley, Associated Men Student representative; Judy Webb, alumni liaison; Birgitta Bergman, Associated Women Student representative; Bill Flaherty, Club Activities Board; Bob Rodgers, Inter-Fraternity Council; Joanne Costello, Inter-Sorority Council, and Abdollah Gharib-Ashfar, International Relations Club representative.

Others are Alexander Schwarz, Newman Club; Judy Day, Publicity Committee; Joan Hillman, Rally Committee, and Judie Crivelli, Student Council.

20 New Officers Augment Force

Twenty new officers were added to the college's Campus Police force yesterday in a swearing-in ceremony in San Francisco Police Chief Thomas Cahill's office.

The 3 o'clock ceremony boosted the college's police force to 31 men. Campus Police Chief Mike Hancock added that with the addition of these new men he and his force will be able to handle all problems during the semester.

One of the big problems facing Hancock and his force is the large number of students who are parking in the faculty parking lots. Students are not to park in the circle around Cloud Hall, Hancock stated.

Ed Sarsfield, assistant chief, warned students to stay out of the faculty stalls next to the men's gymnasium. These are the stalls next to the curb in that area.

Auto Documentary On Tap As C-Hour Film

Millions On The Move, a short documentary on the automobile and the traffic problems it has created, will be shown during College Hour this Friday in S-136, Madison Devlin of the audio-visual aids department announced yesterday.

The scenic splendors of Lake Tahoe will be shown in a film entitled The Fabulous North Shore on November 4.

Scheduled for November 18 is The White-Tail Buck, a fiction story of a hunting trip. The December 2 feature will be the 1959 49'er Highlights.

All movies are shown during College Hour in S-136 at 10 a.m. and admission is free, Devlin said, adding that a complete list of movies to be shown during the remainder of the semester will be available at a later date.

Three Activities Lend Gala Air To Campus Homecoming Grid Game

Trophies Due For Three Cars Rated Best Decorated

Trophies will be awarded for the three best decorated cars in the gala parade to be held this Friday, starting at 1 p.m., according to Carolyn Vukasin and Bob Rodgers, parade co-chairmen.

The parade, one of the big events of the Fall Festival, will follow a route which at press time was not yet definite.

Entries are invited from fraternities, sororities; clubs, and any individuals who wish to participate, the co-chairmen said. The only requirements are that entrants must be Associated Student members and the cars to be used must be insured against accidents.

Application forms are available at the silver pole in Science Hall or at the AS office, S-140. They must be turned in by noon tomorrow, November 3.

The cars will be judged at 12:45 p.m. by five members of the college administration in front of the Redwood Ram. Their decisions will be based on originality, theme, effectiveness and the amount of work called for by the decorators.

The cars will then leave for the parade route and presentation of the trophies will be made by the Queen of the Fall Festival during the half-time break of the football game that afternoon.

7th Annual IRC Fair Friday Features Colorful Displays

Guests of the college will be taken on an imaginary trip around the world this Friday evening when the International Relations Club will present its seventh annual international fair, starting at 8 p.m. in the Marina Junior High School auditorium, Bay and Fillmore Streets.

Colorful native music, dances, arts and crafts, in addition to a special food display by students of the college will highlight the event.

"The fair has been very successful in previous years and this year an exceptionally large crowd is expected to attend," IRC President Abdollah Gharb-Afshar stated.

The two-hour production will be emceed by Sarwan Gill, former IRC president, who will introduce the acts from each country and add comedy bits to the show.

Student-performed dances will include a cha-cha-cha from Central America, a Finnish spinning dance and the Danish cobbler dance from the Scandinavian countries. Sun Kim and Jungdeivity from China, Dan Sa Badjao and Harana from the Philippines, and Bolivian dances.

Representing the United States will be the college's Homecoming Queen.

Chairmen representing various countries helped select and organize the entertainment and exhibits from their native lands.

The chairmen are Al Grafilo from the Philippines; Lydia Norwood, Russia; Brigitta Bergman, Europe; Yasuko Hirai, Japan; Hilda Tsoi, China; Vadine Nemechayeff from the Middle Eag. and Delfina Aldrete, Latin America.

Responsible for details of the fair are special committee chairmen Al Gharib, production; Bob Flannigan, stage director; Jose Lino Bran, sound; Alexander Bodgis, lights; Delfina Aldrete, wardrobe and makeup, and Rolf Sollie, exhibits.

Others include Carol Ann Guikko, food display; Marie Rodello, usherettes; James Febre, publicity, and Gill, master of ceremonies.

On display for the arts and crafts exhibits will be mugs from Germany, dolls from Japan, European wood carvings, Mexican serapes, and brass from India.

Admission price to the fair is 50 cents for students and $1 for the general public. Proceeds will go toward scholarships for foreign students attending the college.

Tickets are now available in S-186, the office of the IRC sponsor, Joseph M. Jacobson.

Hicks To Discuss Presidency Race

The Presidential Campaign of 1960 will be the subject of Dr. John R. Hicks' speech to students here during the second of a series of College Hour lectures set for this Friday, November 4, in S-100.

History students may recognize Dr. Hicks as the author of their textbook since he has written several texts on American History, including one entitled The American Nation.

He is also a distinguished professor emeritus of American History at the University of California in Berkeley.

Irving Witt, sponsor of the series, announced that Dr. Hicks is one of the best known speakers that the college has had the opportunity of hearing, and urged that all students, particularly those of voting age, attend his address.

Charles Hanks, student-chairman, will introduce the speaker.

Deferment Requires 30 Unit Minimum

Students who have received a draft deferment, or who intend to apply for one, must carry a minimum of 30 units in an academic year was the information received today from the division of student welfare.

A student enrolled at the college, by obtaining the proper authority, may enroll in the Air Force ROTC unit at San Francisco State College.

While enrolled in the AF ROTC unit, he will be excused from the otherwise required physical education course at this college.

Officials expressed surprise over the small number here who have found it necessary to request a draft deferment. The age of students and present world conditions are considered to be the reasons for this.

Counselor Calls Meeting To Solve Pre-Reg Tangle

Members of the faculty and the administration are meeting today with Walter McCloud, counselor, in an attempt to find a solution to the problem of the pre-registration erush which reached a climax on October 7.

Several methods of pre-registration have been tried since 1947. They either have proved unworkable or been obsoleted by the increasing size of the student body.

The current problem results from the fact that almost 4000 students attempt to secure low registration numbers each semester, and counselors are trying to distribute the numbers on a fair and equal basis.

The first method employed was to give each student a number when he asked for it on a first-come, first-served basis. This was started in 1947 when the growth in the number of students indicated that pre-registration would be necessary.

Later, when a more regimented type of system was called for, the counselors started to use an alphabetical system. Students whose last initials were from A to C received numbers the first day, D to G the second day, and so on.

The alphabet was rearranged each semester in order to make the system completely fair to all, from A to Z.

The present system, under which students line up for their numbers on first-come, first-served basis has been working well since the Fall of 1957, but is beginning to fall apart under the record crush of college entrants.

McCloud is hopeful of finding a suggestion today, but he said that additional plans submitted by members of the faculty or student body are most welcome.

Queen Contest, Election Today; Car Parade, Dance Set Friday

Election of a Homecoming Queen to reign over Fall Festival activities this Friday will be made today when members of the Associated Students cast their ballots.

Votes are to be cast in Science Hall at the silver pole by secret ballot, according to Marilynn Santos, rally commissioner. Only students holding AS cards will be allowed to vote, she emphasized, urging all students to support their favorite candidate.

Entrants and sponsors known at press time are Sandra Belcher, A Cappella Choir; Mary Ann Grandemange, Gamma Kappa Beta; Sandy Genessi, Newman Club; Donna O'Leary, Theta Tau; Juanita Schaeffer, Associated Men Students, and two independents, Sue Metzger, Frances Schoenberger.

Others include Jene Johnson, Zeta Phi Sigma; Sue Langley, football team; Jepty Au, Chinese Students Club; Sandi Bowen, Zeta Chi, and Joan Hillman.

The contestant with the most votes will be crowned Fall Festival Queen by AS President Joe Egri at a coronation rally this Friday morning.

This rally will be held in the college's new stadium during College Hour and will include entertainment in addition to the performances of the college's song girls and cheerleaders.

A car parade is scheduled to start about 1 p.m., and following that, at 2:30 p.m., the football game between San Francisco and Oakland City College will take the spotlight.

The Fall Festival Queen will reign in state during the game and will preside over the half-time activities. At this time she will present the trophies to the winners of the car parade competition.

Fans attending the game are reminded that immediately afterward the most valuable Ram player will be honored with the presentation of a trophy. This trophy will also be presented by the Queen.

The Most Valuable Player will be chosen by five members of the administration who are all former athletic coaches.

A dance, Coronation Capers, will be sponsored by the Newman Club Friday night in Smith Hall. Music, supplied by Jimmy Blass' orchestra, will start at 9 p.m. Admission will be $1.25 per couple with an AS card and $1.75 without a card.

'Actions Of Few Threaten Future Activities'—Egri

In a terse statement following complete reports on "complications" which developed at the Freshman Ball October 21, Associated Student President Joe Egri denounced students whose thoughtlessness and immaturity are endangering all social life at the college.

"A few students have caused trouble at every social event this semester because they don't know how to act like adults," Egri declared.

"They want to be treated as adults and mature college students, yet they act like children," he said.

Egri warned that the actions of these few students could have disastrous effects on plans for all future social events.

Egri will meet with the presidents of all fraternities, sororities and clubs to discuss these problems.

"We hope to find a solution among ourselves," he said. "Otherwise the administration will be forced to step in and take the matter out of our hands."

At Student Council last Thursday, Gary Wilkening, Freshman Class president, presented a letter from The Village stating that two velvet-covered ropes, each six feet in length, were stolen the night of the Frosh Ball.

Restitution for the ropes, valued at $51.58, was requested. The matter was temporarily settled by Sherm Elworthy, Student Council adviser, who suggested that it be turned over to Ralph Hilisman, dean of men, for investigation.

Election 1960: Voters Can Pay Debt For Priceless Heritage

(Editor's Note: This is the second of two editorials dealing with the American presidential election of 1960, the men and issues involved, and the responsibilities facing the voter in the crucial contest.)

AMERICA has been described as a place where people would travel half way around the earth to fight to save democratic ideals, but wouldn't even cross the street to vote in an election.

In less than a week, however, Americans will be called to the voting booth to choose a president, and at this time we wonder how many eligible voters, not compelled, thankfully to travel around the globe to fight, will also feel themselves not compelled to cross the street into the voting place.

Unfortunately, there is much truth to this picture of America, and it is nothing less than a national shame that those of us who so highly and haughtily praise our democratic institutions abroad do nothing at home to preserve them.

We are told that the right to vote is a "priceless heritage." Close examination of the record, however, reveals a strikingly different picture.

The privileges associated with the right to vote are not, in one sense of the word, "priceless."

A revolutionary war was fought to attain them. A civil war was fought to preserve them. A first world war was fought to safeguard them. A second world war was fought to further insure them, and a "police action" was fought to demonstrate once again that they were not to be taken from us after so long a struggle to keep them.

Surely, when one considers the great loss of human lives in these campaigns to keep the American way flourishing, the privileges of voting can hardly be called "priceless."

True, the price was steep, and apparently it hasn't been paid off yet.

Where does all this leave us, however, in the midst of an exciting and close race for the presidency? It leaves us right back where we started, for how many of us who are eligible to vote will cross the street this coming Tuesday and cast a ballot? How many of us will, instead, merely be content to watch the returns on television and grumble about the results?

In a sense all Americans are in debt to those who, by giving their lives, have helped to pay the price of maintaining the voting privilege; and only by making an effort to be thoroughly familiar with the men and issues involved in this contest and by casting an intelligent vote can one even begin to make an attempt to pay off this debt.

In the first editorial of this series we mentioned the responsibilities facing the voter. These included being familiar with and having opinions on the men and issues, opinions based on careful study and evaluation. This cannot be stressed too much.

One who votes unintelligently and uninformed and without a true grasp of the issues would do better by not voting at all.

Vote for the man you choose, but by all means vote, for by voting you do your part in keeping these privileges alive; by voting you help determine the course America is to take in the future; by voting you participate in one of the highest modes of human expression.

Tuesday is not far away, and actions and elections speak louder than words, so:

ACT AND ELECT!

Mature Collegian Realizes School Activity Is Not Cue To 'Be A Clown'

COLLEGE STUDENTS are naturally apt to be overly energetic and perhaps they occasionally act without thinking of the consequences of their thoughtless, done-in-fun acts.

This has been more than evident at several dances this semester and seems to have reached its climax in certain events at the recent Frosh Ball.

Occurrences such as these can have several results for students here, all of them, from our point of view, bad and totally unnecessary if we would only stop and consider what influence such thoughtless actions can have on the campus and on the planning of future activities.

The most obvious result of continued disorder at college functions would be the cancellation of further similar activities, or close supervision with the enforcement of stern, rigid rules.

No one would choose these as backgrounds for student activities, and they shouldn't be necessary.

But if continued disrespect and flaunting of proper behavior are evident at student activities here the administration has no other choice but to take action.

The blame for such a move, however, would rest solely on student shoulders and would, with the possible clamping down on extra curricular activities, be the price for student follies and caprices.

We repeat that it needn't and shouldn't be this way. Realizing this Joe Egri, Associated Student president, is planning to call a meeting of the heads of campus organizations to plan a course of action that would make such extreme measures unwarranted.

The final responsibility, however, rests with students here to decide whether or not the college can offer dances and other social events without having them turned into mere displays of thoughtlessness, childishness and stupidity.

Deans Aim To Help Students Succeed

MARY GOLDING, dean of women, and Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, interpret student regulations and regulate student affairs.

Collegian Today Quicker To Grasp Knowledge

By Janet Carter

STUDENT welfare, activities, and attendance are just three of the many duties that the dean of men and the dean of women face here each academic day.

As dean of women, Mary Golding is responsible for the general welfare of the women students (which in itself is increasing in proportions because there are 1938 women students now, more than ever before), in addition to arranging for loans, scholarships, and supporting cultural programs.

A native San Francisco, Dean Golding received her B.A. in English and social science, her M.A. in history at the University of California, and her Ph.D. in education at the University of Ottawa.

Appointed to the college as a counselor in 1949, she was named dean in July 1953 upon Margaret Dougherty's retirement. A former teacher of Dean Golding, Miss Dougherty died last February.

Before coming here, Dean Golding taught English, was head of the department and was a counselor at the former High School of Commerce.

In the summer of 1953, she traveled to London where she served as a delegate to the convention of the International Federation of University Women.

A seasoned traveler, Dean Golding has been in Europe six times and has visited almost every country in the world. She has also traveled extensively throughout the United States.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, arrived at the college originally as a pioneer student and was a member of the first graduating class as well as captain of the first basketball team that won its first championship under the tutelage of Louis G. Conlan, now President of the college.

Upon graduation he continued his studies at the University of California, getting his B.A. and M.A. degrees in physical education. He completed his graduate work in health education at Stanford.

After leaving the college, Hillsman transferred and later was graduated from the University of California. He then joined the faculty of Lassen Junior College where he coached the basketball, football and track teams.

In his first year at Lassen, 1939, he guided each team to championships.

After a tour of duty as naval officer in World War II, Hillsman returned to City College as a coach and once more led the Rams to the basketball championship.

Then, in 1955, he became assistant dean in charge of student activities, acting dean of men in 1959 and dean in 1959.

The dean of men's main function, as Hillsman put it, is "To help the student succeed" in addition to interpreting regulations and regulating activities.

An avid golf fan when he has the time, he shot a hole in one last year.

Dean Golding and Dean Hillsman both agree that students are basically the same as they were 30 years ago.

Hillsman describes them this way: "Students today are much brighter. They are products of the time. They have grasped in a short span of time, knowledge that would have taken us a lifetime."

Shots At RAMdom — Problems, Problems Who Can Top These?

By Christopher Wise

MIDTERM examinations are safely behind us now. They are also just ahead. This is quite discouraging to some students, but there is one group which has been driven insane.

These poor folks have worked so hard in their communications classes trying to remember that the prefix "mid" comes from the Latin and means either half, halfway, or middle. So, how come there are two midterms in each semester?

* * *

ANY TYPE OF examination will bring a certain amount of confusion, crying and laughing. Some goes on before and some after. Examinations (don't call them tests) bring out some of the best and some of the worst in all on the campus.

They will be a topic of conversation from the hanging gardens of horticulture to the reservoir (commonly called Gull Gulch).

* * *

SOMEWHERE on campus may be heard the plaintive cry of the poor guy who flunked a grammar exam.

Says he, "I memorized all of the rules and then found out I had forgotten all the exceptions."

Some scream at the poor instructors, "You didn't tell me." To which the reply is usually, "You didn't ask me."

* * *

INSTRUCTORS, TOO, have their troubles other than those commonly called students. Some of them who shudder at the thought of calling the roll at 10:10 each morning are wondering why KCSF can't be silenced by a CONELRAD alert just as all other good radio stations are.

* * *

TWO FRIENDS, Charlie and Lou, eat lunch together every day and talk over their coffees. (The real reason that they eat lunch together is that they can never find more than one empty chair in the cafeteria.)

Charlie is always breaking off in the middle of a sentence to watch some pretty girl walk across the room. The other noon Lou could take it no longer. Quoth he, "Charlie, I know you are an education major but I have finally figured out why. You want to get a job at some college as dean of women."

A PARTING WORD to those who may want to write a letter to this column: The address, Head of Department of Shots at Random, is all right but the salution, "Dear Shothead," is frowned upon.

Foresight — Burro Blitzkrieg Vs. Pachyderm Express

By Paul Plansky

BANDWAGONS, whether Democrat or Republican, become a quadrennial public menace. With only one week of campaigning left, the Burro Blitzkrieg and the Pachyderm Express are rampaging with full fury toward election day next Tuesday.

If the voting populace doesn't sensibly clear the path, they're going to be caught beneath the wheels of prolonged promises and the spokes of political propaganda.

Americans have been stamped as "All Indians and no chiefs" or as an apathetic mass of conformity. Whether this charge can be refuted is quite irrelevant, because in the Case of the American Voter, the statistics tell the story—as low as 30 to 40 per cent in certain state elections.

Yet, the poor percentage of voters at the polls is overshadowed by their erratic voting behavior. These unpredictable trends make upsets like Truman's possible.

Because of the voter's indecisive or "wishy-washy" tendencies, both major parties have a chance to appeal to their emotions rather than to their minds—the last week of the campaign is a last-ditch chance for each candidate. The opposing bandwagons roll on.

Aren't there any individual idealists in this country?

Well, there's at least one.

In 1952 in a sixth-grade classroom of a San Francisco public school, two pupils rose to defend their choice of a presidential ticket in a prepared classroom debate.

First, Frank spoke. "I like Ike," he declared and then went on to reiterate the stereotype speech which the GOP had launched in the 1952 election race.

General Eisenhower, the supreme commander of the Allied European forces in World War II, the army's chief of staff, the commander of NATO, and the president of Columbia University, was a most logical choice for a chief executive, especially because of the Korean War.

His running mate was the junior senator from California named Richard Nixon. "After 20 years of Democratic administration, it's time for a change," Frank explained to his classmates, and he took his seat with an air of vindictiveness.

Next, Tom spoke. He wore a blue and gold campaign button which certainly wasn't of Stevensonian sentiment. If he didn't want the Democrats, who was left? Frank was sure he had won the debate.

"I don't think either the Democrat or Republican ticket offers the best candidate to lead the American people," Tom surprisingly told his audience. "I'm for the Hallinan-Bass ticket. Vincent Hallinan, a San Francisco lawyer and Carlotta Bass, a Negro woman, are the candidates of the Independent-Progressive Party.

"Mr. Hallinan's ideas are not regulated by big political machinery; his interests lie in the heart and home of every American—he doesn't represent labor, the farmer or big business; he's for equality for all.

"With a Negro woman as vice president, complete tolerance in our country could be achieved. For if the people accept such a candidate, the ideal American dream as envisioned by the Founding Fathers could come true. Otherwise, the long, hard fight to erase bigotry and prejudiced factions won't even reach the middle rounds. Nations, like apples, rot from the core."

Frank Follower's candidate won the election—Tom Thinker won the debate.

Paul has been practicing the sport for about five and one-half years and has become extremely adept in the art. This is best exemplified by his high rank. Lester, on the other hand, has only been at it for three or four months.

Paul intimated that if this country used the Japanese system of belts, two degrees of white instead of the one in the U. S., he thinks that Lester would be qualified for a second degree white belt.

Judo Kai Members Hear CAB Veep Speak On New Club Rules

By Doug Cathcart

John Palmer, vice president of the Club Activities Board, spoke at a recent meeting of the Judo Kai (society), with the main purpose of his talk to orientate the members of the club on the rules and procedures of becoming a full-fledged on-campus organization.

The club is at present in more or less of a stalemated position because of its lack of faculty sponsorship, the one main blockade which hampers the club's chances of becoming recognized as an on-campus organization.

The group, which now holds its meetings in Annex A during College Hour, is really a melting pot, with a good number of women students listening to the lectures.

In a recent meeting, William Paul, second degree black belt holder which is the highest in the local campus club, explained some of the terms with which any prospective judoist must be familiar.

Paul explained to the members of the club that the reason for learning all these Japanese terms is so that judoists from this country can communicate with foreign practicioners of the ancient sport. He added that the same Japanese terms are taught to judoists all over the world to facilitate communications.

Also stressed in his lecture was the fact that the first and most important thing that one must learn in judo is how to take a fall. Second in command at these meetings is Ron Sinclair, first degree black belt holder.

The belt system is the judoist's way of denoting proficiency in the sport. There are ten degrees of black belts, three of brown (intermediate) and one of white (beginner). In Japan, however, the white belt class is divided into two sections.

Judo is taught to women mainly for the purpose of self-protection and not as a sport. However, Paul brought out that some members of the fairer sex choose to pursue the sport beyond this point.

Graduation Hurts Cagers; Hopes Rest On Rookies

Hoping to mold a formidable starting club, the Ram cagers officially opened practice yesterday for a season they hope will end in a successful defense of their Big Eight title.

Fullerton College ended a successful Red and White campaign last year by edging them in the State Junior College Tournament, but earlier the Rams had provided thrills with a 48-42 playoff win over Oakland to take the conference crown.

Bobby Grayson, Will Rockmore, Nate Jackson, and Otis Phillips fared well last season and are expected to spark the attack along with fellow vets Charlie Anderson and Vince Rocci.

In the end, the real standouts may come from a bumper crop of rookies, including former prep stars Chuck Carrington, Gary Lewis, Charlie Williams, Dave Roberts, Rich Mercurio, Brad Dugan and Eli Horn.

Several veterans and a host of top-flight newcomers could go a long way toward providing the skill needed to triumph, but an air of uncertainty hangs over Sid Phelan's quintet which currently boasts big John Lewis as the lone first-string returnee from last year's champion squad.

Guardsm(e)n Flying High

Newshawks Shock Fans, Share First Slot With Hui Aloha Allis

The Guardsman cagers, usually referred to as the "flatfoot floozies" of the Intramural Basketball League, donned their secret weapon, arch supports, and emerged victorious, 53-38, in a recent go with the favored Recreation Association squad.

This conquest places The Guardsman team, long regarded as THE threat for the cellar, in a two-way tie for first place in the club division of the league.

Sharing top honors with the scribes is the Hui Aloha Allis club who, as does the rags-to-riches Guardsman, has a 2-0 record. The Allis squad won its second tilt with the Hotel and Restaurant cagers by forfeit.

Other action in the club division pitted the Newman Club against the Hui Aloha Kawes. The game ended with the Newmans on top by virtue of a close 36-33 score.

A recent development in the fraternity division was the addition of two new squads. They are Beta Tau and Alpha Phi Epsilon.

Tonight in this division the men from Phi Beta Delta will meet Zeta Phi Sigma, Alpha Kappa Rho goes against Gamma Phi Ypsilon, and the Alpha Phi Epsilon club will go against Beta Tau.

Tomorrow night in the Independent division the Indians will meet the Untouchables and the Bachelors are slated to play the Harriers.

Gridders Eye Thunderbirds After Loss To Mustangs

Rough, Tough Oakland Eleven Battles Locals In Grid Crucial Friday

By Warren Downes

Another crucial grid clash is in store for Grover Klemmer's Rams when the rough and tough Oakland Thunderbirds invade City College Stadium this Friday at 2:30 p.m.

This battle will be the 1960 Homecoming game for the Red and White grid forces.

The T-Birds use a single wing offense centered around tailback Stan Peters. Peters set a new Oakland City College passing record earlier this season and is also feared throughout the Big Eight Conference for his running ability.

Peters' favorite target is right end Tom Malinowski. Malinowski, at 6'3", is large enough to grab the high hard passes and also is fast enough to get down field for the long gainer.

Wendall Hayes, one of Oakland's most outstanding athletes, is a block-busting runner capable of breaking loose for a touchdown any time he gets the ball.

Woodson Foster, another speed-burner for Coach Don Gaber, is one of the finest defensive halfbacks in the loop and has stopped many a drive with a timely interception.

The real secret of the fine Thunderbird backfield is the forward wall. Joe Queenan, Bill Whitten, Ray Espana, Mike Marquard and Herm Pederson form an interior line as strong as any in the loop.

The Rams, having one of their most successful seasons in many years, will be out to avenge last season's 42-20 loss at the hands of the T-Birds. The Red and White offense, unstoppable this season so far, will face one of the best defenses in the conference.

Gary Lewis has been outstanding in his first season with the Rams, playing both fullback and quarterback for Klemmer and amassing an amazing record at both positions.

As a signal-caller, Lewis has hit ends Ray Greggains, Mike Peterson and Larry Pecodalasol with passes all over the field.

His running ability has been superlative as he has run for several long touchdowns, as well as blasted his way for necessary short yardage.

A sizzling fullback, Tom Piggee has been a big surprise for the locals with his fine running. Tim Moffett, Guy Whitaker and Charlie Smith have also demonstrated some fancy running throughout the season.

Klemmer's interior line is big and strong and has opened huge holes in the enemy line, for the backs, Leamond McGriff, Andy Citizen, Angelo Crudo, Jack Hickey, Alex Darnes, Terry Fischer and company, have proved their strength and earned a reputation as one of the stingiest defenses in the loop.

Big Stockton Line Ends Ram Title Hopes With Impressive 34-22 Win

By Tom Kennedy

PACIFIC MEMORIAL STADIUM, STOCKTON, Oct. 28.—A big, hard-charging forward wall led Stockton College to a 34-22 victory tonight over the Rams.

The two teams played on even terms during the first half, but Stockton's platoons of linemen, averaging close to 215 pounds per man, finally wore down the Rams and permitted the Mustangs to crash through for two TD's in the decisive fourth quarter.

Stockton now leads the Big Eight football conference with four wins and no losses. Only San Mateo rates a chance to stop the Mustangs from gaining their sixth consecutive league crown now.

The loss dealt a fatal blow to the title hopes of the Ram followers, including many who made the trip here from San Francisco to root their club on.

With the Mustangs gunning for the Rams' Gary Lewis, Coach Grover Klemmer directed the big quarterback to go through the air lanes, where Lewis collected a highly respectable 147 yards with seven completions on 10 attempts.

Lewis displayed his passing arm early in the game, when he completed a 54-yard heave to end Larry Pedrodalasol. This was the big play as the Rams drove the opening kickoff back for a touchdown, Lewis going over from the two.

Ray Greggains caught a pass from Lewis for the extra two points.

Stockton drove right back with an eight play, 57-yard march, Carl Agbules going off tackle from the 12. But they were not able to make the PAT and trailed, 6-8.

Midway through the second quarter, City College made a dramatic goal line stand with big help from tackle Leamond McGriff on four plays within their seven yard line, but when the Rams took over Lewis was promptly chased back into his end zone on an attempted pass and tackled for a safety.

Jim Davidson, a 262-pound freshman tackle, received credit for the play.

Reserve quarterback Don Stagnaro, taking the pressure off the rushing game, led Stockton to its second touchdown after the locals' kickoff. His touchdown pass traveled four yards to fullback Herb Bradford. Agbules slammed over for the PAT.

On the last play of the first half, Wayne Stribling ran out of punt formation and streaked 61 yards around right end to tie the score, 16-16, at intermission.

Stockton made another drive after the second half kickoff on running plays to give them the lead for good.

Tom Piggee, who ran well for the Rams tonight, and Lewis both fumbled into the arms of the Mustangs to set up insurance touchdowns for Stockton in the final period.

Halfback Chuck Oshani completed the scoring when he caught a 17-yard pass from Lewis on the two and fell into the end zone with 1:26 left.

PICTURED HERE is grid coach Grover Klemmer, whose 1960 team is preparing to face Oakland's Thunderbirds Friday.

Eight Clubs Compete As Bowling League Starts

Consisting of eight teams, the Recreation Association's bowling league meets each Monday at 6 p.m., at the Mission Bowling Alley, according to Pat Crone, bowling league manager.

Teams already competing include Gamma Kappa Beta sorority's Hi-Fives, Hilel, RA, Men's Glee, Newman Club with two teams, Hotel and Restaurant, also with two teams.

No new teams are needed, as the league is already short two alleys each meeting, but H&R does need players, Miss Crone said. Cost is $1.70 per person.

JV's Ask New Garb

Men's Athletic Commissioner, Bill Richardson, in a recent interview stated that approval for purchase of new basketball uniforms for the junior varsity cagers has yet to be granted.

Richardson explained that many of the uniforms presently in use are in poor condition and that some are varsity rejects, dating back 11 years.

Booters Eye Top Spot With Stanford Encounter Saturday

Seeking to avenge their first loss in two years, a closely-contested 1-0 decision to the University of California, the Ram soccermen take on unbeaten, league-leading Stanford Saturday at 11 a.m. at Balboa soccer stadium in one of the top collegiate contests of the year.

The Indians have a 2-0 upset over usually stronger University of San Francisco to their credit, and it will take a supreme team effort to topple the visitors from their lofty perch.

Roy Diederichsen's crew is far from out of the race, but to have a chance to retain their title, they must win Saturday and hope that these same Indians rise up to take the measure of California when the two clubs meet in their final outing of the current campaign.

The current uncertainty over the possibile winner in the quest for top honors is greatly attributed to USF's 2-1 win over Cal and the Dons' later loss to Stanford and scoreless deadlock with the Cal Aggies. The unpredictable Hilltoppers still remain on the locals' schedule.

California used a rock-ribbed defense, featuring two-time All-Conference goalie Fred Becker to the fullest advantage in gaining their hard-fought one goal triumph over the Rams.

The college got off 16 shots to their opponent's six, but the Berkeleyans' Bill Barreda managed to boot one of the six past goalie Gary DeLong with seven minutes gone in the third period to culminate the game's sole successful offensive thrust.

The Bears' shot total is significant because in the USF encounter, though losing, they managed 28 scoring attempts.

Twice it appeared as if the Red and White had cinch scores. Ram standout Jim Lynch had what appeared to be a clear shot from four yards out in the final half, but the boot sailed over the goal.

Vince Liu's scoring attempt seemed destined for paydirt in the initial half only to have the leg of Bear Arne Baathen dart out from nowhere to deflect the shot at the last possible second.

Though it was a losing cause, many of the regulars, among them Lynch, Dave Kingsley, Al Korbus, Emil Ruiz and Bogdan Papara, fared well, aided by the fine showing of reserve Emil Martinez.

Booters Belt Davis 8-0 In Easy Test

DAVIS, Oct. 29.—Paced by a high-powered offense and a solid, unyielding defense the Rams today rose up to knock the California Aggies from the unbeaten ranks with a completely one-sided 8-0 soccer triumph.

Though beaten once, the Rams have now amassed an amazing four-game total of 35 goals to their opponents' three and can move into a tie for the top spot with an upset over league-leading Stanford Saturday.

The expected Aggie threat failed to materialize as Roy Diederichsen's men rode a pair of goals by Al Korbus and Flavio Valiente's scoring shot to a 3-0 initial quarter advantage.

Charlie Bowker and Jim Lynch booted across shots for a 5-0 margin at the intermission, while Ken Wright, Lynch, and Emil Ruiz contributed second-half tallies to seal the win.

Council Shifts Attention To Campus Problems; Finances No Longer Plague Progress

By Richard Shields

With its extensive docket of finance legislation nearing completion, Student Council passed four more budgets last week and began preparations for investigating long neglected problems on the campus.

Associated Student President Joe Egri appointed committees to investigate difficulties hindering successful operation of the cafeteria, look for bigger ballrooms to hold dances of the college, and look into designating the new stadium by an appropriate name.

Pat Crone, Roger Labataille and Barbara Lerman were asked to work with Student Government Adviser Sherm Elworthy on the cafeteria problems.

It was suggested that the committee might find a solution by visiting other colleges in the area to see how they handle the same problem.

Egri asked Gary Wilkening, Carol Hinkson and Elena Mirabella to look for sites more appropriate to the greater attendance at various dances.

Miss Mirabella, Mary Grandemange and Skip Schwartz will meet with faculty members to discuss the naming of the football stadium.

Miss Mirabella also suggested that someone be appointed to find out why so much glass "is always scattered" through the reservoir parking lot.

Budgets totaling $2704.30 were passed as council continued the rapid pace which promises to complete financial allocations in a record time.

The A Cappella Choir was alloted $182, the Publicity, Committee $1392.30, Sophomore Class $800 and Student-Faculty Relations Committee $330.

Bob Perkins, representing Finance Chairman Bill Keane, who was absent from the meeting, announced that no budgets which had not already been turned in would even be considered.

Discounting those which haven't been turned in, the Executive budget is the only one remaining before council. An embarrassing situation developed when Egri started to appoint someone to study the budget.

Various council members objected to everyone who volunteered for the job on the grounds that they would be biased. Finally Elworthy suggested that he and Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman take the job, and council approved the appointment.

Two Coeds Share Top Billing In Drama Production

By Lester On

Two petite coeds will alternate portrayals of one of the top roles in the upcoming production here of The Bad Seed, Michael Griffin, drama director, stated last week.

Patricia Brosnan and Dorothy Neil will share the role of Rhoda Penmark in Maxwell Anderson's drama, Griffin said, each performing the role in alternate performances.

Although curtain time for this second of the Little Theater's three scheduled productions is more than a week away, rehearsals are continuing in full force as the cast of 13 awaits opening night on Friday, November 11, Veterans Day.

The play concerns an attractive 8-year-old girl, Rhoda, who is circumstantially involved in several supposedly accidental deaths.

Her mother, Christine Penmark, played by Leah Pashoian, feels she is responsible for her child's actions after discovering she is the daughter of a famous criminal. She then proposes to do away with herself and the child.

What happens in the end? Griffin's advice was to see the play as he felt revealing the ending would lessen its impact.

In other major, although all are important, roles are Mel Kramer as Col. Kenneth Denmark and Bob Rosenblatt as Leroy.

Additional members of the cast are Martha Ross as Monica Breedlove, Fred Fisher as Emory Wages and Annamarie Papagni as Miss Fern.

Others are Randy Jones as Reginald Tasker, Diane Flores as Mrs. Daigle, Jordy Cooney as Mr. Daigle, Wayne Elbe ad Richard Bravo and Mike Corrigan as the messenger.

The Bad Seed was produced in Hollywood as a movie several years ago although the ending was changed. Five years ago it had a stage run here in San Francisco.

Griffin added that another production, Amphitryon 38 by Jean Giradoux, will complete Little Theater activities for this semester.

An extra play was scheduled, Griffin said, because the drama department will not move to the new arts building until its completion early next year.

Club Cavalcade

Groups Schedule Weekend Array Of Social Events

By Pat Perkins

AS THE on-campus organizations ban together to prepare for Homecoming this Friday, many weekend activities have been scheduled.

A joint effort has been made between the Inter-Fraternity Council and the Inter-Sorority Council to sponsor the Homecoming car parade, to be held at 1 p.m. Friday.

All interested clubs may enter a decorated car and compete for one of the three trophies to be awarded during half-time at the football game.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority is supporting its vice president, Mary Ann Grandemanche, for Homecoming Queen. The Homecoming Queen will be crowned during College Hour Friday.

The Newman Club will conclude the Homecoming activities with a Fall Festival dance Friday in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight.

November 4 is also a big date for the International Relations Club. The IRC fair will be held at Marina Junior High School's auditorium from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Sorority rushees are urged by the Inter-Sorority Council to attend the coffee preference hours to be held Tuesday night, November 8.

This will be the last change for rushees to meet the various sororities before filling out preference slips the following day in the dean of women's office, S-150.

The vigorous and excessive activities of pledge week will conclude with the Inter-Fraternity Council dance, themed The Last Night, at the California Club, November 18 from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight.

H&R 'Hunts Turkeys' For Pre-Thanksgiving Feed

Members of the Hotel and Restaurant division here went on a "turkey hunt" last weekend and bagged enough birds to fill the hot plates being served here the day before Thanksgiving.

As in years past, the turkey hot plate will be the only hot plate served that day, and it will cost 65 cents.

Available from 11 a.m. to 1:15 p.m., the hot plate will also include stuffing, cranberry sauce, peas and pumpkin pie.

Fambrini, Papapietro Win Couple Contest

Jeanette Fambrini and Pete Papapietro were chosen the cutest couple at the Frosh Ball, Quiet Village, held at the Village October 21.

The judging was made on the basis of four dances in which 30 couples took part. After the first dance the number was narrowed to 20. Another 10 were disqualified following the second.

The third elimination dance brought the group to five finalists, of which the cutest couple was finally chosen.

Biology 'Astronauts' Here Study Stars

Students Focus Telescopes For Outer Space Trip

Field trips are an old and established tradition and a part of scholastic life. Business majors visit the Bank of America, journalism students may spend a day with one of the city's metropolitan newspapers, and hotel and restaurant people take over the St. Francis Hotel once a year.

It may be many, many years before students of biological science 30 get to make their outside visit. They would have to go to the moon because they are studying space biology.

Meeting in S-303 each Tuesday at 9 a.m., 20 aspiring astronauts study biological problems of flight in present day aircraft and the spacecraft of the future which are rapidly becoming spacecraft of the present.

Launched this semester, this course is piloted by James B. Runner under the direction of life science department head Jules Fraden, with the assistance of Louis Berman of the astronomy department.

Already past their first midterm checkpoint, the class has reported in some fine grades for this group which includes one astronauteu (?) Frances Winslow.

There is quite a bit of academic discussion in the sessions about the possibility of life on other planets. Since most of those enrolled are also astronomy students, they have had a closer look at their subject than the average laymen. They should know what they are talking about.

The course was conceived last spring during a conversation between Berman and Fraden. Runner, who was at that time teaching biology, took a keen interest in the subject.

His curiosity about flight into space had earlier been aroused by conversations with a relative who had studied flight physiology with the Air Force.

Berman and Runner have gone to great lengths to round up the proper texts and teaching aids, although books on the subject become obsolete just as fast as they are published, and much material is garnered from technical magazines.

Since no real rockets were available, models that were originally intended to be toys were employed. They proved to be correct in every detail.

Quite a few of the students intend to continue their work in the field of outer space and the course will be continued as a regular part of the curriculum.

One of the original problems in adding the class to the college catalog was whether it should come under biology or astronomy. It is now biology.

When Runner's first graduate returns from the moon, the subject may finally be properly classified. If the moon turns out to be made of cheese, the hotel and restaurant department may have to step in and take over.—By C.W.

Music Department In Rehearsal For 26th Annual Yule Concert

With Christmas less than two months away, preparations for the music department's 26th annual Christmas Concert were well underway last week.

Scheduled for two performances on Thursday and Friday, December 8 and 9, the concert is a tradition started when the college opened in 1935.

Leading the orchestra will be Meyer Cahn, concert director and music instructor, in selections by Handel and traditional Christmas carols.

Cahn also will direct a brass ensemble in Bach selections arranged by Coredli and G. Gabrieli.

Directing the Men's Glee Club will be Galen Marshall, choir director and music instructor, in a Bach chorale, two arrangements of traditional carols and a Negro Christmas spiritual.

Marshall also will direct the A Cappella Choir in selections by Brahms as well as in two contemporary arrangements of French carols.

A special closing number, entitled Carol Fantasy, will be sung by the full chorus accompanied by piano, two trumpets and tympani under Marshall's direction.

The first performance will be given on Thursday, December 8, at approximately 8:15 p.m. in Smith Hall.

Preceding this initial performance, the annual faculty Christmas dinner also will be held in Smith Hall.

Six Named To State Convention

Delegates to represent this college at the state convention of the California Junior College Student Government Association, which will convene here in San Fracisco on November 17, 18 and 19, have been selected.

The students chosen, with their respective workshops, are Joseph Egri, current problems; Georgene Peterson, student government; Robert Ross, athletics; William Keane, finance; Marilynn Santos, publicity, and Robert Kelley, alternate.

State conventions are held by the CJCSGA to provide an opportunity for the elected representatives to meet and exchange ideas on student government.

This convention will be held at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel with a general assembly on November 19.

Guardsman Receives First Class Press Rating For Spring 1960

By Tom Kennedy

The Guardsman received its tenth First Class rating this week for the Spring 1960 volume from the Associated Collegiate Press at the University of Minnesota.

In 38 semesters, The Guardsman has also earned 28 All-American ratings since it joined the ACP in 1939.

Categories in which last semester's Guardsman excelled, according to the ACP's newspaper score, included creativeness, news sources, editorial page features, headline schedule, typography, features, headlines, photography, editorials and editorial page makeup.

Among the weaknesses in The Guardsman were news coverage balance, news leads and sports display.

Members of the award-winning editorial staff were Jim Clifford, editor-in-chief; Elmer Milligan, managing editor; Vicky Aumann, news editor; Bob Pacini, feature editor; Frank Dunne, sports editor; Geneva Warner, staff editor, and Masaru Wadama, chief photographer.

Photography, under the leadership of Wadama, received a top rating of excellent for the first time since Spring, 1957.

The awards, presented each semester to college and university newspapers entered in ACP competition, are based on general content, style, writing and coverage. The ACP's board of judges is comprised of journalistic authorities from various newspapers and academic staffs.

His final comment on The Guardsman was, "You cover the news extensively and provide aggressive leadership with excellent editorials."

ACP regards an All-American rating as indicating distinctly superior achievement, and First Class comparable to "excellent." The two other awards it gives are Second Class, indicating "good" to "very good," and Third Class, for "fair" to "good" achievement. It also grades papers below these categories and others requesting no honors rating.

Ramporium Stocks LPs, Pocketbooks

By Dennis Greene

A new addition to the college bookstore stock, in the form of Hi-Fi Stereo Long Play Albums, arrived last week and is available to students at prices ranging from $1.95 to $5.95.

Some of the selections from which students may choose include My Fair Lady, Flower Drum Song, Porgy And Bess, Music From Gypsy, Belis Are Ringing, and the Grand Canyon Suite.

The Ramporium also added two new lines of pocketbooks recently, the Dell and Dolphin Series, both of which are expected to be of special interest to all students.

Among the other lines of pocketbooks carried are those of the Viking, Anker-Doubleday and Vintage Series, in addition to the College Outline Series and the Schaum Outline Series.

On the average, the Ramporium carries a supply of a half-dozen copies of all paperbacks in stock with the exception of best sellers and required books, which are carried in quantity.

Pocketbooks required by instructors in English, humanities and communications courses are stocked in a separate section for the convenience of students.

Among Ramporium pocketbooks, Psycho is the current best seller.

Controversy Rages Over Help Week

Student Reactions Vary On 'Hell Week' Question

Varying student opinions ranging from complete apathy to absolute anathema were given by fraternity members in reaction to the new policies of the Inter-Fraternity Council, which has redirected the traditional "Hell Week" to a "Help Week."

Also known as "Pledge Week," these fraternity "initiation days" have been designated for next Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Tuesday and Thursday have been set aside for the pledges to study.

A common reply from many fraternity brothers was that of complete unconcern. One student revealed that he didn't care whether Pledge Week was officially "help," "hell," or "hallelujah" week as long as his fraternity continues pledging activities next week.

Another member of a Greek letter society explained that "help weeks" have been tried in the past, but as far as the pledges are concerned, that other word is the one that's imprinted on their minds.

Wednesday of next week has been set as "weed-pulling day" for the pledges. The horticulture department has donated rakes and hoes for "IFC's helpers" to clear cluttered campus areas of over-grown weeds.

To this project came various reactions, most of them favorable comments. An old-timer among fraternity men thought that it was about time that pledging gave the college some aid instead of amusement during Pledge Week.

Some of the IFC members were disappointed that their "fun week" was cut from five to three days last semester and that this semester is status quo. They said that if they were initiated with a five-day week, why must the new recruits only have to endure three?

Yet, it was evident last Spring that this new policy proved to be worthwhile; for the first time in a long time, the pledges' grades didn't nosedive because of those two extra "study" days.

IFC must comply with the reinforced anti-hazing legislation passed by the state last year.

As past help week projects Tau Chi Sigma has painted garbage cans around campus red-and-white, the college's colors, and Alpha Kappa Rho has taken over the assistance to the semesterly X-ray truck project.

ASSUME THE ATTITUDE! Scenes such as this faded from campus Pledge Week activities last year when state legislation reinforced anti-hazing laws. This semester a concerted effort by the Inter-Fraternity Council has resulted in a week divided among college help, study and fun—some.

Pledges Strive To Improve Campus, Public Opinion

Faculty members are viewing with pride and pleasure this semester's change from the old, traditional Pledge "Hell" Week to Pledge "Help" Week.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, says he looks upon the change as a great improvement.

The main changes, as presented to the Student Council through the Inter-Fraternity Council, are three-fold.

1. The so-called "hazing" part of the week will be restricted to next Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and unnecessary antics will be eliminated.

2. Next Tuesday and Thursday, the pledges will be compelled to put in extra time studying their curriculum subjects.

3. Wednesday has been designated as Help Day. On this day the pledges, under the guidance of the brothers and sisters, will undertake projects aimed at the betterment of the college.

An example of the betterment or help program is the fact that the sororities are going to be helping with the Associated Women Students' fashion show and tea that week.

Help Week begins on Monday, November 14, and will run to the end of the week when it will be climaxed by a dance, sponsored by the Inter-Fraternity Council. This dance, with the theme The Last Night, will be held at the California Club from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight.

The general reaction of those faculty members, administrative personnel, and the fraternity and sorority members themselves who were asked about this change in the general nature of the week, is that it should go a long way toward demonstrating the maturity of the average City College student and counteracting any misconceptions the general public may have about fraternity and sorority life.

Veterans' Day

In Memory Of Those Who Did Not Return

By Hugh Philo

PACIFISM was the watchword, atomic fall-out was still unknown, Geiger counters and Roentgens had not yet become household words when this nation first observed Armistice Day on November 11, 1919.

Day Is Done . . .

Two years later, November 11, 1921, the tomb of the Unknown Soldier was dedicated in ceremonies held at Arlington National Cemetery.

Present were most of the government notables and many officials from the countries of allies. Many ringing patriotic speeches were made, promising eternal thankfulness that democracy had, indeed, won the war that was to end war for all time.

Gone the Sun . . .

During the succeeding years every Armistice Day was observed with curiosity and awe by the younger people and with increasing nostalgia by the service veterans.

At every school on November 11, patriotic programs were presented which included World War I songs, stirring oratory, and always, at the mystic hour of 11 a.m., the sad, beautiful strains of "taps" echoed gently through the corridors.

From the Lake . . .

In 1954, after two more wars, Congress changed the name of Armistice Day to that of Veterans' Day.

Whatever the name, the day is observed for the original reasons, a day set aside to honor in memory of those men and women who gave the "last measure of devotion" for this country, that the living might continue to enjoy the benefits of a great democratic nation.

All Is Well, Safely Rest . . .

This Veterans' Day, Friday, November 11, will be observed by all students here, if only because it is a day free from studies and classes. But this Veterans' Day can be something more than just "another holiday."

Friday at 11 a.m. "taps" will again be sounded across the country, carrying in their hauntingly sweet, plaintive notes, a salute to all the men and women of the war years who didn't make it back.

Entirely appropriate from each student at this time would be a silent, heartfelt "well done and thank you."

Variety Of Jobs Open To Students For Yule Season

By Rodney Van Cleve

Prospects for students desiring employment during the Christmas season appear on the bright side this year because of the heavy buying predicted by economics analysts and the comparatively early closing of the college on December 9.

Joseph A. Amori, director of placement, warned, "Students should make arrangements now to find suitable jobs for Christmas. Very little hiring in done during the holiday season."

The majority of students who find work will be utilized in the retail merchandising fields as sales clerks, stock clerks, credit interviewers, wrappers, and a large gamut of retail store jobs.

Uncle Sam in his huge mail handling and processing divisions will hire thousands of temporary workers during the holiday season as truck drivers, mail sorters, postmen and allied jobs.

The railroads, airlines, trucking lines, confectionery firms, florists and bakeries will also add hundreds of additional employees to their payrolls to meet peak leads.

Wages and salaries this year will be about the same as last year, Amori said, with slight increases in some job categories depending upon the industry. Experience will count heavily in the final wage standard offered.

In all retail sales outlets, Amori emphasized, workers must be trained prior to hiring. Most of the business firms are hiring currently in part time and temporary positions to afford students an opportunity to sharpen up and become oriented to the job, prior to the heavy rush periods during the holiday season.

Homecoming Queen

MAJESTY of all she surveyed during the recent Fall Festival-Homecoming was Queen Sandra Genessi, green-eyed Newman Club candidate.

Elected by popular vote, Queen Sandra is a business major in her first year here, but horseback riding, swimming and dancing are among her favorite activities outside of college.

The friendly freshman queen also works as a fashion model.

Princesses in attendance at her coronation last Friday were Jane Johnson, Donna O'Leary, Juanita Schaeffer and Mary Ann Grandemange.—Guardsman photo by John Rodriguez.

Bad Seed Debuts This Friday In Little Theatre

Maxwell Anderson's The Bad Seed will debut here this Friday at 8 p.m., Michael Griffin, drama director, announced last week.

Patricia Brosnan and Dorothy Neil will alternately perform the role of Rhoda Penmark with Miss Brosnan beginning on opening night.

The drama about this beautiful eight-year-old girl who is responsible for several murders will feature a cast of 13.

The second of three Little Theater productions, the play takes place in the apartment of Colonel and Mrs. Penmark, played by Mel Kramer and Leah Pashoian, respectively, in the suburb of a Florida Gulf city.

It begins with the drowning of a boy who has just beaten Rhoda out of a medal in penmanship.

Seen in no one except a guard who only catches a glimpse of her red dress, Rhoda's guilt cannot be determined on this flimsy piece of circumstantial evidence.

Subsequently, her mother, Christine Penmark, played by Miss Pashoian, discovers the medal in the child's room.

As the play progresses, the association between Rhoda and the boy's drowning as well as other deaths becomes increasingly stronger.

Finally, the mother discovers she, herself, is the daughter of a criminal.

What happens in the end is available for all to see beginning this Friday night. Associated Student cardholders will be admitted free while others will be charged a dollar each.

Performances of the play, which consists of two acts, each containing four scenes, will include the three weekends in November and December 2 and 3.

Scholarship, Seniority Plan Kills Pre-Registration Policy

By Bob Hacker

After sifting through the many suggestions submitted by the faculty and students, a committee made up of administrators and faculty members last week adopted a plan to end not only the pre-registration crush but also pre-registration itself.

Registration numbers in the future will be awarded to students on the grounds of scholarship and seniority. Details for this plan have not yet been worked out but should be in the near future, Walter McCloud, counselor, said.

The reason for the new system stems from the fact that almost 4000 students attempted to secure low registration numbers at once this semester.

The administrators are now working out a formula by which both scholastic and seniority standings will be evaluated. The formula consists of compiling the final grades of the last semester and the seniority of each student.

The persons who attended the meeting that brought about the new plan believe it distributes the numbers on a fair and equal basis.

According to Dean Ralph O. Hillsman, by using this plan, "We put a premium on scholarship."

The members of the committee also believe this plan will give students an incentive to work harder in order to secure a low registration number.

McCloud expressed his appreciation to those who submitted suggestions to him. He said, "They were very helpful."

26th Annual Christmas Concert Due Dec. 8, 9

Preliminary rehearsals of the orchestra, Men's Glee Club and the A Cappella Choir are in progress for the music department's 26th annual Christmas Concert, scheduled for December 8 and 9 in Smith Hall.

The orchestral group, under the direction of Meyer Cahn, music instructor and concert director, is preparing a full range of Christmas carols and some selections from Handel.

Galen Marshall will lead the Men's Glee Club and the A Cappella Choir in works by Brahms and Bach, in addition to French carols and American Negro spirituals.

The highlight of the concert is expected to be a number called Carol Fantasy. Under Marshall's direction, this number utilizes the full chorus plus a tympani, a piano and two trumpets.

AWS Names 12 Models For Tea, Show Nov. 16

Twelve student fashion models were named yesterday to carry the theme 'S Fashion'ble in the Associated Women Students' Fall Tea and Fashion Show next Wednesday, November 16, in Smith Hall from 3 to 5 p.m.

Campus dress, sports wear and semi-formal attire for the women students at the college will be displayed, Margaret Lindstrom, AWS president, said.

Decorations and entertainment will follow a cosmopolitan theme. Fashion plates from women's magazines will add color to the hall. Hotel and Restaurant department is planning an elegant stand-up tea after the show.

Gay LaJoie, clothes consultant at Macy's, selected the following models: Virginia Barden, Brigitta Bergman, Brenda Dennis, Lee Ann Depender, Carol Hinkson, Cecilia Lee, Diane Luhr, Joyce Nelson, Marilyn Olstad, Joyce Parker, Jacqueline Thom and Meta Wesch.

Diane Beeson, Suzanne Murphy, Marlee Meharry and Melia Firgis, physical education instructor here, also aided in the selection.

Entertainment, under the direction of Ede Huver, will feature Spanish dancers, a guitarist, and vocalist Shirley Thornton.

Faculty members plus 30 senior high school students from the Bay Area have also been invited, along with all women at the college. Newly appointed sorority pledges will serve at the tea.

In keeping with the "fashion first" motto of the show, attire will be dressy dress.

Help Week Versus Hell Week; Common Sense Or Rash Actions

THERE is currently a move underway on campus to have the traditionally helter-skelter activities of hell week, the acid test time of sorority and fraternity pledges, changed and directed into more restrained activities and constructive channels.

Hell week was an appropriate name for pledging antics, but it seems a little muddled and petty to us as to just exactly what satisfaction and power one person gets from making a pledge commit rather foolish and senseless acts which occasionally erupt into proportions not intended.

Each semester the hell week activities at the college seem to get just a bit more foolish and commonplace. (There is nothing interesting or humorous in having a group of pledges bombard each other with raw eggs or pails of water. Ho-hum.)

Now, however, it has been moved that all the energy and enthusiasm evident during hell week be directed into a more constructive "help-week" about campus.

There is good reasoning behind this and we say bravo.

Traditionally, hell week activities are the "final exams" of hopeful pledges, and we see nothing wrong with this. But the word to remember here is moderation. Is hell week that sacred that it can't be modified?

HELL no!

Americans Elect But Soviets Accept

ANOTHER national election has come and gone. The politicking is done, the speeches silenced and the buttons and banners removed. Not all will be satisfied with the results, but we abide by the principle of rule by the majority.

It's not bad, either. In the Soviet Union, for instance, there is the rule by the "majority" whether most people agree or not!

Let The Chips, Myths Fall Where They May

By Paul Plansky

YESTERDAY the American people chose their leader for the next four years. At the time of this writing (a week before publication), the Las Vegas chips were divided almost evenly between the two candidates.

Regardless of which man captured the presidency at the polls, the citizens of the United States should give that man credit for his hard-won victory and pledge to him their steady support for the crucial '60's ahead.

Turning away from the election—because nothing is as old as yesterday's news—today's column will follow a more fanciful line, drifting away from the profound issues of politics and delving into the enigmas of the imagination.

California is known as the "est-est" state.

It has the highEST point in 48 states, Mt. Whitney; the lowEST point in 50 states, Death Valley; the most national parks, four; the longEST coastline; and eventually, the largEST population.

Similarly, San Francisco can be thought of as the "est-est" city.

It has the longEST bridges, the largEST Chinese settlement outside of China, the beST restaurants, and the largEST man-made park in the world.

Of course, San Francisco's claims of such greatness cannot stand unless they can at least equal the "glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome."

Well, our fair city does boast (at least) seven hills like Rome and a mayor from Greece. Yet, the queen city of the west does lack one essential aspect of the ancient Greco-Roman style—Mythology. Or does it?

A recent significant excavation beneath a North Beach espresso house revealed the existence of a flourishing ancient Bay Area civilization equal to the Greeks and Romans. These lithic peoples were called the Stonehams.

Their capital city (S.F.) they named "Christophilia" which in Stonehamite means City of Fog. This is where the stronger and superior class of militarists and merchants called Giants lived.

The inferior lots and outcasts of individual tribes were banished from the city; the Bums, as they were called, emigrated to the L.A. valley.

Thirty miles due east of Christophilia on the summit of Mt. Satan (Mt. Diablo) resided all the gods and goddesses whom these imaginative Stonehams worshipped.

Following is an extensive list of the colorful figures who dominated ancient San Francisean mythology:

Lota Shaka: Goddess of Earthquakes, c. 1906 B.C.

Smokus Incineratus: God of Smog Control & Air Pollution.

Generita Beata: Goddess of North Beach.

Foghorny Buoy: God of Fog.

Jack Knife: God of Fleishhacker's High Dive.

Jack Pot: God of Gambling.

Uno-Brazo Bandido de Reno: God of the Losers.

aMAYSing Fieldero: God of the Outfield.

Alma Matero: Goddess of Grade-point Averages.

Alcatrazam, el Rockus: God and Protector of the Golden Gate.

Folgera: Goddess of the Coffee-Break.

Jose Jiminez: God of the Jearth and Jome.

Duchess Ellingtonia: Goddess of Stereo and Hi-Fi.

Frankl Sinatlo: God of Vegetation and Wine.

Brigetta Bardowia: Goddess of the Chase and the Hunt.

Homeri: God of Baseball — Granus Slamus!

Russian Stars, College Thespians Meet Here

Moscow Student Concern Is Art For Art's Sake

By Janet Carter

Vladimir Ivashev and Zhanna Prokhorenko, stars of The Ballad Of A Soldier, the Russian film which won best film honors at the International Film Festival held in San Francisco last week, paid a brief visit to the college October 27.

Michael Griffin, drama instructor, arranged the event and student Larry Levin, son of Festival Director Irving Levin, presented the questions for two hours while Niek and Mike Loukianoff, Vadime Menechayeff and Alex Metteff, students here, served as interpreters.

Ivashev, 21, and Miss Krokhorenko, 20, are in their third year at the Institute of Cinematography in Moscow, where they are studying courses in techniques, fencing, acting, directing and dancing. Ballad Of A Soldier is their first appearance before the public.

They explained here that while students are attending the institute they are considered of amateur status, but upon graduation, next year for them, they will be considered professionals.

While some foreign films are shown in the institute for study purposes, they said that not many American films are shown in Moscow. Of those he has seen, Ivashev liked Roman Holiday very much but did not care for Ben-Hur.

Students at the institute are concerned with art for art's sake rather than the spectacular, the pair said. there aren't many glamour girls in their theaters although there are beautiful women.

Miss Krokhorenko was asked why she went into the theater. "I don't know," she said, with a shrug of her shoulders; "I guess I just wanted to." She also had to be competent, for the school is very competitive.

Lunch at the cafeteria was pandemonium to say the least. Questions were thrown at them right and left. All the while, between mouthfuls, they autographed and distributed pictures.

Before coming to San Francisco, they were in Los Angeles, but they said they didn't enjoy that visit because there was too much publicity.

One student asked if they would like to try out for American movies. They laughingly said, "Yes."

After their stay here they travel to New York and then back to Moscow where they will finish their last year at the institute.

Language Study Poses Interest, Amusement

By Christopher Wise

BUENOS DIAS, SENORITA! That is for the lovable young lady who picks up her Guardsman every Wednesday morning and read it during her Spanish class.

Languages, of course, are not the least interesting subjects to study and they usually are the most amusing. French, especially, gives rise to some of the funnier translations and/or questions.

Recently an instructor told his class that "Ils ne passeront pas" was a famous French quotation meaning, "They shall not pass," and asked the class if they knew who had said it. Johnnie Wiseguyinthebackoftheroom came up with, "A French instructor."

* * *

EVEN THOSE who are not students of French are aware that "anglais" means English. Why then did Johnnie say that "le professeur d'anglais," meant geometry instructor? (Angles?)

* * *

EVEN OUR OWN beloved English suffers too often from misinterpretation. It is well known that extended day students are those who start their classes at 7 o'clock in the evening.

But there are those who would have you believe that persons who work all day until 6:45 and then rush to the 7 o'clock class are called "overextended day students."

Those people probably believe also that music students in that division spend all of their time playing extension chords.

* * *

HISTORY instructors, too, have their moments with our great language. Take the one, who, on a multiple choice test asked which of the Roman governments was most powerful, the (A) triumverate, (B) dominate, (C) principate, (D) chlorinate.

* * *

FORGET all that you have learned in political science. It is the printers who decide who'd the presidential candidates will be and it is not the Republicans who have all the money.

Don't believe it? Listen to this. Printers of bumper stickers are paid by the letter. If the party is broke, the men with the shortest names are picked. This year's crop: Kennedy and Johnson (17) versus Nixon-Lodge (11).

How was Eisenhower able to campaign? Very simple. The name "Ike" was coined when they made out the advertising budget in 1952.

* * *

THE ISSUES of the campaign were quite important to this college. One candidate wanted to give up Quemoy (Chinese for golden gate) and Matsu (Japanese for pine).

If the Reds land in the Marina and head south, City College will be in danger if Pine and Golden Gate are given up without a struggle.

* * *

BEEN WONDERING how a column that started out talking about languages and drifted off to politics could work back around to language?

Free Lunch Counter

Diet Display Draws Viewers And Nibblers

By Richard Shields

Many persons think nutrition is a waste of time, but no one who saw the food display on the third floor of Science Hall recently will deny that it can be made beautiful.

Comprised of more than 60 kinds of food, the display was prepared by Life Science instructor Brigitta Beetz for nutrition classes and called 100 Calorie Portions Of Different Foods.

Hoping that other students might learn better nutritional habits, Mrs. Beetz set up the display in the hallway after her Monday and Friday classes. It was stored in the laboratory refrigerator during the week.

One life science department member was taking bets on how long it would be before someone got too hungry to go to the cafeteria. It was a long time.

Everyone just looked on Monday, but Mrs. Beetz reported that a plum was missing Friday and that someone had nibbled on a Milkyway candybar.

Student Government Adviser Sherm Elworthy might be glad that a way seems clear to remove some of the crowd from the cafeteria. Mrs. Beetz probably wouldn't want to bring the crush to Science Hall, though.

She wasn't surprised that most students didn't sample her cooking, since it had been in the refrigerator with biology department frogs for a week.

At the present, the department is displaying a Which Lunch Do You Choose? table featuring a well-balanced meal on one side and a good-looking but poorly balanced repast on the other. It is interesting to note that the poorer of the two looks the more appetizing.

A future display will feature dishes of 10 Gram Portions Of Proteins. It is hoped that none of these will be eaten on the spot either. As important as choosing the right lunch is choosing the right place to eat it.

Mrs. Beetz prefers that her ideas go to student heads rather than their stomachs.

The deepest lake in the world is Lake Beikal in central Siberia. It is 250 miles long and reaches a depth of 5650 feet.

Keys To Success

Library Stock Opens Doors To All Interests

More than 50,000 books, magazines and pamphlets covering subjects ranging from Anatomy to Zoology are available for student use now in the college library, according to Irene Mensing, one of three librarians.

One of these time-saving services is the Open Stacks System, which is the only one of its kind in operation in the Bay Area today. Here, students are able to locate books in the stack sections under their subject and classified by the Dewey Decimal System.

Books, magazines and pamphlets placed on reserve by instructors are intended for one or two-hour study period use, and can be located through the circulation desk. After 2 p.m. students may take them home for overnight use, if desired.

Bound magazine volumes are housed in the Reserve Reading Room, and no material may be taken out of here without first being checked through the reference desk.

Miss Mensing also requested students to notice the new book display on the library's bulletin board, and the exhibit of college activities in the showcase outside the main entrance.

Students should always return materials as soon as they are finished with them so some other student may use it, she emphasized, explaining that fines are charged to students who do not bring material in by the specified date.

Prevailing hours this semester are 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays.

T-Birds Scuttle Ram Eleven 36-24

Locals Collapse In Last Half, Hand Victory To Strong Oakland

By Warren Downes

Led by the pin-point passing of Stan Peters and the blockbusting running of Wendell Hayes the Oakland Thunderbirds rolled past the Ram eleven, 36-24, to wreck the locals' 1960 Homecoming game last Friday at City College Stadium.

Coach Grover Klemmer's crew scored all their points in the second quarter and led at half time, 24-14. But the T-Birds came roaring back in the second half to stop the Rams cold, allowing the Red and White only one first down in the entire last half.

The T-Bird offensive machine was almost unstoppable in the last two periods of the contest as Peters completed six of eight passes and Hayes was booming for the necessary short yardage. The Ram forward wall tired in the final periods and Oakland's line was able to open good sized holes for their fast backs.

There was no scoring in the first quarter, but the Rams began moving late in the period, with Tom Piggee going 43 yards to the nine-yard line.

On the second play of the second quarter Gary Lewis scored on a 3-yard keeper around left end behind a wall of blockers.

Lewis then repeated the same play for the extra point.

Alex Darnes saved the Rams on the next Oakland drive as he intercepted one of Peters' passes on his own 11-yard line and returned it to the 24-yard line.

On first down Lewis attempted a pitchout to Tim Moffett, but T-Bird defender Al Jones busted through the line, intercepted the pitchout and scampered 17 yards for the touchdown before the shocked Rams realized what had happened.

Lewis scored his second touchdown of the day on a 44-yard sweep around right end, aided by some crunching blocks by Herman McKee and Ray Greggains. Piggee added the extra point for the Rams.

Oakland came roaring back as Peters hit speedy Ron Buford for a 66-yard touchdown play and then Peters hit Tom Malinowski for the PAT.

Piggee ended the first half scoring as he went 64 yards in two plays, going 57 yards on the scoring gallop. The two point extra point was good on a pass from Lewis to Greggains.

The last half of play was all Oakland as the T-Birds' single wing proved too much for the tired Ram eleven.

Hayes' scoring runs came on runs of one yard and 12 yards. Peters was able to hit his receivers almost at will against the porous Ram defensive secondary.

Locals End Home Season Thursday Against Panthers

Supporting a competent running attack led by fullback Ken Graham, the Sacramento City College Panthers invade City College Stadium at 2 p.m. tomorrow instead of the originally scheduled date, November 11.

The Panthers, although having a comparatively small interior line, are adept at the running slots, which are the main keys to their attack. Graham, who leads the Panther attack, is top scorer and ground gainer for the capital city eleven.

Ladd Holton and Pat McCarthy, Panther alternate quarterbacks, provide the field generalship of the capital team. The Sacramento offense is of T-formation series with variations.

The Panther defense is led by Holton, while returning lettermen Jeff Fehr and Dwayne Holman lead the capital city line stalwarts.

The Rams, who should be given the nod as favorites because of their heavier line, will be in top shape marring complications from last weekend's Oakland game.

Supporting the Rams' heavy scoring attack will be field general Gary Lewis, end Ray Greggains, halfbacks Tom Piggee and Guy Whitaker, and a team out for revenge since they lost last year 8-7 at Hughes Stadium in Sacramento.

Defensive standouts for the Rams include end Terry Fisher, linemen Leamond McGriff, Andy Citizen and Alex Darnes, Coach Grover Klemmer feels that this year's Sacramento team is a much-improved team after its 1959 fifth place in the Big Eight.

This will be the last chance for local football fans to view the high scoring Rams at home, as they close their 1960 campaign next week at Modesto against the aerial minded Modesto College Pirates.

Lewis, Piggee Lead Statistics; Fumbles Hurt Ram Big 8 Standing

By Tom Kennedy

It's too bad that the Big Eight football standings aren't decided by statistics, instead of by scores.

The Rams could be leading the conference if they were.

In the four league games before last Friday's Oakland encounter, City College had out-scored, out-rushed, out-passed, out-punted, earned more first downs and intercepted more passes than their opponents.

All this time they won two games, tied one and lost one.

Grover Klemmer's men have outgained each of their opponents except Stockton, which had a narrow 298-282 advantage. They have nearly a 2-1 edge in the combined total yardage, 1378-792.

One thing which has hurt the team is fumbles. While Vic Muzio, Sal Spampinato, Jere Driscoll and Earl Trotter pounced on enemy miscues, the locals lost the ball by the same route nine times.

Fumbles set up the two San Mateo touchdowns early in the Bulldog game and gave Stockton two insurance scores at the start of the fourth quarter in the Mustang clash, when they led by the slim margin of 22-16.

Stickler fingers on the part of City College conceivably could have made a difference in these ball games.

Tom Piggee led the Rams in rushing with 312 yards in 37 carries, and his former Poly high school sidekick Gary Lewis had 205 yards in 22 carries before the Oakland game.

All three had better than an eight-yard average per carry.

Lewis, playing quarterback most of the time, completed 16 of 28 passes for 255 yards to lead in that department. Mel Canavaro (7 for 13 and 94 yards) and Mike Peterson (4 for 9 and 53 yards) trailed.

End Ray Greggains was the locals' big pass receiver, grabbing 6 for 133 yards. Earl Trotter (4 for 70 yards), Piggee (3 for 36 yards), Peterson (3 for 30 yards), Larry Pedrodalsol (1 for 10 yards), and Guy Whitaker (2 for 10) also figured.

Lewis led in the four-game totals in pass interceptions with three, Herman McKee had two and Clarence Scanlan, Peterson, Piggee and Alex Darnes each had singletons.

One interesting aspect of Ram scoring has been their manner of acquiring TD's. Ten scores have come on runs or passes exceeding 30 yards, and only six on sustained drives. Three others have been produced by fumble recoveries or interceptions plus an ensuing drive of less than 25 yards.

Lewis makes scoring the third department he leads in, with seven touchdowns and 42 points through the first four games.

Greggains (22), Piggee (14), Wayne Stribling (12), Whitaker and Charley Smith (8 each) comprise most of the other 132 points on the City College scoreboard, as opposed to 62 for their opponents.

Stribling has a respectable 37-yard punting average through midseason.

In Borneo there are seven persons, besides the Americans there, who have heard of football.

Soccermen Sink Stanford 5-1

Booters In 3-Way League Lead Tie, Face USF On Saturday

By Ivan Temes

BALBOA SOCCER STADIUM, Nov. 5.—Fighting hard to retain their prized league crown, the Ram booters gave previously unbeaten Stanford a peerless performance of precision soccer with a highly impressive 5-1 triumph to create a three-team deadlock atop the Northern California Collegiate Soccer Conference.

Roy Diederichsen's men, who have outscored their opposition 38-4 in equalling the 4-1 marks of California and Stanford, collide with the unpredictable University of San Francisco Saturday in an encounter slated for 11 a.m. at the Dons' Ulrich Field.

Heavily favored to take the measure of USF for the second successive year, the Rams may run into more trouble than they anticipate from the once-beaten once-tied Hilltoppers, considerably weaker than their usually unbeatable clubs, but still able to upset Cal 2-1.

In toppling Stanford, the Red and White unveiled a new star in Charlie Bowker, who proved to be the heart of the front line while kicking across two important tallies.

Dave Kingsley's spectacular first-quarter 35-yard shot past Indian goalie Beau Bianchi, a second quarter score by Al Korbus, and a shot by Bob Barnett in the closing minutes completed the locais' spree.

The Indians finally managed a futile goal by Emanuel Andah, speedster from Ghana, with two minutes remaining.

Ram defenders Bogdan Papara, Ed Zumot and Yacob Dudum could not be faulted, but Goalie Gary DeLong stole much of the show.

WITH HIS TEAM in the thick of the pennant race again this season, Soccer Coach Roy Diederichsen hopes his crew will repeat last year's victory.

RAMblings

By Frank Dunne

AMERICANS are probably the most sports minded people in the world. To satisfy this thirst for sport, every imaginable athletic contest is offered to them. With a minimal amount of time and expense they can view anything from archery to the Zuyder Zee boat races.

But in recent years the trend has turned from viewing to participating.

This does not mean that the spectator sports are losing popularity, but increasing numbers are finding time on the weekend to take the family yacht out for a spin or to head for the hills in search of big game rabbits, squirrels, and what not.

However, this number does not include the majority of the population who wish to participate in some form of sports. But more and more people are becoming interested in what is perhaps the most ancient sport in the world.

Like most other sports the players are divided into two classes, amateur and professional. When a person reaches his majority he is accepted on the team, if he wishes. However, some start training well before this time, but this does not count and is highly frowned upon.

There is no set style of play; rather, many games are included in this sport.

Sometimes friends like to play the game among themselves, but the avid fan likes to travel to the meeting place for all his fellow players.

In recent years an oasis in the Nevada desert has become increasingly popular among the true followers of the sport.

Here he may indulge in all of the sports' varied facets, the main difference being that he can not play his friends, but must play the professionals.

This may not be considered very fair by some, but the increasing numbers who travel to the pro's place of business seem only to point out the old American adage, the underdog fights back.

But even though the visitor usually loses, he goes home happy, most of the time, because the pro has catered to his every whim; he has provided excellent entertainment for him, good accommodations and anything else he could to make the guest happy.

The pro feels he must do this to compensate for any discomfort the amateur has suffered and in this manner he also thanks the guest for game and hopes he will return soon.

Most of the guests resent losing, but they feel it is worth it because they had a good time. A few discontented souls vow to return soon and this time they will win, but this is very unlikely. But at least this sport partly solves the great American urge to participate.

Mural Loop Race Tightens; Four Vie For Top Slot

With four squads tied for first place in the club division of the Intramural Basketball League, this section of the mural loop is in one of the tightest races of its history.

All four top squads, the Recreation Association, the Newman Club, The Guardsman, and the Hui Aloha Alii, have a two and one record.

In the second place slot is the Hui Aloha Kekai with a one and two tally, and finally in third position is the Hotel and Restaurant Society, who in their first three outings emerged without victory.

Recent action in the club division was as follows: the Hui Aloha Kekai cagers defeated The Guardsman by forfeit, the Recreation Association won over the Hui Aloha Alii 43-33, and finally, in one of the hardest fought games of the season to date, the Newman Club edged the Hotel and Restaurant Society 45-41.

The independent division of the league is led by the Indians, who at press time were undefeated in their first two frays. Recent competition in that division saw the Untouchables top the Harriers 63 to 36, and the Bachelors drop one to the Indians because they forfeited.

In the fraternity division Beta Tau downed Phi Beta Delta 43-28, Zeta Phi Sigma won over Gamma Phi Ypsilon 30-21, and finally Alpha Kappa Rho won over Alpha Phi Epsilon by forfeit.

With the fall semester league only in about its third or fourth week the old problem of extensive forfeiture once again has begun to plague the cage loop as a whole.

So far, out of 16 scheduled contests in the three divisions, four have ended in forfeiture.

Jack Gaddy, co-ordinator of the league, intimated in a recent interview that he was becoming very displeased with such action, and he further hinted that he might possibly decide to take severe measures to stop the problem.

Hoopmen Search For Best Combo

Having enough guards on hand to form a police force presents a problem to basketball pilot Sid Phelan, who is looking for a combination to match last year's talented duo of Mel Wilson and Mike Carson.

The local club's main problem in preparing for the coming campaign, which opens against powerful San Jose City College on December 2, is a lack of tried big men for the front line.

Returning first-stringer John Lewis heads the list here, but Leamond McGriff, Gary Lewis, Earl Trotter and Jesse Arteberry will have to come through to produce a winner. Chuck Currington, who is heavily counted on, won't be able to play unless his doctor approves.

Bobby Grayson, Will Rockmore, Otis Phillips, Ernie Johnson, Dave Roberts and Rich Moore head the lengthy list of guards. All have the talent to develop into big cogs in the Ram machine this year.

Superb Team Effort Gains Harriers Win

In their finest team effort of the season, the Ram harriers led a five-way meet at Berkeley on October 19 by out-running the University of California, Sacramento, Diablo Valley and Oakland.

Frank James ran his best time of the season as he came in third with a time of 15:24, which was only three seconds behind George Linn of California.

The other four men contributing to the victory also ran their best times of the season. Coming in sixth was Tom Jennings, 15:43; Leon Stroughter was eighth, 15:48; Al Waxman, 16:06, 13th, and in 18th slot was John Weldinger at 16:20.

The final score found the Red and White in first position with 47 counters, Cal and the Capital City men tied for second with 49 points, Diablo Valley third with 91, and Oakland last with 123 markers.

Judo Exhibitions Halt—No Sponsor

"Attendance at a recent meeting of the Judo Kai (Society) dropped to an all-time low for the semester, according to William Paul, one of the founders of the newly formed campus group.

The turnout, less than 40, was a far cry from the enthusiasm exhibited for the club at the start of the semester. Paul intimated that he felt lack of faculty sponsorship was a prime reason for the waning interest that has plagued the organization.

Paul added that at present all the club can do is meet as an interested group. He said that they cannot hold any judo demonstrations because they do not have a sponsor.

This college, according to Paul, has some of the best mats for judo practice in the Bay Area. He said that this is because they are made of a plastic substance and are smoother than average mats.

Arts Building Opening Set For February 1, 1961

A completion date for the new arts building was set last week by Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, for February 1, 1961, although the Little Theater will not be ready for a while because of labor disputes.

Anderson stated that already installed are the Diego Rivera murals which were completed at the World's Fair in 1939, then presented to the college. Students are invited to come and view them, he said.

Not all the classrooms will be opened until 1963, when the college expects its largest enrollment. Only the first floor will be used in the beginning, at which time there will be 10 or 12 classrooms open for instruction.

There will be a variety of courses to choose from, such as metal art, sculptoring, TV, drama and ceramics.

The parking situation is expected to be convenient, as plans call for 150 stalls for student and 50 stalls for faculty use. Anderson believes that this building, its courses and instructors, should prove to be rewarding to students who are interested in the fine arts.

The new addition to Smith Hall has been completed to a great extent but here, too, have occurred labor disputes along with many changes in plans. The part not completed is the section where the old snack bar used to be, and it will just be another month and a half or two months before completion is expected.

English Courses Meet Individual Needs Here

"An English course to fit every student's need is our plan here at City College," James L. Billwiller, English department head, stated today.

Billwiller, as he took time out from a crowded daily schedule, was both gracious and informative.

"I have a Swiss name, and I am an exceptional Californian, a real 'native son'; not only that, but both of my great-grandfathers also lived here for many years," he said, and added:

"I was in the army during World War II and I have been teaching here since leaving the service in 1946. I am a very fortunate person, in that I am doing the one thing that I have always wanted to do, that is, be an educator.

"Oh yes, one thing more. We have one pet at home, a lady cat, named Macbeth, I repeat, Macbeth, not Lady Macbeth."

Thinking about it, a cat named Macbeth, in an English instructor's household, does make sense.

Returning to the English courses offered, Billwiller explained that they extend from English 1A-1B to English 46A-46B. Communications G3 is offered for the 300 or more foreign students on campus.

The communication courses G5A-B and G6 are offered to help those students who are weak in some or all phases of English fundamentals.

That so many students need the remedial courses is not necessarily due to the training received in the high school's. The reason is believed to be, rather, that today so many more students are entering college who, a few years ago, would not even have considered college.

Egri Seeks Student Applicants For Top Election Post

Unable to find an Election Commissioner by last week to supervise the Associated Student elections at the end of this semester, Associated Student President Joe Egri today extended a plea for applicants to the post.

It is the Election Commissioner's duty to issue petitions for the AS offices, approve campaign posters, pictures, unusual publicity stunts, expenditures and to settle any disputes which happen to arise.

During the time of voting he helps count ballots.

Any applicant should, of course, be non-partisan, and have the backing or be a member of one of the clubs on campus, Egri said.

He will have the option of sitting in on Student Council meetings and receiving a grade and unit for his work.

Egri added that interested students can find him in the AS office, S-140.

Dance, Fashion Show High Spots Of Pledge Week

By Pat Perkins

PLEDGE WEEK will again envelop the campus, starting Monday. Besides doing zany stunts and singing loud, boisterous songs, the fraternity pledges will perform services about the campus, while sorority pledges will participate in a special service project.

It will be easy to distinguish each sorority's pledges by the different pledge outfits that will be worn.

Delta Psi sorority pledges will wear green skirts and white blouses, and Delta Sigma Tau sorority's attire will consist of turquoise skirts and white blouses.

The pledges of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority will wear their traditional lavender and white checked jumpers and white blouses.

Royal blue skirts and white blouses will be worn by Gamma Sigma Sigma pledges. Gamma Sigma Sigma is the college's service sorority.

Kappa Phi sorority will wear black skirts and white blouses, while Phi Beta Rho's pledges will be attired in middy blouses and navy blue skirts.

The college's colors of red and white will be seen on Theta Tau sorority pledges, and Zeta Chi's pledges will wear yellow skirts and white blouses.

This Sunday sororities and fraternities will conduct pledge instruction at the homes of fraternity brothers and sorority sisters.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority will hold its pledge instruction at the home of Karen Ballard, pledge mistress.

The Associated Women Students will hold their semi-annual fashion show and tea next Wednesday, November 16, in Smith Hall. Sorority pledges will serve at the tea, and the clothes for the fashion show have been donated by Macy's.

Pledge Week will conclude Friday, November 18, with a dance sponsored by the Inter-Fraternity Council.

On Friday, November 18, the Engineering Society will go on a field trip to the Chevrolet plant in Oakland. The tour starts in Oakland at 7:30 a.m. A sign-up sheet for those interested in going on the tour is posted in S-4.

All club news must be submitted Wednesdays by 11 a.m. in S-304.

Navy Explains Air Program To Students Today

Students attending classes today may be surprised to find the United States Navy waiting for them in front of the Redwood Ram.

Visiting the college today to explain the naval careers in aviation offered to young college students is the Naval Aviation Information team from the Oakland Naval Air Station.

Lieutenant Commander Walt McGreevy, accompanied by Aviation Mechanic's Mate First Class Don Camburn, are conducting interviews and answering questions aboard their Naval Aviation Information van concerning the navy's aviation programs.

A number of naval air programs are being outlined by the two navy men, including the new Aviation Officer Candidate (non-pilot) program which trains those men in such fields as electronics and navigation who are not physically qualified for pilot training.

Mental and physical examinations are required; however, as a matter of convenience, the aptitude test will be held on campus for those who desire to see if they qualify in this respect. Men will be under no obligation in taking the required tests.

The Marine Corps, a separate branch of the Navy, visited the college last week to explain their careers offered to college students.

UC Scholarship Forms Due Mar. 1

Applications for the University of California 1961 - 1962 scholarships must be filed in Dean Mary Golding's office not later than March 1, 1961. Students intending to apply for state scholarships are also required to follow this procedure.

Students planning to take the scholastic aptitude test of the College Entrance Examination Board must do so not later than February 4. Officials recommend that students take the examination on December 3 or January 14.

Applications to take the examination may be secured in the deans' offices and must be filed one month prior to the administration of the test.

Scores on the examination are to be filed in the admissions office on the university campus before the scholarship application will be considered.

Examinations will be given in San Francisco at Lincoln High School, San Francisco State College, and the University of San Francisco. Each applicant will be notified as to where he will take the examination. Fee for the test is $4.

Special Sale On Books, Pictures At Remporium

Dick Main, manager of the Remporium, announced the annual sale of reduced priced books and pictures will begin at the college bookstore today.

The sale, which consists of items purchased from a publisher's clearing house, will be in effect for two weeks.

Books on sale will be both fiction and non-fiction. Students may purchase books reduced up to $5, and in some cases even more.

Remnants of brush oil paintings, all by artists, will also be available.

Shutterbugs Send Display To Brussels World Show

A group of 24 of the best student works of the photography department here are due to be sent to Belgium to be shown in the association of the ex-students of the Belgian school for photography display to be held in Brussels from December 3 to 18.

Six photographs in each of the four categories are being sent. These categories include artistic, industrial and scientific, publicity and photo montage, and press photography.

This exhibition is to include works of every professional photography school in the world.

The Student Council last week allotted $35 to the photography department to send the display to Brussels.

In May, 1957, independent creative productions by four outstanding photography students marked the official opening of the Cloud Hall gallery as the photography department's campus display center.

Since its opening, the gallery has been used mainly to display the best works of talented students in all phases of photography each semester.

Although the gallery is used primarily for student works, various faculty members have had one man exhibits. These exhibits include the works of Bev Pasqualetti, Madison Devlin and Emmett Smith.

Several visiting prize-winning shows of professional photographers and professional photographers' organizations have also been displayed.

Among the more nostalgic shows displayed was one last spring entitled Our Memory Album. This show was in recognition of the 25th anniversary of City College, and included a series of pictures of students and faculty members of the past 25 years.

Other shows that received a great deal of attention were entitled Ah Spring, In A Holiday Mood and This Is San Francisco.

One future show will be a display of top photographs by members of the Northern Association of Professional Photographers early in February 1961.

Crackdown Causes Fewer Citations

Stricter enforcement of parking regulations around the campus has resulted in a lower number of traffic citations issued to students this semester, Mike Hancock, Campus Police chief, announced recently.

So far this semester, the 29 officers on the college force have issued approximately 800 citations, as compared with about 1200 given out during the same period of time last year.

Hancock also said that complete new uniforms will be purchased in the near future, as a result of the budget received from the Student Council.

A little known fact concerning the force is that they have a pistol team which has consistently won first place since 1957, and also has a good chance to take first again this year through the efforts of one of their top marksman, John Murphy.

Students not sure of the acceptable parking areas around the campus are reminded that only those properly marked student stalls are citation-free.

Students desiring parking permits, which must be displayed on each car parked on the campus, may obtain them during College Hour on Fridays in C-120.

Local Radio Station Hosts Griffin, 3 Coeds

Michael Griffin, drama director, and three coeds in leading roles of The Bad Seed, were interviewed yesterday afternoon on Evangeline Baker's radio program on station KSAN.

Patricia Brosnan, Dorothy Neil and Leah Pashoian, along with Griffin, engaged in a round-table discussion on the program publicizing this next Little Theater production opening here on Friday, November 11.

Miss Brosnan and Miss Neil will alternately perform the lead role of eight-year-old Rhoda Penmark; while Miss Pashoian plays the child's mother, Christine Penmark.

The drama by Maxwell Anderson will be performed by a cast of 13 on successive Fridays and Saturdays.

Unauthorized Posters Face Confiscation

Students desiring to post announcements concerning various college and club activities must have these announcements approved by Bob Pacini, chairman of the Publication Board, in S-304.

From now on, all announcements that are posted without being approved will be torn down and destroyed, Pacini said, adding that this rule, although not strictly enforced recently, will be in the future.

This rule was set up in order to prevent misleading or unsightly material from being posted.

Freeway Forces Campus Farm Move To McLaren Park Home

The horticulture farm adjacent to the men's and women's gymnasiums on both sides of the archery range, has no problems with excessive wage demands by tomato pickers or cannery workers. This is especially true now that the farm must be completely removed to make way for the coming freeway.

When the word farm is mentioned, one automatically thinks of cattle, pigs, chickens, and vegetables or fruits. This farm, however, resembles a condensed version of the famous arboretum in Golden Gate Park.

Plants, flowers and shrubs of varied sizes, shapes and colors have been planted and are maintained by the San Francisco Park and Recreation Department and not by horticulture students of the college.

The large array of plant life, which has beautified the offices of the mayor and other city officials many times, has already begun to lose some of its splendor because the Park and Recreation Department is moving its nursery to McLaren Park, in the interest of progress.

Unfortunately, the farm is somewhat hidden from sight by tall trees and shrubs since it is enclosed by a wire fence, the gate of which is kept locked at all times except when physical education classes are in progress.

Now there is little hope of ever seeing the farm in its full splendor because the freeway moves on and the gate locks out.

Council Okays Perkins As Finance Chairman

BILL KEANE, past Frosh class president and Associated Men Student president, announced his surprise resignation as AS Finance Chairman.

By Herman Kligerman

Bob Perkins, freshman member of Student Council, was voted in as the new Associated Student Finance Chairman last week, following the resignation of Bill Keane from the post.

Perkins polled the highest number of votes for freshman members of council in the last AS elections.

The new Executive Budget, which amounted to $2390, was discussed and passed by a vote of 12 to 0 at last Thursday's meeting of the Student Council.

Three hundred and fifty dollars was appropriated to cover the coming council dinner. Council awards, which include pins, guards, gavels, and outstanding service awards, received a budget of $135.

The Regional Conference was awarded $55, and the State Conference $350 to cover the expenses of the six delegates scheduled to attend the affair.

To pay for the AS card sale awards, the Card Sales Committee received $50. The same amount was appropriated to the Election Committee to cover any expenses that may arise in the future.

To buy and store Block SF awards, that organization was given $200. One thousand dollars was appropriated to handle possible championship awards for football and/or soccer teams. If neither team wins this year's championship, the money left over after purchasing second-year jackets for certain players will go back into the treasury.

The motion to allocate the total budget for fall, 1960, was made by Bob Ross.

The first movie projector was invented and introduced to the public in 1849.

AWS Hosts Fashion Show Today

Cosmopolitan Atmosphere To Prevail At Semi-Annual Tea

San Francisco's cosmopolitan atmosphere and high fashion mode will provide the theme for today's Associated Women Students' fall tea and fashion show, to be held in Smith Hall from 3 to 5 p.m.

A wide assortment of pastries will be served at the tea, including 500 Danish pastries, 300 cream puffs and 2500 brownies. Assisting with the serving of refreshments will be the newly selected pledges from the various on-campus sororities.

Decorations, under the chairmanship of Hope Vogel, will bring out the show's theme, "S-Fashion'ble," in a specially designed montage of fashion magazine covers.

A wide variety of fashions from Macy's will be modeled by 15 women students chosen by Diane Beeson, model chairman; Sue Murphy, clothes co-ordinator; Marlee Meharry, commentator, and Mella Furzis, women's physical education instructor here.

Fashionable clothes, ranging from ski wear to formal attire, will be modeled by Virginia Barden, Miss Beeson, Brigitta Bergman, Brenda Dennis, Lee Ann Depender, Carol Hinkson, Cecilia Lee and Diane Luhr.

Also modeling for the show are Miss Murphy, Joyce Nelson, Marilyn Olstad, Joyce Parker, Juanita Schaefer, Jacqueline Thom and Meta Wesch. Models are all five feet, seven inches or taller.

Invitations, under the chairmanship of Kathleen Hallock, have gone out to public high school deans, high senior advisers, and senior class vice presidents as well as to all women students here at the college.

Mothers of women students have also been invited to attend the tea.

Entertainment will be provided by the International Relations Club and vocalist Shirley Thornton, who will sing selections from the Flower Drum Song, a tie-in with the San Francisco theme.

Dean Mary Golding, Margaret Lindstrom, AWS president, and the other AWS officers, Pat Crone, vice president; Miss Hinkson, treasurer; Miss Hallock, corresponding secretary; Margaret Krieta, recording secretary, and Elve Viiblaid, historian, will act as hostesses in the receiving line.

Sixty AWS members, under the direction of Grace Carbonie, will also act as hostesses for the affair.

The cafeteria will close today at 1 o'clock and the fountain at 2 p.m., AWS officers said. The show will begin at 3 p.m., and a formal standing tea will follow. Entrance will be through the east side entrance or bookstore side of Emith Hall.

Bad Seed Debuts; Play To Run Three More Weekends

The Bad Seed opened here last Friday night as the second of three Little Theater productions for this semester.

Sharing the lead role of Rhoda Penmark in Maxwell Anderson's drama were Patricia Brosnan and Dorothy Neil, Miss Brosnan giving the initial performance.

The play revolves around Rhoda, an attractive eight-year-old girl who causes several deaths but is linked to them only by circumstantial evidence.

Although seemingly innocent, Rhoda's part in these deaths rises to more than suspicion after her mother, Christine Penmark, discovers her possession of a penmanship medal for which she had shown much desire.

Dramatically, then, a series of anti-climaxes begins when the mother discovers she is the daughter of a famous criminal. The climax, itself, brings her to a point where she feels something must be done about herself and her daughter.

In other important roles are Mel Kramer, Bob Rosenblatt, Martha Ross, Fred Fisher, Annamarie Papagni, Randy Jones, Diane Flores, Jordy Cooney, Wayne Elbe and Mike Corrigan.

Opening night jitters were very much in evidence as the first performances revived a host of memories for Michael Griffin, drama director.

With the rise of the curtain, Griffin recalled that in the production of Country Girl last semester, important props were twice missing in two different scenes of Clifford Odets' play.

Since the discovery was made only after the curtain was up, the players had only the choice of improvising their own lines in referring to the missing prop.

This semester has also produced an awkward situation which occurred in the production of The Whitehaired Boy. An actor missed his cue one night and consequently had to be deleted from the play for that night. The cast rose to new heights in ad-libbing.

Sloppy Reservoir Condition Stirs Student Council Action

With the last of the budgets passed for the Fall 1960 semester and only details of adjustment remaining on its financial slate, Student Council concentrated this week on discussions of various problems at the college.

Committee work takes up more and more of council's time as the program for improvement of the college gets underway.

Associated Student President Joe Egri informed council that he was meeting with the heads of all campus clubs and fraternities to discuss the most outstanding problems.

Also Egri appointed Roger Labataille to head a constitutional revision committee. No assistants have yet been appointed to help him.

Following a proposal made at an earlier meeting, a group of council and cabinet members, headed by Associated Men Student President Bob Kelley, met at the reservoir parking lot and initiated plans for keeping it free of glass and debris.

Students who began the cleaning program with Kelley were Don Verdu, Roberta Beber, Marilyn Santos, Elena Mirabella and Paul Snowberg.

A committee was formed to work on the double College Hour Christmas party which is given each year by sponsors of the AS. The committee is headed by Georgene Peterson, and working with her are Barbara Lerman, Mary Ann Grandemange and Kathy Henderson.

Egri presented trophies to the three winners in the car parade which followed the college's homecoming game November 4.

Gamma Kappa Beta was given first place, Zeta Phi Sigma second and Bill Keane, on a motorscooter, third.

Thirty-five dollars of AS funds were allocated to the photography department for the care and transportation of photos which will be displayed at the Brussels Fair.

The pictures are being sent after an invitation by officials at the fair.

CAB Pushes Christmas Fund Drive For Needy

Beginning with a kickoff rally Friday, December 2, the Club Activities Board will launch a five-day Christmas fund drive here to collect money for needy families in San Francisco.

Jim Bush, CAB president, announced that contributions can be made to any one of the 141 students, mostly CAB members but some volunteers, who have the appropriately marked tin cans for collecting money.

Bush added, "I hope the drive is a success, and with everyone's help it will be."

Pins Due For Top Television, Radio Broadcasters Here

This semester's awards to outstanding broadcasting students here will be given soon, according to Ken Jonah, president of the college's Broadcasters' Club.

Each of the recipients will receive a pin with the letters KCSF on it. These pins will be given on the basis of the outstanding work in the area of radio and television broadcasting.

The winners will be chosen by a committee composed of students Frank Miller, Margot Hawkins, Gil Freeman and George Armes, with the aid of Henry Leff, faculty adviser.

Last semester's awards went to Jonah and Jerry Bennett, who now has a radio show over station KTIM.

The Broadcasters' Club includes students who are planning careers in the radio-television field. Each member of the group gains practical experience by broadcasting over KCSF, the college radio station.

Campus Carrier, heard from 10:10 to 10:12 a.m. Mondays through Thursdays and at 8 a.m. on Fridays, and musical shows, which are broadcast daily to the cafeteria between the hours of 7:30 and 10 a.m. and noon and 1 p.m., are productions of the students.

Relating statistics at the football games and other sports events is another project of the broadcasters.

College Hour guests of the club include professional personalities from local radio and television stations who give the students some idea of what lies ahead for them in the industry.

With the 1961 completion of the new arts building, the broadcasters will have a new, closed circuit television installation, which will benefit radio and television majors.

Officers of the club, which includes about 20 members, are Jonah, president; George Heuga, vice president; Pam Klein, secretary, and Demetre Lagios, record librarian.

Luau, Dance Top Campus Events

Hawaiian Club Hosts Exotic Dinner Here

A Night In Hawaii has been the theme chosen for the first Hawaiian Club Luau to be held this Saturday evening in Smith Hall starting at 5 p.m.

The Luau will feature such Hawaiian dishes as Kalua roasted pig, Lomi salmon salad, Chicken Luau, Poi, Molokai baked sweet potato, pineapple-coconut pudding and Hawaiian fruit punch. Free Vanda orchids and leis will be given to all persons who attend.

A two-hour entertainment program has been planned with exotic music being performed by Hanalei and his Hawaiians.

Dinner is to be served from 5 until 7:30 p.m. with the entertainment to follow. Tickets are available from any Hawaiian Club member for $3.50 for adults and $1.75 for children under 12 years of age. The dress for this occasion is to be casual or Hawaiian wear.

Honor Society, IRC To Sponsor Social

A dance, jointly sponsored by Alpha Gamma Sigma and the International Relations Club, will be held in Smith Hall this Friday from 8 to 11 p.m.

Music will be furnished by Maury Wollahan's orchestra.

The highlight of the evening will be entertainment by the International Relations Club, which will consist of typical dances from the members' native countries.

The IRC has just completed its most successful fair in seven years, and the honor society invited them to join with them in sponsoring a dance to present a sample of the dances performed at the fair.

This dance will be free to all members of the two clubs and their dates, and refreshments will be served.

Any interested members are advised to inform AGS sponsor, William Richardson, in S-160 as soon as possible.

APPEARING in the opening performance of The Bad Seed was Pat Brosnan, first semester drama student here, who will share the role of Rhoda with Dorothy Neil.

Final Grid Rally Set For Friday During C-Hour

The final football rally of the season will be held this Friday, November 18, during College Hour, but Rally Commissioner Marilyn Santos said, "Though last, it will not be the least."

To stir the students for the last football game of the season with Modesto College at Modesto, the Rally Committee has complemented the program with the scheduling of surprise professional entertainment.

At this time the award for the Most Valuable Player of the homecoming game will be made to Tom Pizzee for his consistent ground gaining and defensive work against Oakland City College.

The cheerleaders attending will be Jeri Crivelli, Lilla Hunter, Pat Perkins, Carolyn Vukasin, Marcia McNeely, Janis Wienberger and Virginia Zane.

Song girls include Donna O'Leary, head song girl; Sandra Belcher, Gail Cusick, Connie Sapp, Joan Hillman and Maxine Randall.

Miss Santos also revealed information regarding the rally bus to Modesto. It will leave the Redwood Ram promptly at 5:30 p.m. that evening. Tickets, on sale at the cafeteria, are priced at 50 cents for students with an AS card, and $3 for those without.

AS Submits Proposals For State Meeting Here Tomorrow

Several proposals have been submitted by the local Associated Students' Office to the officials of the California Junior College Student Government Association regarding the three-day state convention which opens tomorrow in San Francisco.

Among these is a plan for a convention involving the foreign students of all California two-year colleges. The proposed convention would be held at Santa Rosa.

Selection of game officials by a state committee rather than by individual colleges is also advocated. If the officials, who are paid by the CJCSGA, were chosen by this organization, it would remove all possibilities of a partisan element.

Another need cited by this college's representatives is for an Associated Men Student conference. This proposal would provide for a state-wide convention of AMS presidents meeting each semester, similar to the practice of the AWS.

The semi-annual state convention will meet at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel November 17, 18 and 19.

Joe Egri, AS president, will lead the college's delegation and will serve as chairman of the convention. Georgene Peterson, AS vice president, will represent the college in the finance committee.

Other delegates from the college will be Marilyn Santos, publicity; Bob Kelley, campus problems, and Bob Ross, athletics.

Ram Sees All, Hears All, Says Nothing

SAMMY THE RAM, as he appears at all sporting events, rallies and gatherings to whip up enthusiasm among the ranks of his faithful followers.

Redwood Mascot Keeps Vigil Over Campus, Symbolizes College's Tradition, Spirit

By Richard Shields

Although the college has no "halls of ivy" and no dedicated chorus reverently proclaiming "hail, Alma Mater," it does have memories and traditions which linger on through the years.

A tradition is supposed to be something which is handed down from generation to generation—something which magnifies the heritage or past gloriies of a race.

At the college, some are stories and customs passed on by departing students; others are landmarks and monuments which never change.

Most students here know what is meant by "the Ram"; its familiar figure standing in front of Smith Hall seems as permanent as any feature of the campus. However, few students know anything about its origin.

Its formal name is the Redwood Ram and its has occupied its present position since January 3, 1956, when it was moved there from the west campus.

Before its tenure on the west campus, where the reservoirs are now located, it was stored for five years in the men's gymnasium. The two years preceding that hold the story of its origin.

The Ram was carved in 1939 by muralist and sculptor Dudley C. Carter for the California Handicraft Exhibit of the San Francisco World's Fair on Treasure Island.

After the fair, the late Archibald J. Cloud, then president of the college, accepted it in the name of the college from architect Timothy Pflueger as a gift from Carter.

It is not exactly correct to say that the Ram is a traditional landmark which never changes, however. It is "decorated" almost every semester by rival colleges as an insult to "Ramland" athletic prowess.

During its stay at the college, the Ram has endured paint jobs of blue and white, orange, black, a coat of tar and feathers, an assault with a pick axe and an attempted cremation to mention only a few of its discomforts.

It is the opinion of responsible students as well as faculty and administration officials that the noctural forays of rival college students which result in the Ram's sometimes bizarre appearance are inspired by immaturity more than by athletic rivalry.

It was announced at a recent Student Council meeting that plans for moving the Ram are being discussed with certain administrators at the college.

One plan was to stain the redwood mascot in its original color, move it to a "safer" place on campus and erect a concrete cast on the pedestal in front of Smith Hall.

Another tradition in the college's appropriate preoccupation with Rams is Sammie, an altogether different breed of Ovis Aries.

Sammie is really a student who, keeping his identity secret, wears a crepe paper mask of a Ram at ball games and other social activities during the year. He remains anonymous until the end of the year when another Sammie takes his place for the next year.

Students pass in a continuous stream through the college and into life beyond, but that great impassive face in front of Smith Hall never changes. Each student leaves a small part of himself behind when he walks down the hill for the last time.

COLLEGE MASCOT ON THE MOVE. Redwood Ram, shown here being moved to the pedestal in front of Smith Hall on January 3, 1956, may soon be moved again.

Letters From Students Serve As Guideposts For Improvement

FRUSTRATION, as any psychology student learns, can arise from one of three causes—conflicts, deficiencies or obstacles. It is this last cause we would like to dwell upon for a moment, for it appears certain students here consider themselves slightly frustrated in not being able to reply in "Letter-to-the-Editor" form to articles which appear in The Guardsman.

Apparently some invisible force, some intangible object blocks their way.

We do not mean to imply, of course, that these "frustrated" students have developed neurotic or psychotic tendencies, but the point is that there needn't be any frustration at all.

A way exists here for students to comment if they wish on material which appears in The Guardsman via the column Rams' Horn.

Apropos of this we would like to state that we welcome all sincere student letters, opinions and comments, favorable or unfavorable.

While the main function of any newspaper is to inform its readers of the current events, we believe it also has an obligation to consider the reactions of its readers and take any criticism or constructive remarks as methods of betterment in reporting and writing the news.

Therefore, while we do believe in the old adage that you can't please everyone, we do our best to try, but realize, at the same time, that there are those who will have legitimate criticisms and suggestions for betterment.

To these we offer an invitation to bring their views in letter form to The Guardsman office, S-304. It has been the policy of The Guardsman in the past to allow these letters to be published, and we see no reason why this practice should be discontinued now.

A three-fold purpose is served by this. One, it allows students to "sound off"; two, it fulfills The Guardsman policy of serving the best interests of the students; and three, the letters can be used as guideposts along the way to an even better publication.

Brotherhood, Welfare, Greek Letters Spell College Fraternity

By Paul Plansky

FRATERNITY, in the American college is, according to Webster, "a student organization formed chiefly to promote friendship and welfare among the members, and usually having secret rites and a name consisting of Greek letters."

This brief, barren, dictionary definition connotes an aimless horde of juvenile "hot-rodders" who converse in slang and go on rampageous outings.

Perhaps a distorted interpretation of the words in quotes, but certainly the meaning of the word Fraternity needs some clarification.

With such a misnomer coming from a qualified publisher, one can easily understand why mere public opinion has marred the reputation of the college Fraternity.

Fraternity, originally taken from the Latin word frater, meaning brother, is, according to Foresight, "a group of college men bound together through brotherhood into an inseparable body of Strength, Loyalty, and Service."

But a word so broad yet so meaningful must be torn apart in terms of experience and through examples . . .

FRATERNITY IS: that spirit of sociability; of co-operation and of friendship towards all fellowship; that love and loyalty of an organization and its ideals.

That unbreakable bond between brethren; that spirit of affability that still exists when a brother defeats another in an election or denies another an appointment; that indescribable joy of reunion with an old brother . . .

FRATERNITY IS: the individual friendships . . . the double dates . . . the football games . . . the long and crazy trips . . . the chipping in for gas . . . the good times at sorority joints . . . the spirit of competition . . . the desire to win . . . the ability to take defeat and bounce back . . . the noisy but constructive meetings . . . the serious moment of receiving one's pin, becoming a brother.

FRATERNITY IS: the Sunday car washes . . . the collecting and working for charity . . . the jokes and pranks . . . "group" support at college events . . . the luaus, parties, banquets and picnics . . . the sense of humor . . . the incandescent spirit of young men . . .

These are what build a Fraternity and its traditions.

Being young has many advantages because time is on your side. Ahead of a young man lies an important choice: to live a life of meaning and decency, or one that is marked by insignificance.

The desire to improve oneself, to make the world we live in a better one, to contribute to culture and to the fine arts, has been taken over by the striving for materialism.

SELF-SACRIFICE, the giving of one's time and energy for the benefit of others, is a human trait that is essential in living a life of decency.

Belonging to a Fraternity certainly won't stifle the individual—it will help him to achieve a social and spiritual fulfillment in life.

The spirit of Fraternity can never be drowned like a fire. It has grown strong and become great; it's found everywhere, and perpetuates man's soul.

FALL MEANS FOOTBALL, and football means teams with unusual names, Rams, Beavers, Colts, et al.

Two students were discussing the reason for the names of some of the teams. One tried to explain to the other that team names were supposed to be more or less synonymous with the college or city the team represents. He used California's Bears, the San Francisco Forty-Niners and the old Polytechnic Mechanics as examples.

"So how come," asked his friend, "the Thunderbirds aren't playing for the Ford Foundation?"

Steady Hand Counts

Sure Aim Wins Shooting Honors For Pistol Team

By Lester On

Even Wyatt Earp would have a tough time these days shooting it out with the two Campus Police pistol teams.

Yet the surprising part of it all is that, according to Mike Hancock, Campus Police chief, and his assistant, Ed Sarsfield, the entire squad of the team's 13 members had never fired a pistol prior to joining.

In spite of this, the Sharpshooter and Marksman squads have won four consecutive championships since 1957 competing on the Oakland Police Range against teams from the California Highway Patrol, the San Francisco Revolver Club and others.

Not to be outdone by his younger proteges, Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor, has continued to lead the teams with his own unerring aim in pistol competition.

Earlier this year, Fitzgerald was champion in the master classification of the Western Regionals sponsored by the Western Revolver Association. To maintain the accuracy that has won many trophies in match competition, the teams practice each Monday and Wednesday afternoons on the Burlingame Police Range.

As in the duels of earlier days, a choice of weapons is used, namely, the Smith and Wesson .38, the Colt .45 and the Trophy or Citation .22 to prepare for the various types of matches.

The trophies that have been won are stored in cardboard boxes because no showcase is available for their display.

Off the shooting range, the pistol teams and other members of the Campus Police carry only clubs and handcuffs leaving their shooting irons on the range for match competition only.

Sometimes, however, situations have arisen where more than handcuffs or guns were needed as when a coed brought in a lost dog and requested the Campus Police to find the owner.

When not engaged in such acts of courtesy and helpfulness, the Campus Police must often patiently explain to an endless stream of students why they were the recipients of parking tickets.

Often the explanations are brief, and the violators are reminded that the tickets are the same as those issued in other parts of the city and can only be paid at City Hall.

Considering the unusual and sometimes thankless duties of the Campus Police, no wonder their pistol teams are so accurate.

Last Half Rally Nets Ram Victory

Lewis Gallops 70 Yards For TD As Locals Salvage 16-14 Win

By Tom Kennedy

Behind by two touchdowns late in the third quarter, the Ram footballers came back in dramatic fashion last Thursday to edge Sacramento City College, 16-14, at City College Stadium.

Gary Lewis, somewhat of a "goat" in the loss to Oakland the week before, proved to be the hero this time. He ran 70 yards around end for the college's second touchdown, then threw a pass to Ray Greggains for the winning extra points.

Greggains, who had thrown a key block in Lewis' scamper, was all alone in the end zone when he took the throw.

Guard Alex Darnes also played a big role. He recovered a fumble on the Ram 27-yard line to set up the deciding score and was nothing short of tremendous in his line play all afternoon.

Held to only 48 yards on the ground in the first half, Grover Klemmer's forces broke loose for 221 yards in the second period, largely because of the Ram forward wall.

Sacramento passing, good for 59 yards before intermission, netted a minus-4 yards in the last 30 minutes.

Tom Piggee was a workhorse for the Rams with halfback Tim Moffett out of the lineup with a broken ankle. He was called on 21 times, and gained 97 yards. Lewis, largely on the strength of his break-away runs, produced 134 yards in 12 tries.

The victory broke a two-game losing streak for City College and put its loop record at 3-2-1. Sacramento's Panthers are now 2-4.

After both teams had a first half drive stopped with the opposition's 30-yard line, Panther quarterback Ladd Holton passed his team to the Ram 12. But Jack Hickey and Terry Fischer combined to stop Holton's quarterback sneak one yard short of a first down on the three.

The locals took over and marched to their 19, however, Lewis' pass was intercepted by Ken Graham on the 25, and the speedy fullback ran it back for a touchdown.

Graham was stopped short when he tried to skirt right end for the two-point PAT.

The Panther blockbuster tallied again in the third quarter, running 34 yards over right tackle. Mark Poletti caught Graham's pass for the PAT, and Sacramento led, 14-0.

Then City College got fired up. They marched the ensuing kickoff back 59 yards in eight plays, Piggee going over from the three.

Lewis, who had set up the score with a 27-yard jumper around left end, barely made it over the goal for the all-important extra points.

Sacramento appeared to be on its way to sewing up the contest with an insurance tally when they drove the kickoff to the City College 27, but halfback Ed Devine fumbled after being hit hard by Ram tacklers and Darnes fell on the ball.

Piggee ran to the 30, then Lewis took off on his long jaunt.

Another fumble recovery, this time by Piggee, halted a Panther comeback drive at midfield, and tackle Andy Citizen and Lewis combined to kill the dying Sacramento hopes in the final seconds.

Citizen caught Holton for a five-yard loss, then Lewis intercepted a Pat McCarthy aerial on the last play of the game.

Rams End Big 8 Season Friday Against Modesto

Closing their 1960 football campaign this Friday night at Modesto, the Rams will face a strong passing attack in the Pirates from the San Joaquin Valley. Kick-off is slated for 8 p.m.

Modesto head coach Stan Pavko's eleven, although not showing to much prominence in Big Eight standings, supports one of the better passing teams in the conference, led by quarterback Dick Valois.

The Pirates operate a T-formation belly series with occasional flankers, and have an adequate ground game in scatbacks Don Richardson and Ed Burton. Pass defense in past seasonal games for the Pirates has been their biggest weakness.

Modesto boasts a heavy team, although yielding a heavy amount of touchdowns. The Pirates carry nine men who tip the scales at 200 pounds or more.

Defensive standouts for the Modesto footballers include wing backs "Boo Boo" Bob Austin, Reed, Richardson, and defensive end Bill Melson.

Coach Grover Klemmer's Rams will hope to close their 1960 season with a victory over the homewoners. The Rams were counted on by many conference observers to be right at the top battling along with the Stockton Mustangs for the championship.

However, losses on consecutive weekends, to Stockton and Oakland, respectively, put a block in any plans which the locals had of becoming the 1960 champs of the Big Eight.

Gary Lewis will again start at quarterback for the Rams with his regular replacement Mel Canevaro in the wings. His running mates will be Tom Piggee and Herman McKee.

Hustling Ram halfback Tim Moffett will not see action against the Pirates because of an ankle injury sustained in the Oakland game, which has sidelined him for the remainder of the campaign.

In Moffett's absence either Guy Whitaker or Chuck Oushani will fill the vacant halfback slot, according to Coach Klemmer.

Leading the Ram defensive unit are guards Alex Darnes and Ed Johnson, tackles Andy Citizen, Leamond McGriff and Mike Kasper.

In ends Ray Greggains and Terry Fisher the Rams have two of the best flankers in the conference. Both are adept at key blocks, springing the fleet halfbacks loose on long gainers.

Alley . . . OOPS!

OAKLAND'S UNIDENTIFIED ball carrier pulls the famous "alley-oop" play in reverse, with the help of Ram quarterback Gary Lewis. Lewis, who has led the Rams all year with this style of tenacious play, is the team's prime candidate for All-Conference honors. The locals wished they had more plays like this in the Homecoming fray November 4, because in the last half they became very porous.

Indians Win Third Tilt, Grab Lead In Independent Loop

The Indians, with a display of power and cunning that even their ancient predecessors would have marveled at, have swept into undisputed lead in the independent division of the Intramural Basketball League.

Having won three out of three, the Indians have two games in front of the rest of the division. All the other squads in the loop have won one and lost two. Latest action in the independent division saw the Harriers win over the Bearbers by forfeit and the Indians quench the Untouchables.

This division, like all the rest in the league, has had its problem with forfeits.

Over in the fraternity division, there is a two-way tie for top position between Zeta Phi Sigma and Beta Tau. These two squads emerged victorious in their first two contests of the season, placing them in the top slot.

Recent action in the fraternity division has been as follows: Zeta Phi Sigma over Phi Beta Deita, 37-22; Gamma Phi Ypsilon beat the men from Alpha Kappa Rho, 30-16; and Beta Tau won an easy one over Alpha Phi Epsilon by forfeit.

The fraternity division also has had forfeit trouble. There is one squad in that loop that at press time had not come to one of its scheduled games.

Rainout Forces Booters To Battle 3 Teams In 6 Days

By Ivan Temes

With a tie for the league title appearing imminent, the college booters close out a highly successful season by visiting a trio of upset-minded opponents within a six-day span.

Slated to take on Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference teams in San Jose State and the University of San Francisco, the Rams must travel south in between these encounters for a non-league battle with the Cal Poly Mustangs.

The opening of what could prove to be an arduous week finds Roy Diederichsen's eleven pitted against San Jose tomorrow at the Spartans' home field.

Though having dropped one game, as have California and Stanford, the defending champion Rams need the win to gain a tie with the Bears and Indians for the lead since the locals have currently played five games, one less than the other two clubs.

Friday's contest with Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo was scheduled to be the Red and White's finale but rain caused a postponement of last Saturday's clash with USF, forcing the game to be moved probably to next Wednesday, Diederichsen said.

Once-beaten once-tied, the Hilltoppers are decidedly weaker than their usually unbeatable squads but could have proved troublesome off their early season 2-1 upset over California.

Ram defensive stalwarts Ed Zumot, Bogden Papara, and Yacob Dudum will be relied on along with goalie Gary DeLong to hold the enemy.

Since the Rams are unable to go to the nationals because the college is a two-year institution—the only one in the league—the area's representative will be decided Saturday when California and Stanford meet at Berkeley's Memorial Stadium in a preliminary to the Big Game.

Even so, wins against San Jose and USF will bring the college a 6-1 mark, good enough to deadlock Saturday's winner. Neither of the other two clubs can match the locals' scoring prowess, which has rolled up 38 goals while holding the opposition to 4.

RAMblings

Let's Get Something To Cheer About

By Frank Dunne

AT THE RECENT Homecoming game with Oakland City College the rooting section's spirit must have hit an all-time low.

In the second half, admittedly the team offered little to cheer about, but in the first period, when the team was leading, the loudest noise in the area came from the sea gulls protesting to the ballplayers who cluttered up their landing strip.

The college is not noted for its undying support of its athletic teams, but the display of disinterest at this contest was ridiculous.

The cheerleaders tried to muster some semblance of support for the team from the crowd, but they were handicapped by lack of co-operation and an assortment of out-dated high school cheers that don't belong on the college level.

Call it sophistication if you like, but to college students a cheer like:

"We've got the T-E-A-M
That's on the B-E-AM
We've got the team that's on the beam
That's really hip to the Jive
Come on Rams, skin 'em alive," to use the popular expression, goes over like a lead balloon.

In other colleges throughout the country, the type of mass-unison yell is strictly passe. The trend is turning toward cultivating the crowd's natural feeling for the game and the spontaneous reaction is the new goal of the yell leader.

Most of the spectators at this game came because they were interested in seeing a football game. They did not come to be distracted by ill-timed calls for group yells.

When the Rams were on the move toward a touchdown or had just pulled off a good play, the support was there and it was real support and not just a rhythmic vocal expression.

It is up to the cheer leaders to channel this support into a driving force by encouraging such demonstrations, by talking up the game, and not blaming the rooters for not following their directions.

Because the real, spontaneous support for the team is much louder and more rewarding in encouragement for the team than any forced yell. This fact has been demonstrated in the past.

So it is hoped that by the time next season rolls around, the cheerleaders will try to encourage the support of the students by calling attention to a good play or drive and not thwart enthusiasm by forcing attention away from the game to mouth some high school cheer that students can't possibly put their hearts into.

In this manner all the yell leaders' hard work will be of use and it will be a better season for the cheerleaders, students and, it is hoped, the team.

Because with all the work put in by the yell leaders, it seems only proper that they should have, as they deserve, the support of the students.

James Stars As Harriers Sweep Four-Way Contest

A determined local track squad took a four-way meet from Modesto, Diablo Valley and Oakland in Golden Gate Park November 1.

Once again led by hard-running Frank James with a time of 15:28, the whole team made a fine effort to rack up only 30 points.

Tom Jennings was second, 15:53; eighth was Alvin Waxman, 16:13; John Weidinger was ninth, 16:16, and tenth was Bill Hotchkiss, 16:18.

The final score had San Francisco first with 30 points, Modesto second with 51 points, Diablo Valley next with 63 points, and in last place, Oakland with 84 points.

On October 26, in a meet previous to the harriers' four-way win, the locals took another one from Modesto, 19 to 36.

Although the win was decisive, the harriers turned in poor times in comparison to their other meets. Leon Stroughter came in first, Waxman and Jennings second and third, respectively, with Weidinger and James coming in sixth and seveth. The winning time was 16:36, turned in by Stroughter.

Cagers Scramble For Lineup Spots

As the college's hoopsters swing into their third week of practice while preparing to open at San Jose City College on December 2, only John Lewis, veteran of last year's Big Eight titlists, appears to have a starting berth nailed down.

Sid Phelan's quintet isn't scheduled at home until December 17 against Long Beach City College. Their Big Eight opener sees the Rams pitted opposite San Mateo on January 13 in a campaign during which perennially powerful Oakland will rule as the favorite.

The Rams' fortunes depend heavily on whether or not tali Chuck Currington and Glenn Woid are able to play this season. Otherwise comethrough performances by Orlando Camp, Leamond McGriff, Gary Lewis, Jesse Arteberry, Earl Troiter or Charley Anderson will be needed to field a formidable front line.

With both guard spots up for grabs and numerous aspirants trying to capture them, returnees Nate Jackson, Otis Phillips, Bobby Grayson, Will Rockmore and Vince Rocci will bid strongly for the first-string positions.

However, a host of "little" newcomers headed by Dave Roberts, Charlie Williams, Ernie Johnson, Stan Fuelschor, Rich Mercurio and Eli Horn will also be attempting to crack into the starting guard slots.

RA Participates In All Events Sports Day At San Mateo December 3

Detailed information and sign-up sheets are now posted in the women's gymnasium concerning the All-Events Sports Day, to be held Saturday, December 3, at San Mateo, according to Elizabeth Wirth, Recreation Association advisor.

Awards were presented to this college for the best waltz, and second place for volleyball at the Sports Day held here October 29.

Hartnell was first in volleyball. In folk dancing, Cabrillo won for the best schottische, and Hartnell for its polka.

Evelyn Grann of San Jose won high score for women in archery, and Pat Morris of Oakland was high man.

Sandra Hardy of Marin in women's singles and Tom Hyland of Napa in men's singles won in badminton, with Ann Sievers and Bob Tucker of San Jose taking the mixed doubles.

Sharon Dukes and Jim Lee of Monterey Peninsula won individual awards in bowling.

Improvement Of College Tops Sorority Aims

By Pat Perkins

MANY people do not realize the importance of the college sorority, nor do they have a true and unbiased picture of these organizations formed in their minds.

Here at the college, the various sororities are found to be closely knit groups, bound together by common interests, friendships, loyalty and a desire to be part of the college.

These sororities perform many functions, both service and social, that are of benefit to many people. For example, Gamma Sigma Sigma, the service sorority, held a successful Easter drive last spring, and Delta Psi donates time and service to the college by working in the library.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority helps with the children at San Francisco County Hospital and the sisters also go Christmas caroling in December.

Theta Tau donates the sophomore king trophy that is awarded at the Soph Ball each semester, and Phi Beta Rho sorority donated the cutest couple trophy for this semester's Frosh Ball.

Delta Sigma Tau sorority also does hospital work for its service project.

The members of sororities, as well as members of the campus fraternities are the ones who sponsor, and participate in, the majority of social affairs.

Each semester the Inter-Sorority Council presents a cotillion for the new pledges and this Friday the Inter-Fraternity Council will have a dance, its theme The Last Night, at the California Club.

Sororities are a vital part of college life. The sisters have the initiative to get things done, to plan, to serve, to socialize, to reach maturity with confidence, for they have obtained a well-rounded background and a broad outlook on life.

Scholarship Forms Due Next Monday

Applications for scholarships offered by the International Relations Club and the Chinese Students' Club must be registered in the deans' offices, S-145, by next Monday, November 21.

Applicants may begin registering any time prior to the November 21 deadline. Students are considered for scholarships on four major points, scholastic ability, personal need, character and activities.

The IRC offers as many scholarships as possible to foreign students, whereas the Chinese Club awards two scholarships.

Egri Names Verdu AS Election Head

Associated Student President Joe Egri disclosed last week that Don Verdu had accepted the position of Election Commissioner for the fall semester AS election.

Verdu is being supported by the Associated Men Students; this is the first time the AMS has backed anyone for a position on the Election Committee.

Students who wish to apply for a position on the committee must also be carrying at least 12 units and have a 2.0 grade average. Each application is subject to the approval of the dean of men, Student Council and the AS president.

The election will be held on Monday and Tuesday, January 9 and 10, and Egri urged students who are interested in serving on the election committee to consult him in the AS office, S-140, as soon as possible.

Up for election are the offices of AS president and vice president, AMS president, Associated Women Student president, Sophomore Class president and Freshman Class president in the executive branch of government.

Also, seven candidates will be elected to the seven freshman seats in council and seven to the sophomore seats in council. Any member of the Associated Students may run for an office in student government.

Last-Night Dance Ends Pledge Week

California Club Site For Friday IFC Semi-Formal

Marking the end of a hectic Pledge Week, The Last Night, a dance commemorating the entrance of pledges into fraternity life will be staged by the Inter-Fraternity Council this Friday night.

Admission to the affair is set at $2 per couple and dress is semi-formal. Don Carle's orchestra will provide the music for the dance, which will begin at 9 p.m. and end at midnight.

A contest among the pledges of each fraternity will be offered during intermissions, so as to avoid conflict with dancing.

This will consist of the pledges displaying their musical talents in fraternity groups. Faculty members as well as the organiaztions will act as judges.

Committees have been selected to handle the planning and details of the dance. The Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity will be responsible for tickets and publicity. Beta Tau will supervise the conduct of the students.

Decorations coinciding with the last night theme have been undertaken by the Gamma Phi Ypsilon group. Phi Beta Delta will provide the refreshments.

This will be the first pledge week dance sponsored by the IFC, who are looking forward to the event. "All of the fraternities have co-operated wonderfully and the dance should be a swinging success," Jerry Kucserka, IFC president, said.

The dance will be held at the California Club, 1750 Clay Street, and it is not limited to fraternity members, but open to the entire student body.

Pledges Hoe Weeds In Help Week Plan

Those students who are seen today hoeing weeds from the college grounds are new fraternity pledges emphasizing the change from Hell Week to Pledge Help Week, according to information from Lee Bertolone, Inter-Fraternity Council rush chairman.

Pledge activities commenced at the beginning of this week and will continue through this Friday, with the actual "initiation days" set for Monday, today and Friday. Yesterday and tomorrow were left unscheduled so that the pledges could keep up with their studies.

The week's slapstick activities will be terminated on Friday with the Pledge Week games which are to be held in the new stadium. The games will consist of a relay race, and three contests, egg throwing, pie eating and balloon blowing.

Points will be compufed, and the winning fraternity will be announced and will receive the perpetual trophy.

A chance to wipe the egg off their faces and to relax will be offered the pledges Friday evening at the California Club when Don Carle provides music for dancing. The pledges will note, probably thankfully, that this annual dance is entitled The Last Night.

John Gerstung, College Argonaut, Champions Liberal Education Here

The hoped-for accomplishment of John Gerstung, social sciences department head here, was to help in passing on the tradition of liberal education at City College.

Born in New York, but a resident of California since high school days, Gerstung attended Long Beach Junior College, transferring to the University of California at Los Angeles where he received his A.B. and master's degree.

He also has done graduate work at the University of California. His loyalty to his adopted state is attested to by the fact that his son, daughter and wife are all graduates of UC, and of all the cities that he has seen, he is convinced that none can compare with San Francisco.

An ardent fisherman, especially of surf and fly fishing, Gerstung has fished almost every stream in California and many in Oregon. Along with fishing, he likes camping trips and has hiked through most of the Sierras.

An amateur musician, he plays the violin once a week in a quartet composed of friends, all fellow music lovers.

Returning to the social sciences department which includes economics, history, political science, philosophy, psychology and sociology, Gerstung said,

"In capsule form, our department tries to help the new college student find himself intellectually and also prepare him for his place in life as an adult citizen."

In personal summary, Gerstung said, "This has been my only teaching position, having been with the college since its inception in 1935, which makes me a charter member and one of the group that the late President Cloud called his 'Argonauts.'

"Actually," he added, "teaching means so much to me that I consider myself as almost 'subsidized' for doing what I love."

Student Council Sets Record As Complete AS Budget Passes

The total Associated Student budget of $32,683.07 for the fall semester of 1960, a record in recent years, was passed last week as Student Council took the final decisive step which ended its preoccupation with financial matters.

All of the major allocations of AS funds were included in the legislation, leaving only unforeseen requests for funds to be voted on as they arise.

The budget, as compiled since council action started, is broken down as follows:

Co-Educational Activities:
A Cappella Choir	$182.00
Drama	2035.00
Freshman Class	773.00
Rally Committee	1609.74
Social Committee	18.00
Sophomore Class	800.00
Publications:
Guardsman	4219.04
Women's Activities:
Associated Women Students	679.00
Recreation Association	625.00
Men's Activities:

Budget Approval Aids Publicity Group's Tasks

A recently approved budget will help the Associated Student Publicity Committee's 18 members dispatch the tasks provided by the numerous campus organizations, Herb Batz, committee chairman, stated last week.

With all the perennial tasks and new projects being planned, Batz anticipated no problems in utilizing the allotment of almost $1400 from Student Council.

The committee is responsible for advertising the many intra-college affairs as well as publicizing off campus events of public interest.

Although the committee is normally composed of students enrolled in journalism 26, Batz said that anyone interested in advertising could work with them. Batz can be located in the Associated Students office, or at the regular meetings of the Publicity Committee during Friday College Hours.

Included with Batz on the committee at this time are Frank Gable, Stanley Sorich, David Desideri, Christopher Wise, Sophie Hines, Nick Akimoff, Frank Braeklein, Dorothy Neil, Gregory Springett, Marilynn Santos, Judy Day, Charles Riley, Donald Chew, Archibald Wong, William Chan, Christian Soenksen and Wright Batlin.

Adviser for the group is George Mullany.

College Officials Discuss Finances

Financing of the state's two-year colleges was the main issue discussed at the annual California Junior College Administrators' Conference held at the Ahwahnee Hotel in Yosemite late last month.

The two main speakers at the conference were Dr. John Gleazer, Jr., Executive Director of the American Association of Junior Colleges, and Dr. Roy Simpson, president of the State Board of Education.

Among the estimated 500 administrators attending the conference, three represented this college, Louis Conlan, president; Oscar Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management, and John Brady, co-ordinator, division of student welfare.

450 Students File Grad Applications

Approximately 450 students have filed petitions to graduate this semester, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here, said today.

Acceptance of petitions is dependent upon the fulfillment of graduation requirements and upon the outcome of semester grades, Miss Learnard explained.

Students may be graduated with the degree of Associate in Arts by meeting the requirements established by the Board of Education of the State of California and the faculty of the college. The requirements are listed on page 37 of the college catalogue.

Graduation with highest honors, high honors, and honors are the three designations of honor graduates.

Physical education grades are not counted by the registrar toward graduation with honors.

AS President Calls For Problems Conventions

Representatives from all campus clubs, fraternities, sororities and organizations have been invited by Associated Student President Joseph Egri to attend a problems-convention to be held later this month.

One of the main issues to be brought up at this meeting will be that of the conduct of students in attendance at certain college-sponsored affairs. Egri recently issued a statement concerning this matter, as a result of complications which arose at the recent Freshman Ball.

Examiner Promotion Man To Speak Here

William R. Hall, promotion manager of the San Francisco Examiner will speak to the public relations and journalism students tomorrow on Newspapers—The Foundation Of the Community.

The talk is tentatively scheduled to be held in S-302 but larger quarters may be found before tomorrow at 10 a.m., the time it is to be held.

Posters in the main corridor of Science Hall will confirm the place of the meeting.

The main portion of Hall's talk will be on the role played, past and present, by the daily newspapers in initiating community projects and striving for civic betterment.

Tomorrow's Day Of Thanks Springs From Old Traditions

By Hugh Philo

OVER the river and through the woods, to grandmother's house we go!"

The heavenly aroma wafting from the kitchen, which left the youngsters full of anticipation but very empty otherwise until grandfather had performed his annual ritual, carving the turkey.

Thanksgiving Day always seemed to be crystal clear and invigoratingly cold with maybe a trace of the season's first snow still on the ground.

That's the way Thanksgiving Day might have been a few years ago.

"Onto the freeway and through the fumes, to grandmother's pad we go."

Upon arriving, a note for the scanning—"I'm off to the football game—check the freezer for the chow, with the makings, I know you're a wow—If the odds this day I should rue, I'll soon be back with you."

This is the way Thanksgiving Day might be observed today.

However, this is the way Thanksgiving Day was first observed.

Governor Bradford of the Plymouth colony, in 1621, declared that the fourth Thursday of November was to be set aside as a day of thanksgiving, in gratitude for the first harvest in the New World.

The early colonists knew how to be grateful despite that first cruel winter, during which half of the colony's members did not survive. In that bleak, inhospitable country in 1621, the first American Thanksgiving Day was shared by friendly, neighboring Indians and the colonists. The main dish that day featured four wild turkeys.

Down through the years, the day was observed at intervals. Held in 1623, 1644 and during the American Revolution, Congress annually set one day aside as a day of National Thanksgiving.

The observance again fell into disuse, until President Lincoln in 1863 issued a proclamation declaring the fourth Thursday of every November to be a day of National Thanksgiving.

This date remained until President Franklin Roosevelt in 1939 set it ahead to November 23. This proved unpopular and in 1941, a joint resolution of Congress changed it back to the original date and declared it to be a National Holiday.

Tomorrow, as the family gathers around the table, would be an appropriate time to really take stock of all the things that we as individuals have to be thankful for. The privilege of living in this great country, personal freedom and opportunities, limited only by the individual's ability, are a few.

A few seconds might even be spent in a silent giving of thanks to those early colonists.

Meanwhile, back at grandmother's pad . . .

December 5 Marks Opening Of CAB's Annual Christmas Fund Drive For Needy SF Families

By Richard Dragavon

The annual Christmas Fund Drive, sponsored by the Club Activities Board to provide Christmas gifts for needy families in San Francisco, will start Monday, December 5, according to Jim Bush, CAB president.

A rally during College Hour Friday, December 2, featuring a variety show with top college entertainment, will kick off the fund-raising campaign.

Included so far in the as yet uncompleted rally plan are George Cooney as master of ceremonies, and Marilyn Milani in a humorous pantomime, was the information from Marilynn Santos, rally commissioner.

On the following Monday members of the various clubs which belong to the CAB will activate the campaign by carrying the donation cans to all parts of the campus so that all will have an opportunity to contribute.

They will make themselves available every day that week until Friday, December 9, when the drive is officially ended. During that week there will also be large cans for donations at the silver pole in Science Hall and in the cafeteria.

"This is one of the most worthy causes to which students are asked to give," Bush said, and expressed confidence that it will again be successful as it has been in the past.

In four previous years, 12 families have received grocery certificates from the CAB for amounts based on the number of children in the family.

The procedure, Bush explained, is that the collected money will be taken to a grocery store from which a purchase order is received.

Don Verdu was named as committee chairman, and John Summers will head the ways and means committee for the drive.

Ex-student Receives Award For Heroism

George Berthold, former student here and past president of the Newman Club, received the National Award of Merit Certificate from the Regular Veterans Association at a banquet at the Marines Memorial Club, 609 Sutter Street, November 12.

Berthold on April 2 risked his life to save a fellow firemen, who had been stunned by a hose line and was slipping down a wet roof toward flames.

Harry Gartner Post No. 15 of the Regular Veterans sponsored the dinner. Fire Chief William Murray and Police Chief Thomas Cahill both attended.

Turkey Day Present

Students Rest Two Days, Then Tests

Students here will receive a much welcomed two-day recess from classes tomorrow and Friday, because of the Thanksgiving Day holiday, as they prepare for their second midterm period exams.

Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, also announced that the Christmas vacation will extend from Monday, December 12, to Tuesday, December 27.

Because of the vacation schedule the next edition of The Guardsman will appear two weeks from today, on December 7. The first edition of the paper in 1961 is planned for January 6, which will be a special election edition.

President's Message

"AT THANKSGIVING TIME it is most appropriate for each one of us to reflect on the many blessings we enjoy as Americans and to resolve to do everything possible to insure that America will continue to be a land of free men."
—Louis G. Conlan, President.

Grade-point Of No Return

Educational Whirlwind Forms As 2nd Midterms Hit Campus

The cold, hard realities of winter — and higher education — are evident everywhere as students begin bracing themselves for the second big storm of the semester next week.

Expected to increase during that period are flat tires, illnesses and grade-point averages not necessarily in that order.

Most students, however, are seriously studying in the library, at home, at work and even in the cafeteria.

Everywhere books are being opened, some of them getting their first whiff of winter air which can only mean bad weather coming up.

As the moment of truth nears once more, borrowed notes continue to be translated while old examinations are decoded, checked and re-checked.

While many will, of necessity, burn the midnight candle, few will realize that at the other end, their instructors also are toiling late at night making up the examinations.

With Christmas vacation less than a month away, many are looking forward to the relief that will enable them to catch up before the finals' assault.

Some, however, are looking even further ahead—to a new school, a job or whatever the future holds.

The majority of students will find themselves safe for a few more weeks. Others are beginning their stretch drive.

Next week is the grade-point of no return.

State Conference Brings Council To Temporary Halt

By Richard Shields

With most of the central figures in student government at the college absent to attend the State Conference, Student Council debate and legislation on campus affairs came to a temporary halt last week.

At the final session before the conference, Associated Student President Joe Egri read the Code of Conduct adopted by the state-wide association of junior college student government leaders to council members.

He emphasized that all delegates who attended the meeting, held in the Sheraton-Palace Hotel this semester, would be held strictly to account for their conduct in terms described by the code.

Student Government Adviser Sherm Elworthy added that it was no small thing when a delegate was reprimanded or dropped from the conference.

Council also found time for an earnest discussion of the pre-registration problem. Various ideas and methods of solution were offered.

At one point, Egri relinquished the chairmanship of the meeting to Vice President Georgene Peterson to take the floor in a vigorous denunciation of a suggestion for continuing to use the old system.

Council finally voted to ask the committee of faculty and administration members who are investigating the problem to reconsider the method used for the past three semesters in hope that it could be improved in time for pre-registration next semester.

Petitions For AS Office Candidates Due December 9th

Moving rapidly after assuming the duties of Election Commissioner, Don Verdu informed interested students last week that Friday, December 9, is the deadline for submitting petitions to run for office in the Associated Student election this semester.

The election, which is scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, January 9 and 10, is open to all AS members. A minimum of 12 units and a 2.0 grade average are basic requirements for candidates.

Verdu said that he would consider campaign posters for their content and suitability for the election during the week of December 27 through January 3.

Verdu emphasized that his present plans and the prospective members of his committee would have to be approved by Student Council before they could be considered official.

Voting machines used for the election will be located at the silver pole in Science Hall, at the entrance to the library, in Smith Hall, and by the vending machines in the basement of Science Hall.

Verdu said he planned to send sample ballots and letters to all AS members, reminding them of their privilege of voting. This will be the first time in many years that this method of encouraging voting has been used.

Friendly Persuasion

"HERE, TURKEY, TURKEY," beckons our fearless "hunter," an enterprising Guardsman reporter who'd go to any lengths for a story. Think he wants to "talk turkey"? Probably not, for he has more elaborate designs for the birds, anticipating tomorrow's festivities.

H&R Prepares 20 Turkeys For Annual Thanksgiving Repast

At least 65 persons have helped to prepare the annual Thanksgiving luncheon served by the Hotel and Restaurant department in the cafeteria today.

Executive Chef, M. Pierre Coste, 60 students and four instructors have been working since before 8 o'clock this morning preparing the traditional repast consisting of 20, 25-pound turkeys.

During the regular lunch period, from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m., as many as 2000 students and faculty members are expected to be served by cafeteria manager John Dunn and his staff.

The meal, for only 65 cents (or 50 cents a la carte) will include all of the trimmings from soup through turkey with dressing, cranberry sauce and candied yams, to pumpkin pie. Young peas will be featured as the vegetable.

There is no change in the regular cafeteria schedule or serving procedure.

This is the biggest meal that the Hotel and Restaurant department serves during the college year and requires extra work and long preparation by Lawrence B. Wong's staff of instructors and students.

The cafeteria will be closed Friday and, of course, Saturday and Sunday.

Says Chef Coster "We're all going fishing."

AMS Changes Smoker Date To January 10

Rescheduling of the Associated Men Student smoker was announced today by Bob Keiley, AMS president, and the date has been switched from December 6 to January 10.

This semi-annual event offers a series of boxing matches, an assortment of distinguished guest speakers, refreshments with other forms of entertainment.

Beta Tau Expulsion Endangers Annual Christmas Dance

Failure of Beta Tau fraternity to comply with anti-hazing rules during the recently completed Pledge Week has resulted in the expulsion of the group from campus and placed their annual Christmas dance, Mistletoe Mingle, in jeopardy.

Dean Ralph Hilisman stated that a decision will be made by next Monday, November 28, whether to readmit the fraternity and allow it to hold the dance on Friday, December 9.

Officials from the eight college fraternities expressed overall disappointment at the Pledge Week activities.

Bob Iverson, Horticulture Society officer, whose group provided tools for the inter-fraternity project to weed on the Ocean Avenue side of Smith Hall, described participation as "very poor."

Fifteen pledges were expected to turn out, but only three reported. They were Dennie Kavert and George Arms of Alpha Kappa Rho and Fred Wash of Alpha Phi Epsilon.

The goal of Pledge Week was to direct activities toward constructive contribution to the campus, or from "hazing" to "helping."

Bufano's St. Francis Can Be Magnificent Addition To Campus

A HOME is needed for a statue.

It is a statue of Saint Francis de Assisi, the patron saint of San Francisco, by the city's noted sculptor, Benny Bufano, whose strikingly modern conception of the saint has caused much controversy and which is now, it seems, without a home.

We would like to suggest, if it is not already too late, a resting place for the statue. We strongly nominate the college as a permanent home. At first a college campus may seem a strange place for a statue such as this, but what more fitting person could the college acquire as a resident than the one whose name it bares on the front of Science Hall?

We recommend two major efforts that could aid in acquiring Bufano's work. First we urge the college's alumni association to make their approval of such a move known to the Board of Education, in whose hands rest the final decision. Secondly, we ask the administration do all in its power to bring the statue to the campus, confident that they realize what a magnificent and inspiring addition it would be.

If the college was fortunate enough to be awarded the statue, it would, no doubt, also acquire some expenses in moving it and installing it on the campus. We feel, however, this to be of little importance when the chance to acquire such a distinguished work of art as Bufano's looms so near.

The college already possesses several objets d'art. The lobby of the Arts Building boasts the murals of Diego Rivera, and in front of Smith Hall stands a giant redwood ram, created at the 1939 World's Fair. Now it has the opportunity to acquire another work, vastly different from the other two, but unequaled for its impact, simplicity, dignity and power.

Please, don't let this splendid opportunity be wasted.

America Has Given A Great Deal; How Much Have We Given Her?

FROM the moment we are able to comprehend their meaning, we hear the words, "Be thankful on this day that you live in such a country as this. Be thankful."

The day, of course, is Thanksgiving and the nation, America.

We have the words continuously thrown out at us from the home, from the classroom, from the pulpit, and yet they seem to have difficulty imbedding themselves in us, for how casually most of us take the benefits of living in a democracy.

America has given us a great deal, but how much have we given her? Some words of Nietzsche come to mind: He said, "Man is something to be surpassed. What have you done to surpass him?"

If we may paraphrase his words, we would like to say America is something to be perfected. What have you done to perfect her? It is true that this nation is like some immense masterpiece in art—a masterpiece that contains flaws.

The flaws, however, need not be permanent. They can be worked out and the masterpiece brought to the perfection envisioned by the founding fathers almost 200 years ago.

Here is where Nietzsche's paraphrased words apply, for we can all work to erase the flaws by having tolerance, understanding and respect for the habits and customs for what are called minority groups.

We can erase the flaws by faithfully and intelligently carrying out the duties and responsibilities of citizenship.

Only then can the words of pride and thankfulness have any real meaning, and only then will their true significance on a day such as tomorrow be realized.

10-Gram Portions Of Proteins Visible Today

College's Most Daring Cook Battles Kwoshiorkor

By Richard Shields

Brigitta Beetz, the life seience instructor who started a one-woman campaign against bad eating habits among students, will risk her newly won reputation as the college's most daring if not best cook by placing another example of her varied cooking skills on display.

This display, titled 10-Gram Portions Of Proteins, will be set up on the third floor of Seience Hall today and, according to Mrs. Beetz, "will serve a double purpose."

First, it will make students aware of problems in food and nutrition around the world with the help of pictures and charts. Mrs. Beetz said she was not unaware of the proximity of this display and the contrast of its nature with the observance of the American Thanksgiving.

Second, it will give students a visual picture with which to measure the minimum daily requirements of animal and vegetable proteins.

An example would be the 33 apples or eight bananas necessary to obtain a 10-gram portion of one of the body's most vital dietary requirements.

The use of fruits and vegetables as well as meat will show the differences in nutritional value of meat and vegetable proteins.

"The problem of protection will be greater this time than last," Mrs. Beetz said with a laugh. "The effect of the entire display would be ruined if people started walking off with apples."

The nutrition instructor - turned - cafeteria competitor did not mention any plans for patrolling the exhibit the way Student Government Advisor Sherm Elworthy patrols the college lunch counters.

The cafeteria-crush is the least of her problems except with regard to keeping it out of Science Hall. She said, however, that she believed the problem has been solved.

The apples will be on a platter covered with a glass top and sealed with vaseline. Mrs. Beetz feels confident that this will end any threat to Elworthy's thriving business.

Kwoshiorkor is the name of the disease caused by protein deficiencies in the diet; it is an African word meaning "red boy" because the hair of the afflicted person turns red.

It is prominent in Africa, Asia and South America where people often subsist on seriously unbalanced diets; most victims of the disease are children.

Mrs. Beetz plans displays of proper diets of calcium, showing the need for milk, and Vitamin C, showing the need for citrus fruits and vegetables, in the near future.

Happy Hollow Days

Pass The Laugh Time, Save The Horse Week Present Odd Gift-Buying Predicament

Everyone in general and college students in particular seem to look forward to holidays and other festive occasions with an understandable eagerness and excitement.

The year-end holiday season is upon us, but we're willing to bet that during the rest of the year are sprinkled some other "holidays" that for some unaccountable reason most students have never heard of before.

For example, how many students here realize that November, in addition to tomorrow's affair, also boasts of such special occasions as National Can Opener Week, International Raisin Bread For Health Week, and also Kraut, Pork 'n Apple Dinner Season Time?

These are not figments of some wild-eyed reporter's imagination gone buggy. They're legally listed occasions found in a pamphlet distributed by the National Chamber of Commerce.

If those first examples didn't send shivers of glee and inspiration through you, try these for some results—any results.

January, in addition to being noted for its Odorless Decoration Week, no one wants smelly decorations, also has a Large Economy Size Week.

National Ground Hog Day, February's contribution, occurs during National Beef Week. (That's enough to make anyone weary next time he thaws out a frozen TV dinner.)

Probably the most tasty month is March, for during it one can celebrate Cottage Cheese - Cling Peach Salad Time, Salad 'n Rye Krisp Time, National Peanut Week, National Canned Salmon Week and Dried Fruit Week.

Ironically, Pass The Laugh Week also occurs in March, but more appropriate considering the above "menu" would be some sort of Pass The Bicarbonate Time.

For the sports minded, April offers Let's All Play Ball Week, and National Model Building Week.

It's thought-provoking to learn that in May National Fun Day and Better Bedding Time precede National Baby Week.

May also offers Be Kind To Animals Week and National Mother-In-Law Week. No comparison intended, of course.

The really weird ones are found in June, July and August. During these summer months one finds National Ragweed Control Week, Old Stove Roundup Time, Soft Ice Cream Week and International White Bread For Variety Week.

With the opening of schools in September there are such other joyous occasions as National See Your Dealer Week, 100 Per Cent Pure Maple Syrup Time and Anti-Freeze Week.

Completing our trip we find October offering a variety of occasions including Save The Horse Week, Let's Go Hunting Week, Wine Week, Pretzel Week, Popcorn Week, Honey Week and also a "sweetest day."

Holidays—or hollow days—if you prefer, they're occasions (they're occasions?), which, if nothing else, are excuses for party giving and celebration, but wow! How does one select appropriate gifts?

Foresight

Tiny General Shatters American Holiday

By Paul Plansky

ALREADY stuffed with a stomach of stuffing, Donald managed to inject, "I'm ready for pumpkin pie now," between his last few bites of turkey. His little brother Jack was sampling his paper napkin, without salt or pepper, and was nibbling at the center floral arrangement.

By now Donald had devoured his pie (pulverized left-overs from Halloween) and with an open mind—and an open mouth—commenced to munch the minee pie. Brother Bobby and sister Janet were much slower feasters than obese Donald and were still on the main course of cranberries, yams, and a slice or two of Tom.

Tom, the only holiday guest who wasn't a relative, didn't appreciate his role at the table.

Outside of catching her finger in the refrigerator door, burning the sweet potatoes, and spilling Mogen David on mom's new tablecloth, the servant from the Give-up & Try-us Agency performed almost infallibly.

The family feast came to an abrupt close when little Jack, tired of manipulating his "batallion" of salt and pepper shakers, discovered to his amazement that by pulling the tablecloth towards him, he could mobilize an entire "army" of Lenox, crystal and sterling.

It was a landslide victory for the little general. Mothers' week of tedious shopping, planning, and cooking had met a shattering climax, not to mention the severe financial loss.

The competent maid commenced with the clean-up campaign, while father, previously unaware of the calamity and chaos, kept his head buried in the sports page. Only at the startling crash of glass and china was his voice heard: "Won't that Frisky ever stop chasing our cats across the garage woodbench? He's knocking over my tools again."

Looking up from a disappointing Big Game score, he saw the remains of the "accident" being picked up. He glared at little Jack and then turned to the racing page.

Father then directed the disgruntled clan into the family room for a relaxing, peaceful evening to conclude Thanksgiving Day in the traditional American manner.

The kids fought over TV programs, Tom's drumsticks, the crayon box, and the tricycle (hallway express). Father would be glad to get back to the old rut come Monday. Mother had all but given up hope. Donald raided the icebox for some more ice cream.

Shots At RAMdom

By Christopher Wise

THE Editor-in-Chief of The Guardsman recently received a phonograph record through the mail. It was obviously misaddressed and should have been sent to the barber college. It was Linus Pauling speaking on the effects of fallout.

* * *

REMEMBER that you read it here first. Tomorrow is Thanksgiving.

* * *

NO JOKES will be made about the cafeteria serving creamed turkey on Monday and turkey soup on Tuesday, but that is a reminder of the last time H&R put out hash for lunch.

One young gentleman asked to see the menu for the preceding day, before he would agree to eat the hash.

He is probably the same one who didn't say grace over his lunch that day, figuring that all of the ingredients had been blessed earlier in the week.

* * *

ANYONE WHO partakes of the magnificent luncheon this noon in Smith Hall knows that jokes about the cafeteria are just that. Thanks to a hard-working staff we are one of the best-fed campuses in the state. Be sure and say, "Thank you," when you pick up your turkey today.

* * *

ONE WOULD think that, with the semester halfway through, most people would have learned something by now. Unfortunately, you may still hear the weirdest things said around the campus, i.e.:

First young man: "Are coeds hyphenated?"

Second young man: "I don't know. But they should have their polio shots."

Or: "How come those guys at Cal always get the Noble Prizes? We have a lot of professors around here who are gentlemen."

And finally, John: "Which way is the Ram?"

Jim: "Last time I saw it it was pointed at the sky."

Impressive Record

Former Photo Students Fill Bay Area Jobs

As in past semesters, the college's photography department continues to be well represented with recent graduates in the ranks of leading firms around the Bay Area.

A recent report on the photography program here indicates in part why a demand for photography graduates has enabled David Abrahams, Esther Lisama, Robert Morrison, Gary Ono, Charles Smith and John Wilder to secure good positions in the photography field.

Prepared by Charles Lamp, photography instructor, the report cites the rise in industrial sales of photography equipment and supplies which now exceeds two billion dollars. Since 1955, it has increased over 400 per cent.

A good part of this increase can be attributed to the establishment of photography departments in many large industrial firms in Northern California.

A case in point is Aerojet General in Sacramento, which three years ago invested approximately $150,000 in a photographic plant.

In this connection a complete new field, industrial photography, has been created by similar actions of other firms where much research is conducted and whose need for scientific photography has made such actions imperative.

Among the firms following this pattern of growth is the University of California Radiation Laboratory in Livermore with whom Miss Lisama and Wilder are employed.

Miss Lisama is with the scientific photography department testing special emulsions. Wilder is in the reproduction department operating a large copy camera making half-tones.

Also in Livermore is Abrahams with the Sandia Corperation as a photographer.

Other firms employing recent graduates are Safeway Stores where Morrison is a photographer, and United Press-International where Ono is employed as telephoto operator.

Smith is in Marin county with several firms as a motion picture operator.

Rams End Season With 34-20 Win

Booters Win Co-Championship

Soccermen Dump Spartans, Dons To End Successful Season

By Ivan Temes

Displaying a fierce determination and versatility reserved only for the best, the Ram soccer juggernaut last week rolled past San Jose State and the University of San Francisco to end their season with a 6-1 mark, good enough to deadlock California atop the Northern California Intercollegate Soccer Conference.

However, the defending champion college eleven once again found that finishing on top doesn't reap the dividends that should come with being title holders.

Since the local school is a two-year institution—the only such member in the conference—and NCAA rules permit participation in the nationals by only four-year schools, Roy Diederichsen's potent group of men are forced to remain at home while California tries to defend the West's honor in the regionals at St. Louis.

If it weren't for a last minute decision voicing disapproval, the Rams would be in New York today clashing with Orange County Community College with the victor to be designated as the junior college champion of the country.

The college was extended a rushed invitation to meet the Eastern champs and according to Diederichsen there were funds with which to make the trip available.

Taking everything into perspective, the local powerhouse is not a member of a recognized junior college soccer league. They're the only two-year college in California playing soccer and, therefore, have been allowed to participate in their present league.

According to Dean Ralph O. Hillsman, two main factors kept the local club from making the trip. First, they are not in a recognized soccer league of their own level. (They play on a higher level which would tend to make the proposed national title mythical.)

Second, the California Junior College Association opposes out of state championships.

Nothing can detract from the fact that the Red and White coach has molded a group of stars from many parts of the world into a co-titlist which displays only the finest in ability and sportsmanship.

The Rams' final pair of opponents both provided spirited opposition before tasting defeat. Slipping in the mud of Ulrich Field, the visitors built up a 3-1 halftime edge before going on to a 4-1 triumph over the Dons.

It was the first time that USF had ever been beaten two years running by the same team.

The second quarter proved the downfall for San Jose as their goalie Gordie Huntze saw all six scores in the 6-1 Ram win sail into the netting. Late season standout Bowker contributed half of the points, with Lynch, Korbus, and Flavio Valiente also hitting the scoring column.

As usual Bogdan Papara, Ed Zumot and Yacob Dudum along with goalie Gary DeLong were stalwarts on defense.

Two Team Race Adds Excitement To Mural Action

By Doug Cathcart

The race for the crown in the club division of the intramural loop is highly contested this semester.

At this late date in the competition, the teams from The Guardsman and the Recreation Association are knotted for the league lead, both teams with a four-win one-loss record.

There's usually a story within a story and this competition is no exception. Up until this season The Guardsman had been the perennial occupants of the cellar position. They (The Guardsman) had hardly ever won a game except by forfeit and even this was rare.

Two of the most active clubs in the division are the two Hawaiian cage squads. Their record might not be as good as The Guardsman's, but they have always fielded a determined team.

Last week these two groups finally met and the final score was Hui Aloha Kekai 3, Hui Aloha 31. This in itself shows what spirit exists on these two clubs.

Recent action in the club division saw the Recreation Association humble the Hotel and Restaurant Society 63-36 and The Guardsman slaughter the Newman Club 96-36.

Over in the fraternity division of the league, the lead position at present is held by the men from Beta Tau.

In this league last week Gamma Phi Ypsilon beat Phi Beta Delta 46-25; Beta Tau downed Alpha Kappa Rho 28-20; and, by virtue of a 43-37 final tally, Alpha Phi Epsilon defeated Zeta Phi Sigma.

In the independent division the Indians bopped the Untouchables 37-29, and the Bachelors lost to the Harriers by forfeit.

The question has been raised among some of the more disgruntled members of the mural leagues as to where they can find out when their games are played and when.

If any member of a cage squad participating in one of the leagues is in doubt as to where or when his respective team is playing this or any other week, all he needs to do is stop down at the men's gymnasium and consult Jack Gaddy, co-ordinator of the league.

Interest Drops In Judo Kai Club

Waning attendance at the meetings, lack of faculty sponsorship, and just a general absence of interest on the part of the college are the problems which face the newly formed judo club here.

The club (Judo Kai) began its career in the college at the beginning of this semester. About 98 students came to the club's weekly gathering a month and a half ago; the attendance at a recent meeting numbered only 12.

William Paul, one of the founders of the college organization, said that at present all the club does when it meets during College Hour to tell the members that no further progress has been made toward sponsorship and then dismiss the meeting.

Three of the members of the club have gone to the San Francisco Judo Institute to practice the sport.

Paul said that if their progress continues there as it is at present, chances are good that they will earn their first degree brown belt in the sport by spring.

The last championship bare knuckle bout was on July 8, 1889. John L. Sullivan downed Jake Kilrain in 75 rounds.

Blockmen Plan Feast

SF State's Verducci Speaker At Awards Dinner December 5

Joe Verducci, San Francisco State's football coach and Northern California Coach of the Year, will be the guest speaker at the semi-annual Block SF dinner to be held at 6:30 p.m. Monday, December 5, in Smith Hall.

The dinner, sponsored by the Block society under the auspices of Coach Louis Vasquez, will feature the awarding of blocks to those deserving members of the soccer, football and cross-country teams this semester.

Approximately 50 awards will be given out, according to Coach Vasquez, and a special "most valuable player" award will be given to the most deserving man on each team.

Besides Coach Verducci, the high school coaches of the men who will receive blocks have been invited as special guests. Members of the administration will also be present at the dinner.

Emil Ruiz, president of the Block SF Society, is scheduled to be master of ceremonies.

Piggee Explodes For 157 Yards As Gridders Destroy Modesto

By Harvey Hall

MODESTO JUNIOR COLLEGE STADIUM, Nov. 18.—Explosive Ram halfback Tom Piggee raced for two touchdowns and 157 yards tonight as the Rams closed their 1960 football campaign with a 34-20 win over the hometown Modesto Junior College Pirates.

Piggee, the workhorse of the Ram backfield, scored on runs of three and eight yards, respectively. Running at his top performance of the season Piggee carried 22 times for a total of 157 yards.

The Rams with their victory over the Pirates finished third in the Big Eight standings with a record of four wins, two losses and one tie. San Mateo won the league championship after defeating Oakland, while Contra Costa was upsetting the Stockton Mustangs.

Spotting the Pirates an early touchdown lead on a pass from quarterback Dick Valois to halfback Dave Reed, the Rams scored late in the first quarter on a three-yard off tackle romp by Piggee. Guy Whitaker's run for the PAT was good, giving the Rams an 8-6 lead.

After Alex Darnes recovered a Don Richardson fumble after a pass reception, Ram quarterback Gary Lewis hit end Terry Fischer for 19 yards, and a first down on the three-yard line. The Rams scored on Lewis 'one-yard plunge two plays later. The PAT pass try fell incomplete.

Lewis set up the Rams' next score when he intercepted a Valois pass and returned it to the Pirates six. Whitaker then leaped over from the three for the score. The Rams passed twice complete for the PAT but penalties nullified both. Then when the extra point play was completed it was no good.

Pirate fullback Ray Barry's left end sweep for 27 yards and Bob Austin's right guard slant for 20 yards were the key plays of the Pirates' second drive.

Tim Holbrook, second string Modesto fullback, capped the 68-yard march by scoring from three yards out. Ray Greggains tackled Valois attempting to pass for the PAT.

The Rams got a bad break late in the third quarter when Lewis' 71-yard touchdown gallop was called back because of a holding penalty.

On the last play of the third period Ram lineman Al Fuller intercepted a deflected pass and ran it back to the Modesto 16 from where the Rams marched to a fourth and four on the Modesto eight where Lewis attempted a pass and was intercepted by Reed, stopping the drive.

With Valois filling the air with footballs once again, the Pirates scored on a 20-yard bust up the middle by Austin. Valois completed a pass to end Del Kalbrack for the PAT.

This drive by the Pirates was set up by a pass of 24 yards to Barry, several Ram tacklers had shots at Barry but his powerful running was too much.

Coach Stan Pavko's team then tried an onside kick which failed and the Rams took over. After Piggee picked up key yardage he scored from eight yards out. The PAT pass try was incomplete.

With Herman McKee, Whitaker and Piggee running for short gains, and Fisher and Greggains producing big holes the Rams scored once again on a 12-yard burst by McKee.

Coach Grover Klemmer's Rams had another chance to score just before the game's end when Darnes intercepted a Valois pass. With Don Tumminia at the reins, the Rams were deep in Pirate territory when Tumminia fumbled and Floyd White recovered for Modesto as the gun sounded to end the game.

Powerful Local Harriers Capture Big Eight Title

The Red and White track men, exhibiting an admirable display of power and confidence until the last click of the stopwatch, downed all opponents at Sacramento on November 9, to bring home the Big Eight Conference championship.

In the meet the Rams edged out second place Sacramento by only four points with a final tally of 30-34.

Third place berth was occupied by Modesto with a score of 65, and in fourth were the Thunderbirds from Oakland with 106 markers.

Individual scoring was led by Frank James with a time of 15:40. James has headed the Ram onslaught in many of the locals' meets this season. This time racked up by James was not his best for the season, but it won him a respectable second place position.

Also faring well for the local harriers in the gruelling three-mile course were Leon Stroughter, clocking in at 16:05 for a sixth place slot; Al Waxman, taking the ninth spot with 16:10; and finally Bill Hotchkiss, tenth with a time of 16:11.

This season found the locals sporting an undefeated record in Big Eight competition. The Rams traveled to Reedley, California, last Friday for the Northern California Junior College championship affair.

At the meet last season the Red and White cindermen's car broke down which hampered them from fielding a full squad. At that fray only individuals participated for the local harriers.

The men who participated in the Northern Cal meet are as follows: James, Tom Jennings, Stroughter, Waxman, Hotchkiss, Tom Nigra and Tom Ferrigna.

Dark Facing Crucial Test Next Spring

RAMBLINGS

Fans, Team Pose Gigantic Problem

By Frank Dunne

WELL, it seems the Giants have a new manager. He was ushered into the fold without much pomp or circumstance, but nevertheless he is the leader of the outfit and on his shoulders rests the fate of the team's chances for 1961.

This will be Al Dark's freshman year as a manager. He has never even coached a little league outfit on weekends, much less a major league baseball team.

It will be very interesting to note the outcome of the venture by the Giants in on-the-spot training. All the luck in the world to Mr. Dark, but it is feared that he has been really put on the spot.

Dark will have many problems to overcome in his first year and the intensity of these would make even a veteran manager cringe.

First of all, he will have to attempt to regain the confidence of the paying public after last season's poor showing by the club.

How he handles this problem will make or break the attendance at the park and will effect public interest in general.

The next problem he will encounter is with the team itself. Out of the shambled team of last season, he will have to boost morale of the players and try to mold a solid unit for the coming campaign.

This task is perhaps the most important, because if he can do this the support of the fans should follow.

Dark himself will have one major personal problem; how to manage a major league ball club. This is one job that can only be learned by experience. One can read all the volumes written about the sport and still be only an astute observer.

The pre-season tilts will be a trial and error period for Dark, and it is hoped he can pick up some of the fine points before the team starts play for the pennant.

With all these problems facing the new manager it should be an interesting season for both the fans and the team.

Dark is a "holler guy" and is an exceptional leader as he proved when he played for the Giants in past years, but leadership without experience can be disastrous.

So it is hoped that Dark learns his lessons quickly and all his problems pass away, because this is the only way the Giants will have a chance at a good season, and most of all give the fans something to be proud of after three years of backing a loser.

Spartan Daily Names Peters Sports Editor

Nick Peters, former Guardsman Editor-in-Chief and Sports Editor, has been named Sports Editor of the San Jose State Spartan. Peters graduated from the college in spring of 1959 and transferred to San Jose State.

Peters continued his journalism major at San Jose and hopes to make a career in the newspaper field.

While at the college he instituted many new policies in the Guardsman that are still being carried on today. At last spring's state-wide college press conference he was selected best sports writer in a competitive writing contest.

Cagers Battle For Starting Berths As Opening Tilt Nears

With only nine days remaining before the college basketballers open the season against San Jose City College, the Rams will attempt to prepare for their opener against the defending state champions by scrimmaging San Francisco State on Saturday.

The exhibition with the Gators, set for 10 a.m. in the local gymnasium, is the second such affair this year.

Jim Badgett's San Jose Club, led by the most valuable player in last year's state tournament, Al McKinney, is loaded once again this season. The Jaguars are tall, speedy and have been aided by the addition of numerous high school standouts.

In trying to mold a potent starting contingent, the Rams, who haven't developed shooting or speed yet, have been working with four men at the post position.

John Lewis, lone first-string returnee from last season's Big Eight co-titlists, heads the list but strong opposition is coming from Glenn Wold, Chuck Currington, and surprising Orlando Camp. Gary Lewis and Jesse Arteberry will join the battle when the grid campaign closes.

Ex-Berkeley star Charlie Williams may get a starting nod at forward over other contenders, including Brad Duggan, Al Richardson, Eli Horn and John Cheli.

Though the team is loaded with guards, Nate Jackson has fared well, leading a field which boasts Vince Rocci, Dave Roberts, Will Rockmore, Bobby Grayson, Otis Phillips and Ernie Johnson.

Shocker Final Scenes Of Bad Seed Stun Playgoers As Attendance Mounts

By Lester Os

Audience shock reaction stepped up attendance as Maxwell Anderson's The Bad Seed continued its electrifying run last week.

After four of eight scheduled weekend performances, the reverse of Alfred Hitchcock's Psycho had produced a pronounced effect even on the strongest heart.

In its second performance on Saturday evening, November 5, the audience was so stunned that no one applauded at the end of the' performance.

The services of Glenda Keown, house manager, then had to be employed to inform the audience that the performance for the night had ended.

In its premiere performance the night before, a similar reaction greeted the players although not to the same degree as that on Saturday.

Impressed by the complete domination that the drama has had over its audiences, Michael Griffin, drama director, beamed his approval on the efforts of the entire cast.

The weeks of rehearsal prior to opening night had resulted in some gloom because of several shaky scenes in addition to the old nemesis of unsure lines.

After its initial performances, Griffin appraised the entire cast and pointed out the great improvement that had come over the production.

Although still uncertain in some and the same scenes, Patricia Brosnan and Dorothy Neil were excellent in the role of Rhoda Penmark, the attractive eight-year-old girl around whom the play centers.

Miss Brosnan and Miss Neil are alternating portrayals of this role, the former on Friday night performances, the latter on Saturday evenings.

In equally fine fashion, Leah Pashoian plays the mother, Christine Penmark, with depth and perception.

As Rhoda's father, Colonel Kenneth Penmark, Mel Kramer approaches the role from an emotional standpoint with good results.

The owners of the apartment house in which the Penmarks live are effectively played by Martha Ross as Monica Breedlove and Fred Fisher as Emory Wages.

Outdoing himself as the janitor, Bob Rosenblatt, however, is still uncertain in spots.

Annamarie Papagni as Miss Fern, the owner of Fern school, has improved steadily in succeeding performances.

As the writer of detective stories, Reginald Tasker, played by Randy Jones, has finally achieved good character.

As Mr. and Mrs. Daigle, Jordy Cooney needs projection while Diane Flores is effective.

Finally, Mike Corrigan as the messenger has only to reduce his movements while Wayne Elbe as Richard Bravo, Christine's father, is excellent.

The Bad Seed will again be presented this Friday and Saturday, November 25 and 26, at 8 p.m. Its final performances will be given next weekend.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Fan Lauds Columnist

(Editor's Note: Letters to the Ram's Horn may be left with the telephone operator in Science Hall or in The Guardsman office, Room 304, Science Hall. Deadlines are 11 a.m. each Wednesday. If so desired the author's name will be withheld, but the identity of the author must be known to the editor.)

Editor, The Guardsman:

The article, Let's Get Something to Cheer About, by Frank Dunne appearing in the November 16 issue of The Guardsman, is one of the best articles I have read since coming to City College. This well-timed article hits the problem of school spirit right on the button.

I have attended all the home football games since coming to City College, and I agree with Frank Dunne that, "Most of the spectators attend the game because they were interested in seeing a football game and not to be distracted by ill-timed calls for group yells."

How would you feel if there was a girl out there trying to get you to yell in unison:

"Salano, Salano
Salano Butter Cookies
'Dah-Dah' (to a song with an Arabic origin, stand and turn to the foe's rooting section, point and yell) 'Crumb!' "

All this is going on while an exciting play is being run. This is not only childish, impolite, and downright silly, but it is also unbecoming of City College's reputation of being one of the top junior colleges in the nation.

I would be ashamed to admit that I belong to the college that carries-on with that kind of rooting.

I believe that yell leaders should be men not girls. Having nothing against girls, I think that men could do a much better job.

Men know sports better. Do you ever see girl yell leaders in such schools as U.C.L.A., Oklahoma, Cal, Stanford, Hartnell, or even San Mateo?

Girls have their place in sports events. I think this place is on the field as a song-girl or in the stands giving their unyielding support to the team.

Our present yell leaders complain that the rooters don't have the spirit and don't follow their directions. I ask you, would you follow the yell leaders on a silly yell while Gary Lewis or Tom Piggee is breaking away on a long touchdown run?

I think spirit in a rooting section is determined not on whether the rooters follow the yell leaders in silly yells, but on the reaction to certain plays and accomplishments on the field.

Don't the yell leaders hear us yell when someone lays a beautiful block to spring someone loose on a long touchdown run?

Don't the yell leaders hear us yelling things like "dig in," or "hold 'em" on key downs and key plays?

These yells from the rooting section are much more encouraging to the players than any childish and illtimed yells.

As Frank Dunne said in his article, "Spontaneous support for the team is much louder and more rewarding in encouragement for the team than any forced yell."

I hope that in the coming seasons of competition, the yell leaders strive to understand the situation and do their utmost to get "spontaneous reaction" and not lead childish, illtimed, and off-colored yells that make City College look like fools.

A Disgusted Fan

Job Director

JOSEPH AMORI, college placement director, predicts that more than 3500 students here will land Christmas joba thia year.

3500 Fill Jobs As Supply Lags Behind Demand

Early hiring of Christmas help and a surplus of applicants have filled nearly all the Christmas holiday jobs offered college students, according to an announcement today by Joseph Amori, college placement director.

The office already has placed many in holiday jobs and more than 3500 students of the college are expected to work during Christmas vacation.

"I've never seen anything like it," Amori commented. "Several thousand post office jobs were filled last week alone, and most of the department stores have already met their holiday employment quotas."

The few jobs still available are mostly from the post office, where employees will work around the clock to cope with the surge of Christmas mail.

Students under 18 years old were eliminated in the holiday hiring this year, showing the employers' preference for more mature, experienced help.

Students who want employment over the holidays can register at the college placement office, S-187, which will remain open throughout Christmas vacation because of expected late hiring of college students by airlines, railroads and florists.

Marksmen Grab 7th Consecutive Shooting Title

Led to victory by two top marksmen, Jim Randall and Louie Birleffi, the Campus Police Pistol Team won its seventh consecutive Western Revolver Association championship November 6, Campus Police Chief Mike Hancock announced last week.

In the match, held at the Oakland Pistol Club in Knowland Park, Randall placed first in the .38 rapid-fire competition, and Birleffi, who is also captain of the team, won the .38 national match.

Final point score showed the marksmen taking 980 points out of a possible 1100, and the sharpshooters racking up 1049, also out of a possible 1100.

Chief Hancock took first place in a special fund-raising match held for the upkeep and improvement of the Oakland Pistol Club. In second place was Captain Birleffi.

Hancock also stated that the college is contemplating the purchase of special awards for the winning members of the team.

Besides Hancock and the two winners, other students on the pistol team this semester are George Bennher, Rich Gamble, Charles Grassig, John Murphy, James Olsen, Louis Perez, Edward Sarsfield, Dave Sheehan, James Tedasco, Ron Wilson, Ralph Brown, Frank Mateo and Larry Miles.

Annual Photo Show On Tap For Dec. 19

America At Play is the title of the San Francisco Photography Center's Special Activities Committee's annual Print Competition to be held on December 19, Emmett Smith, photography instructor here, announced today.

This competition is open to any student in the college who wishes to enter. Prizes of $65, $50 and $25 will be awarded to the three top winners.

According to Smith, these photographs must be taken by the entrant and must be processed by him or a commercial processor.

Photographs must depict America At Play. In so far as this competition is concerned, Play includes all forms of recreation.

All prints must be mounted on boards no larger than 16 by 20 inches. On the back of these boards the name, address, telephone number of the entrant should appear, as well as the title of the picture.

Prints, accompanied with the 50 cent entrance fee, must be received before 10 p.m., December 12.

49er's Game Films Set For December 2

The features of the 1959 49'er football season will be shown Friday, December 2, in a College Hour film in S-136.

Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor, said that the film, entitled 49'er Highlights, should be most interesting to any sports fan.

He said the next movie, on the following Friday, will include scenes from the Rome Olympic Games and also Cuban Premier Fidel Castro and Nikita Khrushchev at the United Nations Assembly.

Students Advised To Be Patient On Pre-Reg Cards

Students who might have received an early registration number during pre-registration and have not been sent a counseling appointment card have been advised to be patient by Walter McCloud, counselor here.

McCloud stated that many of the appointment cards have not yet been mailed by the college because of the large number of students.

However, anyone not receiving his appointment by the middle of January should notify either his counselor or the counseling office.

A registration number has no bearing on when he receives his counseling appointment card, McCloud added.

Campus Returns To Normal As Help Week Ends

By Pat Perkins

WITH pledging over for another semester, the activities on campus have slowed to a regular norm.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority's pledges, Dale Devine, pledge captain; Wilma Jones, Margaret Kreite and Pat Vassillo, are busy planning the sorority's annual mother-daughter tea for the near future.

The Inter-Sorority Council is preparing for its semi-annual Presents dance. In the fall this dance is for sorority members and their dates. December 2 has been set aside for this affair, which will be held in Smith Hall.

After its monthly meeting tonight, the Newman Club will hold a Thanksgiving dance in the St. Emydius Parish Hall from 9 p.m. to midnight. Club officials stated that all members of the college are invited, and admission is 35 cents. The Newmanites are also planning a Communion breakfast for Sunday, December 4.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity's pledges, Tom Leland, Robert Hurley and Charles Scard are now working on a service project for this semester.

The Interfaith Religious Forum is asking that two representatives from each of the religious groups on campus attend its meetings Thursdays at 2:20 p.m. in room C-301. This group has made plans to go Christmas caroling sometime this month.

All club news must be submitted to The Guardsman office, S-304, by noon each Wednesday.

Bertolina Wins Top Honors For Model Car

Richard Bertolina, a student at the college, was recently named winner of the Senior Division Honorable Mention award by the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild.

The $25 award came after Bertolina's model car, designed and built by him, was entered in competition with models submitted by young men throughout the United States.

The purpose of the competition is to encourage self-discipline and ingenuity in young men and boys who design and build model cars.

Inter-Sorority Council Schedules Annual Winter Cotillion

Presidents Introduce 70 Pledges At Smith Hall Dance December 2

Seventy fall sorority pledges will be officially presented to the college faculty and invited guests by the Inter-Sorority Council at the annual Winter Cotillion Ball Friday, December 2, in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to midnight, JoAnne Costello, ISC president, announced today.

All sorority pledges will make the traditional grand entrance through an arch and will be introduced by their respective sorority presidents.

The pledges to be presented will wear formals along with an outstanding characteristic representing the sorority they have pledged.

This dance is for sorority members and their guests; admission is by invitation only, Miss Costello said.

Appropriate attire for this affair is semi-formal, cocktail dresses for women and dark suits and ties for men.

The committees formed to plan the event include Delta Sigma Tau, tickets; Gamma Sigma Sigma, favors; Delta Psi, decorations; Kappa Phi, flowers and band; Phi Beta Rho, pledge rehearsal and line up; Gamma Kappa Beta, refreshments and photographs; Theta Tau, general setup and Campus Police, and Zeta Chi, publicity.

Faculty sponsors who have been invited to attend the event are Vivian Ward, Ruth Inskipp, Katherine Hondius, Martha Scott, Olga Perkins, Dale Forbes and Melia Furgis.

The patroness for the ball is Dean Mary Golding, advisor to ISC.

Egri Calls Student Meeting, Leads War On Campus Growth Problems

Help Week Violations Drop Beta Tau From Campus, Cancel Mistletoe Mingle

By Jerry Littrell

Beta Tau fraternity last week was declared "disassociated" from affiliation with any phase of the activity program here because of violation of college regulations, thus cancelling the traditional Mistletoe Mingle dance scheduled for Friday, December 9.

An official statement from Dean Ralph Hillsman addressed to Jerry Kucserka, Beta Tau president, and dated November 30, reads:

"On the evening of November 13 and 14, 1960, Beta Tau held a rushing affair in Mr. Palmer's residence at 554 Broderick Street.

"Investigation of charges verifies that the conduct of the affairs violates the regulations for the conduct of social activities of recognized student organizations.

"Our investigation has revealed that violation of Rule 10 was particularly flagrant.

"In the light of this breach of the understanding between the administration of the college and your social group, it becomes incumbent upon me to suspend your organization.

"Effective this date, your organization is disassociated from its affiliation with any segment of the Associated Students and any other phase of the activity program of the City College of San Francisco."

This action was a result of Beta Tau's Pledge Week-Help Week activities which were contrary to provisions of the California Education Code.

This code places responsibility for violations both on the individuals and the institutions concerned.

(Rule 10 refers to pledging activities. Other college regulations violated were failure to file a calendar of events and lack of supervision of Pledge Week activities.)

Kucserka also resigned his post as President of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

Mistletoe Mingle was the big dance of the college year for Beta Tau. With the cancellation of the dance this semester, this will be the first time in 14 years that the college has not had the annual Christmas dance.

It was first started in 1946 by Beta Tau member, Don Langendorf, and the first dance was held at the then Edgewater Beach Ballroom.

Another Beta Tau tradition will fall also this semester, the Christmas tree near the Silver Pole. Each year a tree was decorated by members of the fraternity, and after a brief stay at the Silver Pole, it was then donated to an orphanage.

Yule Concert Tops Double C-Hour Friday

There will be a special double College Hour, extending from 10 to 11:30 a.m. this Friday, to accommodate the Christmas Concert in the Cloud Hall library.

Meyer Cahn, music instructor here and in charge of the orchestra and band, said the December 9 concert will include selections by the Glee Club, the A Cappella Choir, both directed by Galen Marshall, and the college orchestra.

The schedule for the day will be the same as other College Hours, except that there will be no 10 o'clock class, according to the official college calendar. The traditional night Christmas Concert, open to the public, will not be held this year.

Delegates Discuss Problems, Stress Self-Discipline

Major campus problems brought about by rapid growth and possible methods for their solution were discussed by a small but enthusiastic group of student leaders attending a pre-Thanksgiving "problems convention" called by Associated Student President Joe Egri.

This was the first step in a drive by Egri to cool off some of the college's "hot spots" and the problems associated with them.

Following a talk by Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, who mentioned seven problems of chief concern, Egri told the representatives from campus clubs and organizations that the responsibility for solving the college's growth problems was theirs.

Mentioning self-discipline, a phrase heard many times throughout the discussion, Egri laid some of the blame to the breaking away from the Club Activities Board of the Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Councils.

Failure of these groups to work together have greatly hindered a speedy solution to many campus problems, Egri said.

Group discussion began with an assault on the problem of student drinking before and during college functions. Egri said he believed that most of it was done by guests of students here and other outsiders.

Jim Randall, Campus Police sergeant, stated that this was aided by students who lend their AS cards to non-members and added that steps should be taken to prevent the transferring of AS cards.

It was suggested that a photo of the card holder be printed on his AS card, but no definite decision on the matter was reached.

During this phase of the discussion, mention was also made of the crowded conditions at the recent Frosh Ball and how this was influential in a series of unpleasant incidents that marred the dance.

At one point Georgine Peterson, AS vice-president, declared "the problem to be solved is drinking and not obtaining larger halls for dances."

Egri, who had just attended a conference of student government leaders from other two-year colleges, said that the problem was not unique here and that other colleges had attempted to cope with it by establishing a student court system.

It was evident that the group believed some stern rules were needed to be understood by students here concerning the drinking problem. Drinking before any college function is illegal.

They considered expulsion from the college and other severe penalties as possible methods of ending the problem, but again emphasis was laid upon self-discipline and self-policing.

Pledging was then discussed when one student told the group that she had just finished pledging a sorority and had felt "utterly ridiculous and embarrassed" in participating in the pledging activities during the recently concluded Pledge Week.

She was immediately bombarded with protest from what was obviously a highly partisan group.

Most replies ended with "If you didn't want to, you didn't have to." Miss Peterson defended pledging by saying it was like the old pre-registration system, "a way of getting in."

Rounding out the evening was a discussion of the crowded conditions that exist in the cafeteria. Sherman Elworthy, Student Council advisor, denounced loiterers, aisle blockers and unauthorized people who only heighten the cafeteria problem.

Elworthy stated that the cafeteria is simply too small in relation to the size of the college. (Maximum seating capacity in the cafeteria is a little over 600; daytime enrollment is about 6000.)

It was then suggested that a student lounge might help in relieving the cafeteria of some of its crowdedness. Hillsman said the time was ripe for such a project and suggested a student mandate on it in the form of a petition.

As a possible temporary site, Hillsman offered the music bungalows which will be vacated next semester.

MOUNTING campus problems led Joe Egri, Associated Student president, to call a meeting of student leaders to discuss possible methods of solving them.

Hillsman Outlines 7-Point Challenge To Convention

Appearing before a group of student leaders summoned by Associated Student President Joe Egri to discuss current campus problems, Ralph Hillsman, dean of men here, outlined the seven major problems facing the college and challenged the group to lead the way in eliminating them.

The biggest problem of all, Hillsman told the delegates, and the apparent source of all other problems is the recent rapid growth of the college.

(The total daytime enrollment of the college this semester is approximately 6000 students, while the evening classes have drawn about 1400 students.)

Number one on Hillsman's "problem list" was school spirit. He maintained that it needed redefining and that students here should have a unity of purpose.

Hillsman suggested the annual Christmas drive of the Club Activities Board as the sort of campus function that could serve to "unite the students in a common effort."

Hillsman also said that there was a great need for "leader-type students" in campus activities and added that there were many such students at the college who are not members of any club or organization, but who could be valuable additions to such groups.

The need for a student center was also mentioned by Hillsman. He said it could be the center, the focal point of a student drive.

(Later in the evening Hillsman suggested a student mandate on the matter in the form of a petition.)

"We need it badly," Hillsman told the group and mentioned as possibilities a "sky room" over Cloud Hall or the new arts building.

The need for a student center led Hillsman to his next item, the crowded conditions in the cafeteria.

(In a speech before Student Council last year, Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, described the cafeteria as "too small the day it was opened.")

The cafeteria, Hillsman said, is a source of double trouble. First, it is the only place on campus where students can congregate, thus the resulting crowdedness.

Secondly, however, the crowded conditions aid the presence of unauthorized personnel, guests of students and other non-students here, who, Hillsman stated, could be a source of additional trouble.

Hillsman then spoke briefly on the problems of an overcrowded social calendar.

Lack of co-ordination between the CAB and the Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Councils was also attacked by Hillsman, who said he favored a reforming of the groups into one major body.

Finally, Hillsman brought up the matter of student self-discipline, and said if this fails, "then all school functions will fail."

Though Hillsman didn't say so, it was evident that he was referring, among other things, to the problem of drinking before and during college functions.

This, Hillsman made clear to the group, is illegal.

Finishing, Hillsman told the student leaders that they had a real challenge, that they should shoulder the responsibilities that they had signed for, and declared that the whole matter of improvement was in their hands.

PROBLEMS are an unavoidable part of a dean's life. You not only have to speak on them, but you also have to solve them aa Ralph Hillaman, dean of men here, above, knowa.

CAB Hopes Annual Drive Will Yield $400 In Donations

Collection of donations for the Club Activities Board's annual Christmas fund drive, to provide Christmas gifts for 12 needy families in San Francisco, will end this Friday.

According to Don Verdu, drive chairman, 140 students will be carrying containers around the college to collect money from students. There will also be a large container in Smith Hall and one next to the Silver Pole in Science Hall, where students can deposit their money.

Food will also be collected this semester along with the money. Last year $300 was collected, almost double the 1958 drive. The money will be used to obtain purchase orders at various grocery stores.

The goal set for the drive is between $300 and $400, but there has as yet been no goal set for the amount of food, Verdu said.

Verdu emphasized that "The people who are receiving this food really need it." The families will receive the food on a Saturday during Christmas vacation. Kelley, Verdu, Pat Crone and Jim Bush, students here, will distribute the food to the families.

The idea of bringing food was conceived by Bob Kelley of the CAB ways and means committee. He said, "This way, anyone who can't afford to bring money can just grab a can of food from his cupboard and bring it to the campus."

Former Editor Constine Succeeds Judge Karesh As US Commissioner

A distinguished City College graduate and former Editor of The Guardsman, Donald B. Constine, moved up a notch last week by being unanimously elected San Francisco's new United States Commissioner.

Constine, 35, former assistant United States Attorney, succeeds Judge Joseph Karesh, who, on November 8, was elected to the California Superior Court bench.

When he takes over his new post on January 2, 1961, Constine will become one of six full-time U. S. Commissioners in the nation today.

Following his education at City College, he entered the Hastings School of Law, and in 1951 joined the United States Attorney's office.

Since then he is believed to have handled more bank robbery cases than any other assistant U. S. Attorney in the nation.

His wife, the former June Feigenbaum, was a reporter on The Guardsman while Constine was Editor.

During his reign as Guardsman Editor in Spring 1945, Constine was invited to attend a series of special San Francisco Press Club luncheons, at which time important international delegates from the then newly formed United Nations spoke.

In succeeding issues of The Guardsman, Constine printed weekly news articles and personal interviews that he made with such distinguished world diplomats as journalist Lucien Aigner, Earl C. Warren of California, and Nelson Rockefeller of New York.

The Guardsman won All-American rating under Constine's editorship.

Leaders Discuss Problems; Students Must Solve Them

THE STRESS AND STRAINS of growth have caused certain problems at the college. While these problems have not appeared suddenly but have been building up for a period of time, they have made themselves particularly evident at certain social functions sponsored by the college this semester.

These problems are not unique here. Almost any college campus finds itself concerned with difficulties originating from dances, athletics, pledging, crowded cafeterias, unauthorized personnel on campus, and organizations failing to meet their responsibilities.

Rather than sit passively by and watch these problems mount and become even more serious in nature, Joe Egri, Associated Student president, called a meeting of student leaders here, comprised of heads of campus clubs and organizations, to discuss the problems and ways of ridding the campus of them.

SELF-DISCIPLINE STRESSED

It was unfortunate that the group was comparatively small, considering the large number of organizations on campus, but if it wasn't what it might have been in size, then it more than made up for that deficiency in spirit and enthusiasm and the splendid manner in which it attacked the many problems discussed.

One phrase, that of student self-discipline, appeared again and again throughout the meeting. Though it is true that student leaders should and must set certain examples of proper conduct, the major share of responsibility for ensuring the success of college activities rests upon student shoulders. Thus the policy of student self-discipline becomes all the more important and a crucial test for all students here.

EXPULSION NOT UNREASONABLE

It was suggested at the meeting that some stern and harsh measures be taken against those who flout authority and disregard rules at the college's extracurricular activities. Expulsion from the college was mentioned as a possible penalty.

This may seem overly harsh, but if it would make students, who should know already, aware of what is expected of them and keep at a distance undesirable elements, then we give our full backing and approval to such a move.

MEETING A MAJOR STEP FORWARD

We realize that those who do use college functions as occasions to display bad manners, irresponsibility and thoughtlessness are only a minority, but as is so often the case, their actions reflect upon the entire college and dim whatever bright accomplishments students here have made.

We feel, however, the meeting to be a major step forward. Certainly, the best way to begin an assault on the college's problems is to sit down and discuss them, determine what they are and suggest possible methods of alleviating them.

REAL LEADERSHIP SHOWN

We compliment and congratulate Egri on his splendid effort and also extend our compliments to the group of student leaders who did attend the meeting. Egri is doing an outstanding job of representing the college and is providing top rate leadership.

With such leadership as this and with the enthusiastic response the representatives gave, we feel confident that the current difficulties will be successfully worked out. One thing must be made clear, however. The current problems are not Egri's or his fellow leaders' alone. They are the college's problems; therefore, they are everyone's problems.

Anniversary Finds War Babies Planning Peacetime Families

By Paul Plansky

TODAY is December 7. Nineteen years ago our now 50th state was attacked by the enemy. Pearl Harbor! — America swept onto the world's bloody battlefield. Pearl Harbor! — that infamous insignia of sorrow, that ugly igniter of man's destructive drive.

Pearl Harbor! — the climax of a long friction which became a prolonged fire. Yet life had to go on, and it did. For out of this heat of hatred, this crucible of crises, emerged a new generation — babies born into the cradle of war.

Although the war wasn't fought here, it was felt here. The most susceptible mind to the surging, scourging abuses of warfare was that of the child. In their preliminary, impressionable years, these youngsters subconsciously absorbed an animosity toward war.

The Saturday afternoon shows were nightmares for mahy children: propaganda war movies during the global conflict and victorious exposés after —these were entertainment for the few; the rest of the young spectators wondered, "Where's daddy and big brother Bill?"

"What is this terrible and tragic thing called War?"

"Why do men kill one another like animals?"

Their parents had related to them the gruesome and savage pillaging of public and private property, the inhuman mass extermination of millions, the complete crippled state of the overrun countries. Despite the brutality of the Fascist machine, it fell to the Allies of Democracy.

We had won the war.

There would be no more menace to the white dove and her olive branch; the swastika was bent, twisted, burnt and buried. But then came the Hammer & Sickle. The Hammer & Sickle and the Red Star. Again there was war.

When American GI's were packing rifles across the treacherous terrain of Korea, most War Babies were not even ten years old. Yet, they were old enough to grasp a startling fact— two wars within their short span of childhood! War, War War!

Now the War Babies are flocking in their great numbers to the college campus. Their influx in the early '60's will break all previous enrollment records. They have come for an education to better themselves so that in turn they may better the world for future generations, especially their children's.

They don't want them to be born War Babies.

Nineteen years ago today began America's role in World War II. Today's college entrants are the 18 and 19-year-olds who were born into that war.

They seek security and pray for peace. They will step out into the Space Age with that goal in mind.

Demand Big For Floristry Grads

Club Members "Light" Lives With Flowers

By Sophie Hines

Unnoticed by most students of the college is Annex C, a group of bungalows located just north of the new football stadium, adjacent to the women's gymnasium.

After viewing this particular section of the campus, one would automatically think that it could be of no possible use. But, as the old saying goes, "Appearance can be deceiving," for inside these weather-beaten bungalows perhaps the most extensive retail floristry training program in the United States is being carried out.

Because the retail floristry curriculum offered is such an excellent one, students from even the most remote corners of the country come here to study such things as florist design and flower shop operation.

Since flowers tend to brighten the dullest places and situations, the demand for qualified florists is always increasing. This may account for the fact that retail floristry students receive supervised work experience under professional guidance as part of the course.

Floristry classes are kept busy learning the various techniques which go into making up home, funeral and wedding flower arrangements.

Flowers with which the students work are obtained from the San Francisco Flower Market on a budget from the college. After beginning, intermediate, and advanced floristry students have practiced making different arrangements, the flowers are sent to patients at San Francisco County Hospital.

The future florists contribute much to the college by way of arrangements for such functions as the Associated Women Student tea, the president's annual luncheon, and the like.

Field trips to various nurseries in the city and viewing Christmas window and store displays are also par for the course.

Operating as an extra curricular organization, the Retail Floristry Club has participated in the San Francisco Wholesale Flower Market's design school, where florists from Northern California put on displays for the benefit of each other.

The club also had a booth at the California State Florists Association convention recently held in Sacramento.

This group made corsages for the Frosh Ball and plans to do them for the next big college dance, the Soph Ball.

With the purpose of edueating the public to the use of flowers, the club gives demonstrations to Parent-Teacher and other women's groups in the city.

Although most persons have never given any serious thought to the retail floristry industry, students of the college who are planning a career in this field have already begun to make a name for themselves.

The maximum rainfall for a 24-hour period was 46 inches at Baguio, Luzon, Philippines, on July 14-15, 1911.

Shots At RAMdom

By Christopher Wise

REPORTS of two different conversations have come in from Spies At Ramdom that show the difference between what one can believe in and what one can't.

The first one is a Christmas story. A young student was driving his girl friend home last week when he discovered that Christmas is a real thing and it is located on Sansome Street, off Broadway.

As the car came off the Broadway ramp of the freeway and stopped for the Sansome Street light, the girl said, "Well, Christmas is just around the corner."

• • •

THE OTHER STORY could be called either a mystery or a crime story.

Two students were arguing about the much disputed parking lot at the north end of the campus. They were trying to figure out whether or not it is college property. One said it was, one said it wasn't, and neither could figure out a good way to find out.

An eavesdropper butted in and solved the problem. At least he solved the problem of how to find out.

"Go out there," he said, "and commit a crime. If the city police come to the scene, the place belongs to the city. If no one comes, it's part of the campus."

EVERY TWO-BIT COLUMN in the country has the practice of giving orchids and onions to people, places, or things. Just so that this one will be no exception:

Orchids to the horticulture department.

Onions to the hotel and restaurant department.

They should know what to do with them.

• • •

DURING last Wednesday's big rain a student entered class wearing a war-surplus raincoat.

He was accosted by the class Miss Busybody who asked, "Were you in the Navy?"

"No," he said.

"But you're wearing a Navy raincoat. I know because my boy-friend is in the Navy."

"Look, young lady," was his reply. "I'm wearing boxer shorts. That doesn't mean I was ever in the ring."

Bank Heart Of All College Transactions

Buying all materials for extracurricular activities from paper napkins to gunpowder is just one of the many services performed by the college finance office. The motto of the office could well be, "You name it— we have it."

Carl Anderson, accountant at the finance office in Smith Hall, and his assistant, Velda Maddox, took time out this week to explain the functions of their office.

Amazing is the quantity and scope of the business deals, transactions, collections, payments, purchases and general services rendered by the finance office.

One service, for example, concerns tickets. Now a ticket to most people is just a piece of paper, but that's not what a ticket means to Anderson and his assistant.

An event is going to be held that will require the sale of tickets. First the tickets will be ordered in a prescribed quantity, and they must be numbered serially. Next a purchase order for the printing of the tickets must be obtained. Before the tickets can be sold, a record of the serial numbers and the persons who will handle them must be made.

All cash collected from the sale of the tickets must be deposited at the college bank during regular hours of 9:45 a.m. through 1:15 p.m., and a complete accounting is made.

When it is remembered that this is just one phase in the overall picture, the finance center does indeed fulfill a vastly important college function.

Amy Vanderbilt, syndicated columnist, is the first guest in a series of 13 Monday programs beginning December 19, at 7:30 p.m., on KQED.

Fraternity Loop Title Is Up For Grabs Tonight

By Doug Cathcart

With the clock running out, Zeta Phi Sigma and Alpha Phi Epsilon are slated to battle it out tonight for the championship of the fraternity division of the Intramural Basketball League.

The Zetes clinched the tie position when they were proclaimed victors in their final game of the season with the now "departed" Beta Tau squad. This "deportation" also has helped the Alpha Phi team with regard to its standing in the division.

The winner of the Zeta Phi-Alpha Phi contest is slated to meet the champion of the independent division in a semi-final game. This contest is scheduled for Wednesday, January 4, at 8:10 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

The championship in the club division of the league is still up for grabs with three teams fighting it out to the finish. The Guardsman and the Recreation Association have a five and one record while the Hui Aloha Kekai cagers are a close second with a four and one history.

Recent action in the fraternity division pitted Alpha Phi Epsilon against Gamma Phi Ypsilon with the Alpha Phi men winning 25-23 in a hard-fought contest, and Phi Beta Delta over Alpha Kappa Rho by forfeit.

In the independent division the Untouchables also won by forfeit.

In the club division the Recreation Association slaughtered Hui Aloha Alli 70-40. The Guardsman pummeled the Newman Club 87-29, and the Hui Aloha Kawes emerged victorious over the Hotel and Restaurant hoopsters by forfeit.

Improving Ram Five Battles USF Frosh Tomorrow

By Ivan Temes

With the season barely underway, the Ram cagers duel the University of San Francisco Frosh tomorrow at 6 p.m. at War Memorial gymnasium in the locals' fourth contest of the year.

Having played three games since Friday, Sid Phelan's club will be going up against a USF outfit which is spearheaded by a pair of prep aces from the Academic Athletic Association, Pat Tarantino and hot-shooting Jim Brovelli, last season's Player of the Year from St. Ignatius.

Since Tarantino is a Sacred Heart product, these two men were archrivals last year but now find themselves matched under the able tutoring of Ross Giudice.

Though starting slowly, the local quintet, defending Big Eight champions, appears to be rounding into form and should fare well in tomorrow night's encounter which directly precedes the USF-Miami (Florida) game.

Veteran 6-4 standout John Lewis and ex-Berkeley whiz Charley Williams appear to have the starting forward spots sewed up, while a pair of newcomers, steadily improving 6-5 Glenn Wold and 6-6 Chuck Currington, are vieing for the center berth.

Additional board strength should be forthcoming from big Orlando Camp, and footballers Gary Lewis and Jesse Arteberry.

Vince Rocci has given the team a lift at guard and is slated to join Nate Jackson in a starting role, but both of these veterans will be hard-pressed by flashy floor man Dave Roberts, a teammate of Tarantino's last year.

Top guard material will also come from Bobby Grayson, Will Rockmore or Otis Phillips.

After tangling with the Dons, the Red and White will continue their gruelling practice at home with five consecutive games. The Presidio invades the local gymnasium on Friday at 2 p.m.

Next week in a pair of 4 p.m. encounters, the Rams will be up against the University of California Blues and Long Beach City College on Tuesday and Saturday, respectively.

Marin visits the college on December 20 at 2 p.m. followed by Vallejo on December 28 at 4 p.m.

Phelan takes his squad to the Modesto Tournament on January 5, the week before the league campaign gets underway.

17 Students Represent Recreation Association At San Mateo Sport Day

Seventeen students representing the college's Recreation Association attended the Sports Day at San Mateo last Saturday, Elizabeth Wirth, RA adviser, said today.

Private cars, donated by the students who participated in the Sports Day, transported the group to San Mateo.

Among the college sporting events available, bowling, archery, badminton and volleyball were the most popular, according to the students who took part in the activities.

RAMblings

Ram Soccer Team Gets "Spoils" Not "Bacon"

By Frank Dunne

THEY SAY "To the victors go the spoils," and after the Rams tied for the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference championship they sure did. Get the spoils, that is.

After playing such colleges as Cal, Stanford, San Jose State, USF and the Cal Aggies, they ended up on top of the loop tied with the Bears. This is the second year in a row that the booters have won the league (last year they won it alone), but a lot of good it did them.

After the season ended this year Cal was picked to go to the NCAA finals at St. Louis. Since this happened last year when the Bears were in second place behind the Rams, the selection was no surprise.

But this year the college was asked to go to New York for a game with Orange County Community College with the winner to be declared the junior college champs of the country.

When the news reached the college, all were joyful, money was made available to them, traveling plans were drawn, and the only thing that seemed left was for the boys to bring home the bacon (oranges).

But as usual, something went wrong and the whole trip was up in the air; the team didn't know whether it was going or not.

The men's gymnasium took on the air of the maternity ward waiting room at the County Hospital as the team paced around the office waiting for some word of their future. It came. The decision was over.

The details behind the disappointment are a bit cloudy, but so is the whole situation. First of all the California Junior College Association looks with disfavor on out-of-state championships.

Section 4.051 of the State Junior College Code states:

"No member institution may compete in a pre-season or post-season tournament or game unless the tournament or game has been approved by the State Athletic Commission."

And with all the conditions that would have to be met in the articles that follow before approval might be granted, the team would be too old to play.

Second, the Rams don't play in a junior college soccer league; the fact that they play in perhaps the best college soccer league in the world doesn't make any difference. But since they are not in a two-year college loop this would make the proposed battle in New York a mythical championship.

Mythical or not, it still would have been a fitting reward for the true champions they are.

Let's hope that by next season the State Athletic Commission does a little revising of its code and liberalizes its views on post-season games, as applied to soccer, and gives deserving teams from California a chance.

Ram, Bulldog Gridders Top Big Eight Conference Team

Top Big 8 Back

GARY LEWIS, star gridder, was named the outstanding backfield player in the Big Eight Conference this year by the coaches in the conference.

Coaches Honor Gary Lewis As Outstanding Back Of Year

By Tom Kennedy

Gary Lewis and Tom Piggee, the Rams' Mutt and Jeff backfield combination, dominated the team's final statistics and headed the locals' contingent on the All-Big Eight Conference football club.

Big Gary (6-2, 215 pounds) was named the outstanding back in the league by the coaches and led the Rams' passing, scoring and interceptions, as well as placing second in rushing.

Piggee, who weighs in at a mere 5-10, 175 pounds, smashed for 675 yards in 91 tries for a 7.4-yard average and all-league honors.

The third Ram on the Big Eight first team was guard Ed Johnson. Johnson played a big role in Grover Klemmer's forward wall, particularly after midseason, when injuries limited the coach to two front-line performers—Johnson and Alex Darnes at the position.

Darnes and center Jack Hiekey joined the second team on the balloting to give the locals the best representation in the league.

Big Eight champion College of San Mateo also placed five men on the club, but only one made the first team.

The Bulldogs took the crown when Contra Costa College pulled a tremendous upset in the last week of play and beat defending champ Stockton.

Even with this strong showing, the Rams might have some legitimate complaint that tackles Andy Citizen and Leamond McGriff, and end Ray Greggains were not mentioned in the selections.

Greggains caught seven passes for 141 yards to rank high in the league for pass receptions, even though City College was predominantly a running team.

Lewis headed most of the other statistics. He completed 23 of 53 passes for 333 yards, scored 11 touchdowns and two PAT's for 70 points, and intercepted six tosses—returning them 63 yards.

Lewis also averaged 9.3 yards per carry—412 yards in 45 tries.

The Rum explosiveness is shown in the team average of 6.3 yards per run, as compared to 4.1 for opponents.

Wayne Stribling set something of a record when he punted 19 times for a 38.9-yard average.

City College's final season record was six wins, two losses and one tie —including two non-league victories.

Booters Place 3 On All-Star Club

Outstanding team play throughout the year while helping lead the college booters to a first place tie in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference couldn't overshadow the fine individual efforts of Jim Lyneh, Bohdan Papara and Dave Kingsley as the trio were awarded first team berths on the 1960 All-Conference team.

Ed Zumot, Al Korbus and goalie Gary DeLong landed second team spots while the Red and White also placed three men on the third club, Ken Wright, Charlie Bowker and Emil Ruiz.

Co-titlist California also placed three booters on the top team.

In the North-South All-Star game at Cox Stadium, the South finished on top in a 4-3 thriller. Rod Diederichsen piloted the North, which also had DeLong, Wright, Papara, Zumot, Kingsley and Lyneh on the team, the latter tallying two goals.

In Canadian football there are 12 men aside, instead of the 11 men used in the American version of the sport.

Verducci Speaks At Block SF Banquet For Ram Athletes

Retiring San Francisco State College football coach, Joe Verducci, spoke to deserving Ram athletes, the college's coaching staff and the college administration at last Monday night's semi-annual Block SF dinner in Smith Hall.

The dinner, marking the end of the Fall '60 season, was the scene of speeches and award-giving as 57 local athletes received their blocks.

Climax of the program was the presentation to the most deserving man on each team of the Most Valuable Player award.

Tom Piggee, the all-league rookie halfback, was named Most Valuable on the Ram football team for his sparkling rushing all season.

The Most Valuable Player award in soccer went to Ed Zumot for his fine offensive and defensive efforts all season. Zumot was one of the many hard - working Ram booters who spurred the team on to the league championship.

Tom Jennings, who has run hard all year for the Red and White thinclads, received the cross-country team's Most Valuable award. Last year in the all-Northern California Conference meet, Jennings finished in the number 58 slot. This year, with a fine effort, he finished third.

Soccer blocks were awarded to Bob Barnett, Charles Bowker, Louis Chunz, Alberto Ceffalu, Gary DeLong, Yacoub Dudum, Dave Kingsley, Al Korbus, Vincent Liu, Jim Lynch, Gaetano Marra, Emilio Martinez, Ebrahim Mirza, Bill Moalem, Bohdau Papara, Emil Ruiz, Raul Ruiz, William Valiente, Glen Wright and Zumot.

Men receiving cross-country blocks were Frank James, Jennings, Bill Hotchkiss, Tony Ferrigno, Jim Nigra and Alvin Wuxman.

Sports Names AIN'T The Same

Frustrated Fans Get Explanation Of Slightly Confusing Terms

The sports page of a modern newspaper with all its strange terms and nicknames would read like a foreign dictionary if people were not conditioned, through close association and particiipation, to the many deviations which language takes in the world of sports.

Probably the toughest part of figuring out sports terms is the fact that so many of them may be thought to mean something else.

A weighter is someone who throws the discus. Knowing only this, the neophyte sports fan might think that a buller is a member of a debating team, not knowing the term used by target shooters.

It should also be remembered that harriers are cross-country runners and not Democrats who are left over from 1948.

Thinclads refers to track teams because of the type of uniform worn by the runners. This, of course, does not mean that the booters (soccer players) wear anything heavier than regulation shoes.

Mermen is a word which has its root in the word mermaid (who have no roots, only tails). They are, of course, swimmers.

So, for the same reason you would not expect a concert by a quintet of Charlie McCarthys when invited to the gym to watch a performance by the hardwood five (basketball team), don't expect a rendition of Annie Get Your Gun when going to watch mermen.

New Course In Spring Will Probe Concepts Of Evolution

Hear Ye! Hear Ye! Students not interested in knowing where they've been or where they might be going, need read no further.

No, the above is not an ad for the latest science-fiction movie, but it is a chance for the student, interested in the theory of evolution, to do something about it.

Bruce L. Firstman, life science instructor, will conduct a spring class entitled Genetics 10. This subject deals with heredity and evolution.

For the serious student, interested in obtaining an understanding of evolution, this course will offer basic concepts of evolution and will also provide demonstrations of some of the important factual evidences which support the theory.

A few of the questions that will be considered are, How did the universe begin? How did life originate on earth? Is man also a product of evolution? Can evolution be reconciled with belief in God? Is it true that all living creatures are related by common ancestry?

Since the appearance of Darwin's Origin Of Species, probably no scientific theory has been more controversial, nor more misunderstood, than the theory of organic evolution.

But a warning to those who might need it, Genetics 10 will not be a snap course. It is of university level and it will require persistent study and application on the part of the student.

However, the student who satisfactorily completed the course will be rewarded with a sound understanding in this most interesting and intriguing subject.

Men's Smoker Jan. 10 Features Boxing Matches

The biggest social event on the Associated Men Student calendar—the semi-annual men's smoker—has been set for Tuesday night, January 10, 1961, by Bob Kelley, AMS president.

Kelley said he plans boxing matches, presentation of trophies to the outstanding teams and individuals in the intramural basketball league, entertainment, a comic act, and refreshments for the gala event in the men's gymnasium.

It will take place on the last night of the Associated Student elections at 7:30 p.m. Associated Student card holders will be admitted free, and 50 cents will be charged others.

Roy Diederichsen, physical education instructor, has initiated an elimination-boxing tournament with 110 fighters. He plans on having the 18 best on hand at the smoker for nine championship bouts.

Some outstanding slugfests are expected.

The weight classes range from under 117 pounds to 185 pounds and over.

Members of the championship teams in the club, independent and fraternity divisions of the intramural cage league will be given medals, along with a team trophy.

AWS Slates Feminine Fling For January 12

Glamous Plus, the motif for this semester's Feminine Fling, will be held on January 12 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in Smith Hall, Margaret Lindstrom, Associated Women Student president, announced today.

Sponsored by the AWS, the Recreation Association and the Inter-Sorority Council, the semi-annual affair will honor the college's outstanding women students.

The ISC will present the Margaret Dougherty Trophy, given in honor of the late former dean of women, to the sorority with the highest grade point average for the semester.

Classes End Friday For Two Week Yule Vacation

Students here will receive a two-week Christmas vacation, starting this Friday, with classes resuming Tuesday, December 27.

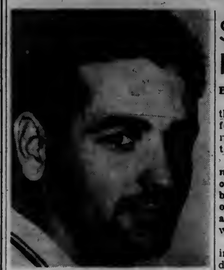
President Louis G. Conlan announced that students will return to campus from the New Year's holiday on January 3, 1961.

The next edition of The Guardsman will be a special election edition on Friday, January 6. Thereafter, The Guardsman will return to its weekly publications on Wednesdays.

Dr. Conlan stated, "On behalf of the faculty and administration of the college, may I take this opportunity to extend to the members of our student body very best wishes for an enjoyable vacation and holiday season, and for happiness during the New Year."

Campus Police Get Awards Tonight

The awards banquet of the Campus Police-Pistol Team will be held tonight at the Presidio Officers Club, Mike Hancock, Campus Police chief, announced last week following verification by Assistant Chief Frank Mateo.



Presenting the awards, on behalf of the college, to the mmebers of this semester's Western Revolver Association championship pistol team will be Fred F. Fitzgerald, criminology instructor.

The two guest speakers lined up for this stag affair are William Reed, former City College student and now on the Corte Madera police force, and Dan Grassis, member of the San Francisco Revolver Association, who will speak on the alcoholic problem.

The Campus Police will hold their own dinner after the first of the year for the entire force.

Chief Hancock also stated that parking is no longer a major problem around the campus. Only 66 citations, an all-time low, were issued to student violators last week to bring the overall total for this semester to 1418.

AS Election Contest Opens

Student Petition Deadline Friday For Candidacy In January Voting

By Richard Draxavon

Regulations, including the deadline this Friday for submission of petitions for Associated Student office, were released recently by Don Verdu, election commissioner.

Candidates' petitions must be submitted with 15 signatures of members of the AS, and must be accompanied by a five by seven inch photograph of the candidate. No petitions will be accepted without the signature, Verdu warned.

All candidates, he emphasized, must insure that their campaigns are conducted in accordance with the rules as listed by the committee.

Posters are to be approved by the committee between December 27 and January 3.

Unauthorized posters, Verdu said, or posters exceeding the maximum dimensions of 14 by 22 inches will be confiscated.

Publicity stunts will be allowed only after approval by the dean and by the Election Commissioner.

As is customary, campaigning will be curtailed on election days, January 9 and 10. No handbills will be allowed to be distributed on those days, but candidates may continue their campaigns, but not within 100 feet of the polling places.

Specific qualifications necessary for each of the 20 electoral offices which will be disputed were also listed by Verdu.

For the AS presidential and vice presidential candidates, at least 45 and no more than 60 units of work must have been completed.

Applicants for Associated Men Student President, Associated Women Student President, Sophomore President, and each of the seven sophomore seats on the Student Council must have completed at least 30 and no more than 60 units of work.

Freshman presidential aspirants must have a minimum of 15 and a maximum of 30 units, while the seven freshman positions on the Student Council require 12 units completed but no more than 30.

Duties of the particular offices are published in a pamphlet which may be obtained by students who wish to run for office from Verdu in the AS office, S-140.

Pre-Reg Dominates Legislative Proceedings In Student Council

By Richard Shields

Pre-registration continued to dominate legislative proceedings in Student Council as council members sought earnestly for a solution to the problems created by the rush of students seeking early registration numbers.

At a previous meeting, council had voted to ask the committee of administration and faculty members who were revising the method of pre-registration to reconsider their decision to abandon the old method.

The committee favors a plan which would give numbers to students according to seniority and scholastic achievements.

Counselor Walter McCloud, a key member of the committee, offered to attend a council meeting to explain the reasons for abandoning the old method.

He informed council that the administration had nothing against the current method of pre-registration except the danger of injury to students resulting from running and pushing in the crowded line.

The seniority-scholarship plan, he stated, would be a safe and fair way of giving numbers to students; also it would not infringe on class time.

Following McCloud's address, council voted to place both old and new plans on the ballot in the Associated Student elections next January to get the reactions of students.

Skip Schwarz, head of the pre-registration committee in council, emphasized repeatedly that, in sponsoring the motion, he was not advocating an attempt to influence whatever decision might be made by the administration.

A vote by students which would express their feelings on the subject, he said, might well be useful to the administration in the future if they should decide to reconsider the method now being used.

A vote to allocate $125 to the band resulted in a tie when confusion arose over the destination of part of the money earmarked for transportation to sports events.

AS President Joe Egri broke the tie by voting against the motion because of the ambiguity of the information relating to travel expenses. At the following meeting, however, council reconsidered the motion and passed the total amount.

Ushering Passes For Symphony Season Available

Ushering passes for students wishing to attend the 49th season of the San Francisco Symphony are now available in Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150. The season starts tonight and runs to May 24.

Dean Golding advised interested students to register at least two or three days prior to each concert. Six passes will be issued per performance.

Governing this privilege of admission to ushers are certain regulations as to dress. Proper attire for women is a dark street length dress. Dress for men is a dark, non-sports suit, white shirt and a necktie.

Music connoisseurs will view feature Soviet violinist, Leonid Kogan, in selections from Mozart's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in G Major, K 216 and Shostakovich's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 99.

This performance is to be the first in 20 Symphony Forum concerts, presenting the world's top artists.

Enrique Jorda is permanent conductor and musical director. Under his direction are starred violinists Kogan, December 7; Christian Ferras, December 21; Erica Morini, April 5, and Frank Houser, April 26.

Pianists are Eugene Istomin, December 14; Lili Kraus, January 11; Dimitri Bashkirov, January 25; Byron Janis, February 8; Philippe Entremont, March 1; Dame Myra Hess, March 22; Glenn Gould, April 19, and Francis Whang, May 10.

Scheduled for two engagements is Pierre Monteux as guest conductor, February 15 and 22. Two other conductors will also perform, on January 18, Joseph Krips, and on May 17, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Foundation Selects Conlan As Trustee

Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, was one of five prominent civic leaders recently elected to the Board of Trustees of the Coro Foundation.

Established in San Francisco in 1942, the Coro Foundation is a non-profit, non-partisan training center for students of public affairs.

In conducts research and education in the field of government-politics, with the aim of supplying more able men in public life, setting a higher moral and ethical standard in political behavior and creating better public understanding.

Since 1946, the main program of the Coro Foundation has been internships in public affairs. Candidates are recommended to the foundation by faculty and placement officers of colleges.

If accepted, students receive varied field assignments in public affairs, with $2250 subsistence each during the year of internship.

December Blows Holiday Spirit Across Campus

By Pat Perkins

CHRISTMAS is in the air. The holiday season is beginning to become obvious once again as December has blown in (especially here on the campus).

There are only 15 shopping days until Christmas; this statement may sound a bit commercialized, but many of the students here at the college are working at the various department stores around town and courteously handling the vast number of people doing their holiday shopping.

Many of the college's organizations are getting into the spirit of Christmas by decorating the campus.

Rally Committee is in charge of decorating Smith Hall; the cheery atmosphere in the cafe is bound to put the coffee drinkers, homework-doers, cigarette smokers, and believe it or not, lunch eaters, into the vacation mood.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority decorated its meeting room, C-223, in order to help promote the holiday feeling.

A huge Merry Christmas card from Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity was the first card to be displayed in the cafeteria.

Before vacation, many clubs concluded much of their unfinished business.

The Student California Teachers Association held a meeting on December 2 in order to elect the officers for the spring semester.

Because of its interest in the promotion of good scholarship, music for the November 18 dance sponsored by Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, was provided by the co-operation of Local No. 6 of the American Federation of Musicians, AFL-CIO, through a grant from the Recording Industries Trust Funds.

Associated Student elections are rapidly approaching. The United Students Party will hold its convention in Bungalow 7 tomorrow night, while the Students' Representative Party has scheduled its convention for Smith Hall tonight.

Movies of Squaw Valley, the site of the 1960 Winter Olympics, will highlight this Friday's meeting of the Newman Club in S-204 during College Hour.

In addition, the Newmanites are planning a special Christmas dance on Wednesday, December 21, at St. Emydius Parish Hall. The dance is themed Snow Flake Folly and will begin at 9 p.m. and end at midnight.

Soph Ball Set For Jack Tar January 13

JOHN AZZARO, Sophomore president here, realizing that 1961 is just around the corner, has reserved the Jack Tar Hotel for the Soph Ball.

Final arrangements are now being made by Sophomore Class President John Azzaro for the semi-annual Soph Ball set for Friday evening, January 13, 1961, in the Grand Ballroom of the Jack Tar Hotel.

The ball will come at the climax of Soph Week activities on the campus, and will also bring the curtain down on this semester's college-sponsored social affairs.

This class will also have the distinction of being the first group, college or high school, to sponsor a dance in the new hotel.

Providing the music between 9 p.m. and 12 midnight will be Ray Hackett and his orchestra, one of San Francisco's leading musicians. This same group performed at the Fall 1958 Soph Ball.

Appropriate dress, according to Azzaro, will be dark suits for the men and cocktail dresses for the women. Corsages are recommended.

A main highlight of the dance will be the crowning of the Sophomore King and Queen during intermission. The selection will be made as a result of the tabulations of Associated Student votes during the preceding week. This tradition has been in effect since 1945.

One of San Francisco's top photographers, Milton Mans, will be available throughout the evening for photographs at $1.50 per print.

Admission to the dance, which has been held since the Fall of 1936, is free to holders of Associated Student cards. Those planning to attend who do not have a card in their possession will be charged $2.50 per couple.

Ample parking facilities are available in the hotel's garage.

The hotel is located at the corner of Van Ness Avenue and Geary Street.

Mayor Christopher Due Here For Speech Today

Russ Schools To Be Chief Topic Of Talk

Mayor George Christopher comes to the college this morning and will give his impressions of his recent visit to Russia in a College Hour speech in the library reserve reading room.

United Religious Forum, which is sponsoring the event, announced that this will be the first time a mayor has addressed students at the college.

Member clubs of the forum joining in sponsorship include the college's Baptist Club, Newman Club, Presbyterian Club and the Lutheran Club.

All rooms in the library are wired with speakers to carry the Mayor's words in the event that the reserve reading room becomes overly crowded.

Counselor Walter C. Krumm extended an invitation to all faculty members and students to attend.

Christopher toured Russia last May at the request of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev for two weeks, and visited five cities, including Moscow.

The invitation came as a result of Khrushchev's cordial reception here in September of 1959. Since then the Premier has referred to Christopher as one of his favorite American politicians. Mrs. Christopher was presented with a stole while on the trip.

The Mayor is expected to speak chiefly about what he saw of Russian education. Krumm mentioned that students might find it interesting to compare Christopher's remarks with those of Russell Posner, history instructor here, who spoke earlier this semester on his views of Russia.

Posner was greatly impressed with the Communists' rapidly developing educational system after his trip last summer, and said that they appear ready to challenge United States world leadership.

Besides sponsoring today's talk, the United Religious Forum sang Christmas carols at General and Mary's Help Hospitals during the Christmas season.

Revitalized in the middle of this semester after an absence from campus, the URF now is affiliated with most of the religious groups on campus and is planning more extensive activities for this spring.

THE LIBRARY will be the scene of a College Hour talk by Mayor George Christopher, above, on various aspects of his tour of the Soviet Union.

Penny-A-Vote Election Next Week To Decide Soph Ball King, Queen

Besides electing next semester's AS officers, members of the Associated Students here will cast votes next week for a King and Queen to reign over the Soph Ball on Friday evening, January 13, John Azzaro, Sophomore Class president, announced last week.

The "penny-a-vote" method will be used in electing the royal couple again this semester. Containers will be placed near the Silver Pole in Science Hall and in Smith Hall next week.

Individual and perpetual trophies will be presented to the winning couple by Azzaro during intermission of the ball, to be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Jack Tar Hotel.

This tradition has been in effect since 1945. The first queen was crowned in 1940, but it was not until five years later than the king was brought into the picture.

The ball will bring an end to a hectic week of Sophomore activities around the campus, which include a semi-annual Frosh-Soph basketball game in the men's gymnasium, and will bring the curtain down on this semester's college-sponsored social affairs.

Ray Hackett and his orchestra have been booked to provide the music between 9 p.m. and 12 midnight.

Appropriate attire, according to Azzaro, will be dark suits for the men and cocktail dresses for their dates. Corsages are recommended.

Admission to the ball is free to holders of Associated Student cards for this semester. A charge of $2.50 will be made to students attending the affair without such a card in their possession.

Commenting on the problem of parking, Azzaro stated that ample facilities can be found in the hotel's main garage.

Heavy Vote Expected In AS Election Monday, Tuesday

2 Pre-Reg Choices On Ballot; Student Preference Sought

By Dick Draxavon

In an effort to determine student opinion on a system to alleviate the confusion caused by the present method of distributing registration numbers, two pre-registration plans will be included on the ballot in the forthcoming Associated Student election, according to Don Verdu, election commissioner.

Verdu emphasized that results of the vote would have no official bearing on the final decision, but will be used solely to show the feelings of the students on this matter.

Listed as one of the choices on the ballot will be a revised version of the present method of first-come first-served.

Possible revisions which have been submitted to the counseling department include a plan advocating the use of an alphabetical system. This version would provide for a rotating method attempting to give each student an equal opportunity at one time or another.

Another revision proposed by students was the utilization of all the counselors on pre-registration day in an effort to divide the one, long, uncontrollable line of students into 15 smaller groups.

The other choice will be a plan whereby the numbers would be assigned on a scholarship seniority basis. The persons with the highest marks and greatest seniority would get the lowest registration numbers.

Mr. McCloud, head counselor here, stated that, regardless of the elections results, the scholarship seniority plan would be used.

He explained that this plan seemed to solve, at least theoretically, many of the problems which exist in the present plan, and it gives priority to the more serious students.

Most evident would be the elimination of line-crashing and roughness. Another problem eliminated would be that students who are ill on the day of pre-registration, and have to receive one of the last numbers.

"This is an administrative problem," McCloud stated, "but we will be watching the election with interest."

"THE STUDENTS' REPRESENTATIVE PARTY has given you the kind of good government that a college of this size needs in order to function properly. The ground work has been laid in acquiring a Student Union, and an effort made to solve some of the current campus problems. These and other objectives must be gained in order to cope with the growing size of our college.

"The Students' Representative Party again offers you a slate of mature, enthusiastic and inquisitive people, dedicated to good government, to better representation of "all" the students, and to improvement in all departments pertaining to the students at City College of San Francisco."

Snepp To Speak At Council Awards Dinner Wednesday

Guest speaker at the semi-annual Student Council awards dinner, to be held next Wednesday in Smith Hall, will be Donald Snepp of the college English department, Georgene Peterson, Associated Student vice president, said today.

A greeting by President Louis G. Conlan will precede the main talk. Snepp, who customarily addresses the graduating honor students, has announced as his topic, Extra-curricular Activities—Profit Or Loss?

Following his speech, awards will be made to the faculty member and student, respectively, who have performed the most helpful voluntary service for the Associated Students. The student who will receive this award cannot be holding any AS office nor be a council member.

Awards will then be made to the President's Cabinet, Student Council members and the executive officers. The President and Vice President will also receive perpetual AS cards.

Traditional ceremonies of installation of new AS officers will then be observed, with present President Joe Egri turning over his office to the incoming President who will in turn install his cabinet.

It was hoped by Miss Peterson that Sammi Belcher would be available to sing for the guests' entertainment. Miss Belcher, a student here, is a member of the Opera Ring, and has appeared in Can Can and in West Side Story there.

36 Candidates To Air Merits In C-Hour Rally Today

By Richard Shields

Hopeful student government office candidates will battle it out at the election polls next Monday and Tuesday, according to Don Verdu, election commissioner, who announced a slate of 36 candidates and predicted a large voter turn-out.

A special election rally will be held today in front of the Redwood Ram during College Hour. Both of the competing parties, the United Students Party and the Students' Representative Party, will make their appeals to the students.

Each party will have 20 minutes to argue for its candidates and its platform. In addition, candidates for the executive offices from both parties will also speak.

To coincide with the election rally The Guardsman changed its normal publication date from Wednesday to today.

Six executive offices and 14 council seats will be filled in the semi-annual contest, this semester between the Students' Representative Party and the United Students Party.

The United Students Party has chalked up three semesters of participation in student government at the college. The Students' Representative Party was formed last semester and won the election.

Heading the opposed forces in the coming election are Charles Hanks (SRP) and John Azzaro (USP), one of whom will receive the nod from voters to assume the office of Associated Student President.

Donna O'Leary, presently the Recording Secretary, is running unopposed for the office of AS Vice President.

Associated Men Student Presidential aspirants are Jim Bush (SRP) and Billy Threadgill (USP).

Pat Crone (SRP) opposes Marlene Bobrow (USP) for the office of Associated Women Student President.

The Sophomore Class Presidency will go to George Woo (SRP) or Bob Rogers (USP).

Chuck Wood (SRP) and Joe Kane (USP) are running for the Freshman Class Presidency.

Only ten candidates are running for the seven Sophomore council seats which will be filled in the election. They are Kathy Henderson (SRP), Mary Ann Grandemange (SRP), Loretta Ching (SRP), Gary Wilkening (SRP), Cipriano Ayalin (SRP), Harry Somerfield (SRP), Tom Mullins (SRP), Joyce Lamas (USP), Bruce Farber (USP) and John Rojas (USP).

The seven SRP candidates for Freshman council seats are Greg Monk, Paul Snowberg, Jerry Crivelli, Herm Pearson, Marsha McNeely, Grant Fahs and Sandi Shaw.

USP candidates for the same positions are Larry Handleman, Kathy Hallock, Marilyn Butler, Nancy Jacobson, Marcia Busby, Sue Batmale and Gary Sazzi.

Voting machines will be located at the Silver Pole in Science Hall, at the entrance to the library, in the cafeteria, and at the refreshment center in the basement at the south end of Science Hall. The machines will be open from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. on both days of the election.

Verdu expressed expectations of a large voter turn-out for the election.

John Azzaro

"IF I AM HONORED as to be elected President, I will try to serve the entire student body to the best of my ability.

"Last semester I served as your Freshman Class President. This semester I am the President of the Sophomore Class. I have aimed for the Associated Student Presidency from my first day at City College, and I feel that my past record vouches for my ability to maintain the presidential office and to serve you in the best way.

"As you may know the United Students Party is not running a candidate for every office. We are only running candidates who are best suited for the job. For an efficiently-run student government, vote for the United Students Party."

JOHN AZZARO

Council Adds 4 Amendments To Election Ballot

After receiving near unanimous votes of approval from Student Council, four amendments to the constitution dealing with the number of units required to hold an Associated Student office will be placed on the ballot in next week's election.

The first amendment proposes that the President of the Sophomore Class be required to have completed at least 28 rather than 30 units of college work and not more than 60.

The second would have the same effect on the Freshman Class President, requiring at least 15 and not more than 27½ rather than 30 units for anyone who holds the office.

The last two amendments would change the unit requirements for members of Student Council requiring a maximum of 27½ for Freshman council members and a minimum of 28 for Sophomore members.

Council also voted to recommend a design for the AS cards next semester. Designs prepared by William J. Eckert's art class were submitted to council for approval.

The first vote resulted in a tie with some council members voting for the card that was certain of being in the college's colors, red and white. The other half of the members voted for a design that has already been set up for red and pink.

AS President Joe Egri broke the tie voting for the red and pink design with the stipulation that a previously passed recommendation changing it to red and white could be acted on when the cards are printed.

Verdu Attempts To Revive AS Elections

By Richard Shields

Election returns are of vital importance to politicians and voters alike whether the issue involved be the leadership of a nation, a college organization or merely a matter of controversy.

The true will of the people can always be measured best by allowing them to choose from among varying and opposing viewpoints.

Records from the recent national election show that the men and issues which will shape this nation's destiny during the next four years were chosen by voters representing approximately 37 per cent of the TOTAL population.

On the other hand, only five per cent of the total number of students enrolled at the college helped to choose the present leaders in student government.

Of the total enrollment of approximately 7000 students, 24 per cent were eligible to vote, and, of those eligible, only 379 or 23 per cent cast ballots in the election.

Disinterest in Associated Student elections has long been a problem in campus political life; records indicate that an average of 22 per cent of eligible voters went to the polls in campus elections during the last four semesters.

In the past more has been said than done about student apathy toward campus elections. It has almost become traditional for the election commissioner to prepare a post-election statement expressing regret, ire, or bewilderment for poor turnouts.

This semester, however, a "poor turn-out" is no foregone conclusion. Election Commissioner Don Verdu, with the backing of the Associated Men Students, is mailing letters and sample ballots to all AS cardholders to remind them to vote.

The last time ballots were mailed to prospective voters was in 1955 during the fall semester. Records of that election show that the number of voters took a tremendous surge upward to a mark equalled only by the 1948 political contest.

One of the most vexing problems which has faced past election commissioners is finding people to officiate at the voting machines. This is perhaps the most important of all official positions in conducting an election.

Verdu stated that despite AMS backing he is having trouble finding people to watch the machines. He said that the Inter-Sorority Council, the Inter-Fraternity Council and the Club Activities Board might be able to give him enough help.

Verdu's committee has already received contracts from the Registrar of Voters of the City and County of San Francisco for the use of voting machines in the election.

The Registrar of Voters will put the names of candidates and propositions on the machines and set them up at the college. The biggest responsibility, however, still remains with students at the college.

That is the actual act of casting a ballot. If Verdu's expectations are realized, this election will at least equal any record set in a previous election.

From now until election day, January 9 and 10, the watchword at the college will be, "VOTE."

Visitors To Council In Action Observe Democracy In Action

A PERSON who attempts to take an active interest in, and form opinions on, national and international affairs without first gaining a solid background in the problems and events that most closely affect him, the local issues, is like one who attempts to compose a symphony without first learning the basic rules of melody, harmony and rhythm.

The understanding of basic, elementary concepts is prerequisite to broadened outlooks and mature opinions. Thus, a fuller knowledge of local affairs facilitates a more intelligent and meaningful interpretation of more distant, but nonetheless important, events.

"Local affairs," as far as students here are concerned, are the problems and tasks confronting the college and the manner in which they are worked out. This depends, of course, on how thoroughly and effectively student government here functions.

The center of governmental activities is the Student Council and it is no exaggeration to state that all Associated Students are, in one way or another, affected by the decisions and actions of council. It is natural, therefore, for students to have a curiosity about the working of council and a rightful demand to know more about them.

Most students here, however, are under the false belief that the only means of learning about council is through The Guardsman. This is a fallacy, and it seems unfortunate that they do not realize that as AS members they have the privilege, the right to attend council meetings and observe firsthand how the representatives they have chosen are carrying out their duties and responsibilities.

We are not suggesting a rush en masse by students here to the next council meeting. We are suggesting, however, that those interested students exercise their right to attend.

Next Monday and Tuesday, students here will be electing their leaders for next semester. A fine method of observing how those who are finally selected are carrying out the duties and responsibilities of democracy in action is by an occasional attendance of Student Council.

We are confident, too, that council itself, realizing the benefit of greater student participation will welcome all interested and sincere students. They owe them that much.

Columnist Castigated

Editor, The Guardsman:

Foresight is prescience or foreknowledge with a connotation of prudence. Your column "Foresight" is neither speculative nor conscientious. It demonstrates flagrant disregard for the rudimentary facets of the intelligent, veracious and responsible writing expected of a column in a college newspaper.

Mr. Plansky misquoted, defamed and wrongly criticized Webster's Dictionary in his column of November 16, 1960. Webster's Dictionary is not so charismatic as to be above criticism, but it is necessary that this criticism be justly founded.

It is unforgivable that any newspaper, particularly a collegiate journal, would print a column with such apathy towards accuracy and constructive criticism.

Mr. Plansky's definition of fraternity in the same column is emotional to the point of absurdity and is illogical. How does he explain the lethal hazings and the puerile acts of many fraternities?

Since he ascribes the critical public opinion of fraternities to Webster's Dictionary perhaps it would be best not to have his explanation.

"Foresight" supported the Hallinan-Bass Progressive ticket in the November 2 column. Mr. Hallinan has served six months in jail for income tax evasion and was suspended from the Bar for four years since his candidacy. Ergo one can assume that Mr. Plansky knows little about which he prints or that he is irresponsible for supporting such a man for the presidency of the United States.

The Thanksgiving Day column was an example of poor high school level writing. Mr. Plansky's misguided ramblings manifest a lack of inspiration, ideas and literary style, the mandatory tools for any columnist. That a newspaper would allow such immature "twaddle" is indeed a shock.

Since "Foresight" is insensate, irresponsible and prevaricative I would suggest a new author or a deletion of the column. Certainly his uninspired writing has no place on your otherwise very fine newspaper.

Douglas L. King.

Honest, Unflinching, Resolute Mr. Truly Meets The Press

By Paul Plansky

Old Nineteen Sixty trudged to the tavern to drink his last toast of good cheer;
He sang of the mem'ries, morose and gay,
of his aging and fading past year.
When reminiscing and dirge were done,
he rose to leave quickly his time had run.
For when he reached home, there placed on his throne, was the infant '61.

• • •

OVER the holiday a certain columnist was extremely fortunate to run into, among other things, a protegé of the renowned Professor Sharpshooter, who has never told a lie.

Like his pedagogue, Mr. Truly is sincere, honest, forthright, unflinching, and above all, resolute. With such a rare person in one's company (possessed of mind over matter, power of the will, and all that), it was an undeniable opportunity to secure an interview.

Instead of asking for opinions on profound social or political matters, the following Questions and Answers hit more upon the human aspect of life and its pitfalls.

Q: Mr. Truly, before we start, I want only facts; is that clear?

A: I swear upon a carton of Freshlifilters!

Q: Why, Mr. Truly, do you smoke?

A: No, but I sell Freshlifilters; would you like a carton?

A: No thanks.

Q: Did you have a good holiday season?

A: Yes, our business take for Christmas-wrapped cartons showed the largest increase for the month of December to date.

Q: No, No! I mean did you and your family reap the joyous rewards of good will and Yuletide spirit?

A: Oh yes, gifts from St. Nick and gelt from Channukah.

Q: Who's Channukah?

A: He's not a person; it's a very long story.

Q: Mr. Truly, you have been called one of the most resolute men in the world. Is that true?

A: Definitely, Absolutely, Positively, YES!

Q: Well, since you're so resolute, what's your number one new year's resolution for 1961?

A: To emphatically imprint upon my brain the absolute necessity of severely enforcing the prevention of even the slightest possibility of the future issuances of those white, rectangular, automotive notices of deficiency.

Q: Could you state that a little more clearly?

A: No more Traffic Tickets!

Q: That's a big order; how do you plan to accomplish this?

A: Stop driving.

Q: In the past did you receive more parking violations or more moving violations?

A: About half-and-half and a few flying violations.

Q: Flying violations? How do you explain that?

A: I used to drive a Vespa.

Q: Tell me, Mr. Truly, what do you think of the new compacts?

A: I wouldn't know; I haven't looked in my wife's purse lately.

Q: We're talking about cars, not cosmetics.

A: Oh.

Q: Say, isn't that '61 Eldorado parked outside yours, Mr. Truly?

A: Yes.

Q: I thought you stopped driving. Right?

A: I did. I've got a chauffeur now.

Q: That's a pretty slick wax job you've got there; did you do it yourself?

A: No, my wife did, and I think you've rubbed it in enough!

Washington Leads

54 Nations, 48 States Comprise Enrollment Here

By Sophie Hines

Throughout the semester, great emphasis has been placed on the fact that the college's enrollment is at an all time high.

This may be due to the current demand for more experienced and more highly educated men and women to meet the needs of today's modern world.

Current enrollment totals 7503—6090 day students and 1413 evening students.

San Francisco high school graduates comprise the bulk of the college's total enrollment, and of these 3866 students have previously attended public high schools and 897 are graduates of the city's private high schools.

George Washington High School heads the list with 857 former students now attending classes here. Abraham Lincoln is next with 732, followed by Balboa and Lowell with 543 and 438, respectively.

Three hundred sixty-five students are graduates of Galileo, having attended either day or evening classes, while Polytechnic grads number one less than Galileo.

Mission High School is represented by 321 scholars, and 149 students previously attended day or evening classes at Benjamin Franklin.

The remaining San Francisco graduates include 97 students who received high school diplomas from O'Connell, Continuation, the Unified School District, and the currently non-existent schools of Samuel Gompers, Girl's High and Commerce.

Special examinations made possible the admission of the 96 students who are non-high school graduates.

Institutions outside California have contributed 1027 students to the college's population.

The largest number of out-of-state students are former residents of Hawaii. Taking second place in this category is Texas with 80 students as compared to the 105 from the newest state in the union.

Students from 48 of the 50 states of the United States and Guam, the Canal Zone, District of Columbia, Samoa and Puerto Rico are now attending classes in hopes of a higher education.

Adding to the enrollment composition are the 448 students who are representatives of 54 countries of the world. The Philippines leads in the foreign student area.

With the founding of the college in 1935, when classes were held in the building of the University of California Extension Division and at Galileo High School, there were 1470 students in attendance.

Of these 907 men and 564 women, approximately 87 per cent, were graduates of San Francisco high schools.

When the college moved to its permanent location in 1940, 2116 men and 1111 women sought a higher education.

With World War II in progress, men and women left the campus to serve in the Armed Forces and with in defense factories. By 1943 classrooms were occupied by only 835 students, marking the lowest enrollment in the history of the college.

The college came to life once again with peace restored and by 1947, 5500 students were on campus. This marked the first giant step in enrollment.

Custodial Miracle

Kelly's Staff Works Wonders Around Campus

By Christopher Wise

Anyone who eats lunch at the cafeteria daily is unknowingly witness to a minor miracle.

During a recent week, for example, Smith Hall was the scene of a rehearsal on Tuesday, a fashion show and tea on Wednesday, a dance Friday, and finally, Saturday night, a Luau.

Following each lunch period, the cafeteria was completely transformed for each function. At the close of the function it became a cafeteria again in time for breakfast.

The miracle workers are the custodial staff. The miracle is not a miracle to them. They do it all the time.

Being quick change artists with furniture is one of the many things the custodial staff does unknown to the student body.

Many students see Bill Kelly's crew of 27 janitors, three janitresses, and three working foremen around the campus but pay little or no attention to the work that they are doing.

It is practically unknown that a large crew comes to work at 3 o'clock each afternoon and works until past 11 o'clock each night cleaning up the many buildings on campus.

It is also not realized by too many students that such a large job of keeping the college clean is performed by so few people.

There is only one man on duty in Smith Hall during the day and only two in Science Hall.

A good idea of how small a crew handles each building can be gotten from the fact that when the new arts building opens Kelly plans to add no more than four people to his staff.

To the uninitiated, this may give the impression that the custodial department is understaffed. Such, however is not the case.

The men and women, to whom students owe the high degree of cleanliness prevalent on their campus, are a highly skilled group of professionals who are able to do more work in one day than twice the number of people who might think that the work is easy and requires no special skill.

By the rules of the City of San Francisco, all school janitors must be either high school graduates or possess one year's work experience for each year lacking in the completion of high school.

Most of Kelly's men and women have been in the trade for quite a few years and are regarded as technicians.

Several of the night crew are college students, including two from City College.

In the janitorial trade, a school or college is considered the toughest place to work. Most janitors shy away from applying for school jobs.

Perhaps college work is the toughest in the custodial line but an uninitiated observer would never suspect it. In fact most of the work done is done so quickly and efficiently that the majority only take for granted that it has been done.

Phelan Rates Ram Five Darkhorse In Big Eight Race

By Tom Kennedy

Although many observers are giving the Rams a good chance for the Big Eight basketball championship, Coach Sid Phelan rates his charges no better than darkhorses because of their lack of experience.

Phelan welcomes back only one starter — forward John Lewis — from last season's team which won the league title in a playoff game with Oakland City College.

This year Phelan puts Oakland and Contra Costa ahead of San Francisco, even though the Rams have more height than in 1959-60.

"We have a green but willing club, and a lot depends on how it jells," he states. "Still, we have some very good possibilities. Right now I am looking for an effective starting combination."

Indeed, it sometimes seems that Phelan could field two teams of equal ability.

At the forward positions he has Lewis (6-4), Charley Williams, and 6-2 Brad Duggan. Williams has been steadily impressive throughout the pre-season.

Duggan, a brother of Ram cage great Kevin Duggan — who played under the coaching of the present dean of men, Ralph Hillsman—boasts no high school experience but is a real "comer," according to Phelan.

At the center position, Jesse Arteberry, Glenn Wold, Orlando Camp (all 6-5), and 6-6 Chuck Currington are fighting it out for the starting nod.

Arteberry has outstanding potential, and Phelan believes that if he develops a dominating attitude he could be a star.

Otherwise, one of the three remaining candidates will move into the post position. Phelan explains that collectively these three would make a truly great basketball player, but each has an individual weakness he needs to work on.

Nate Jackson and Bobby Grayson are currently leading a fine group of guards.

Others in competition are Vince Rocchi, Otis Phillips, Dave Roberts and Will Rockmore.

Phelan says that if the team can make a good showing at the Modesto Tournament this weekend it could indicate pleasant things to come.

He purposely selected a rugged early-season schedule to prepare his cagers for league play. If early season scores are any indication—Oakland and Contra Costa have not been overly impressive in the early going —the Rams could very well be in the thick of the Big Eight race again.

Cagers Face Stern Test At Modesto

Spring Sports Sign-Up

Mentors Invite Participants For Coming Season

Three top veterans will form a nucleus from which Coach Roy Burkhead will mold his 1961 swimming team.

Bill Sakovich, All-American merman in the 100-yard backstroke and the 200-yard backstroke; Rich Sullivan, a member of the college's All-American relay team and a top free style swimmer, and Allan Stevens, a breaststroker from last year's team, have returned to bolster Burkhead's hopes for the coming campaign.

A meeting of interested swimmers who wish to try out for the squad is slated for Friday, January 13, at 3 p.m. in Burkhead's office in the men's gymnasium. Practice will start the following Monday at McLaren Pool. Burkhead also announced.

The team will be hard pressed to replace several outstanding swimmers who have been graduated and moved on to other colleges. Bob Fewster, Craig Schwarz and Pete Urrea, all members of the All-American relay team, have won their last races for the Rams.

Burkhead will be spending much of his time trying to replace these men.

Golf

Golf Coach Grover Klemmer requested that all men interested in joining the City College golf team sign up with him in the men's gymnasium.

Klemmer stated that he has a few outstanding performers already signed to play and would like to see many more try for the club.

Competition in the Big Eight Conference will not begin until the Spring semester, but Klemmer is planning on holding a ladder tournament among his own players this semester.

Baseball

Looking ahead to the coming season, the local horsehiders will meet today in C-260 during College Hour to discuss the coming campaign. All those interested in signing up should attend.

Veterans expected to show for this season are Eric Lyons, center field; Robert Ruggiero, catcher; Ed Coll, left field; Robert Lam, second base; Ray Greggains, fielder, and Don Loewpinski, first base and pitcher.

Last year Coach Lee Eisan saw his team come in third place behind Oakland and Sacramento with a 9-5 record.

Track

Anchored by seven returning veterans, hopes are high that the 1961 Red and White track squad will once again cop the Big Eight crown.

Coach Lou Vasquez believes that there is a strong chance that this year's team will even exceed the power of last season's championship squad. But he added that there is a possibility that the rest of the Big Eight Conference will also be much improved.

The seven returning "old pros" are Herb Brisco, George Holland, Bill Hotchkiss, Frank James, Tom Jennings, James Nichols and Bob Taylor.

Sign-ups for the 1961 track and field squad are slated to be held today in C-260 during College Hour. Coach Vasquez related that the meeting will be "short but important."

49er Buck Passing Gives Eagles Crown

By Frank Dunne

RECENTLY the Philadelphia Eagles won the National Football League championship by defeating the Green Bay Packers 17-13. Normally the game would have meant very little to San Franciscans because the 49ers were out of the running.

But after the game one could hear almost anywhere phrases like: "Buck won the championship!" — "The Silver Fox really whipped 'em."

These words were directed toward the head coach of the Eagles and former mentor of the 49ers, Lawrence Timothy (Buck) Shaw.

This will be Buck's last year as a coach, and the championship this year is a fitting way to end his glorious career in football.

He first came to national recognition when he coached at Santa Clara. His 1936 and 1937 teams won upset victories in the Sugar Bowl. By 1942, when the Broncos dropped football, he had won 47, tied 4 and lost only 10 games.

After Santa Clara, Shaw accepted the job with the 49ers, but the war delayed the formation of the club. But in 1946 the team was born into the All-America Conference.

In 1954, Shaw, much to the disappointment of the fans, got the axe from the club after an up and down season. And so the era ended.

Shaw went on to the Air Force Academy for a brief stint, where he taught the Falcons how to fly, and then to the Eagles and this year to the championship.

His plans are up in the air now, but it is hoped he will not leave football. There is some speculation that he will remain in the game in some administrative job. One can only hope this is true, because if he doesn't, it will be one of football's greatest losses.

The championship this year was indeed a sweet revenge for Shaw, because he lifted the lowly Eagles from the doormat of the Eastern Division to the top of the loop.

This was a throw-back to the 49er heads who fired him because ". . . he couldn't win the big ones."

Mural Loop Race In Photo Finish

Photo finish is the word which most aptly describes the situation existing in the club division of the Intramural Basketball League.

At press time The Guardsman and the Recreation Association were deadlocked in a two-way tie for first place. Each squad has lost only one game.

The Recreation Association has always fielded a fairly strong team so its fine seasonal performance came as no great surprise, but The Guardsman squad came from out of the cellar.

Recent action in the division is as follows: Hui Alli edged the Newman Club 60-57; The Guardsman slaughtered the Hotel and Restaurant Society 64-15, and the Recreation Association beat Hui Aloha Kawes 74-49.

Ram Quintet Posts 2-6 Record In Rugged Pre-Season Campaign

By Ivan Temes

Tuning up for their Big Eight opener at San Mateo next Friday, Sid Phelan's defending league titlist basketballers currently are entered in the Modesto Tournament where they went up against defending state champion San Jose City College yesterday in the teams' second meeting of the year.

The Modesto tourney, which lasts three days, brings together seven Big Eight teams along with, nine independents from California junior college ranks.

Among the teams which should be top seeded to fight it out for the championship bracket are highly touted Allan Hancock, Los Angeles City College, San Jose, and dark horse Cerritos Junior College.

In the event the Rams win their first round encounter with San Jose, they will face the winner of the College of Sequoias-Santa Rosa game for their second round pairing.

Unable to develop an efficient starting club which can jell as a unit, the team has managed but two victories in their eight practice outings. All but two of the games were extremely close and if they could have held down their mistakes, the locals could have chalked up six wins.

Only Nate Jackson, on offense, and Charley Williams have been efficient constantly, but front-liners Glenn Wold, Jesse Arteberry, Orlando Camp and John Lewis have all had some good days.

Action over the Christmas vacation was as follows:

San Jose 58, Rams 55

Defending state champion San Jose City College had to overtake a 55-54 Ram lead in the final minute to gain a 58-55 victory. Behind tall, talented Hal Gilson's 17 first half points, San Jose had jumped to a 32-14 lead, but the Red and White team then reeled off 11 consecutive points to make it a ball game.

Arteberry, Jackson and Roberts all hit double figures for the visitors.

Stanford Braves 58, Rams 38

Eleven Rams hit the scoring column against the Stanford junior varsity, but unfortunately for the local club, guard Jackson's six-point output was the individual high as Phelan experimented and substituted freely in a losing 58-38 cause.

Only seven points separated the two teams at the intermission, but tall Stanford forwards Wels Christen and Chuck Wilson along with even loftier 6-9 center Bob Whelan contributed 43 points among them to seal the verdict.

Santa Clara Frosh 45, Rams 42

Getting caught in commuter traffic was instrumental in denying the Red and White a triumph over the Santa Clara frosh as the squad arrived late and had to take the court "cold" against the well warmed-up Broncos.

After leading by a scant 20-19 margin at the half, the Santa Clarans managed to pull ahead 38-32 but finally had to capitalize on guard Russ Vrankavich's clutch three points which broke a 42-42 deadlock in the final minute. Scoring honors, however, went to Ram forward Williams, who totaled 17 points, almost entirely on outside jump shots.

Rams 58, USF Frosh 46

A win was needed to bolster the confidence of the local quintet, and they found the University of San Francisco frosh to be cooperative hosts, the Dons taking the short end of a 58-46 decision.

It took an extraordinary fourth-quarter clutch performance by guard Grayson to put the Rams in the victory column. With the scoreboard reading 38 to 36 the 5-8 whiz hit his team's next eight markers.

Taking five fielders, he hit them all and finished with 14 points, all but two of them in the closing eight exciting minutes of action.

Not to be overlooked was the stalwart 20-point performance of Jackson and his teammates' top-notch board work. Actually the victors had opened an early 18-8 lead but the Jim Brovelli-sparked Dons had recovered to take a 33-28 second half advantage before faltering.

Presidio 80, Rams 49

Phelan's hoopsters went up over their heads when they visited the Presidio which parlayed the 20 points of ex-Oregon State standout Charlie Franklin and the 14 points of Walt Torrance from UCLA into a one-sided 80-49 win. The winners were able to coast after building an insurmountable 43-26 halftime lead. Five Presidio men hit double figures in scoring.

Cal Blues 52, Rams 46

Ball-handling and rebounding mistakes plagued the Red and White as they once again appeared to be the superior "five" but managed to bow to the Dick Doughty-coached California Blues, 52-46.

Behind Jackson's 13 digits, the Rams managed to gain a precarious 22-20 halftime edge, but this was short-lived as Cal came out and pushed through five of their initial six field goal attempts in the second half to move ahead for good; 40-34 was as close as the locals could come to closing the gap.

Jackson finished with 18 points, overshadowing Cal's Dave Williams and Ed Donahue who totaled 14 and 13, respectively.

Long Beach 46, Rams 43

Once again the home club engaged in a hotly contested tilt and, true to form, once again the home club—Rams—found they had put the ball through the hoop less times than the other team when the final horn sounded as traveling Long Beach gained a 46-43 decision.

Phillips paced the locals with ten points but the team just couldn't manage to completely close the 30-24 halftime deficit. Al Canady's 19 markers kept Long Beach barely out of reach.

Actually, the visitors out-field goaled their opponents 19-13, but the Rams managed to hit 17 foul shots to the visitors' 8.

Rams 55, Marin 47

When heighless College of Marin took the court it appeared that the local quint had finally found their second victims and they rode overweight Lewis' 11 tallies to a 29-22 intermission lead.

Their opponents' mistakes and the shooting of Marin's Ron Blum and Lynn Lluie gave the victors a 47-46 edge with 4:30 left to play. Undaunted, the Rams then relied on consecutive field goals by Rockmore and Williams and tremendous rebounding by Wold to win 55-47.

Organizations Plan Farewell Banquets As Semester Ends

By Pat Perkins

END OF THE SEMESTER activities are here once more, and the college's organizations are now busily planning farewell banquets.

The Rally Committee had its dinner at Caesar's restaurant Wednesday night. Qualified first-semester members of the committee received their rally pins while second semester members received guards.

A sign-up sheet has been posted in the women's gymnasium by the Recreation Association for those students interested in running for an RA office for the spring semester.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority will hold its annual mother-daughter tea this Sunday. This affair is given by the pledges and will be held at the home of Dale Devine, pledge captain.

The Guardsman staff will hold its semi-annual banquet at Marconi's restaurant on January 26.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity will hold its pinning dinner this month at the Steak Pit. The following pledges will receive their pins: Joe Kane, pledge captain; Denny Cupolla, Dennie Kavert, Larry Levin, Larry Handleman, Greg Gailfoard, George Armes and Joe Calderero.

This Sunday, January 8, the Newman Club will hold its monthly Communion breakfast at St. Emydius following the 10 o'clock mass. President Skip Schwarz said that the club is planning a trip to Skateland at the Beach after the breakfast.

Contributions for the Club Activities Board Christmas drive were twice as much as last year, largely through the efforts of CAB members and Student Council. These two organizations collected $288.85 as well as $325 worth of food which went to 12 needy families on Christmas Day. Projects such as this show the spirit of the college's students.

Feminine Fling Set For Thursday

Glamour Plus, the motif for this semester's Feminine Fling, will be held next Thursday, January 12, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in Smith Hall, Margaret Lindstrom, Associated Women Student president, announced today.

Sponsored by the AWS, the Recreation Association, and the Inter-Sorority Council, the semi-annual affair will honor the college's outstanding women students.

An informal buffet dinner will be served, Margaret Krieke, food chairman, stated. Under the direction of Mary Comerford, the affair's program will be centered around a glamour-at-college theme.

A cosmetic consultant from Merle Norman Cosmetics will demonstrate makeup techniques. The hairstyling director of Miss Marty's School of Beauty and Hairstyling will demonstrate several aspects of hairstyling. Poise and posture will be discussed by a photographer from the Jack Tar Hotel.

The Margaret Dougherty Trophy, given in honor of the late dean of women, will be presented by the ISC to the sorority with the highest grade point average.

Athletic awards will be presented by the Recreation Association, and the AWS will present a service award. All women students are invited to attend, Miss Lindstrom said, adding that dress is informal.

Administration Drops French 1A From Next Semester's Curriculum

The three unit French 1A will not be offered in the Spring semester, Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction, announced last week.

The main reason, Luckmann said, is that compiled statistics show no appreciable advantage was gained in offering the three unit French 1A as part of the two-semester 1A-1B program where the equivalent one-semester course of French 1 has sufficed.

The high rate of drop-outs, as reflected in the statistics, Luckmann said, showed no particular advantage in lengthening the courses to a year. Added to this, he continued, a shortage of instructors culminated in the decision to discontinue the courses.

Presumably, Luckmann added, Spanish 1A will eventually be dropped although present plans call for its continued offering in the Spring semester. Students find Spanish somewhat easier in the beginning, he said, because its difficulty appears at a later stage. Consequently, he concluded, the drop-out rate is not as high in Spanish 1A.

Luckmann urged all students who have scheduled the three unit French 1A in their programs for next semester to see their counselors before February 3 to arrange for necessary changes.

Thespians Schedule Initial Showing Of Roman Comedy, Amphitryon 38, January 13

By Lester On

Rehearsals for Jean Giraudoux's Amphitryon 38 currently are in progress, Michael Griffin, drama director, said last week.

The play will begin its four-week run, on Fridays and Saturdays only, on Friday, January 13, at 8 p.m.

Associated Student cardholders will be admitted free while regular admission price for non-cardholders is $1 each.

A comedy based on an old Roman legend, the play takes place in Thebes, Greece, and is concerned with the gods of Greek and Roman mythology and their visitations on earth.

The play centers on the efforts of the amorous and versatile Jupiter in his advances toward Alkmena, wife of Amphitryon, a general of Thebes who is away at the wars.

To overcome Alkmena's resistance, Jupiter assumes her husband's form only to have Amphitryon return and complicate matters.

The number 38 in the title refers to the 38th variation of this theme, the first of which was written by Plautus.

This third and final production, Griffin said, will feature a cast of 13 in 11 roles. A prologue and three acts will comprise the entire presentation, he said.

As in the preceding production of The Bad Seed, a change of roles will be necessary to utilize all the available talents of the players, Griffin added.

Heading the cast will be Steve Doiron in the title role of Amphitryon while Leah Pasholan and Diane Flores will alternately perform the role of his wife, Alkmena.

The gods, Jupiter and Mercury, will be respectively played by Fred Fisher and Wayne Elbe.

Nora Collins will portray Nevetza while Pam Klein holds down the role of Kleantha.

The part of Leda will be shared by Martha Ross and Annamarie Papagni.

Other roles find Jordy Cooney as Sosie, Amphitryon's servant, Randy Jones as the trumpeter, Bob Rosenblatt as the warrior and Margarttee Ramie as the echo.

The presentation of this comedy will pose problems for Sue Gettins, who is in charge of obtaining the necessary props, and Dave Terry, who is designing the affair, Griffin said.

Construction of the set is being directed by Dave Demartini, assisted by Ann Vallerga.

Next week, on a date as yet undetermined, Miss Flores, Miss Ross, Fisher and Elbe will be interviewed on Evangeline Baker's radio program on KNBC from 12:30 to 1 p.m. The interview is being arranged by Cooney, who is in charge of promotion this semester.

Instructor Jesse Veal Victim Of Heart Attack

A sudden heart attack claimed the life of Jesse H. Veal, mathematics instructor here, as he worked at his desk in S-341 last Friday morning during College Hour. He was 55.

Veal, a retired Army colonel and holder of the Legion of Merit, had been a member of the mathematics department of the college since 1950.

A graduate of West Point (class of '31), and holder of an MS degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he had ended his military career in 1947.

Born in Kansas in 1905, he entered West Point as a cadet in the Fall of 1926. Most of his army service was with the Quartermaster Corps.

Cal Scholarship Test Deadline Forms Due Today

Students planning to apply for the University of California and the State of California scholarships must have their applications for the Scholastic Aptitude Test in today, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

Approximately 1500 State of California scholarships will be available to students in amounts from $300 to $900 and will be applicable toward tuition and fee, but not room and board, books or living expenses at colleges in California.

A new feature of this program is the junior college reserve scholarship. Students planning to attend a two-year college first may have scholarships held in reserve for them until they plan to attend a four-year college.

Certain requirements must be met in order to be eligible for a State scholarship. The applicant must be a resident of California and must not have reached his 24th birthday. He must demonstrate high moral character, good citizenship, and a need for monetary assistance.

The financial status of his parents is the primary consideration in determining eligibility.

Each applicant must file his application with the State Scholarship Commission before midnight January 16, 1961, provisions state.

Also, each year more than 175 scholarships ranging in value from $200 to $400 are offered by the University of California to students entering the college in advanced standing.

The University of California Scholarships for 1961-1962 must be filed by March 1, 1961, together with a transcript of record, two letters of recommendation, and the college report on the applicant filled out by the dean of men or women.

Entering scholarship applicants must also file a parents confidential statement of need with the university's scholarship service by February 15.

All scholarship awards are made on a competitive basis, consideration being given to scholastic achievement, financial need, character and promise.

AMS President

BOB KELLEY, Associated Men Student president, has planned a program of athletics for January 10's AMS Smoker, but women are also invited.

AMS Smoker To Feature Mural League Awards

One of many entertaining highlights of the Associated Men Student Smoker next Tuesday night, January 10, will be the presentation of the Intramural Basketball League champions, selected as a result of a game played that evening, Bob Kelley, AMS president, announced last week.

The final playoff game will involve two of the three divisions of the intramural league with speculation, according to Kelley, favoring such teams as Alpha Phi Epsilon, the Recreation Association and The Guardsman.

The members of the division championship team will be presented with medals along with a team trophy.

Nine boxing matches, with weight classes from 117 pounds to 180 pounds have also been scheduled.

The fighters vieing for the gold medals will have been selected from a group of 110 hopefuls. Roy Diederichsen, physical education instructor, will conduct the elimination-tournament.

Silver medals will be granted the unfortunate nine, Kelley said, with special awards being presented to the outstanding fighter and also the most improved one.

An effort to procure the talents of the Thailand boxers (a group who fight with their feet as well as their fists) is being made by the AMS officers. A wrestling match will be the alternative if the Thailand group cannot participate.

The AMS Smoker will be held in the men's gymnasium beginning at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free to AS cardholders with others being charged 50 cents for admission.

SF State Business Math Transfer Exams Jan. 10

A business mathematics entrance examination will be offered Tuesday, January 10, for students who plan to transfer to the business department of San Francisco State College, according to Llewelyn Snyder of this college's business department.

The test will be given in C-105 from 3:15 to 4:15 p.m. Students who wish to transfer to that college must either pass this test or pass an equivalent course.

402 File Applications For Graduation

Approximately 402 students are scheduled to graduate from the college and receive credit for Associate in Arts degrees at the end of the Fall semester in January.

All prospective graduations are still tentative, depending on the grades students make in their present courses. Graduates will receive degrees at the end of the Spring semester.

Sophs Slate Grand Ball For Friday At Jack Tar Hotel

By Herman Kligerman

Voting for a Sophomore king and queen to reign over this Friday evening's Soph Ball began last Monday and will continue through this Friday, Sophomore Class President John Azzaro announced today.

The Grand Ball, theme of this semester's semi-annual dance, will be held in the Grand Ballroom of the new Jack Tar Hotel.

As in the past, the "penny-a-vote" method of selecting the royal couple is being used. Candidate's votes will be determined by the number of pennies in his container.

Containers bearing each candidate's picture have been placed in the cafeteria and near the silver pole in Science Hall. Proceeds, Azzaro stated, will go directly into the Sophomore Scholarship Fund.

All of the king and queen hopefuls have the backing of an on-campus fraternity, sorority or club.

Official public announcement of the winning couple will be made during special ceremonies at the ball's intermission. Because of recent complications, the policy of awarding trophies had to be discontinued. To counteract this, Azzaro said that "surprise awards" are due.

Plans for the semi-annual Frosh-Soph basketball game are at press time still indefinite.

This class will have the distinction of being the first high school or college group to sponsor a dance in the hotel.

Besides coming at the end of a hectic week of Sophomore activities around the campus, the ball will bring the curtain down on this semester's college-sponsored social affairs.

Providing the music between 9 p.m. and 12 midnight will be Ray Hackett and his orchestra.

Semi-formal attire, dark suits for the men and cocktail dresses for the women, is appropriate for this event, and corsages are recommended, Azzaro said.

A fashion photographer will be available throughout the evening for photographs. Each five-by-seven black-and-white print will cost $1.50; color shots will cost slightly more.

Admission to the ball is free to holders of an AS card and a current registration card. A charge of $2.50 will be made upon students possessing only a registration card.

Concerning parking, Azzaro stated that ample facilities can be found in the hotel's main garage at the corner of Van Ness Avenue and Geary Street.

The ball has been held since the Fall of 1936.

The first "sweetheart" was coronated in 1940 but it was not until the Spring of 1945 that the men entered the picture.

This semester's faculty sponsors of the class are Thomas and Nancy Hamilton.

Amphitryon 38 Debuts Friday In Final Theater Production

Amphitryon 38, with a new male lead, will make its debut here this Friday, January 13, at 8 p.m., Michael Griffin, drama director, announced last week.

Bob Jensen will play the role of Amphitryon, Griffin said, since Steve Doiron, originally slated for the role, was unable to attend rehearsals because of personal reasons.

The comedy by Jean Giraudoux is based on an old Roman legend which takes place in Thebes, Greece, where Amphitryon is a general who is away at the wars.

In his absence, the flirtatious Jupiter, father of the gods, sets his sights on his wife, Alkmena, and decides to add her to his many other conquests.

Alkmena being incorruptible to a degree, however, Jupiter finds he must assume her husband's form before his efforts are successful. Amphitryon, after his return, is convinced that all is not well and disrupts matters when he sets out to denounce her.

The original version of this Greek comedy which has been accepted as the standard was written by Plautus. Giraudoux's version is the 38th variation of this theme.

This is the last and final Little Theater production for this semester, Griffin said. Performances have been set for Friday and Saturday nights beginning with this weekend through February 3 and 4.

Again, as in The Bad Seed, a sharing of roles will be necessary to accommodate all the available players.

Leah Pasholan and Diane Flores will alternate performances of Alkmena. Likewise, Martha Ross and Annamarie Papagni will share the role of Leda.

In other roles, Fred Fisher plays Jupiter, Wayne Elbe is Mercury, Nora Collins portrays Nenetza and Pam Klein is Kleantha.

Remaining roles in the cast of 13 find Jordy Cooney as Sosie, Randy Jones as the trumpeter, Bob Rosenblatt as the warrior while Margarttee Ramie will be the echo.

Admission is free to Associated Student cardholders while a dollar for each admission will be charged otherwise.

DIANE FLORES who alternates her lead role in Amphitryon 38.

Ring Finals Force Rescheduling Of Smoker To Jan. 12

With Coach Roy Diederichsen needing more time to prepare his boxers for the Associated Men Student Smoker, Bob Kelley, AMS president, changed the event from last night to tomorrow evening.

The physical education instructor stated that he has had a surprisingly large turnout of fighters, and needs the extra two days to finish the elimination bouts.

He will present nine championship bouts at the smoker, starting at 7:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

Also scheduled is the championship game of the Intramural Basketball League between The Guardsman and the Untouchables.

Student Council Dinner Tonight At Smith Hall

Student executives of College of San Mateo and Foothill College will be special guests at the Student Council dinner tonight in Smith Hall, according to Georgene Peterson, Associated Student vice president here.

In a reciprocal gesture, invitations to attend this semi-annual awards event have been sent to Nadine Strauss, AS president at San Mateo, and to Bill Minney, AS president at Foothill, and also to their respective vice presidents.

The menu, especially prepared by Chef Pierre Coste, features a seafood salad, an entree of stuffed squab with mushroom sauce, and Coupe St. Jacques for dessert, besides rolls, vegetables, cakes and coffee.

The dinner will be prepared by Chef Coste's Hotel and Restaurant staff and will be served at 6 p.m.

Food for thought will be provided by Donald Snepp of the college's English department, who, as principal speaker, will address the group of present council members, council members-elect and guests on the topic, Extra-curricular Activities — Profit Or Loss?

Also on the program to entertain the dinner guests will be Claire Halloran Latham, well-known San Francisco soprano, William Richardson, counselor here, said.

Awards will be presented to the faculty member and student, selected by council as outstanding because of the amount of voluntary service offered for the benefit of the students.

The AS executives, cabinet and council members will receive their gavels, keys and pins, after which the new president and vice president will be installed by the outgoing officers.

Symphony Forum Presents European Celloist, C-Hour

Rama Jucker, accomplished European cello soloist, will appear here this Friday during a College Hour concert, sponsored by the Symphony Forum, in the reserve reading room of the library.

The concert will mark the beginning of what is hoped will be a regular semester event to be promoted by the college Symphony Forum. According to Bob Pacini, Forum representative, recitals by distinguished musicians are being planned for the future.

Jucker's appearance was made possible through a grant of $100 by Student Council to pay for the incidental expenses of the concert, Pacini said.

Gratitude was also extended by Pacini to Meyer Cahn, music instructor here, who first proposed the concert series.

Jucker, a native of Herisau, Switzerland, is presently on a concert tour of this country. He has studied music with his father at the Winterthur Conservatory and also with Andre Navarre in Paris and Siena.

In 1959 Jucker was awarded top honors at the Second Casals competition. Since then he has performed in Switzerland, France, Cuba, Mexico and the United States.

The program to be presented here Friday will include such classical masterpieces as Sonata by Debussy, Second Sonata by Faure and Habanera by Ravel.

Feminine Fling To Honor Women Students Thursday

Awards, honoring this semester's outstanding women students, will highlight the semi-annual Feminine Fling to be held tomorrow in Smith Hall from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The Associated Women Students, the Inter-Sorority Council, and the Recreation Association will sponsor the affair, AWS President Margaret Lindstrom stated.

The Margaret Dougherty Trophy, given in honor of the late dean of women, will be presented by the ISC to the sorority with the highest grade point average. An athletic award is presented by the RA, and the AWS presents a service award to one of the college's outstanding woman students.

Under the direction of Mary Comerford, the affair's Glamour Plus program will center around glamour at college.

Marty Schubermann from Miss Marty's School of Beauty and Hairstyling will demonstrate several aspects of hairstyling. Charlet Brown from the Jack Tar Hotel photography studio will discuss poise and posture. Makeup techniques will be demonstrated by the cosmetic director of Merle Norman cosmetics.

Judy Schwartz, representing the Newman Club, is in charge of serving, and decorations under the chairmanship of Jetty Au will be provided by the Chinese Club. Joanne Costello is in charge of set-up, and clean-up is under the supervision of Janet White.

All women students are invited to attend. Dress for the affair is casual.

Verdu Announces Elections Results

Campus politics took a back seat in student government affairs yesterday as the last poll closed in the Associated Student election, marking the end of the semi-annual battle for positions in the AS governing body.

Election Commissioner Don Verdu said the official results of the balloting would be announced this morning.

Three weeks of preparation, a sudden and intense concentration of political posters, and two days of voting rapidly transferred student attention from the holiday season to the approaching election.

Verdu, using methods of inspiring students to vote not used since 1955, remained confident throughout the campaign period that there would be a large turnout in the election.

High Dropout Rate Cancels French 1A From Curriculum

The high drop-out rate in French 1A was the reason for its being discontinued, effective next semester, Edward E. Sandys, dean of instruction, said last week.

As announced by the division of instruction the week before, French 1A will not be offered in the spring semester.

The decision to drop the course was reached after statistics showed not more than 10 per cent of those who finished the course continued into French 1B, Sandys said.

In contrast, more than 60 per cent of those who finish French 1 continue into French 2, he added.

Both French 1A and 1B are one-semester courses and together they are equivalent to French 1, a more concentrated course which has four units of credit and meets daily.

Originally, both the 1A and 1B courses were offered by the University of California until they were dropped in favor of French 1, a more intensive course covering the same amount of material in half the time.

Although discontinued by the university several years ago, the two courses were retained here at the college for the benefit of students who desired a less comprehensive course.

Findings to date, however, indicate their retention is no longer justified.

Presumably, the same fate awaits Spanish 1A although no decision has, as yet, been made. It will continue to be offered next semester.

The status of German 1A will likewise remain the same, Sandys said, since the situation here is somewhat different.

Enrollment in German 1A is smaller, he said, but that is only because the students taking it are mostly science, engineering and pharmacy majors who must concern themselves with other subjects which have laboratory classes.

Humanity Benefits As 'Hope' Sails In Troubled Waters

HOPE IS THE NAME of a great white hospital ship now sailing the waters of southeast Asia. Its cargo—a staff of volunteer doctors and nurses; its mission—aid backward countries in ridding themselves of disease and help other people help themselves.

This in brief is what Project Hope, sponsored by the People To People Health Foundation in Washington, is all about. This first ship, now already engaged in humanitarian work in the countries of southeast Asia, is but the first member of a possible fleet of such ships, the so-called "Great White Fleet," proposed in Life magazine last year.

Such a project is extremely admirable because it is on a person-to-person level and not just another government program. Thus far, Project Hope has been financed by contributions from American industry and other private donations. This is just the beginning, however, and of course as the project grows, as it surely will, more and more funds will be needed to keep alive this noble program.

Life magazine has sent out appeals for financial aid for the project and we can think of no sounder investment Americans could make than in Project Hope. The returns of such an investment, of course, will not be in material things and will not enhance one's pocketbook; instead they will manifest themselves far more importantly and far more invaluably in international friendship and good will.

Already Project Hope has shown just how sound and rewarding an investment it can be, for on its first stop in Indonesia, the 63 doctors and nurses aboard immediately began their work of caring for the sick and the disabled and training Indonesian medical people, to carry on after the ship and its crew sails on to other ports.

All this was done among warm words of praise, friendship and admiration from the Indonesian people and foreign diplomats stationed in the country. Even the Soviet ambassador remarked as he toured the ship and inspected its facilities, "We could all do this if everybody would disarm."

The ambassador's words seem to sum up one of the real tragedies of man, for which his infinite and unlimited capacity to do good for himself, to battle disease, poverty and illiteracy, he chooses instead to battle himself.

Disarmament, of course, will not become a reality overnight, and even such a worthwhile program as Project Hope cannot achieve it alone. It is, however, one giant step in the right direction and with sufficient funds it can attain lofty heights as a humanitarian organization. By not being merely a charity, but by helping people to help themselves along the road to betterment, it is entirely possible that one day nations will look back on the lone ship and its crew now sailing the waters of the Orient as one of the major contributors to world-wide friendship, good will and peace.

At least, let's HOPE so.

Foresight

Water Hoax Makes Dollars, No Sense

By Paul Plansky

THREE-FOURTHS of the earth's surface is covered with it. Every minute of every man's life is affected by it. Food consumption, beautification, sanitation, recreation, transportation, irrigation and hydro-electric power are directly dependent upon it.

Life itself cannot escape the mass of its overwhelming, all encompassing, interminable force; life cannot exist without it. It is nature's blood. Water, although man's ally, has also become his tormentor as storms, floods, and glaciers of ice—always water has been man's great problem child of nature.

Most laymen only know water as it comes from the tap of their kitchen sink. But do they realize that the intricate network of dams, reservoirs, aqueducts, canals, and sewers has its beginnings in the high Sierra, in the majestic Rockies, and the rolling Appalachians.

Yes, there's much more than the facet of the faucet. To construct these concrete walls and miles of pipelines takes a lot of taxpayers' money. Yet without these devices, the faucet industry goes down the drain, and the layman doesn't get his tap water—or his Sunday car wash—or his Saturday night bath.

Perhaps this subject doesn't "whet" he appetite and saturate the soul of all readers, but it certainly isn't a dry subject. This leads into the mainstream of today's discourse, to which the previous tributaries should be connected.

Citizens of Northern California are in debt up to their necks, financially drowning in the state "Htwoo Hoax," otherwise known as "Pat's Panacea." Drip by drip, drop by drop, Pat Brown, in the next decade, will have sent Northern California's water and money southward.

Bill Number 1106 of the General Session of the 1959 State Legislature came before the people of California on the November 8 general election last year as Proposition No. 1.

Unbelievably, it passed. Unbelievable because it called for one billion, seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars "to develop the water resources of California.

And so, the monster, the California Water Resources Bond Act, became a reality.

Perhaps the more populous southland just outvoted the less populous rural north. But more likely, a quite ignorant or apathetic vote from the upper half of the state is what turned the tide for the floodgates to unleash the water monster.

Somewhat reminiscent of the defeat of Water Fluoridation in Marin County, it seems.

If a sum of several hundred million dollars was asked it might have been tolerable, but a total close to two billion sounds like a federal project, not a state one.

Although the South Central and Colorado Desert Hydrographic areas in the south are as much as 80 and 90 per cent deficient in water supply, a longer range plan with smaller financial chunks would do the same job. Moderation—must we do everything all at once?

It all boils down to this: The Htwoo Hoax doesn't hold water!

Conquest Of SF-29 Challenge To Students And Imaginations

'Copters, Ski Lift Are Still Hikers' Dreams

By Sophie Hines

Why was City College built on one of the windiest hills in San Francisco?

This has been the daily cry of generations of students as they climb the steep, windy hill to attend classes.

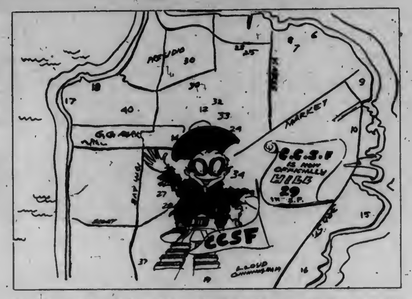
Why did they build it on a hill?

When the Board of Education decided on a site for the college in 1936, perhaps this was the only land that seemed suitable at the time. Or, maybe it was architect Timothy Pflueger, designer of the first building, Science Hall, who thought that a brisk walk each morning would help to awaken the students.

Whatever the reason, "why they built it on a hill" has been the topic of many campus conversations.

In 1949, San Francisco was officially mapped as the city of 40 hills by the then San Francisco News. The college came out as Number 29.

With the hill known as Hill 29, it was refreshing for students to know that the hill they climbed each day had some official status, although a lot more than 29 steps.



Since 1940, when dedication ceremonies were held at the college and the men who chose this site were forced to climb the steep hill from the gymnasiums to Science Hall, generations of students have devised many ways of ending their toil.

A plan for running a ski lift from the men's gymnasium to Science Hall was published, with graphic illustration, in The Guardsman in 1943.

Later plans favored cable cars which would run up and down the hills to the gymnasiums, while still another plan centered around the construction of a tunnel underneath Science Hall. The latter idea seemed especially good because the tunnel would make an ideal bomb shelter in case of war.

Now, in this modern age, a plan to fly students up and down the hills in helicopters may be something to look forward to.

Ideas and years come and go, and weary students wonder as they climb the windy hill, "Why did they build it on a hill?" Maybe someday someone will answer them. At any rate, it's Hill 29, right there on the map.

WHEN IN 1949 THE SAN FRANCISCO NEWS published its map officially numbering each of San Francisco's 40 hills, Lloyd Cunningham, then Guardsman staff artist, drew this cartoon illustrative of the fact that the campus is Hill 29.

Visitors To Vitamins View Big C

Important Nutrient Is Star Of Latest Display

By Richard Shields

The semester is drawing to a close without a solution to the "daily crush" in the cafeteria, but Brigetta Beetz, the life science instructor who voluntarily dedicated herself to improving the nutritional welfare of students at the college, is making another determined effort to defeat bad eating habits.

Mrs. Beetz has prepared a fourth and final food display, set up today on the third floor of Science Hall, emphasizing the importance of Vitamin C in the diet.

Following the same pattern as the other displays, this one is designed to show the relative value of different foods, primarily fruit, as sources of Vitamin C.

Oranges head the list of available sources and dominate the display, followed closely by lemons, grapefruit and various other fruits.

Plants of the cabbage family are also excellent sources of Vitamin C; Mrs. Beetz emphasized that the required amount must be consumed every day in order to maintain good health.

Mrs. Beetz said the great interest in her past efforts, displayed by students and instructors alike, is all the reward or incentive she needs to continue her work.

Apparently, she added, the interest was primarily academic since Student Government Advisor Sherm Elworthy didn't lose any business in the cafeteria on either day of the previous displays.

Also, "nibbling" was kept to a minimum either by the attraction of the cafeteria for hungry students, precautionary measures which were taken to preserve the effect of the display, or a high degree of professional interest (and ethics) on the part of viewers.

One of the most prominent effects of a Vitamin C deficiency, especially on college campuses, is "bleeding gums," most noticeable when the teeth are brushed.

Attacks of scurvy on British sailing ships led to the discovery that drinking lemon juice regularly while isolated on the high seas would help sailors escape the ravages of the disease.

In more recent years Vitamin C was discovered to be the actual preventive agent involved, but to this day British sailors are called "limeys" because of their ancestors' use of lemons, then called limes.

Other effects of a Vitamin C deficiency are slow healing of wounds and weakening and subsequent leaking from blood vessels, which is most evident in the case with which a person is bruised.

Cracked Crystal Ball Reveals Wide Range Of 1961 Predictions

A slightly cracked crystal ball today revealed the following for 1961:

- In March, sports experts will predict that the San Francisco Giants will win the pennant sans competition . . . In September the same experts will write explaining why the Giants failed to finish in the first division . . .
- Having watched his shoe-pounding exhibit at the U.N., Gallenkamp's will hire Khrushchev to demonstrate the durability of their product . . .
- A prophet will again predict the end of the world at least three times this year . . .
- Los Angeles will build another "super-modern skyway." Translation: the people will have an extra freeway to get trapped on during the rush hours . . .
- Don Sherwood will again solemnly promise never to mention Navajos on his show . . .
- Khrushchev will open a chain of reducing salons entitled Comrade Slender-Fellas . . .
- Although the Republicans will not try to have Kennedy impeached they will claim he is impaired . . . Happy New Year!!

Shots At RAMdom

QUOTE OF THE WEEK (by the strong): "Those coffee and soft drink machines are just like trained dogs. No matter how well they perform as a rule they still can use a good beating once in a while."

WHOEVER IT WAS in the Student Representative Party who dreamed up the idea of passing out fortune cookies with campaign slogans inside deserves a lot of credit for intuition.

He also deserves a medal for tempting the fates. The cookies were delivered here by a car plastered with Nixon stickers.

BESIDES THE ELECTION, the biggest news here last week was the appearance of Mayor George Christopher.

The event, like anything else, brought out the best in the student body.

One young lady who decided to write up the event for an assignment in her communications class started her paper with, "The Mare of San Francisco . . ."

This caused her instructor to comment, "Either you are a miserable speller or you have some inside information about the dairy industry."

AFTER THE ALCALDE finished his talk, two students were overheard discussing distinguished personages. One claimed to be an authority on how to address that type of person.

"If you write to the mayor," he said, "you call him the Hon. George Christopher."

"Oh," said the other fellow, "How do you address his wife, as the Honey Mrs. Christopher?"

TROUBLE IS BREWING all over our planet and many men students are taking a closer look at their draft status. They are also paying more attention to their geography books.

The best answer heard on campus so far as to what to call the people of Laos was, "Lice."

ONE NEVER CAN TELL when people will quit running true to form. A poli. sci. major announced to his classmates that he was going out for sports next semester.

They had trouble figuring out this turn of events until the fellow was overheard calling the gymnasium to inquire when sign-ups would be held for touch football.

Rams Upset San Jose, Fresno, Sequoias To Gain Title Shot

By Harvey Hall

MODESTO, Jan. 7.—A vastly improved Ram basketball five, after playing at their seasonal highs to reach the championship game, were unable to contain a strong Los Angeles City College team, 82-67, here tonight and had to settle for the championship runners-up trophy in the 23rd Annual Junior College Basketball Tournament.

The Rams, tired from their earlier day's win over Fresno City College, were outplayed completely by the strong southlanders. Coach Sid Phelan's Rams jumped off to an early 7-3 lead and held a 21-17 advantage at the end of the first quarter.

Then, in the early stages of the second quarter, the locals seemed to fall apart with erratic passing and ball-handling and fell behind at the intermission, 43-30.

Third quarter action saw the Rams contain the Cubs' scoring from the earlier stanza, 26 to 17. In this quarter the Cubs' lanky center, Claiburne Jones, led to the Rams' woes scoring 11 points, and dominating the boards along with his teammate, Stanford Patton.

Phelan's team got their shooting eyes early in the fourth quarter to narrow the Cubs' margin down to seven points, only to have the Cubs hit another hot streak and top the ill-fated Rams 82-67.

In their Saturday morning semi-final championship game against Fresno, the Rams met last year's tourney championship runners - up. This encounter featured very close scoring in the first half with the score tied 28-28 at halftime. With both coaches launching new defensive patterns to meet each other's team's first half capabilities the third quarter action saw neither team relinquish a lead of not more more than three points.

It was not until the final six seconds of the contest that the Rams were ensured of victory when John Lewis tipped in a missed field goal try by Vine Rocchi to give the locals their semi-final win of 53-51.

The Rams, who have always in the past managed to handle valley teams, met another in their second round game in the College of the Sequoias Giants from Visalia. Victorious once again, the upcoming Rams downed the Sequoias' team, 56-49.

Facing their seasonal opening opponents, the San Jose City Jaguars, the Rams came up with another sterling performance to get revenge on the the Jags, 51-57. After a slow first three quarters, the Rams rallied strong in the final two minutes to squeeze out the win over San Jose.

Rookie Trackmen To Play Vital Role in '61 Club

The 1961 Ram track and field squad, led by Coach Lou Vasquez, will have to put much of its trust in a promising crop of newcomers as only seven veterans are slated to return for competition this season.

The seven returning veterans who will form the "nucleus" of the new aggregation include Herb Briscoe, George Holland, Bill Hotchkiss, Frank James, Tom Jennings, Jim Nichols and Bob Taylor.

It is hoped that some of the rookies will be capable of filling the holes in the squad left by departed harriers. Sign-ups were held for the new squad last Friday during College Hour.

Coach Vasquez feels that it is too early in the season, however, to give an accurate prospectus of the club's chances in the Big Eight this year.

One shattered record after another was the story at the Big Eight Conference championship track meet last season, where the local cindermen grabbed the loop title.

At that affair the Red and White trackmen smashed three Big Eight Conference records. The first to be broken was the mile, where star Ram distance runner Ray Batz turned in a 4:20.3 mark to lop the old 4:22.9 record made by Rogers of Oakland.

Next, Jess Sirles, living up to his past record, cracked the former broad jump mark set by Stockton when he leaped to a distance of 23'7".

Third to be broken was the former high jump record of 6'4". Ralph Mathis, ace Ram trackster, put forth a tremendous effort to gain a 6'7¼" mark.

In addition to their Big Eight victory the Rams also won the Northern California Junior College Relays held at Modesto. At that fray the Red and White cindermen racked up 46½ points to down the other 26 squads participating in the meet.

This was the last Ram championship of a season which included winning the Big Eight dual competition championship, the Big Eight over-all championship, and the recently mentioned Northern California Junior College Relays.

Klemmer Recruiting Front Line Golfers For Coming Season

Coach Grover Klemmer is still hunting talent and accepting sign-ups for the 1961 golf team. Klemmer is urging that all men who are interested in swinging a club for the Red and White see him at once.

Ram golfers are slated to tee off away from home in the first match of the new season as they hit the fairways against Stockton on Friday, March 10.

Starting with the first practice, which Klemmer will announce soon, the golfers will wield their woods and irons, driving their way toward the All-Conference Tournament May 5 in Richmond and finally, the State Junior College Tournament (N. Cal.) May 16 in Pleasanton.

RAMBLINGS

By Frank Dunne

IT SEEMS to be the fashion this time of year for each columnist to make a few predictions for the coming months and, trying hard to conform to the norm, here are a few taken from various oracles.

* * *

The Giants will win the pennant in June if the league sees fit to end the season at that time. But if the commissioner decides to let the season run its normal course, only gloom is forecast for the Bay Area club.

* * *

Because of the shortened fences, more home runs will be belted in Candlestick Park this year—by all the visiting teams.

* * *

Alvin Dark will be named the manager of the year for the Giants, by the Giants. Ah, sweet sentiment!

* * *

The 49ers will win the championship in 1961 by hard work and sheer determination and if the Green Bay Packers and the Detroit Lions drop out of the league.

* * *

The prospectors will adapt their shotgun offense to defense. It will be designed to literally drop their opponents in their tracks. This, of course, will be used only as a last resort, because ammunition costs money.

* * *

Negotiations will be started between the Oakland Raiders and the U.S. Weather Bureau to rig the wind at Candlestick Park so it will change direction at the half and always be at the Raiders' back; thereby aiding the light backfield, who will have kites tied to their backs.

* * *

The title, the Los Angeles Angels, will be judged the most prophetic. With the players they received they will need help from an outside source to finish the season. Somebody up there likes them, they hope!

* * *

And lastly, the most important prediction of all. The Guardsman Intramural basketball squad will again top the mural loop in the Spring semester, if they can use crumbled paper and waste baskets, instead of regulation basketballs and baskets.

* * *

And never fear. All these predictions will come true as sure as Ramblings will be a nationally syndicated sports column for Curb-Stone Weekly News Service next year.

Darkhorse San Mateo Hosts Rams In Big Eight Inaugural

By Warren Downes

Sid Phelan's cagers open the defense of their Big Eight Conference title Friday against darkhorse San Mateo on the Bulldogs' home court at 8 p.m.

The Ram cagers, coming off a tough practice slate with a non-impressive record of 2-7, will face an all first year quintet which has won five and lost five practice tilts, winning four out of their last five starts, losing only to a tough San Jose State Frosh squad.

New Coach Ralph Barkey, ex-frosh coach at University of California at Santa Barbara, has a slow, deliberate offense centered around ex-Idaho State Frosh star, John Condrin, who has hit for a 12.0 average in his first ten games.

The Rams' scoring punch so far this season has come largely from speedy guard Nate Jackson and ex-Berkeley High star Charlie Williams. The local quintet, always tough when the league action starts, has battled through a scorching practice campaign which may find them in fine shape for their loop schedule.

Phelan's squad is taller this year than last year's club with such front line men as Jesse Arterberry, 6-5; Glenn Wold, 6-5; John Lewis, 6-3; Orlando Camp, 6-7, and Williams, 6-3, supplying the board strength.

The Bulldog squad has proved to be tough on the boards with big, 6-5½, Howard Sundberg averaging better than 12 rebounds a contest, and 6-3 Ben Webster grabbing off nearly seven rebounds a game.

With six guards, all about the same ability, Phelan has changed his backcourt men often, trying to find the right combination. The sextet battling for the two spots include Will Rockmore, Bob Grayson, Vince Rocchi, Dave Roberts, Otis Phillips and Jackson.

Santa Rosa's hustling Bear Cubs will take on the Rams here Saturday in the second Big Eight battle of the season. Tip-off is slated for 8 p.m.

High scoring guard Tom Muench at 6-5 will lead the Modesto Pirate quintet against Phelan's cagers next Tuesday night at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

Guardsman Wins Club Division, Vies For Title

By Doug Cathcart

After one of the most exciting and hard fought intramural basketball seasons in history, the two top semi-finalists, the Untouchables and The Guardsman, will battle it out tomorrow night for the loop crown.

The winner will be presented with the championship trophy at the Associated Men Student smoker scheduled for January 12 in the men's gymnasium.

The smoker was originally slated for last night, but a late change in scheduling moved the affair to its present date.

The Untouchables are participants in the fray by virtue of their copping the independent division championship and also downing the fraternity division champs, Alpha Phi Epsilon.

The Guardsman story is quite different. They literally walked away with their division championship, whereas the Untouchables had to fight all the way up until their play-off with the now second place Indians.

The Guardsman squad was such a favorite in the club division that in their final game of the season with Hui Aloha Alii, score was not even kept owing to their obvious land-slide victory over the Hawaiian cage club.

In second place right behind The Guardsman in the club division is the Recreation Association, who put up a commendable fight for the entire season.

Strangely enough it seemed that as the season progressed the problem of forfeiture decreased steadily until it was almost a dead issue.

Forfeiture at the start of the season had been one stumbling block in the league that had finally forced Jack Gaddy, director of athletics and coordinator of the league, to drop one of the teams from competition.

Tennis Mentor Faces Crisis As Barth Lone Vet

With the loss of most of last year's squad, Coach Roy Diederichsen is faced with a difficult task in forming his 1961 tennis aggregation.

Vince Chinn, Larry Draper, Lynn Matteson and Gary Robinson have all departed, leaving Paul Barth as the only returnee from last year's Big Eight championship team.

Jack Bracken, number two singles player in 1959, has returned this season, but Diederichsen's hopes for the season will rise or fall with his first year men.

Tom Strauss, a top flight netter from Loweil, will bolster the squad, as will tough Bob Silverstein. Two outstanding players currently in high school, but planning to attend the college in the spring semester, Rich Murray and Bob Axtell, could add more strength to the squad.

Practice will not start until the beginning of February, but all interested tennis players are urged to sign up with Diederichsen.

The first match of the season is February 14 against Diablo Valley. A tough practice schedule is slated for the, squad, including matches with Menlo College, San Jose State Frosh, San Francisco State Varsity, Stanford Frosh and the University of California Frosh.

Athletes Have Chance To Train Down

By Tom Kennedy

Two modern-day health problems of major importance will receive special attention from the new weight training room in the men's gymnasium, starting next semester.

Athletes in need of a "training down" period after their sport's season is finished and the student in need of establishing good exercise habits will benefit the most from the new facilities, in the view of Lou Vasquez, physical education instructor here.

Recently one of the City College health instructors, Tom Wilson, expressed the feeling that many competitors finish in worse condition than when they turn out for a sport because they cease exercising after a rigorous training period.

He said that the heart and other muscles are enlarged and new passages are opened up in the body by the exercising.

When the season ends, however, and the person quits his schedule, fat tends to occupy the area and he has problems.

Heart disease can be one of the effects, although he can contract circulatory diseases as well.

The physical education staff at City College has long tried to follow a year-long training schedule similar to that employed during sporting events—that is, a warm-up period, actual competition, and finally a build-down period.

The new weight training room will give them a much better opportunity to carry out their program.

A big worry, according to Vasquez, is the athlete who competes in sports while in school, but drops exercises almost completely after he leaves.

One of the instructor's main jobs is to help the student build good health and exercise habits.

"While a young man's body can take a lot of abuse, these habits become very important later, and go a long way towards determining how healthy he will be in later life," says Vasquez.

"He can stay in shape without spending too much time at all. In facts, even 15 minutes a day would be beneficial to anybody.

"This plan of exercising has created a lot of interest and probably does more good than competitive games because it can be kept up all one's life."

Moderation and consistency are seen as the keys, since this kind of exercise, not the strenuous type, will be of greatest help to the person.

"Work-outs" can be dangerous if they are sporadic only.

Regular gymnasium periods will be offered in the weight training room, of course. Vasquez, one of the instructors, says that he will give his class a general program to follow and will offer special help if asked.

Personally, Vasquez hasn't seen a finer gym setup. The equipment costs $16,000.

The barbells, for instance, have been increased from 4 to 24 in number and there are 22 new dumbbells in the room.

Bay Engineering Delegates Visit College Today

By Jerry Littrell

Representatives from 35 Bay Area engineering firms will visit the college today for the sixth annual Engineering Department Day program, Joseph Amori, placement director, stated.

The program will begin in Smith Hall at 9 a.m. with breakfast in the faculty dining room. Here representatives from the business, industry and government recruiting teams will meet with the faculty.

After breakfast the day's program will be outlined by Amori to the businessmen.

Jack F. Bonner, vice president and chief engineer of Pacific Gas and Electric Company, will discuss The Training And Utilization Of The Engineering Technician In Business And Industry Today. Special emphasis will be placed on graduates from the college hired by P.G.&E. over the past years.

The graduating engineering students from both the February and June class will then be given personal interviews, Amori said.

Each graduate will have a personnel folder in which will be a personnel data sheet and five rating sheets. These will be made available to the recruiting team for use in evaluating each applicant. Individual interviews are expected to last 20 minutes each.

Five Bay Area counties will be represented by the 35 companies this year, and each firm has already indicated its personnel needs and requirements for hiring.

Leading the list of firms in the electronic field are IBM, Ampex, Litton, Fairchild and Lockheed. Next come the research and development firms followed by the Blue Chip firms such as P.G.&E., Standard Oil and P.T.&T. This rating is based on personnel needs.

Participating firms hire about 10 per cent of the graduates on recruitment day. The rest of the graduates will be hired at a later date.

Of the 100 graduates who will participate during the day, 43 of them will be in the electronic field. This will suit everyone's needs, Amori emphasized, because this is the field where the demand is greatest.

As a result of last year's recruitment day, all of the graduates were hired to work in their respective fields.

Graphic Arts Department To Publish Craft Magazine

By Paul Piansky

To synthesize and harmonize Printing Week (January 15-21) with education, the San Francisco Club of Printing House Craftsmen's monthly publication, the Pi-Box, will have its January 16 issue produced by graphic arts majors here.

The cover design for the special printing, depicting a type face next to a quill for Ben Franklin's "week," was drawn by Robert E. Pritchard, a student of the advertising art department here under the instruction of William J. Eckert.

Pritchard holds this distinction by virtue of winning a "cover designing contest" for the Pi-Box's January issue.

Also in collaboration with this student printing, plans are underway for the innovation of a new site of the San Francisco Craftsmen's library at the Cloud Hall library here.

Graphic arts majors at City College are offered journalism as well as instruction in advertising art so that the students may obtain a knowledge of graphic arts for use in a particular related field of study.

Although many graduates of this two-year college have found employment in the technical phases of craftsmanship, still others have entered into related occupations, such as estimating, art, copy writing and allied fields.

Graphic arts courses at the college were organized originally by George Mullany, journalism instructor, who, with Robert Meyer, A. R. Tommasini and Robert Kraus, all members of the Craftsmen, have each in turn served as faculty members.

Advanced students of graphic arts who will engage in the actual production of the January issue will have an opportunity to meet leaders of the industry at the forthcoming Printing Week dinner which the Craftsmen are co-sponsoring.

Called the Annual Graphic Arts Industry dinner, it will be held on Tuesday evening, January 17, at the Village, and will highlight the need for self-study for printing education in San Francisco.

This year Printing Week in this city is dedicated to a better graphic arts industry through education. In conjunction with this theme, authority has been granted by the Board of Governors to transfer all volumes of the San Francisco Craftsmen's library to City College's library.

These books were originally placed in the San Francisco Public Library, and Jim Cummins, Craftsmen education chairman and also instructor here in lithography, is now ironing out the technicalities involved in the transfer.

30 HR Students To Aid In St. Francis Operation Thursday

By Richard Dragavon

Operation St. Francis, a unique program designed to give hotel and restaurant students an opportunity to put into practice the knowledge they have gained here, will take place tomorrow, January 12, according to Lawrence Wong, H&R placement director.

Through the co-operation of Dan London, managing director of the St. Francis Hotel, fourth semester H&R students will work side by side with officials of the hotel in all the key positions that day.

Over 30 students will participate in this tenth annual display of industry and school co-operation. They will assume positions from London's own as managing director to auditor. From steward to the publicity department, they will learn the problems which must be faced by modern hotel men.

This program is the only one of its kind west of the Mississippi, and possibly in the entire United States, Wong said.

Top position, managing director, will be held by Maxwell Bailey, while the assistant general manager post will be handled by Franz Wartenweiler. Assistant manager's responsibilities will go to William Stewart, Thomas Craighead, Frank T. Woodcock and Frank Bratt.

Eric Poteete will fill in for the personnel manager, and the food and beverage manager's duties will be overseen by Bernard Lecoco.

The hotel's kitchen will see Albert Fehn and Ben Woon as sous chef and pastry chef, respectively, and Ralph Howell in charge as executive chef.

Paul Pierre Lorda will handle auditor's job, and also on the clerical staff will be John Harrison as head cashier and Michael Brenesell as credit manager.

The building superintendent and chief engineer's position goes to Edward Crabbe, while Doreen Caldwell will fill in for the housekeeper.

In charge as the purchasing agent will be Walter Mattson, and Howard Degon will perform the duties of the assistant food and beverage manager. In the publicity department will be Richard Smith, while the guidance of the telephone department will be done by Rue Hampton.

The Mural Room, the Grill Room and the Terrace will be supervised by Robert Paul Corti, Timothy Foley and Andrew Lau, respectively.

The task of managing the stewards will be performed by Jon Greenberg, while room service will be taken over by Bill Sultzer. Handling any banquets that may occur will be James Arlin, and Arthur Watson will be at the helm of the mail department.

Other college students will represent the various departments here, and will pick up valuable pointers in their fields of study. Gary Lair from the photography department and Herb Batz and Dave Grieve from the Publicity Committee will observe the hotel's public relations.

Attending from the engineering department will be Gino Eandi and Frederich Dehlinger, and the journalism department will send Bob Pacini and Dick Dragavon.

SRP, USP File Counter-Protests Concerning Campaign Policies

By Richard Shields

Political protests arose in Student Council last week when Election Commissioner Don Verdu reported that he had received a complaint from the Students' Representative Party against the United Students Party.

Verdu said the SRP had requested an inquiry into the amount of money which the USP used to pay for match books advertising their cand dates in the election.

After an investigation, he reported that the ruling which regulates campaign expenditures had not been violated; amounts which may be spent on campaigns for each office are set by the constitution.

After receiving a counter-complaint from the USP and a request from Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, Verdu also ordered the SRP to remove the sign which they painted on the wall of the reservoir parking lot.

An article in the by-laws of the constitution which permits a majority vote of any meeting of the Associated Students to rescind an act of council was changed to require the vote from a majority of AS members as well.

The design for the AS card for next semester was also voted on and approved; the nearly unanimous vote indicated that the new design was much better than the one previously approved.

Veterans Must File Benefit Forms Now

Veterans claiming benefits under the GI Bill, who intend to transfer to another college at the end of this semester will result in a loss of benefits application in the veterans affairs office, Bobbin Dunn, veterans counselor here, announced recently.

Delay in the submission of this application will result in a loss of benefits at the beginning of next semester.

It was stressed that this application for transfer must be made anytime a veteran changes schools. The forms are available in the veterans affairs office.

Veterans must fill out an IBM card during finals week in order to receive benefits for January, Dunn warned.

Council Forms Committee To Study Need For Student Lounge On Campus

Congestion in Smith Hall has caused the Student Council to form a committee to submit a report to Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, giving reasons for the need of a student lounge, Joe Egri, Associated Student president, said today.

According to Egri the report submitted to President Conlan will be added to his semi-annual report that will in turn be submitted to the San Francisco Board of Education.

The need for a lounge to relieve the congestion in Smith Hall has been evident for a number of years, Egri said.

The lounge would be a large room with chairs, tables, vending machines, typewriters, trophy cases, and a place for fraternities to hang their plaques.

Until such time as a lounge is built, as a temporary site, Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of men, has offered the music bungalows which will be vacated next semester.

Many suggestions have been made as to where the lounge could be located. These include a sky room on top of Cloud Hall, Smith Hall or the new arts building.

Rally At Ram Friday To Kick-Off Cage Season

To herald the college's conference basketball season, Rally Commissioner Marilynn Santos has scheduled a rally for College Hour Friday, January 13, at the Redwood Ram.

Feature entertainment at the rally will be the Jimmy Parker Trio and Freddy Pais. Supplementing the program will be the cheerleaders and song girls.

The basketball game Friday will be held at College of San Mateo at 8 p.m., and Saturday night the Rams will meet the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs here in the men's gymnasium at 8 p.m. for their first conference home game.

Airline Spokesman Visits Tomorrow

Advantages and opportunities for airline stewardesses will be discussed in C-246 tomorrow, Joseph Amori, placement director here, stated today.

Recruitment director of United Air Lines, Don Jacobs, will conduct the meeting starting at 10 a.m. with a 25-minute technicolor film, Jet-Age Stewardess.

After the film Jacobs will interview all interested women students. All women students are invited to attend.

Amori asked any women interested to consult him in the placement office, S-188, as soon as possible.

City College places an average of 50 women per year in the various major airlines as stewardesses. These airlines include TWA, United, Pan-American and American.

Club Cavalcade

Semester Closes With Elections, Dinners, Dance

By Pat Perkins

WITH the excitement of the campus campaigns and election over, the winning party is planning for the spring semester.

Among the current coming events is the Feminine Fling to be held tomorrow night in Smith Hall. The Fling, a casual social for all women students, is sponsored jointly by the Associated Women Students, the Inter-Sorority Council, and the Recreation Association.

The Associated Men Students will hold a smoker in the men's gymnasium tomorrow night.

The Newman Club elected its officers for next semester last Wednesday. They are Tom Mullen, president; Paul Butler, vice president; Mary Beth Cota, treasurer; Rose Owsiewski, recording secretary; Joan Owsiewski, corresponding secretary; Steve Freeman, historian, and Tom Railton, sergeant-at-arms.

This Friday night the Sophomore Class will sponsor the last dance of the semester. Themed The Grand Ball, the Soph Ball will be held at the Jack Tar Hotel and will begin at 9 p.m.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority will hold elections of the spring officers next week.

The brothers of Zeta Phi Sigma fraternity are busily planning their semi-annual pinning dinner. The banquet will take place at the International Inn this Saturday, January 14. At this time the pledges will receive their pins and awards will be given to the outstanding brother and pledge.

Victors In AS Vote Trade Best Wishes

Record Voter Turnout Sweeps SRP Into Office; Party Grabs 19 Of 20 Associated Student Positions

With an overwhelming vote of confidence from members of the Associated Students, the Students' Representative Party captured 19 of the 20 offices in AS government which were filled in the election here last week.

A total of 666 votes was cast in the election, representing 24 per cent of the eligible voters, and recording the third highest turnout in AS history.

The top office of AS President went to Charles Hanks (SRP) with 346 votes over John Azzaro (United Students Party) with 269 votes.

"I would like to thank the voters for their confidence in us and all the people who helped our party, both those who ran for office and those behind the scenes whose only thanks is the fact that we won," Hanks stated after the official tally was released.

Hanks' running mate, Donna O'Leary, unopposed for the office of AS Vice President, was swept into office with a total of 473 votes.

Jim Bush (SRP) captured the Associated Men Student presidency with 420 votes over Billy Threadgill (USP) with 164 votes.

Pat Crone (SRP) won the race for the office of Associated Women Student President with 363 votes to 217 for Marlene Dobrow (USP).

George Woo (SRP) defeated Bob Rodgers (USP) by only four votes, 294-290, in the battle for the Sophomore Class Presidency.

Chuck Woods (SRP) with 401 votes easily upset Joe Kane (USP) with 199 to win the office of Freshman Class President.

All of the seven Sophomore seats on council went to SRP candidates Kathy Henderson (411), Gary Wilkening (401), Tom Mullen (383), Harry Somerfield (361), Mery Ann Grandemange (368), Ciprano Ayalin (323) and Loretta Ching (321).

The SRP also took six of the seven Freshman seats on council with 340 votes for Sandi Shaw, Marcia McNeely (336), Herm Pearson (311), Greg Monk (310), Paul Snowberg (305), and Grant Fahs (270).

The only USP candidate in the election who was elected to office was Marilyn Butler, the seventh Freshman member of council with 250 votes.

Among the objectives listed by Hanks as "plans" for next semester are:

1. Opening of a temporary student union and planning for a permanent one;
2. Setting a new record in AS card sales;
3. Promoting interest to attract more students to participation in student government;
4. Continuation of the work of the problems committee in hopes that the airing of current campus problems will bring about ways of solving them.—By R. S.

Coeds Take Part In JFK Inauguration

City College will be represented unofficially at the presidential inauguration in Washington this Friday by Anna Wong and Darlene Chu.

Both members of the St. Mary's Drum Corps, the two students will be stepping out when the famous San Francisco group parades down Pennsylvania Avenue as part of a procession that will be seen from coast to coast in color on television.

Miss Wong plays the glockenspiel and Miss Chu is a snare drummer. Both have been playing for St. Mary's since 1958.

The group is leaving for the nation's capital tonight by plane. They will fly back home on Sunday.

The young ladies are excited about the prospects of participating in the historical event in Washington. They said they were very grateful to all of the individuals on campus who contributed to the News-Call Bulletin fund raising drive which is making the trip possible.

Pacini Re-Elected Guardsman Editor

Bob Pacini was re-elected to a second term as Guardsman Editor-in-Chief for the next semester by the editorial board of The Guardsman last week.

Pacini is currently The Guardsman's Editor-in-Chief, while Plansky is the Managing Editor, and Dunne the Sports Editor.

Members of the editorial staff who are graduating this semester are Pat Perkins, News Editor; Warren Downes, Staff Editor, and Lester On, Editorial Assistant.

Revised Plan For Pre-Registration Gets Big Vote

Student opinions regarding the pre-registration plans and the two constitutional amendments which were on the ballot were divided sharply in the Associated Student election here last week.

Proposition A, asking for students' opinions of the scholarship-seniority plan for registration, received 238 No votes and 200 Yes. Proposition B, which asked the same thing concerning revision of the presently used method, received 330 Yes to 115 No.

Propositions C and D, which would change the unit requirements for Freshman and Sophomore Class officers, both lost, C with 219 Yes to 191 No, and D with 224 Yes to 188 No.

Election Commissioner Don Verdu, in an evaluation of the results of the election, suggested that future commissioners continue to send letters to AS members reminding them to vote.

He also said that he favored abolishing the election rally because of the lack of interest in it. "Buying AS cards and then not using them, especially to vote," he added, "indicates that students don't realize the responsibilities which membership in the Associated Students involves."

He attributed the large turnout in the election, third largest in AS history, to the well presented and organized campaigns, made the best in recent years through the efforts to the two campaign managers.

Gamma Sigs Win Dougherty Trophy

Gamma Sigma Sigma, with a 2.5 grade point average, was awarded the Margaret Dougherty Trophy for this semester's top scholastic average among the college's sororities at last Thursday's Feminine Fling.

Runners-up for the trophy were Phi Beta Rho, the sorority that won last semester, and Gamma Kappa Beta.

Gamma Sigma has now won the trophy twice, Delta Psi four times, Zeta Chi and Kappa Phi three, Phi Beta Rho two and Theta Tau once.

The election of Margaret Lindstrom to the office of Inter-Sorority Council President was also announced at the affair. Industrious Miss Lindstrom has served as this semester's Associated Women Student President. Pat Crone was elected as next semester's AWS President.

Hope Vogel was presented the AWS service award for her unselfish service to the college throughout the semester.

Recreation Association activities for the Spring semester will be presided over by Kay Vanderford as president, and Les Adams will serve as vice president.

H&R Student Operation Of St. Francis 'Huge Success'

By Dick Dragavon

Enthusiasm tempered with sauveness marked the completing of the tenth yearly Operation St. Francis in which students from the hotel and restaurant department sit in the managerial positions of the St. Francis Hotel downtown.

Although the regular department heads said that the hotel had had a light day of business, it would have been difficult to convince the students of that fact.

"My hardest job was to keep up with him!" said student Albert Fehn of Sous Chef Walter Nowak.

They were in the immense hotel kitchen carving roasts of beef, and preparing other meals for the lunch guests, among whom were included the 30 H&R students and their regular hotel counterparts.

After spending the day as managing director with Dan London, Maxwell Bailey was very happy to say that, contrary to the cynical prediction of a San Francisco columnist, the program was a huge success.

Bailey, recent recipient of the Sheraton award, described the operation as "a wonderful, once in a lifetime opportunity."

The operation was conceived ten years ago by London, who said that they had decided to "provide a laboratory because we had had our eyes on the hotel and restaurant course at the college for some time because of some of the people they had turned out into the hotel industry."

There have been instances, according to London, when students participating in the program have questioned methods used at the St. Francis, and have caused the staff to make changes in their procedures.

A tour through the entire establishment from top to bottom revealed to the students the hotel's own upholstery department, carpeting department, and a vast housekeeping system which utilizes about half of the hotel's 600 employees.

Nine Day Vacation Due For Students Following Finals

Wrapping up the six days of finals from Friday, January 20, to Friday, January 27, will be a combination of faculty meetings and a midterm recess that will give students a nine-day vacation ending on Monday, February 6, the college registrar, Mary Jane Learnard, stated today.

Two days of registration, beginning at 7:45 on the morning of February 6 in the basement of Science Hall, will follow the recess. The majority of entering students will register on Tuesday, February 7.

Registration for entering students enrolling in evening classes will be on Thursday, February 2, between 6 and 8 p.m. in Smith Hall.

Returning students may register for the coming semester any time before Thursday, January 26, Miss Learnard emphasized.

Two holidays will be observed during the first month of the Spring 1961 semester. Lincoln's Birthday will be celebrated on Monday, February 13, since the 12th falls on a Sunday. Washington's Birthday will be celebrated on Wednesday, February 22.

Mayor's Visit And New Stadium Highlight Semester's Triumphs

By Richard Shields

It is a particularly enduring facet of human nature that makes people pause to look back and reflect, reorganize and make new plans at the end of any memorable experience.

While looking back, they see the groundwork for new plans, the reward of experience that is gained from both success and failure, and renewed determination that tomorrow shall be better than today.

At the college, "looking back" involves memories of the struggle for good grades, traditional social affairs, sports events, the appearances of famous persons, and the unrecorded, half-forgotten things that made up each student's days of the semester.

A record enrollment of 6090 day students got the semester off to a good start and the fact that 801 dropped out along the way didn't slow it down any.

During the beginning weeks, the new Associated Student government, headed by President Joe Egri, assumed the duties of office and completed the preliminaries of cabinet appointments and finance in record time to go on to more important projects.

The Little Theater presented The Whiteheaded Boy, and the college won its first football game, beating Los Angeles Valley 14-8; the Fall Frolic, Shipwreck Dance and Inter-Sorority Tea opened the social season for the new semester.

By the end of October, the Ram had been "decorated" in tar and feathers by the anxious (and nocturnal) rooters of a rival college's football team.

The following Friday, the college tied San Mateo 14-14, and the week after that honored the new stadium with a 46-8 win over Contra Costa.

The Frosh Ball dominated the social calendar in the final days of October, first with the dance itself and afterwards with the problems created by the large number of people who attended.

Another problem which arose in October, and nearly reached crisis proportions, was the pre-registration crush, a tangle that made even Smith Hall at its worst look empty.

The Homecoming Game, election of a queen, and a dance, Coronation Capers, vied with the International Relations Club's International Fair for students' attendance at the beginning of November.

The third "crisis" of the semester was perpetrated by the controversy over Pledge Week. The change of "Hell Week" to "Help Week" seemed more like "Hellp" as pledges provided a week's diversion from normal routine.

The Little Theater presented its second play of the semester, The Bad Seed, and introduced Zhanna Prokhorenko and Vladimir Ivashev, Russian stars of International Film Festival winner, Ballad Of A Soldier, to the college.

The Last Night dance ended Pledge Week on the campus as the football team defeated Sacramento 16-14 and Student Council "set up housekeeping" in the reservoir with the intention of providing more cleanliness and safety for students who park their cars there.

Counter-balancing bad with good, the Hotel and Restaurant department presented students with a complete turkey dinner for 65 cents at Thanksgiving, four days before the beginning of second-midterm exams.

Violations of Pledge Week regulations caused Beta Tau fraternity to be expelled from the campus the first week of December, forcing cancellation of their annual dance, Mistletoe Mingle.

After becoming re-accustomed to the college following the two-week Christmas recess, students were treated to a visit and speech by Mayor George Christopher during a Friday College Hour.

The election climaxed the semester for political-minded members of the Associated Students; the Soph Ball added the crowning touches for fans of dancing.

"Looking back," one can see, "like footsteps on the sands of time," the dances, the games, the events, the days which made up the semester, the semesters which make up the years, the years which make up a lifetime. And what will it be made of but little things like those we are going through now?

HR Announces Closing Date, Service Change

The college's cafeteria will remain open until Thursday, January 26, according to John W. Dunn, hotel and restaurant division staff member.

A change in the menu will take effect on Monday, January 23, as no more hot lunches or breakfasts will be served. Only sandwiches, soup, coffee, and pastries will be served through Thursday.

Salute To Ike's Greatness: 'He Always Did His Best'

LISTENING to some people talk, anyone would think that the national pastime for the last eight years has been criticizing the President of the United States.

Soldiers and ex-soldiers alike said they didn't care for the man because he had been a general. Democrats didn't like him because he was a Republican. There were those in his own party who shuddered at the mention of a president who was not a politician.

He was criticized for playing golf, or bridge, or taking trips or mispronouncing "nuclear." On a slow day they poked fun at his wife's hair style.

There is, however, one fact that his detractors, even his enemies dare not dispute. HE ALWAYS DID HIS BEST.

There is a period of almost 50 years between the day when he stood up at West Point and said, "I, Dwight David Eisenhower . . ." and this Friday when he will stand in front of the capitol and hear the words, "I, John Fitzgerald Kennedy . . ." Half a century of public service, five decades of dedication to his fellow Americans and his fellow man.

No one can ever say that in all of that time he failed to do his best.

To realize how much he has given of himself, one has only to look at pictures of him and of Mr. Stevenson taken in 1952 and compare them to the way both men look today.

It certainly would be inappropriate to call these past eight years the twilight of his career. No one, friend or foe, will soon forget how the man was twice elected by historic majorities or how, felled by usually fatal illnesses, he came off the canvas three times to go back to work.

No matter what task was assigned to him, he never failed to try. Regardless of the duty he had to perform, HE ALWAYS DID HIS BEST.

Perhaps, as time passes and memory of the man begins to mellow, some nice, long-winded things will be said about him; high-sounding phrases that smack of eulogy.

But what does one say to a man who is about to step down after giving his all for 50 years? How does one recognize the efforts of a person who led the greatest crusade of all time and then came home to become acknowledged leader of the free world in its present death struggle against the forces of darkness?

How does a person allow that he is grateful for a job well done?

Before he goes, before he becomes a memory or a legend; while he is still here with a broad grin and upraised arms; in the remaining 48 hours that he is still on the job, still doing his best, still giving his all, we would like to try.

We would like to say:

"Thank you, sir."

A Job Well Done

ANOTHER Associated Student election has concluded and as after all such events, it's customary to reflect upon the preceding events, evaluating, judging and reaching conclusions.

The conclusion we come to is this: because of the outstanding work of Don Verdu, election commissioner, this has been one of the most successful campaigns and elections in recent years here.

The turnout for the voting was the third highest in the college's history. This was preceded by a most interesting and well conducted campaign by both parties involved.

To Verdu we send our best compliments for the excellent, almost miraculous job he did. To students here we also extend compliments for responding to the occasion they way they did. Finally we congratulate the new AS President, Charles Hanks, confident he will fulfill the hopes and aspirations of those who considered him the best man for the job.

'Yes, Virginia, There Are Final Exams'

UNFORTUNATELY, MARILYNN SANTOS, like the Virginia of editorial fame, does not find finals very agreeable. To most students, they are the worst part about going to college.

College is more than reading, writing and arithmetic. For the majority of those who enter, college will be their last stop before going out to a world that is forever restless and always changing.

But, if there were no final examinations, there would be no challenge. If, suddenly, they were no longer required, the college would not be doing its job because the waiting world is full of tests of many kinds.

No Semester Break For Nine Registrars As Work Goes On

By Lester On

Whether nearly deserted or teeming with students, the college is never quite as empty as it sometimes seems.

Although the college appears to be empty at certain times of the year, the contrary happens to be true. A handful of employees under the direction of Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, is at work each day performing all the necessary tasks to accommodate the incoming, outgoing and in-between students.

And, even then, at times when classes are not in session, a regular work week must sometimes be extended to meet the demanding work load of an ending semester in the face of a new one.

Such is the case when the break between the Fall and Spring semesters is so short that the staff of nine has often found itself working weekends at the college in the past.

Not only must grades be posted and transcripts sent out, among countless other duties, but the staff must also prepare for the coming registration, processing and evaluating new applications and the like.

The duties never seem to end even when summer vacation is here. Instead, this period constitutes the busiest part of the year since the large number of graduates transferring to other colleges results in a flood of paperwork.

At the same time, the staff must contend with summer session and all the pertaining rigors of registration and the imminent changes of programs and dropouts characteristic of any regular semester.

In the first 10 days of this semester, according to Miss Learnard, there were more than 4000 changes of programs, all of which means paperwork and more paperwork.

Likewise, toward the end of a semester, leaves of absences will accumulate into a sizeable work load just before the next one begins.

Miss Learnard estimates a total of 1250 to 1300 students filed for leaves of absences this semester with a rate of about 50 applications per day in the week of the deadline.

As if this were not enough, the staff also handles registration matters for students attending night sessions here at the college. Again the same procedure of checking applications, evaluating incoming transcripts and sending out grades must be taken care of.

This is the process that never ends whether students are here attending class or away on vacation. With only nine responsible for an enrollment of more than 6000, the odds are not very favorable but—somehow they get the job done.

Shots At RAMdom

TERM'S END is well-nigh nigh and many are the plans being talked about by those about to depart into the cold, cruel world.

A couple of grads-to-be are going to become hoboes in order to learn about this great country. Another fellow has landed a job on a truck, delivering for the R. J. Reynolds Co.

So, at least, the college will be turning out two road scholars and a Camel driver.

A REALLY STRANGE sight caught the eyes of a few in the North parking lot this morning.

A car with Washington plates was parked at the far north end. Just south of it, one from Oregon, and just south of that, one from California.

To the east of the Washington and Oregon ones was another car with Idaho plates. The only thing needed to complete the map was a puddle of water on the west side of the California car and a car from Hawaii on the other side of the puddle.

That of course was a coincidence: those cars being there in that position. It might also be noted that four out of the four had current stickers on their windshields.

That was no coincidence. That was a miracle!

Ivan Challenges Horatio's Utopia

By Paul Plansky

WEALTHY financier Horatio Hypothetical recently purchased a plot of land in an isolated area in Canada and has distributed a few hundred letters asking for volunteers for his latest experiment—the establishment of an ideal democracy.

Mr. Hypothetical has invited a group of distinguished men from all walks of life to give up their careers and family life and move to this secluded spot, where he claims they will be able to exercise pure democracy and live in peace, harmony, and prosperity.

One of these select men for this proposition was Ivan Iconoclast. Here is his answer to the offer in its original letter form:

• • •

Dear Don Quixote,

I must decline your honorable request for me to become a bona fide, benevolent brother of the Castle-Builders' and Retail Rhapsodist's Union, Local Infinity Plus. I am straightforwardly refusing an opportunity to reside in a realm which offers everything—except, perhaps, reality.

Now a Golden Age or Garden of Eden wouldn't be asking for too much, but you want an Ideal Democracy! Money has the power to buy material substance, but not material existence; a man's soul is sacred, and no philanthropic pantomime will alter nature, especially human nature. Let's be more realistic and less idealistic.

If by now, Mr. Humanitarian, you have read beyond my sarcastic salutation and facetious opening paragraphs, you must be an extremely reasonable man, tolerating such derisive ridicule.

For these insults, I apologize. Yet my beliefs I cannot retract.

I think you'll be fortunate indeed to receive even one affirmative reply from the hundreds of letters you have distributed. And if, by chance, you do persuade enough people to establish this democratic dream world, would it work? I doubt it, although sometime in the future this condition may evolve naturally without falsity or force.

Can you truthfully believe that there will be peace and harmony in your proposed paradise just because it's isolated from the rest of humanity? If and when these men enter the confines of your camp, do you think they will immediately lose their characteristics of human behavior?

Of course they won't, and those characteristics retained will be jealousy, hate, bigotry, and a generally selfish make-up. A man can't just be yanked out of an imperfect democracy, placed in a supposedly ideal one, and be expected to keep his stability which he usually doesn't possess in the first place.

Even if these men were of the highest calibre both intellectually and morally, after a given time, they will begin to claw at each other, tearing righteousness to pieces.

No, it just can't be done—you can't make a flea circus out of a rat race!

An excellent example of trying to force a condition upon society before it is ready for this condition is that of integration in the Southern United States. The prejudice which the whites have against the Negroes there has been implanted by others, mostly by the person's own parents.

This degrading disease of racial discrimination is not natural but inherited. The only way to integrate successfully would be to start the

Panthers, Rams Clash Friday

Cagers Ready For Crucials With Title Favorites

By Warren Downes

Sid Phelan's rapidly improving quintet hosts the invading Sacramento Panthers Friday night at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium in a Big Eight Conference cage battle.

The Panthers are led by high scoring center, Bob Ferrel, guard Ron Andre, and 6-3 forward Bill Dolbow. The Capitol City men are hurting from a lack of height and a shortage of top notch shooters.

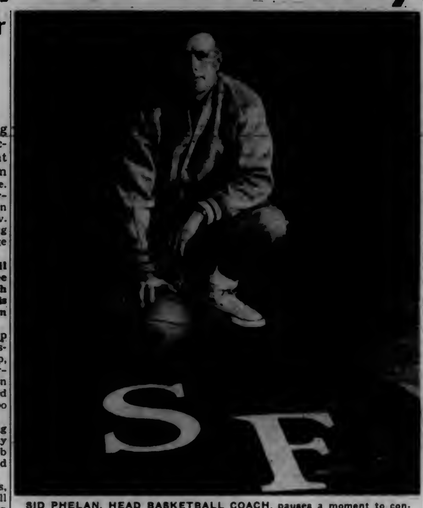
The Rams, finally beginning to jell as a unit after a dismal practice campaign, have tremendous bench strength. Phelan has 15 men on his squad, all of them about even in ability.

Orlando Camp, 6-5, is a great help to the club with his tremendous hustle and will to win. Along with Camp, Phelan has aggressive Jesse Arterberry at center, and this combination gives the local five strong board strength which should prove to be too much for the short Panthers.

Charles Williams is an outstanding scorer and rebounder although only 6-1. Guards Nate Jackson and Bob Grayson are fine ball handlers and good shots.

Big John Lewis, 6-2 and 220 pounds, Glenn Wold, Vince Rocchi and Will Rockmore are the local quintet's top reserves.

The first big crucial for the Red and White cagers will come on Friday, January 27, when the tough Oakland T-Birds take on the locals in the men's gymnasium.



Oakland is loaded with such standout performers as All-Big Eight guard Charles McKinney and another all-conference performer, forward Wendell Hayes.

Howard Foster at 6-3 is the T-Birds' starting center. Foster is a top rebounding forward who was switched to the post position by Rockwell in the hope that he could fill Oakland's one weak spot.

The college aggregation will have to be at its best to top the T-Birds and grab the victory in this early league crucial.

Phelan's quintet will travel across the bay to Richmond on February 3 to take on Contra Costa and fabulous Ed Greene on the Comets' home hardwood.

Greene dribbles well, shoots with the best cagers, and is a fantastic rebounder at 6-1. Comet center, Alex Brown at 6-7, is the big hope for Coach Rudy Hansen.

SID PHELAN, HEAD BASKETBALL COACH, pauses a moment to contemplate the fate of his squad as they head into the thick of Big Eight competition. Although Phelan is reluctant to comment on his team's chances, most observers rate the Rams as the top choice for the title.

Balance Earns JV Quint Impressive Record

Playing the toughest schedule in its history, Coach Alex Schwarz' junior varsity basketball team has compiled a 9-won 5-lost record so far in the 1960-61 campaign.

Holding wins over tough teams from Treasure Island, Poly High, and San Francisco State junior varsity, the jv's have a very well balanced scoring attack paced by Lefty Lane, Andy Kerr, Al Richardson and Harvey Briscoe.

Rebounding strength for the junior varsity comes from Lane, Briscoe, Richardson, and footballer Mike Peterson. Coach Schwarz feels his starting five of guards Pete Roddy and Frank Hunt, forwards Lane and Richardson with postman Briscoe has just started to live up to its high potential and soon will be at top strength.

All Squads Excell In Big Sports Season

LOOKING BACK on this semester: the college's sportsmen have fared well in their respective athletic wars.

Grover Klemmer's grid team placed third in the Big Eight, Roy Diederichsen's soccer squad tied for first place with Cal in the Northern California soccer loop, and the Sid Phelan-Lou Vasquez-coached cross-country team won the title.

Untouchables Top The Guardsman For Mural Title

In one of the hardest fought and closely contested games of the season the Untouchables quenched The Guardsman hopes, 53-48, at the recent Associated Men Student smoker to cop the Intramural Basketball League crown.

The Untouchables, champions of the Independent division, and The Guardsman, the top squad in the club loop, came into the game about equal.

During the first period it looked as if there was a chance for a landslide victory in favor of the independent champs as the score at half-time was Untouchables 24, Guardsman 16.

Then as the second half progressed it looked as if there was a possibility for a Guardsman comeback as with only two minutes to go the "G" men were up one point.

Then all of a sudden lady luck seemed to turn on the determined club champs. A foul was called on The Guardsman and from then on in it was the Untouchables all the way as they cobly out-shot and out-played a tense and nervous Guardsman squad.

The football team started out strong with two impressive wins over Southern California teams and came into the conference highly rated. But with the league as tight as it was, the Rams dropped two and tied one game to end the season with a 6-2-1 record.

Many outstanding players were on the roster of the grid team. Gary Lewis won as most outstanding back in the conference this year. Tom Pigee won all-league honors and was the team's leading ground gainer. Big linemen Ed Johnson, Alex Darnes and Jack Hickey were similarly honored.

All in all, it was an outstanding year for the squad and the college can be justly proud of the team's performance.

The soccer squad placed first in the league standings for the second year in a row. This feat is compounded when one realizes that they play in a league composed entirely of four-year colleges.

They lost only one game all season and that was to Cal, whom they eventually tied for the championship.

Jim Lynch, Emil Ruiz and Bohdan Papara were all outstanding for the club as were the rest of the unit, because, in the words of Diederichsen, their championship "was an entire team effort."

And the cross-country team, composed of Tom Jennings, Frank James, Bill Hotchkiss, Tony Ferrigno, Jim Nigra and Alvin Waxman, placed first in the Big Eight.

Phelan Reluctant To Tab Rams Tops In Loop Race

By Tom Kennedy

With league play already underway, the Big Eight Conference's basketball race shapes up as one of the most hotly contested in years.

Oakland City College and the Rams are given good chances to head the league, but Contra Costa and San Mateo must all be reckoned with.

Despite his team's second-place showing in the pre-season Modesto Tournament, Ram Coach Sid Phelan is still reluctant to pin the favorite's role on his City College quintet.

The following is a run-down on the Big Eight's individual teams:

SACRAMENTO

With little height and a starting lineup composed entirely of freshmen, Panther Coach Gerald Anderson faces a big rebuilding job at Sacramento.

However, the former Cal Frosh coach can usually be counted on to get the most mileage out of his players, and he has a genuine prospect in 6-3 center Bob Ferrel.

Others in the starting five are guards Jim Leonard (5-9) and Ron Andre (6-0), both good shooters; and 6-3 Bill Dolbow and 6-2 Ken Graham at the forwards.

OAKLAND

The Thunderbirds appear ready to make another run at the championship. Back are two unanimous All-Big Eight picks and a fair number of veterans.

Guard Charlie McKinney, 5-10, and forward Wendell Hayes, 6-2, will form the nucleus of a team possessing a good first string but needing more depth and height.

Howard Foster, who has great jumping ability although only 6-3, has been moved from forward to center to fill the only weak position on the team.

Carl Petty, (5-9), a good ball handler, and service vet John Schmitt (5-10), are slated to fill in the backcourt position alongside McKinney. Fighting for the remaining forward post are Larry Lauritzen (6-3) and 6-2 Jim Murphy.

CONTRA COSTA

Contra Costa, behind their jumping jack forward Ed Greene, appears to have as much potential as any team in the league. The big question determining the Comets' chances revolve around their 6-7 freshman center, Alex Brown.

Brown, a beanpole at 165 pounds, must get the rebounds and protect the middle in order to make the Comets' fast break go.

Other standouts are guards Elroy Atkins (5-10), a good scorer and ball handler; Dick Latvala (6-0), a set shot artist, and John Greene (6-1), another jumper.

STOCKTON

The Mustangs, who lost to Contra Costa in the consolation game of the Modesto Tournament, could be a real surprise this season. Back is center Bill Gleason, (6-6), the league's third leading scorer last year, and a host of good, solid players.

Ron Stone (6-2) and George Wells (6-1) are the starting forwards, although Dwayne Miller (6-4), Dick Heib (6-3), Larry Alleman (6-2), and Ezell Walls (6-5) are not far behind.

Little Sam Arong, at 5-7, gives the Mustangs good shooting from the guard position, along with 6-0 Bill Richelieu.

SAN MATEO

Sparked by guard John Condrin (6-1), a tremendous offensive threat from anywhere on the court, the Bulldogs could upset the league's applecart.

Howard Sundberg (6-5½) is rated an excellent all-around center who can rebound, shoot, defend and handle the ball.

Alongside Condrin, 5-11 Dave Baisley and 5-10 Rich Jefferies are fighting it out for the other guard position.

At the forwards, Ben Webster (6-3) is a fine rebounder and tipper; and Roger Dabney (6-3½) is still developing. John Coovert (6-3), a good shooter and aggressive player is ready to fill in.

SANTA ROSA

Lacking great height and a dominant star, the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs nevertheless remain a big question mark for their Big Eight opponents.

Jim Landavazo (5-10) and Al Baccala (5-9) are the starting guards.

George LaPierre (6-4) and Leroy Chase (6-3), both good scorers and board men, are fighting it out for the post position.

Clint Bainbridge (6-2) and Chuck York (6-2), good point-getters, are the current starting forwards, but are being pushed by Jack McAboy (6-1) and John Paxton (6-4).

MODESTO

The Pirates will furnish one of the most interesting teams to watch because of their great scorer Tom Muench and general offensive strength, but depth and team balance is likely to be a big problem for them.

Tom Goad (6-0), a good ball handler, plays the guard position next to Muench (6-5), who was one of the Big Eight's leading scorers last season and is also a top rebounder.

Dick Balswick (6-4, 210 pounds) fills the center post and adds further board strength.

Mike Hardin (6-1) is a good scorer and ball handler, and 6-5 Ronnie Franks has an adequate jumper and good rebounding ability.

Frosh Bolster Baseball, Track Squads

Able Rookie Harriers Boost Thinclad Hopes

Strengthened by an extremely impressive list of new material, the 1961 Ram track and field squad's hopes for the coming season are high.

At the recent track sign-up meeting, some 52 hopefuls displayed interest in wearing the Ram's colors on the '61 squad.

Coach Lou Vasquez should have no trouble this year in the discus event as one of the newly acquired Ram rookies is Alex Darnes, city champion from Poly last year.

Other promising newcomers include Mike Meloy, Gary Lewis and Leonard Tong in the sprinting events; Bob Hector, John Pangburn and Tom Pigee in the hurdles; Al Waxman in the mile; Tony Ferrigno in the half mile, and Bob Ely and Bill Miles in the pole vault.

Vets Form Nucleus For '61 Aggregations

Resulting from the baseball signups held on January 6, five returning varsity players and 14 rookies have reported for the 1961 season, Lee Elsan, baseball coach here, said today.

The returning varsity includes Ed Coit, Paul DeMartini, Bob Ruggeiro, Eric Lyons and Don Lowpensky.

The bulk of the rookies who have signed up are going to be trying for the outfield positions. There have only been five applications so far for infield positions.

The schedule for this season has not been released at this writing because St. Mary's has not confirmed its playing dates.

City College will play 19 games during the season, and according to Elsan, the positions on the team that need the most building up are pitcher and catcher.

Drama Department Move Due In Spring Semester; Amphitryon 38 Ends Feb. 4

The college's drama department will have a new home by March 15, Michael Griffin, drama director, said last week.

With construction of the arts building in its final stages, Griffin stated that the move will take place sometime in the middle of March as soon as it is practical.

The move into the north wing of the U-shaped building may mean that the current production of Amphitryon 38 will be the last to be given in the Little Theater, he continued. Its final performance is February 4.

Since the exact date for the move is still somewhat uncertain, Griffin said several options are possible insofar as the Spring semester is concerned.

Depending on when the move will be made and completed, the drama department may or may not stage one last production in the Little Theater.

In any event, the theater and all the space now occupied by the department will be taken over by the electronics department when the switch is made.

The new home for Griffin and his thespians, when completed, will have a seating capacity of 350 with a higher, wider and deeper stage.

It will also be one of only three theaters in the world with the Izenour winch system for changing sets. The others are at Harvard University and Hofstra University on Long Island, N. Y.

For the first time, adequate wing space as well as a sizeable workshop with good access will be available to the drama group.

Among the many features of the stage will be a remote control switchboard positioned in the balcony so that lighting effects can be visually controlled.

Originally, the drama department's move was scheduled for the beginning of the spring semester. However, a labor strike during the summer slowed completion of construction and, in consequence, moved back the moving date by about a month.

Three hundred and forty-two cases of tea were jettisoned at the "Boston Tea Party."

Talent Show-Rally Jan. 28 Plugs Sweetheart Ball

Two of the biggest, most colorful events of the scholastic year are slated to close out this semester and open the next. They are the Sweetheart Ball rally and talent show Saturday, January 28, and the 16th annual Sweetheart Ball, four weeks later, February 25.

Five contestants for the title of queen will vie for the coveted crown at the rally. They are Mary Ng, Pat Lim, Pat Lee, Jetty Au and Anna Wong.

George Woo, president of the Chinese Students Club, has announced that the rally, to be held at Victory Hall, Stockton Street near Clay, will last from 8:30 p.m. until midnight.

Dress will be suits for the men and dresses for the women. Admission is one dollar per person.

It is at the rally that the queen is selected. The announcement of the winner and her coronation will take place at the ball.

This year the ball is being held in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis.

There will be dancing from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Dress is to be semi-formal and admission has been set at $3.75 a couple. Ray Hackett and his orchestra will be on hand to supply the music.

As in past years, the proceeds from both of the affairs will go into a fund to finance four scholarships here.

Among the guests of honor will be Nancy Hom, last year's queen and currently a candidate for the title, "Miss Chinatown USA, 1961."

Vanderford New RA Chief

Students who will lead the Recreation Association in its spring activities were installed as officers January 10, at the semi-annual awards social held in Smith Hall.

New officers include Kay Vanderford as president, Les Adams as vice president, Sam Vigil as secretary, Mike Roddy as treasurer, and Karen Kinney, historian.

Still to be appointed by the new president are the delegate-at-large and the election commissioner.

In addition to the election, shields, blocks and stars were awarded to RA members for the Fall semester's participation.

John Palmer of the Newman Club was presented a trophy for first place in the bowling league.

When the meeting adjourned, the "social" began, which included dancing and refreshments.

With the semester break coming, the RA has no activities planned until spring.

San Mateo has invited the volleyball team to a dinner. According to Elizabeth Wirth, RA adviser, this is an annual event, and the college will invite San Mateo in return, at a later date.

Mayor's Soviet Speech Marks Milestone Here

MAYOR CHRISTOPHER BECAME the first S.F. mayor to be honored as a guest of the college when he spoke here January 6 on his Soviet trip. Posed above after his speech are Joe Egri, Fall AS president; Elena Mirabelia, student chairman; Mayor George Christopher, and Georgene Peterson, Fall AS vice president. Council Gives Service Awards To Student, Instructor Here

Service awards for the most deserving student and faculty member dominated the long list of commendations to student government officers for this semester at the Student Council awards dinner last week.

Highlighting the evening was a greeting by Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, followed by an address, Extra-curricular Activities—Profit Or Loss?, by English instructor Donald Snepp.

The beautiful singing voice of well known San Francisco soprano, Claire Halloran Latham, removed any tension and nervousness which might have accompanied the official ending of the semester for members of student government.

The high point for suspense came just before Associated Student President Joe Egri revealed the names of the student and faculty member to receive the service awards.

Egri presented the student service award to Paul Snowberg for his many valuable services during the semester; the winner of this award cannot be occupying any official position in student government.

The service award for the faculty member went to Joan Nourse, faculty adviser for The Guardsman, for 25 years of distinguished service far above and beyond the call of duty.

"I only wish I could give you an award for every one of your years of service to students here," Egri said as he handed her the plaque.

Egri then administered the oath of office to President-elect Charles Hanks and Vice President-elect Donna O'Leary, formally ending his own and Vice President Georgene Peterson's tenure of office.

Miss Peterson and Egri were then presented with service awards, lifetime AS membership cards, and engraved gavels from the Associated Student organization.

Hope Vogel, Jack Gawley Reign At Sophomore Ball

Hotel and restaurant student Jack Gawley and AWS member Hope Vogel were selected as the royal couple to reign over last Friday night's Soph Ball.

During intermission ceremonies, Soph President John Azzaro presented King Gawley with a red ribbon and a gold medallion, and Queen Vogel with a red robe, bouquet of roses and a gold crown.

16 Capped At Dental Assisting Ceremony

Sixteen young women, having completed their dental assisting curriculum, were graduated at the colleges' 11th capping ceremony held by the dental assisting program on January 5.

Also participating in the ceremony, arranged by Ruth Inskipp, dental assisting instructor, were Louis Batmale, dean of instruction, Monica Lammerding and Marcia Bernstein, former students in the program.

Those who were capped are Verna Barnett, Janice Benetti, Linda Carvajal, Diane Doody, Margaret FitzGibbon, Susan Franklin, Barbara Jensen, Joyce Lorentzen, Nancy Low, Darlene McGuire, Jennie Milberg, Odelia Organo, Betty Park, Diane Quintana, Nadine Shute, and Paula Wonderly.

Campus Activity Slows As Final Exams Start

By Pat Perkins

AS THE SEMESTER draws to a close, many of the on-campus clubs and organizations took care of last minute elections, and social affairs before dead-week.

Rally Committee unanimously elected Jeri Crivelli to the post of Rally Commissioner for the Spring semester, Miss Crivelli urged anyone interested in becoming a cheerleader or song girl to see adviser John Dunn for try-out information.

The sisters of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority recently held elections for next semester. Georgene Peterson was elected president and the rest of the officers are as follows: Arlene Wilson, vice president; Mary Ann Grandemange, pledge mistress; Kathy Henderson, treasurer; Margaret Kriete, corresponding secretary; Twila Meyer, historian; Karen Ballard, sergeant-at-arms, and Wilma Jones, custodian.

Theta Tau sorority's new president is Doris Bacigalupi. Their pinning dinner was held Saturday, January 7, at the Alta Mira.

An exceptional group of rare orchids from the collection of Mrs. Decker McAllister of Hillsborough was recently donated to the ornamental horticulture department, according to Myrtle LaGrave, secretary of the Ornamental Horticulture Society.

Valued at more than $400, the orchids will be added to the tropical section of the department for study by the students.

The International Relations Club will climax semester activities with the presentation of scholarships to three of its members at a graduation dance to be held Friday, January 27, in Smith Hall.

Students eligible for scholarships are Alexander Bogdis, Greece; Alfred Lee, China; Ebrahim Nirza, India, and Vadine Nemechayeff, Lebanon.

Inter-Fraternity Council officers for the Spring semester are John Azzaro, president; Bill Threadgill, vice president; Don Disterheft, secertary; Bill Keane, treasurer, and Bob Rodgers, rushing chairman.

New York's Broadway was electrically illuminated for the first time on December 20, 1880.

Campus Police Name New Chief

In charge of the Campus Police force next semester will be James Tedesco, who was elevated to the post of chief as a result of scoring the highest number of points in a recent written examination.

Mike Hancock, out-going chief, also announced that runner-up in the exam, Ron Wilson, has been appointed to be Tedesco's assistant.

From Wednesday, February 1, until the end of the month, parking permits for the spring semester will be available to students who park in the college parking lots.

They may be obtained at the reservoir parking area, weather permitting, between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Students are requested to present their current Associated Student card, registration card and valid driver's license.

In March, students can apply for permits in C-120 during Friday College Hours.

Hancock stated that students who park motor scooters or motorcycles on the campus parking lots must also display a permit.

No faculty parking area is to be used by students, Hancock added. These areas include the circle around Cloud Hall, the parking lots next to Smith Hall, and the curbed area next to the men's gymnasium. Violators will be cited.

Five Campus Police officers will be graduated with honors from the criminology department this semester. They are Louis Birleffi, Dan Grassis, John Murphy, Jim Randall and Ed Sarsfield. On the honor roll is Hancock, who plans to graduate in June.

A dinner for the entire force has been set for tonight.

process from birth; each new generation would then be able to decide the issue for themselves.

Similarly, your fantastical fairyland can only exist if you have its inhabitants born there, unrestricted by former influence.

All my life I have been conditioned to conformity, being confined within society's shrinking circumference. The era of individual progress has been replaced by the era of mass automation.

Since I am caught in this time trap where initiative is stifled, stepped on, and completely smothered out of existence, you'd expect me to be eager to try your proposed plan as a remedy. But I am not one who gropes blindly for non-existing exits.

An anonymous quote, "What we learn from history is that men have learned nothing from history," best summarizes my views in defiance to your "ideal democracy."

Unless man can learn something from history, your democracy will have to wait at least half-a-dozen decades. I suggest that you return to reality and use your financial power to educate men instead of to disillusion them.

If man wishes to ascend to the summit of Mt. Olympus, he will have to conquer it the hard way—by climbing, sweating, pulling, reaching, and many times, failing.

But when man does get to the top, God will be ready to accept him, and the door to new horizons will open wide. Man will settle on the spheres of his own solar system and planets beyond, spreading his superior culture throughout the universe ad infinitum.

Come on, Mr. Philanthropist, let's keep climbing—together.

JFK's Fast Pace Recalls FDR Regime

By Paul Plansky

OUR NEW PRESIDENT has officially been in power less than two months, and yet the whirlwind pace of his new administration has far outdistanced most past chief executives' speed in their early attempts at organization.

As rapid and energetic a pace as President Kennedy has set, it is not unprecedented. In 1932 the same such celerity was reality. And in view of this striking comparison, numerous other similarities can be drawn between these two Democratic presidents.

Both Franklin Delano Roosevelt and John Fitzgerald Kennedy came from financially affluent families, and were actually born into comfortable fortunes.

Both Franklin D. Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy had a political heritage. The former's distant relative, Theodore, was a past president, and the latter's father, Joseph, was the ambassador to the Court of St. James.

Both Roosevelt and Kennedy had gone to high-styled, academically renowned boys' prep schools, the late president to Groton, Massachusetts, and the present chief to Choate, Massachusetts.

Both politicians received their college degrees from Harvard University, and subsequently when in office as president gathered a great number of Harvard graduates around them as advisers, both employing the "Brain Trust."

Both FDR and JFK campaigned against incumbents, if you consider Kennedy's opponent, Vice President Nixon, as protege of the popular Eisenhower. Hoover's hopes for re-election, although marred by the crash in '29, still posed a potent threat for Roosevelt.

Both FDR and JFK won their campaigns on the promise of a New Deal and a New Frontier, respectively. An air of freshness can be discerned in both camps.

Both Roosevelt and Kennedy display a great magnetism toward the American public, the former capturing his audience with very personal-touch, radio addresses, and the latter, with the same suaveness, with unusually frequent televised press conferences.

Both had experiences at Democratic national conventions of being put up for the vice presidential position on the party ticket.

Roosevelt won the nomination in 1920 as Cox's running mate, but lost the election to the Republican Harding. Kennedy lost the nomination to Senator Kefauver in 1956.

Both overcame great obstacles in their climb to the presidency. FDR had his infantile paralysis to fight. JFK had the sensitive religious issue. Although one obstacle was material and the other intangible, their unyielding spirit and pride shone through.

Yet most important, both presidents, despite coming from wealthy backgrounds, realized the great need for social reform at the nation's base and did their utmost to achieve this need.

Today's Watchword: Vision.

Smoker's Emcee

JOHN AZZARO, last semester's Sophomore president, this semester presides over IFC and is the master of ceremonies at tonight's smoker.

IFC Hosts Men's Smoker Tonight In Gymnasium

With seven fraternities competing for the attention of this semester's manpower, the Inter-Fraternity Council, under the leadership of John Azzaro, will entertain men students at a smoker scheduled to start at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the men's gymnasium.

"The smoker is staged to assist interested students in their selection of a fraternity by allowing them an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the different organizations before joining one," Azzaro said.

Students interested may sign up with as many fraternities as they wish to without obligating or committing themselves.

A scholastic award in the form of a trophy will be presented to the fraternity which had the highest grade-point average last semester. Also, the fraternity which rendered the most service to the college last semester will receive a trophy, Azzaro said.

Those attending the smoker will hear addresses by Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, and by the president of each of the seven fraternities.

Entertainment, not planned in detail yet, will be presented by each fraternity. According to Azzaro, refreshments will also be served.

Fraternities participating in the smoker tonight are Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Alpha Sigma Delta, Phi Beta Delta, Zeta Phi Sigma, Tau Chi Sigma, Alpha Phi Epsilon, and Alpha Kappa Rho.

Assisting Azzaro with the smoker are fellow officers Bill Threadgill, vice president; Don Disterheft, secretary; Bill Keane, treasurer, and Bob Rodgers, rushing chairman.

College Clubs Bow In Friday

Evening Dance In Smith Hall To Climax CAB Day

Club activities and social affairs for the semester will make their debut this Friday, March 3, Club Activities Board Day, with courtyard exhibits and a dance, according to Loretta Ching, CAB Day chairman.

Clubs participating in CAB Day will have their information booths set up between Science Hall and Cloud Hall during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., weather permitting. If bad weather prevails the booths will be set up in the corridors of Cloud Hall, Miss Ching said.

The purpose of these exhibits is to acquaint both new and old students with the clubs and organizations officially recognized here, and to attract new members.

These service, educational and social groups have large varieties of interests and activities and most of them meet each Friday.

Climaxing Friday's daytime festivities will be the CAB dance, Prelude To Spring, to be held from 9 p.m. to midnight in Smith Hall, with music supplied by Steve Paul's orchestra.

Admission to the dance will be free with both an Associated Student card and a registration card, Miss Ching said, but there will be a charge of 75 cents with a registration card only.

Enrollment Here Up 33 Over Fall Semester Total

Registration figures just released by Mary Jane Learnard, college registrar, reveal a 33-student increase in this semester's total college enrollment over that of last semester.

The total enrollment for this semester stands at 7536, whereas the Fall 1960 total was 7503 students, and the Spring 1960, 6881.

The daytime enrollment here is 89 less than last semester's total, but the evening class enrollment jumped up by 122 enrollees.

With a day-class total of 6001 this semester, an increase here is 521 over that of last spring. Compared with the Spring 1959 figures, it is higher by 324 students.

Enrolled in extended day classes, which begin at 7 p.m., are 1535 students. This is a jump of 134 over last spring, and 317 over the Spring 1959 semester.

The overall total now is 655 students more than last spring's count.

Miss Learnard also stated that with classrooms at junior and senior high schools currently at capacity, the college can expect a greater rise in its enrollment within the next few years.

Counselors Launch Pre-Programming
System Stresses Seniority And Grades

By John Muller

The trial balloon goes up today.

With that brief statement from Walter McCloud of the counseling department came confirmation that pre-registration has ceased to exist.

On the basis of a new system, called pre-programming, registration numbers for the Fall 1961 semester will be awarded to students according to their grade point average the previous semester and their present seniority.

Pre-programming will take its initial step after students fill out open hour forms, which will be distributed today through March 10 in the library, and at entrances to Science Hall and Smith Hall.

With the assistance of an IBM machine, both scholastic and seniority standings will be evaluated to give the best registration numbers to students with the highest averages and most seniority.

Registration numbers for low freshmen will be given on the basis of their first midterm grades.

The new system will give students an incentive to work harder in order to secure low registration numbers and, according to Dean Ralph O. Hillsman, will "put a premium on scholarship."

McCloud added that the new plan will also assure the serious student of the program he needs to finish college.

All returning students, he emphasized, must fill out open hour forms and return them to the information booth by the main stairway in Science Hall no later than March 10. Failure to do so will result in a higher registration number.

When students file their open hour forms at the information booth, they will be given postcards to be self-addressed. The cards will be mailed to students about one week before they are to meet with their counselors for planning next semester's program.

One reason for the switch to pre-programming is that in the Spring 1961 pre-registration scramble "several students were in danger of injury," McCloud said, "and it was a cinch that the (pre-registration) situation wasn't going to get any better."

The old system, under which students lined up for their numbers on a first-come, first-served basis, had been working well since the Fall of 1956, but fell apart under last semester's record crush of college entrants.

Cabinet Nears Completion As Peterson, Levin Fills AS Posts

Associated Student Card Sales Chairman Larry Levin and Finance Committee Chairman Georgene Peterson fill key posts, Associated Student President Charles Hanks said today as he neared completion of his cabinet appointments with only the offices of Parliamentarian and Alumni Liaison Officer left unfilled.

All but five appointive offices have also been filled by "old timers."

They consist of Information Service Chairman Joe Egri, Campus Affairs Co-ordinator Judy Crivelli, Men's Athletic Commissioner Bob Ross, Rally Commissioner Jeri Crivelli, Club Activities Board Chairman Don Verdu, Inter-Fraternity Council President John Azzaro, Publications Board Chairman Bob Pacini, Publicity Chairman Judy Day, and Inter-Sorority President Marge Lindstrom.

The five appointive posts that have been filled by "new blood" are Secretary of the Associated Students Sue Brill, Corresponding Secretary Ida Blanck, Campus Police Chief Jim Tedesco and Recreation Association Commissioner Kay Vanderford.

The new AS President believes that the blend of old and new blood in the new cabinet makes it one of the most qualified and capable that this college has had in a long time.

13 College Hours Set For Current Semester

Some 13 College Hours, featuring lectures every other week, are scheduled for Fridays of this semester from 10 to 10:40 a.m., according to a schedule released today by Dean Ralph Hillsman.

Beginning this Friday with Club Activities Board Day, the program runs as follows: March 10, club meetings; March 17, lectures; March 24, club meetings; March 31, holiday.

April 7, Double College Hour (including blood drive rally); April 14, lectures; April 21, club meetings; April 28, lectures; May 5, club meetings; May 12, lectures; May 19, club meetings; May 26, lectures; June 2, club meetings, and June 9, start of finals is slated.

Student Health Service Signup Ends Tomorrow

The last day for eligible students to apply for membership in the student health plan is tomorrow, March 2, according to Paul Snowberg, chairman of the student health program.

Snowberg advised students to consider this plan as there is no provision by the college for the treatment of sickness or injury except those of a minor nature such as could be handled on the campus by the college nurse.

"The need for care of this type is usually unexpected and the costs are generally high. Since these costs are the responsibility of the student and his parents, it is extremely essential that a supplemental health plan be provided," Snowberg said.

The plan, arranged for by the Associated Students with the cooperation of the California Physicians Service, provides for hospital and surgical benefits, X-ray and laboratory tests, and other items which arise from accidents or illnesses.

Only full time students are eligible, Snowberg emphasized, and they must be AS members. Students who were eligible and did not enroll at the beginning of the academic year may not enroll until the beginning of the next academic year.

The cost for this semester, including protection during weekends and summer vacation, is $15.10.

Free choice of any licensed physician and surgeon, and any licensed hospital anywhere in the world is offered under this program. When a student leaves the college he may continue CPS protection by transferring to another plan.

New Building Permanent Campus Site Of Noted Art Treasure

Rivera Mural Now On Display In Theater Lobby

By Dick Dragavon

Another work of art; the fainous mural by Diego Rivera from the Golden Gate International Exposition of 1939, has joined the Redwood Ram, the mosaic and the sculptures of Leonardo Da Vinci and Thomas Edison on Science Hall as art treasures at the college.

For the first time since the Exposition, the mural can be viewed in its entirety in the lobby of the theater in the arts building.

The mural was the celebrated Mexican artist's response to an invitation to participate in the art fair by Timothy Pflueger, then a director of the Exposition and original architect for the overall campus whose first building was completed in 1940.

Rivera called his painting, Marriage Of The Artistic Expression Of The North And South On This Continent, a title appropriate at least in length for a work which measures 75 by 22 feet.

The center panel is almost completely occupied by a great god, part ancient Indian, and part machine. This represents, according to the late Rivera's description, "Necessary combination of southern art forms and northern industrial genius for perfection of art."

On either side of this god, Rivera managed to make the seemingly vast working space shrink by cramming in scenes of San Francisco from the air, Mexicans and Americans plying their arts, statesmen and inventors from both countries, and even scenes from his favorite movies and faces of his personal friends.

Figures associated with this college are the sculptor of the Redwood Ram, Dudley Carter, shown three times, and Pflueger, the architect, holding the blueprints for present, campus buildings.

Although Rivera was a figure of political controversy, he strove to make his mural acceptable, and when it was completed he said, "If anyone objects to this mural he is a good candidate for the fifth column."

Despite his efforts there was some slight opposition to the exhibiting of this Pan American unity fresco, similar to that shown toward other of his works which were considered too valuable to destroy but too controversial to show.

However, in 1958 the Board of Education voted to include the painting in the arts building, after a statement by a former president of that group that American art galleries would be virtually empty if we were to judge art work by the artist's moral or political standards.

Thus the plans of the new building were altered to include space to exhibit the magnificent and fascinating fresco which will stand through the years as an example of unity in industry and art, and the friendship between the United States and its southern neighbors.

MARRIAGE OF THE ARTISTIC EXPRESSION of the North and South on this Continent was the title given by Diego Rivera to his fresco representing the friendship between Mexico and the United States. The 75 by 22 foot mural, now in the arts building, was painted by Rivera in 1939 as a contribution to the Golden Gate International Exposition. The massive centerpiece, occupied by ancient Indian God and modern machine, represents, according to Rivera, "the necessary combination of southern art forms and northern industrial genius for the perfection of art."

The section above shows the late Helen Crienkovich, the swimmer, a former student here, whose name is on the college's Hall of Fama for her showing in the 1939 AAU swimming events.

Sure, Ask What College Can Do For You, But Also Ask . . .

ASK NOT what America can do for you, but what you can do for America." These already-familiar words seemed to form the crux of President Kennedy's inauguration speech, and while they are good words for Americans of all walks of life, let's bring them down to purely local terms and apply them to the college and the current semester.

We suggest a paraphrase of the President's speech. By all means, ask what the college can do for you, but ask also what you can do for the college.

Ask what the college can offer you in terms of education, in preparation for a four-year university, in training for a profession, in the broadening of one's outlook and tolerance.

Ask these questions and make honest efforts to obtain answers, for the questions are crucial ones to any student about to undertake college work. It is unwise, more than that, it is foolish to begin work in an institution such as this until one has learned what it can offer you and what it cannot offer, its advantages and its disadvantages.

Once the student has obtained his answers and feels his decision to continue here is the correct one, he must then ask himself the second question: What can he, as a student, do for the college?

A simple and economical method of "repaying" the college for all that it offers students here, both in and out of the classroom, is the purchase of an Associated Student card.

And still, the student reaps most of the rewards of an AS card, for the five dollars he pays for membership in the Associated Students of the college is put to work for him. It gets him into dances and into athletic events. It enables him to have clubs and other activities, and last, and we hope, certainly not least, it gives him a copy of the paper he is now reading. A diagram of these and still other benefits is published on page 4.

Thus the student really can't lose. Here he can obtain the equivalent of the first two years of education at a four-year university for the price of books alone, and the five dollar investment he makes in an AS card he gets back in numerous returns.

From necessity, college students are thrifty and frugal. They know a bargain when they see it. We challenge them to come up with a better one than they can receive here.

Shots At RAMdom

TV Cowboys Reign As Commercials Snow

By Richard Shields

SINCE THE ADVENT of numerous TV westerns a few years ago and as a result of their surprisingly long lives, television has become something to discuss with words like "trend," "adult western," "psychology," "bad guys," and "Marshal Dillon."

Viewers who long for a taste of the "simple life" and the "wide-open spaces" can choose their treat from a total of at least 27 weekly stories of the lives of rugged and adventurous American cowboys.

(Those were the good old days . . . when all young ladies were beautiful and all young men were handsome. And when a bad guy insulted, or just plain sneered at a young lady, there was always a gallant, young Sir Galahad (or Gad-about) of the West nearby to avenge her slighted honor.)

It's a good thing there are western movies so that people don't have to stay home all the time. Maybe TV producers will start leasing their old scripts to Hollywood so that these heroes can be seen in life-size and technibolor. Also, theater commercials are shown between pictures only.

A careful comparison of some TV cowboy stories with their accompanying commercials might cause people to wonder about "adult westerns."

The advertisements are usually better entertainment than the stories.

However, good commercials with bad shows may be only a sponsor's clever trick to get viewers to look forward to his few minutes of air time. This is where TV psychology enters the "picture."

If people can see through the facade of "adult westerns" which exudes from every scene, they can probably appreciate arty commreials which may be sufficiently humorous to enable them to suffer through the show.

People who hate commercials either think the show is wonderful, watch it because they have nothing better to do, or like to torture themselves. Whichever it is, they still watch TV westerns; after all, more than 27 cowboy stars and 52 million American TV sets can't be wrong.

Warm Personality A Boon(e) To Pat

WARMTH, charm, humor and sincerity are the qualities which singer Pat Boone has been displaying so abundantly in his current act now delighting audiences at the Fairmont Hotel.

By Bob Pacini

Show business's "niee guy," Pat Boone, is all and more than publicity agents, record jackets and disc jockeys would have us believe.

Warmth, humor, charm and, above all, sincerity were the qualities which Boone displayed so abundantly at a press conference last week at the Fairmont.

The whole affair was as casual and relaxed as the "campus type" sweater and slacks Boone was sporting. "You'll have to excuse the way I look," Boone told the well-pressed press, "But today is Saturday; I figured you'd sll be in blue jeans!"

Logically enough, the audience was dominated by members of the fairer sex who remained captivated, charmed and utterly enchanted by their idol. A few mere males were also present, but palpitating hearts and dreamy eyes made them shrink back in virtual terror of the incomparable Boone personality.

Also conspicuously present was the unmistakable Boone trademark, the famous white buck shoes. Boone explained that they had been a part of his career from the very beginning.

"When I was starting out in show business they were the only ones I had," he said, with more than just a slight hint of Southern drawl. "At the time I held a $44.50 a week job. On that I had to raise a family and complete my education at Columbia University. 'Luxuries' like a second pair of shoes were out."

That was in 1954. Since then Boone graduated magna cum laude from Columbia, has made several motion pictures and has done extensive television and night club work.

If this weren't enough, he has also captured 12 gold records, the recording industry's award to artists whose records sell over a million copies.

Boone, the father of four daughters, was asked how he managed to complete his education, despite the demanding schedule an entertainer follows.

"It's simple," he remarked facetiously, "I cheated!"

The audience roared with laughter as Boone continued, "Of course, I had to go without certain other trivialities, like sleep."

On a serious note, however, Boone declared that he would have cheated himself had he not completed his work at Columbia. His tight schedule simply foreed him to listen more attentively to and rely more heavyily on class lectures and discussion.

It was Boone's interest in teenagers and their problems that led him to turn author. The first book with its tongue-twisting title, Twixt Twelve And Twenty, was in reply to thousands of teenagers who had written him and asked advice on various problems.

Those attending the press conference agreed that it was refreshing and rewarding to have met an individual who, through hard work and determination, had been able to achieve success and who had also been able to remain a human being.

In 1958 there were 155,000,000 radio sets in use in the United States.

Cagers End Season Fri. After Vital Loss To Oaks

RAMBLINGS

By Tom Kennedy

UNLESS someone upsets Ohio State for the NCAA basketball crown, the highlight of this year's cage season will be the continuing fight between school work and sports participation.

Every year grades take their toll of players, forcing them to abandon intercollegiate sports until they, the grades, improve.

Indeed, it sometimes seems, that college professors are curbing big-time campus athletics singlehandedly.

Here at the college the problem manifested itself this winter. The Rams were in the thick of the Big Eight Conference race the night of January 27 when they upset Oakland to tie for first place.

But within two weeks high-scoring forward Nate Jackson ineked the necessary grade points, and veteran John Lewis, a somewhat different case, was foreed to go to work.

Let's examine this problem of grades versus sports for a moment.

In the Big Eight, players are required to pass 10½ units of courses during the semester of their competition. To be considered "passing," a person must receive at least a "D" in all 10½ units (½ unit for physical education).

Many other college students have similar problems with studies, but because he is a public figure the athlete too often receives the stigma of "sports bum" for not keeping up his grades.

Coach Sid Phelan had his Ram squad practice approximately 12 hours a week. Certainly many students find time to work more hours than this, but we believe sports are more demanding.

The athlete becomes attached to his sports and "lives" it. He finds it hard not to go to every sports attraction that is offered.

College standards are being gradually heightened, and with today's growing population professors are "weeding out" the deficient students and keeping only those with a serious academic intention.

It certainly takes a high degree of will power to stay on an even keel between these twin demands.

We have an idea the Iron Man athlete of the past, playing in nearly every school sport, is a thing of the past. In his place we hope to see a generation of scholars who can also point with pride to their achievements on the playing field.

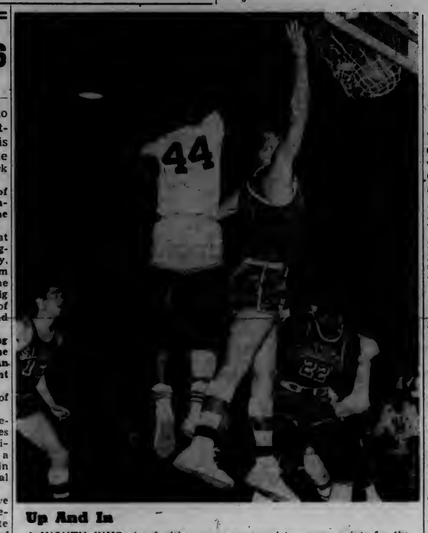
BEFORE THEY are buried in an avalanche of spring sports copy, the four members of the Ram soccer team who received All-American rating during the semester break should receive congratulations.

Jim Lynch, Bohdan Papara and Dave Kingsley made the first team All-American, and Ken Wright was named to the second club.

Roy Diederiehsen's squad, as you recall, finished in a first-place tie in 1960 after winning the title outright the year before. No Rams made the selection in 1959.

Apparently the judges decided that a second championship isn't caused by luck.



Klemmer's Clubbers Split Opening Match

Playing under the handicap of a Freshmen-dominated golf team, the Rams were able to split their first day's competition February 20 by winning against Sacramento State 8-7 and losing to Diablo Valley 9-6.

The team members who partieipated were Gary Mialocq, who shot a 77; Bill Shaw, shooting an 83; Grant Fawn, who shot a 75, and Jim Brand, who shot an 89.

Even though the season has already started, Coach Grover Klemmer is still accepting sign-ups.

Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers was American League batting champion for nine consecutive seasons between 1907 and 1915.

RA Draws Active Schedule For New Spring Semester

Recreation Association President Kay Vanderford yesterday announced a spring schedule to include coed modern and folk dancing, badminton, volleyball, fencing, archery and men's and women's basketball.

Interested students can still sign up with the group by leaving their names in the women's gymnasium lobby. Announcements and schedules will be posted on the bulletin board there.

The association participates in a number of meets with other two-year colleges in the area, including six sports play days during this semester.

Last Saturday they traveled to Napa Junior College for their second sports day.

Various activities and times of the meetings are as follows: badminton (Monday, 3 p.m.), volleyball (Tuesday, 3 p.m.), fencing (Wednesday, 3 p.m.), women's basketball (Thursday, 2:50 p.m.), folk dancing (Friday, 11 a.m.) all in the women's gymnasium.

Modern dance (Tuesday, 3 p.m. dance studio) and archery (Friday, College Hour, archery range) are also slated.

Anyone interested in joining the RA basketball team can leave his name and phone number with adviser Elizabeth Wirth.

Besides Miss Vanderford, RA officers are Les Adams, vice president; Sam Vigil, secretary; Mike Roddy, treasurer, and Karen Kinney, historian.

The late James Braid, five times British Open champion, is credited with 18 holes-in-one.

Returning Vets Hope Of Mermen

With only a handful of returning veterans and an extremely light freshman signup, Swimming Coach Roy Burkhead is faced with a very difficult situation in the coming season.

Only three first-year men have shown promise thus far while just one of last year's five All-Americans is returning to this year's team.

All-American Rich Sullivan will bear watching in the freestyle events. He has swum the 100 freestyle in 57.3 seconds.

Also on the club, Al Stevens is 1:17.2 in the 100 breast stroke and 2:48.1 in the 200 breast stroke. Bill Sakovich is 1:02 in the 100 backstroke.

Others include Lincoln Fong, 1:06 in the 100 freestyle; Bruce Sevier, 1:07.2 in the 100 freestyle, and Eli Silver, 1:05.3 in the 100 freestyle.

Burkhead says that he will still accept any applications for the varsity up to the time of the first dual meet. He urged all interested students to see him at once.

There have been nine one-round knockouts in the history of heavyweight championship boxing.

Rams Host Lowly Stockton Crew In Final League Go

Sid Phelan's Ram cagers end their regular Big Eight Conference schedule here Friday night when they take on the Stockton College Mustangs, 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

In the 6:15 preliminary, City College's junior varsity will face the San Francisco Fire Department.

The Mustangs are one of the league's big disappointments this year. They were picked to finish near the top of the Big Eight, but could win only two of their first 10 games.

Returning center Bill Gleason, third leading Big Eight scorer in 1960, has been inconsistent in his Sophomore season. Another worry has been the Mustangs' lack of scoring punch at the guard positions.

Andy Stoglin, 6-3 forward, has been outstanding for Stockton and is the leading point-maker. A former All-American high school player in Arizona, he can rebound well, too.

Larry Allsman and Ron Stone have also performed well at forward.

In their first encounter with Stockton, City College won a thriller, 51-47, as Charley Williams scored 27 points.

Last night the Rams faeed Contra Costa in the men's gymnasium. With City College now out of the race, the Comets were the only team possessing a chance to tie Oakland for the league championship.

They needed a combination of two wins plus two Oakland losses in the final two games.

Big Eight Conference standings as of Monday are as follows:

	W	L
Oakland	11	1
Contra Costa	9	3
San Francisco	8	4
San Mateo	7	5
Modesto	4	8
Stockton	3	9
Santa Rosa	3	9
Sacramento	3	9

Intramural Cage Deadline March 3

With the deadline for entries set for this Friday, all teams wishing to enter the Intramural Basketball League are urged to do so as soon as possible.

The league, under the direction of Jack Gaddy, director of athletics, is composed of three separate divisions, the Club Activities Board, the Independent, and the Fraternity.

Games will be scheduled for 7 and 8 p.m. on various week nights in the men's and women's gymnasiums, with the final championship game taking place on May 25 during the Associated Men Student smoker.

Applications for entering the loop, as well as further information, may be obtained at the men's gymnasium or from Jim Bush in the offiee of the Associated Students, S-140.

You've Got To Be A 'TF' Hero

Kennedys Set Pace For Locals

By Frank Dunne

Although it may not be a basic requirement for the Presidency of the United States, touch football has become the most publicized extra-curricular activity of this administration.

For many years the men's athletie department here has offered a combination course in basketball and touch football, but this semester a few changes have been made in the activity.

According to Jack Gaddy, men's athletie director, the number of times this course is offered has been increased, thus lowering the number of students in each class. "This will allow the students more individual attention and make the group more workable," he said.

There are approximately 1000 students in the 19 classes offered. Most are just fulfilling the physical education requirement, but maybe a few have an eye on the future.

A sportsman-like attitude is always stressed in this class. In the future, Gaddy says, team work and decorum will receive added emphasis, which should help in later life in formal functions, such as Cabinet meetings, and/or aid the individual to meet a challenge with a winning effort.

Under consideration, although unlikely, is the proposal that members of the enrollee's family, brothers, for example, be admitted to the class so they too may reap the benefits of close-order training.

Grades, T-Birds Drop Locals From Big 8 Title Chase

By Ivan Temes

All Ram hopes for a Big Eight title and berth in the State Tournament were shattered Friday at Oakland as the college basketballers, minus two starters from early season, fell before their first place rivals 55-41.

But the game, as expected, was not without incident. Star Ram forward Charlie Williams, trying to get to the dressing room after the game, was floored by an unprovoked blow from an Oakland fan.

Fired-up Oakland, before an overflow crowd, went out to avenge their earlier loss to the team now playing without the services of John Lewis and scholastically ineligible Nate Jackson.

After taking a 10-9 lead midway through the first half on a free throw, the T-Birds widened the gap as ball-hawking guard Charlie McKinney and aggressive forward Wendell Hayes took over.

Earlier in the week Saeramento fell before the Rams 49-35 as Williams and Bob Grayson scored 17 and 12 points respectively.

San Mateo 59, Rams 56

After overcoming an early Bulldog lead Coach Phelan's erew led 56-53 in the closing three minutes of aetion. However, the San Mateans rallied to win 59-56 on guard John Condrin's four free throws in the final 1:22 of play.

Rams 59, Santa Rosa 57

The following night the Rams were in no mood to be courteous to visiting Santa Rosa and gained a 37-20 halftime advantage.

Making use of the home club's errors, the Bear Cubs eame within two points and had possession of the ball with 14 seconds remaining, but Chuck York's shot bounced off the rim as the final buzzer sonnded.

Rams 50, Modesto 47

Outhustled and beaten in every department, the defending Big Eight champs suddenly had to rely on reserve guard Will Rockmore, and he came through, hitting four consecutive 20-footers and a pair of free throws in the closing minutes to win the game.

Rams 44, Saeramento 38

Tying up Sacramento's one-man show—center Bob Farrell—the locals took an early 20-7 lead and held on for the win.

Rams 57, Oakland 56

Rising to the occasion after trailing at half, the locals finally tied the T-Birds at 41 apiece. Nate Jackson hit a jumper with 30 seconds left to put the Rams in front, 57-54, and einch the victory.

Contra Costa 68, Rams 63

With Jackson disqualified for the rest of the year and Rockmore being held out, the Comets gained a 10-point advantage at intermission and remained in front behind Ed Greene's 24-point performance.

Rams 51, Stockton 47

Williams saved the locals when he hit 20 of his team's 25 points in the first half, although City College was without the services of John Lewis and Otis Phillips. Center Jesse Arteberry grabbed 12 rebounds.

San Mateo 53, Rams 46

Once again the ball-hawking Bulldogs proved too much for the local team to handle as they elnimed a 23-14 free throw advantage.

The Rams closed the gap to 44-42, but then had to foul to gain possession and it cost them dearly.

Rams 63, Santa Rosa 51

Santa Rosa was never in the game after the smoothly operating Rams, in their best performance of the year, moved in front 31-17 at half and never let the lead elose to less than eight points.

Rams 67, Modesto 59

High-scoring Modesto, determined to get even after their earlier loss, pulled in front 17-9, but Bob Grayson's shot gave the Rams a 25-24 half-time lead which they did not relinquish.

Council Votes Approval Of Three Budgets, Agrees To Change In Club Membership Requirement

By Dick Dragavon

Approval of three budgets totaling $4829.35 was efficiently and quickly given by Student Council as President Charles Hanks guided council through its first meetings of the semester.

The early meetings also yielded a constitutional amendment for the Club Activities Board.

Before the budgets were submitted to council, Finance Chairman Georgene Peterson cautioned all organizations to be sure that all of their requests were itemized clearly, and that all budgets were pared to the necessities, as AS funds were below normal.

However, council wasted no time in allocating $30 for the Dean of Women's emergency fund, and $30.75 for the Dean of Men's emergency fund.

The Publications Board budget for $4768.60 was approved after a study by a council member showed all proposed expenditures to be valid.

Another request for $791, submitted by the Associated Men Students, was put under investigation to determine whether any expenses could be eliminated.

Suspension for one semester of article 3, section 2, of the Club Activities Board constitution was also accomplished. The article stated that all CAB organizations must have a majority of AS card holders.

Discussion showed that article was unfair and possibly harmful to the college, when it was brought out that many clubs in the CAB did not receive AS aid while they offered scholarships and other services to the college.

If these clubs were forced to leave the campus because of lack of AS membership, the result could be the loss of these benefits.

Hanks also stated that the acquisition of a student union was very possible this semester. A delegate was appointed to study this possibility, and also to determine the availability of faculty supervision which would be necessary for a student union.

CHARLES HANKS, Associated Student president, guides Student Council through the various phases of legislation this semester.

Guardsman Lists Semester Schedule

A total of 13 issues will be published by The Guardsman during the Spring 1961 semester, Editor-in-Chief Bob Pacini of The Guardsman announced today, and, as Publications Board Chairman, Pacini also warned that no signs or posters are to be displayed without approval.

The publication dates for volume 52 of The Guardsman are March 1, 8, 15, 22; April 12, 19, 26; May 3, 10, 17, 24, 31, and June 6. Every issue will be distributed on a Wednesday.

All clubs and organizations wishing to display posters may have them approved by Pacini on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 12 and 1 p.m. in The Guardsman office, S-304.

AS Card Sales Nearing Goal

With his sales force moving full speed ahead toward a 2000 card goal, Associated Student Card Sales Chairman Larry Levin announced that a total of 1720 cards have been sold to date.

Alex Jacobson and Bob Ross are the leading candidates in a close contest for top salesman. Levin said students may still purchase AS cards at the student office near the silver pole in Science Hall, or at the student bank in Smith Hall.

Prizes for the leading salesmen will be awarded at this Friday's Club Activities Board dance, including a transistor radio as top prize and two tickets to Exodus as the second place award.

There have been no changes this semester in the discounts for which card holders are eligible, according to Levin. At present AS members are entitled to discounts at 21 different business establishments in San Francisco.

Michigan State University was the first state agricultural college in the United States.

New Cafe Facilities Fail To Alleviate Lunch Hour Crush

By Anna Papagni

Now that the new fountain in the cafeteria has been opened, the menu is extended, food lines move twice as fast, and service hours are expected to be increased—but the seating capacity is and will continue to remain a problem.

When the rest of the equipment arrives to complete the kitchen, the fountain will serve hamburgers, hotdogs and french fries; ice cream, soft drinks and sandwiches are available now. As in the past, the main dining room offers breakfast and hot lunches.

With the addition of two new cash registers in the fountain there are four food lines in the cafeteria instead of the original two. Consequently during the luncheon rush food may be ordered and paid for with a minimum of waiting.

The only obstacle to be encountered is finding a seat.

Smith Hall serves as the student union as well as a cafeteria. Therefore, any student is welcome to occupy a seat even though he may not have purchased anything to eat.

There would be ample accommodations if the seats were available only to those who buy their lunch, but those students who bring food must also be considered, for there is no other place that they may eat.

John Dunn, the faculty cafeteria manager, has arranged the time schedule to take care of student needs as well as the needs of the hotel and restaurant people who operate the cafeteria as a part of their curriculum.

Breakfast is served from 7:30 to 9:50 a.m. in the main dining hall. Lunchtime is from 11 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. in both rooms, but when the fountain is completed, Dunn hopes to keep it opened later.

Remaining open after 1:30 p.m. has failed in the past, however, because there was not enough money taken in to cover wages.

If a section were to be kept open even at a loss during those hours, it would become necessary to raise food prices, Dunn explained. These prices are now so reasonable because the hotel and restaurant students are not paid for their work. There are just 16 permanent employees.

Club Cavalcade

Official Organization Count Passes Fifty This Semester

MORE THAN 50 clubs, fraternities, sororities are officially enrolled in Dean Ralph Hillsman's list of college organizations, and will meet during the Friday College Hours this semester.

All students are invited to view the Club Activities Board display in the courtyard between Smith and Science Halls this Friday, and to join the clubs of their choice.

Seven sororities are also included. They are Gamma Kappa Beta, Delta Psi, Delta Sigma Tau, Kappa Phi, Phi Beta Rho, Theta Tau and Zeta Chi.

Former Student Nets Award For Best Animated Ad

National fame was achieved by Gig Gonella, a former student here.

Gonella's film won the award for the Best 60-second Fully Animated Commercial at the 1960 Cannes Film Festival in Venice.

The former student attended the college from 1948 to 1949 after he was discharged from the army following World War II. While at the college, Gonella was a straight A student in art and advertising art courses.

Although he was kept extremely busy by college courses, Gonella still found time to go out for the track team. Because of a job opportunity, he did not graduate, but left after his first year here.

In 1960 while working for Foote, Cone & Belding, advertising agency, he conceived the idea of "a square meal in a round can" for the Calo Dog Food Company. This was the commercial that won the Cannes award for Gonella.

At the present time he is working for another agency, Dancer, Fitzgerald & Sample, as an art director.

The first printing press was set up in the United States in 1638 by Stephen Day at Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Anna Wong Wins Crown At Ball

Coronation of Anna Wong as Queen climaxed the 16th annual Sweetheart Ball held by the Chinese Students Club in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel last Saturday night.

Queen Anna and her four princesses, Mary Ng, Pat Lim, Pat Lee and Jetty Au, presided over a court of 200 couples until the last dance shortly after midnight.

The affair, held yearly to finance scholarships here, was organized by officers of the CSC under president George Woo, with sponsors Jamea Haran and Miss Marcelline McDermatt and adviser Albert Ting.

The Queen was crowned by master of ceremonies Steve Young, one of the scholarship winners, aeting for last year's Queen, Nancy Hom, who was on duty elsewhere as Miss San Francisco Chinatown.

Top Professional Photos Of '60 On Display Here

New Directions In Professional Photography is the title of a display, currently exhibited in Cloud Hall's faculty row, which consists of the top photographs taken in 1960, according to Charles Lamp, instructor here.

The exhibit is sponsored by the local photography department through the co-operation of the Professional Photographers Association of Northern California. The material on display was slected by PPNC from the best work of professional photographers on a nation-wide scale.

The current exhibition marks the first showing of this work.

In selecting the photographs, Lamp pointed out, creative ability was as decisive a factor as the technique employed.

An indication that the display will be well received here is found in PPNC President Robert Toren's words, "San Francisco is beginning to be considered the center of contemporary photography in this country."

The exhibit will be on display for one month at the north end of Cloud Hall.

AGS Members To Get Reg Priority

Members of the college's scholastic honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, will receive low registration numbers for the Fall 1961 semester, William Richardson, the society's sponsor, said today.

To qualify for membership in the society, students must meet the following minimum requirements:

Those carrying from 12 to 14 units must have 42 grade points; those carrying 15 units are required to have 45; and those students with 16 units need 48 grade points.
